TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 20 — (CP) — The industrial and gold groups advanced moderately in the early Toronto session, but base metal stocks were lower and the western oils showed a slight margin on the up side. Turnover was quite heavy at 851,000 shares for the first three hours.

McIntyre, Pick Cons., Dome, O'Brien, San Antonio, East Malartic, Preston and Rear Exploration firmed moderately. Giant Yellowknife gained 30 cents to 7.15. In the base metal section Noranda and Sherritt Gordon were steady.

The food, utility and steel issues were strong and the liquors were a little heavy. Canada Packers "A" gained a point and Bell Telephone, Dominiondairies, Famous Players, A and Montreal Power were strong in scattered issues.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Cattle offered were made up of cows and bulls. Butcher cows $7 to $10. Canners, cutters $4 to $6.50 and bologna bulls $6.50 to $8.

Good calves (2) $13 to $15, mostly $10.50 to $12.50. Drinkers or pail fed calves $8 to $9.50.

Good Spring lambs weighing 80 lbs or more, $15, commoner kinds $12.50 to $14 to $7.

Hogs $17.65 for Grade A, $17.35 for B-1 dressed. Sows $12.25 to $12.50.

WALL ST.

New York, June 20 —(AP)— The stock market turned downward today in its first trading session since inhibition of the steep postinvasion rise that brought beginning of last week. Industrial and rail issues generally backed off fractions to more than a point. Volume fell off rather sharply after the fairly active rush hour.

Stocks in lower ground included Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, U. S. Steel, U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, Int. Harvester, American Smelting and Dupont.

Gains fractions to around a point included Erie, Brooklyn Union Gas, Oliver Farm, Caterpillar Tractor, Douglas and Loew's.

Canada issues were firmer, Dome Mines and Noranda each gaining 1-8 and Seagrams 1-4.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 20 — (CP) — Cattle prices were 25 cents cwt.-lower on butcher cows and steady on other grades in limited to small season on the livestock market here today. Veal calves, lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: cattle 1,000, calves 400, hogs 900, sheep and lambs 300. Unsold from yesterday were 1,000 head of cattle.

Calves brought $13.50-$14 with a few at $14.50 and choice with common to medium $7-$13.

CHURCH NOTICES

Officer Suspended Sentence.

Carman Wray, Belleville, was given a three months' suspended sentence and ordered to pay court costs amounting to $67.50 in all after being convicted of two traffic charges, one of driving in excess of an accident and the other of dangerous driving when found guilty to both charges when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today.

The charges were the sequel to the fatal alleged hit-and-run motor accident in the intersection of Coleman and West Bridge Sts. on the night of June 12th that when a number of persons were struck and injured Helen Ryan, 75 Byrnes St. and two children, the seriousness of the accident failed to remain at the scene.

A. R. Collins, K.C., appearing for the accused young man, told the court his client was appearing on his first charge, "Mr. Wray assisted the police in every possible manner after being informed of the accident by a third party," stated Mr. Collins, He pointed out Wray was an industrious young man employed as a truck driver and supporting his wife. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C. acknowledged these facts, which prompted the court to pass the suspended term.

Gets Jail Term.

Lorne Sanford, Belleville, was remanded for sentence on June 26th in default of a $100 fine levied after the accused had pleaded guilty to being found in the illegal possession of a bottle of wine. Police apprehended the accused after coming to a house and upon searching him found the bottle. Magistrate J. L. Lloyd testified Inspector Hayes, as he pronounced the sentence.

Arthur Allison, Demorestville, pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident and was remanded for sentence when, while James Smith paid $5 and costs after admitting to attempting to pass another vehicle on the wrong side at the thoroughfare. Charged before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

"My name is Shorts, not Sleeves," revealed Vida Shorts, city, who appeared on a charge of stealing bedding and curtains from apartment situated at 305 Front St. The girl was instructed to bring her mother to court when the matter is heard next week.

Case Enlarged.

Gordon Sanford and Stanley Archer, held on the charge, appeared for sentence after pleading guilty to multiple charges of theft from a previous court. The matter was again enlarged at the request of Mr. D. Arnold, K.C. counsel for Sanford.

IN CHARGE OF TAGGERS

In the sale of tags for the Kinsmen Club for crippled children to overseas, Mrs. Newton Wilbur was in charge of the tagging with Mrs. Ralph Ketchison as co-captain of the team.

The War Today—
Hints of Early Victory—
Grounds for Optimism Seen

By J. M. ROBERT, Jr.
(Substituting for DEWITT MACKENZIE, Associated Press War Analyst)

Yesterday afternoon I suggested that optimism over the war is non-professional. Now I want to suggest that rather cautiously here that General Germany may not be so tough as advertised.

Then came Mr. Churchill's talk of early victory, hinting that the curtain into pikers. Perhaps a deeper accurate into German war has represent optimism is permissible.

Several observers have been incredulous at the seeming German ability to keep up the pace indefinitely. In 1918 it was quite generally assumed that she could not possibly support a long war. That she has been doing the seemingly impossible with the greatest ease. That she cannot continue, that the western front can be the final unbearable ounce to her load.

The Power of Transport.

Pilots report widespread German use of horse-drawn transport in Normandy. This means bombing and raw material shortages have put seriously out motor output, and that Germany is terribly short of gasoline, too. If this were true, you could hardly find a horse among any of the Hitler war experting to move on sudden notice.

The number of foreigners impressed into his Atlantic wall legions in Norway, Denmark and the mainland of Germany for a last-ditch, desperate, fanatical defense of the homeland; there is a doubtful element about how he'll fight he started with a finely-tempered sword. The Germans claim they could call out of them must be in supply service or are occupying garrisons. If so, then 2,000,000 probably 3,000,000, are seeking some way of surrendering to the Russians. Der Fuehrer is out-manned.

Actually Outnumbered.

Before the war Germany had everybody scrutinized about how many guns. Report said she had as many as 30,000 fighting planes, 11 thousand of them in the Luftwaffe, on a percentage basis, is about where the R.A.F. was in September, 1940. And the Allied fliers aren't going to quit.

Such arguing could be cited all day. The Germans can make it look pretty tough. Stalin and Mr. Churchill probably knows a lot of other reasons why he can say the months of this Summer. . . may spell success to the cause of freedom".

GERMAN DESTROYER HIT.

Cairo, June 20 —(CP)— Rocketfiring R. A. F. Beaufighters scored hits on a German destroyer and a large explosion resulted in an attack yesterday in the eastern Aegean, Middle East Headquarters reported today. Common shell hits were seen on vessels escorting the destroyer.

Yesterday Middle East aircraft carried fires in the harbor at Kalamata in Southern Greece. From these and other operations, including an attack on Rhodes Harbor, one aircraft is missing.

FOUR FATALITIES OCCUR IN ONTARIO

Five More Die in Saint John, N.B., Making Total of 13 Methyl Deaths

There were six fatalities in Eastern Canada over the weekend in addition to five more deaths in St. John, N.B., where a total of 13 persons have died in three days from drinking methyl alcohol.

Four of the fatalities were in Ontario. Rev. Thomas Clark Street Mackiee, 62, for 31 years provost and Vice-Chancellor of Trinity College in Toronto, died in a Toronto hospital of injuries suffered when struck by a truck May 27.

Eleven-year-old Ronnie Smith, a non-swimmer, drowned in the Pendjadine canal at Hamilton. Mrs. Margery F. Collman, 37, of Toronto was killed near St. Catharines when an army jeep in which she was riding overturned and Ross Summers, 34, was killed at Springfield in the St. Thomas district when crushed by a tractor.

In Montreal, Mrs. A. Cote, 71-year-old paralytic, died in a $60,000 tenement fire, James Collins of Saint John, N.B., was killed near College Bridge, N.B., when a Canadian National Railways passenger train left the tracks. He was a C.N.R. express messenger. Douglas Geldart of Saint John, Perham, was critically injured.

Sixteen persons are still in hospital in Saint John after drinking methyl alcohol. Police are carrying on an intensive investigation. An inquest will be held tonight.

5,278 Canadians Held Prisoners

Ottawa, June 19. (CP) — Some 5,278 Canadians were held prisoners of war on May 31, Ralph Hodgson through enemy camps in Germany, Hungary and the Far East, it was disclosed today in the Wartime Information Board's monthly publication "Canada at War".

A tabulation shows the navy with eight, the army 3,629, the air force, 1,496 and the merchant marine 145. Of the total 5,278, total, 3,700 are held in the European theatre and 1,578 in the Far East.

"Canada at War" recalls that while Japan had signified her intention of abiding the provisions of the international convention of the treatment of prisoners, she has failed to do so "and very little detailed information is available concerning the men held in Japanese-held camps".

Civil Affairs Unit In Bayeux Set Up Under Canadian

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Bayeux, France, June 19 — (CP) — Cable — The first civil affairs detachment to establish itself in France in the wake of the Allied invasion was a British unit set up here, headed by a Canadian Major, H. B. Gooding, former postmaster of Port Colborne, Ont.

He landed with a detachment of three British civil affairs officers and three American officers on the second day of the invasion. They rushed into Bayeux on motor bikes shortly after it fell to troops of the British 50th Division.

"For these first few days the front line was right in our back yard," said Gooding as he talked about his detachment's work.

Major Gooding said the detachment's task in the early days was to ensure that life in the city and the surrounding area was not disrupted and that fundamental civil problems resulting from four years of German rule by force were tackled with an eye to remembering that situation as much as possible.

Help From City Residents Badly Needed on Farms

With the removal, coincident with the departure of No 5 T. T. S. personnel, of the main source of assistance, the harvest labor problem in this immediate district will be more acute this year than ever before, it was learned today.

The departure of the airmen will leave a gap which must be necessarily filled by civilian residents if the harvests of this district are to be garnered with any degree of success.

Inroads into potential farm help are being made by industry and other methods of employment, so the farmer must rely on part time work done by urban residents.

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce will swing into full organization of the farm labor situation in the immediate future. Already applications have been received from farmers with a speculative eye on rapidly growing crops.

The hay crop, it was stated by agricultural officials, will be lighter than usual in this district but present prospects point to a bumper grain yield.

Harvests, like time and tide, wait for no man. The inexorable march of Nature cannot be stopped. Human beings may procrastinate; the weather may be fickle,; but the harvests are not to be harvested if the agricultural contribution to the nation's war effort is to be maintained.

The food is in the fields. It must be placed in the granaries, barns and storehouses of the nation. And without the whole-hearted contribution of those in the cities who have spare time on their hands, this will not be done.

The Department of Agriculture issues an urgent appeal to all who can, possibly do so, to enlist with the farm "commandos" and assist in the harvests. Applications will be gladly received at the Chamber of Commerce offices here.

Picton and District

Spr. H.N. Cowan First Casualty Of the Invasion

Picton, June 20.— First casualty from Prince Edward County in the invasion of Normandy is Sapper Harold N. Cowan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cowan, Cherry Valley. He was killed in action June 6th, the first day of the invasion. No details were given.

Spr. Cowan had been overseas a year. In Canada, he trained at Winnipeg, Petawawa and on the East Coast.

All his life had been spent at Salmon Point, where he was active in Young People's work of the United Church. For a year he was superintendent of the Sunday School. He starred in hockey and softball. For nine years he was employed by the township on road construction.

Survivors are his parents, a sister, Ethel, at home, three brothers, Clarence with an anti-aircraft unit now in camp at Point Petre, Herbert and Charles, both of whom received their honorable discharges from the army.

A second casualty from the county is Pte. George Cross, killed in action. He is presumed to have been taking part in the invasion of Normandy. He the son of Mrs. Sarah Cross, Picton, and his wife, formerly Hazel Culver, resides here. They have one young son. Another child, Fred, was drowned at West Lake last summer. Also surviving are two sisters, Zora and Roma at home and a brother, Per, serving in the R.C.N.V.R.

Newswriter Tells Of Elba Attack

Stephen Barber, Associated Press War Correspondent, went in with French Assault troops when they landed on the island of Elba in the Mediterranean and suffered painful but not serious wounds which necessitated his removal to a hospital, where he dictated the following story on the attack.

By STEPHEN BARBER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Basila, Corsica, June 20—(AP)—Commandant Maurice got his wish — there were Germans on Elba — and morever they were well-armed, well-positioned and ready to fight.

As an impressive Allied Armada assembled in the fading light Friday night within sight of Elba's peaks, Maurice—a French battalion commander—said:

"I hope there are some Germans there, for if there are not we shall not be able to kill any."

I was riding aboard a craft packed tight with French seagoing troops.

As we pulled in we could distinguish under flares sent up from the shore a pale strip of beach and the white cottages of a fishing village.

There are still 20 minutes to go and no one sleeps.

Then it came. From either side of a small beach a machine gun opened up. We were caught in a murderous crossfire. Red, yellow and green tracers and mortar shells whipped overhead.

It seemed only seconds before we found ourselves in the water, then on the sand lying flat while the senegalese touched off Bangalore torpedoes to blast a path through the minefield and barbed wire.

We began crawling along the guide tape with mortar shells bursting all about us. The senegalese never faltered ,even though many fell.

There was a blinding flash just in front of me. I was tossed into a clump of trees.

I got up and tried to walk a few yards and found my left leg wouldn't work and I was hit on the right side.

Beside my typewriter, I crawled inland. I hadn't gone many yards before I fell into a mine crater where a senegalese was crouching. He also was wounded in his right arm but otherwise was okay, so—like a ice-legged beetle—we linked arms and crawled to a sloping bit of cover.

There an impromptu first-aid station was set up in the shelter of an splintered bandcart.

Pastor Lives in Poverty As People Prosper

For a long time, my husband, a United Church minister, has been struggling to make ends meet and has not been succeeding. Sally a minister's wife, writing to The Ottawa Journal. No matter how we have denied ourselves, our debts hang like a weight on our consciences. While we pay one bill off, another mounts up and so on, as most people with inadequate income know only too well. Lately we realized that a new financial liability would be ours in the fall, and—many were our sleepless nights wondering how it could be met and not seeing how.

At last, my husband, like the brave, honest man he is, decided to confide his troubles in his board of stewards and ask for an increase—either $100 or $200 as they would decide. A grant of $100 would have saved us from black, grinding despair — $200 would have meant the difference between heaven and hell.

Brutal "No" is Answer of Stewards

For a few days we lived in a kind of glorious hope, but not for long. The answer was an unqualified to us brutal "no"! No $200, $100,-not-even $50. This disappointment was tempered to us alone by the kindness and sympathy of the few men on the board who had insight to discern true men of God, who were willing to believe in the minister's word that he seriously needed help.

We ignored the men who made the decision "no" go on eating, sleeping, working and generally living, content over the impertinence of their minister who dared to ask for more, like starving little Oliver Twist, and I suppose, too, that we shadowed by the thoughtlessness of their cruelty ever troubles their minds.

Pitiful, Shabby Wardrobe

My husband continues in his ministry in a little but still gentle and kindly in thought to those "who despitefully use ministers' wives are sometimes made of sterner stuff.

When he has gone out I look at his study coat, a book for two years.

I look at his wardrobe, his "warm" coat 16 years old; his shoes, his clothing. His fall coat seven years old and just turned inside out; his one pair trousers which he caught a chill last year when he had to change after Sunday black shirt literally falling to pieces; his shirts — last one bought seventeen months ago. The underwear is beyond repair, even mentally ribbons. The man hasn't spent $5 on himself for 2½ years. Do you wonder you blame me if I weep a little at the sight?

They Think Ministers Wealthy

The strange thing is that many congregations believe ministers in general are wealthy. They know he is receiving a few dollars stored in the bank, when the bank account is really not his at all. A few of the board of stewards are wealthy and quite well off, but the majority are poor folk, many of them individually out of their own bank accounts, yet these few were among those who opposed the increase most bitterly.

My husband says there are two factors at work in this situation. Ignorance — many folk real wealth and there are a few in congregations who love their money more than the Church. They drop their "mite" into the collection plate every Sunday and try to pretend that is all they can afford. Secondly, the Protestant laity themselves Protestants have dropping into the parsonage asking for baptism, birth certificates, funeral services, etc., and when they haven't the faintest notion that a church needs financial support, and who aren't prepared to make any kind of sacrifice to keep it going.

These two factors are not only responsible for the unhappy financial situation of many a minister and his family, but are also responsible for the many churches closed down, uncared-for Protestant churches one sees all over the countryside, especially in rural areas.

Meanwhile the work of the Christian Church is held back and ministers are crushed far below their real usefulness by human greed, and blindness, and hardness of heart.

There are many more like ourselves we try never to forget that, and although there seems no way out for us, we have prayed and are still praying.

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH

Sydney, Australia, June 20—Australian triumphs on the food production front are sketched in official figures prepared for members of the touring British and Canadian parliamentary delegations. These victories came despite a reduction of nearly 25 per cent in the number of men engaged in rural industry.

The commonwealth's vegetable production this year will exceed 1,000,000 tons. This production will come from 500,000 acres compared with an average of 250,000 acres under cultivation before the war. The statement said that last year Australia canned 50,000,000 pounds of vegetables, compared with 3,000,000 before the war, and the target of 112,000,000 pounds this year probably will be exceeded.

The government's Aug. 19 referendum to decide whether it should be given additional powers for five years after the war to carry out post-war reconstruction plans is meeting opposition.

At an interstate conference of the United Australia organization in Melbourne participants agreed to do all in their power to defeat the referendum.

A statement issued by R. G. Menzies, leader of the organization and of one opposition group in the House of Representatives, said it considered that powers relating to employment and production would permit indefinite continuance of industrial conscription and socialization of industry and would perpetuate a system in which a centralization of power would make parliament subordinate to official-dom.

Before long there will be serving in the Australian legations in Ottawa and Washington some of the young people of Australia who are being trained for the Australian diplomatic service.

Australia is later in the field than Canada in the establishment of legations abroad but looking to future developments steps have been taken for providing special training for diplomatic cadets who in two or three years will be serving in London, Ottawa, Washington, Chungking or Moscow.

Orlando's $4,000 Bond Is Ordered Forfeited

Detroit, June 19 — (AP) — A $4,000 bond posted for James V. Orlando, former Detroit Red Wings hockey star was ordered forfeited in federal court today when Orlando again failed to appear to begin a four-year sentence on a draft evasion charge.

The forfeiture order disclosed that Jack Adams, manager of the Red Wings, personally had guaranteed the bond.

Following his conviction in federal court Orlando was released pending an appeal and enlisted in the Canadian Army before the four-year sentence was sustained.

Orlando had been scheduled to appear in court last Monday but his counsel obtained a week's delay.

FALL OF CHERBOURG JUST MATTER OF HOURS
1,000 U.S. HEAVY BOMBERS POUND BERLIN

House-to-House Fighting Rages In City's Suburbs

Americans Aided By Heavy Artillery And Air Assaults Attack Inner Forts

MILE FROM DOCKS

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 21. (AP)— The fall of Cherbourg appeared a day to be a matter of hours.

American troops supported by heavy artillery and air bombardment today assaulted two key inner fortresses guarding the city—one less than a mile from the commercial docks—and fought house-to-house through the city's suburbs.

(An NBC broadcast from Normandy said, "Our ground forces are moving into Cherbourg".)

Meanwhile British troops, fanning out from Tilly Sur Seulles in the eastern end of the beachhead have captured Orsby, three miles to the southwest.

Only patrol activity was reported elsewhere on Normandy beachhead except in the Tilly area. The Germans launched three heavy counter-attacks on the newly-taken British stronghold of Hottot, five miles south of Tilly. The attacks were reported held but the situation in the village itself was obscure.

Quiet in Caen Sector.

The Caen area, held by British and Canadian troops further to the east, was quiet.

In the Cherbourg sector, the power drive from the south hammered against the Nazi fortress on a hill at Cherbourg's outskirts and within a mile of the docks. And Fort Circonville, a little more than a mile to the west.

The Germans were making a last ditch stand in these inner ring fortresses.

Heavy fighting was reported in the built-up suburban section of Tranon's third, a greatest port.

The assault upon the forts raced forward from St. Martin Legfeard, four miles south of Cherbourg, and advance units on the western flank drove to Aquenville, three to four miles west and slightly south of Cherbourg's city limits.

Smoke Over City.

Smoke hung over the city as the trapped German defenders touched out hurried demolitions in the strategic harbor, now in plain view of the attacking American troops coming out of the hills surrounding their objective.

Today's communique announced that the town of Valognes, Les Pieux, Gouville and Rauville La Bigot were in Allied hands and that the advance American line runs some distance beyond these towns.

Despite German reports, the supreme Allied command said it had no knowledge that Allied warships were shelling Cherbourg from the sea and declared such an attack was unlikely.

The port is protected by seven heavy coastal forts which should be much simpler to take by land assault than from the sea.

A gale continues to blow in the channel. Six-foot waves whipped over the invasion beaches, making unloading of supplies impossible for the time being.

Bad weather hampered aircraft over the battle area, but fighter-bombers flashed over the roads and forts. Many of the missions took off from the invasion airgrounds in Normandy.

Today's communique No. 31 said in "the Tilly area three German attacks have been held."

Close Seven Miles to 50,000 Huns.

As some American units battered against the city in a frontal assault from the south, others in the west and east drove up both coasts of the peninsula, closing a noose around from 25,000 to 50,000 Germans now left with virtually no chance of escape.

The Allied command last night in a broadcast urged the trapped enemy to surrender. The alternative, the spokesman warned, was death.

On the British-Canadian sector, William Stoneman, Canadian Press War Correspondent, reported yesterday's main activity was made up of patrolling and minor local actions, after British units took long-contested Tilly Sur Seulles last Monday and drove southward a short distance.

French patriot scouts, attired in odds and ends of uniforms, advised the Americans on the bloody path to Cherbourg, the garrison drifted into the American lines, begging to assist in the fight for capture.

"They know the country well and we are ready to use them where they couldn't help," an officer said.

Americans south of Carentan pushed to within two miles of Isigny, crossroad key to the whole of the Normandy peninsula.

Two avenues were available to the enemy garrison to withdraw from Cherbourg itself. One lay southeastward to Cap Levi, the other northwestward to the peninsula's tip at Cap De La Hague. Americans were engaged actively in ruining shells into both roads.

By LEONARD MOSELEY
(Released by the British Information Services and distributed by the Canadian Press)

With the British 5th Airborne Division, Normandy, June 21— When British paratroopers holding the vital bridge in the Orne valley in Normandy the other morning saw a massive Tiger tank and two self-propelled guns on the road from the north to the middle of the road.

Since dawn that day they had been cut off from the rest of the British forces in the area.

They had little hope of survival when the Tiger tank advanced. But Pte. Michael McGee from one of the Irish counties remembered a trick that somehow he would stop the tank. McGee is a fellow countryman Irishman from Kelvinside and he has a knowledge of fighting plus a recklessly courageous as himself. He called other members of his section, Eng, and Pte. John Sullivan of Navan, County Meath, and said: "Now, boys, we'll do a jerry panzers get through this road and they'll blow us to bits. Anyway, we may as well die trying to stop the bloody Tiger. Are you game to try with me?"

They agreed. McGee armed Killeen and Sullivan with anti-tank bombs, told them to hide inside a house 100 yards up the road and said:

"Now wait in there till the tank stops outside the 'door, and then throw your bombs down the turret straight."

"Don't talk daft, lad," said Cpl. Killeen. "How are you going to make the tank stop outside the door?"

McGee replied: "You leave that to me."

Then the Tiger tank rounded the corner and came into view. Always before using Sten guns they were blasting among them. With hearts in their mouths, they saw McGee leap over a wall and dash to the middle of the road.

"It looked a crazy thing to do," said one paratrooper afterward. "For all I know that hand was his Bren gun and you know how they fire short bursts against a tank.

"But Michael put the gun to his hip and opened fire. He sprayed the front of the tank and you could see bullets bouncing off it as they ricocheted. And what Michael had promised happened. The Tiger tank halted. It showed the impudence of this lone soldier with his machine gun and then, I suppose, moreover, right outside the house where Killeen and Sullivan were hiding, and those boys did their stuff.

"We saw the bombs hit the tank and there was a terrific explosion, a shower of flame and a great billowing of smoke. Then there was one less Tiger tank in Field Marshal Rommel's 21st Panzer Division."

Twice more that afternoon Michael McGee dashed into the road with his Bren gun and peppered the attacking infantry of Nazi panzers—self-propelling guns, this time—stopped in their tracks, lumbered, just long enough to be destroyed by skillfully flung bombs.

REDS DRIVE AHEAD TOWARD HELSINKI: VIIPURI CAPTURED

Germans are Reported Using Pressure To Keep Finland From Surrendering

DEFENCE LINE BROKEN

London, June 21 —(CP)— Victorious Russian troops who occupied Finland's fortress seaport of Viipuri yesterday drove on today toward the capital city of Helsinki, Moscow and London were reported exerting pressure to keep their ally from suing for peace with Premier Stalin.

The Finnish radio, which told of the Russian advance, urged all persons whose presence was not essential to evacuate Helsinki—approximately 135 miles due west of Viipuri.

Twenty salvos from 224 guns boomed in Moscow last night following Stalin's order of the day announcing the fall of that city to Marshal Leonid Govorov's Leningrad army after a smashing 11-day offensive.

The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said the Germans were endeavoring to block formation of a "Scandinavian cabinet" which Finns asserted would be formed after the Russians reach the Helsinki sanctuaries.

A Finnish informant in Stockholm said loss of the key Karelian fortress would be a "heavy blow because our whole scheme of defence was built on the assumption we would be able to hold there."

"Our over-extended armies in Eastern Karelia now are threatened," he added, "to carry on would mean falling back into the lake and forest region and fighting guerilla warfare."

The Moscow radio said Finland was on "the brink of defeat."

That slant the Germans would take to try to keep Finland in the war was uncertain. A Stockholm report said the Germans were threatening to withdraw if there Finnish ports along a 70-mile stretch at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia—Tornio, Kemi and Oulu—and the Aland Islands in the gulf between Sweden and Finland.

TO ISSUE PAMPHLET

New Delhi, June 21 — (CP)—The government of India will issue a pamphlet containing all of Mahatma Gandhi's letters to the government, as well as personal interests, as well as replies to them.

This close-up of the Cherbourg peninsula battleground shows how American invasion armies cut across the peninsula to trap thousands of enemy troops. The second arrow indicates how veteran United States troops have turned and are now driving with force on the big port of Cherbourg. Latest reports say they are within the suburbs of the port.

FURTHER CUTS IN GAS AND FUEL OIL PROBABLE

How Says Every Gallon of Gas Must be Conserved for War

APPEALS FOR SUPPORT

Ottawa, June 21 — (CP) — Every possible gallon of gasoline must be conserved if Canada's position with respect to gasoline and fuel oil is not to deteriorate to the point of further curtailment of civilian consumption, Munitions Minister Howe said in the House of Commons yesterday.

In a review of the fuel situation he said that despite the best efforts made toward conservation Canada's position concerning petroleum fuels was "not improving" and warned that it was unlikely that further curtailment of these supplies could be avoided "should war consumption continue at its present level for any considerable period."

The Minister appealed for public support in preventing the misuse of petroleum products. Given this support, he was hopeful that Canada's position would be maintained sufficiently to meet the needs of the armed forces.

Further curtailment of gasoline and fuel oil supplies to the public probably would be unnecessary, if the Allies were able to win a "reasonably quick overwhelming victory" due entirely to the introduction and enforcement of conservation measures.

The voluntary support of restrictions has resulted in essential needs being met. Gasoline consumption in Canada for all purposes in the year ending March 31, 1944, amounted to 314,246,220 gallons, against 824,987,-390 gallons in 1939.

"Careful planning has provided gasoline available to the public in quantities sufficient to honor gasoline and fuel oil coupons which had been issued," the minister said. "In that respect we are more fortunate than any other country."

Referring to the necessities of gasoline required by the armed forces, Mr. Howe said he had been advised by pre-invasion estimate had indicated that Canada would have to move offshore this year a times as much aviation gasoline as she did in 1943.

NEW GATES INSTALLED

Cornwall, June 21 — (CP)—Ships began passing through Cornwall Canal last night a few hours after new gates had been installed at lock 20. The lock gates were ripped from the canal wall Monday when a Canadian naval vessel crashed into them and swept them into the lower side below the locks. New 40-ton gates were installed and the first vessel moved through the lock a few hours later. Traffic was delayed 26 hours by the mishap.

BRITISH EIGHTH PUSHES 4 MILES BEYOND PERUGIA

Soldiers From 19th Luftwaffe Division Driven From Belgium Captured by 5th

NAZI CARRIER HIT

Rome, June 21 — (AP)—British 8th Army veterans have hurled the last stubborn Nazi defenders out of Perugia, communications hub 85 miles north of Rome, and advanced some four miles north of the city, Allied headquarters said today.

The Allied drive still was in a steady motion although the Germans had thrown elements of seven divisions against the right flank of the 5th Army in an effort to slow its pace. But the 5th fought through four more villages, making what headquarters termed "minor tactical gains."

It was announced that the 5th Army has taken prisoners from the 19th Luftwaffe Division, which left Belgium June 10, four days after the invasion of France began.

This was the second German division to be diverted from the western front since the Allies' spectacular advance in Italy began, the first being the Hermann Goering Division which arrived here previously from Denmark. Prisoners also have been taken in the same general area from the 334th Infantry Division which was brought here from the Balkans.

Fresh Fliver Menaced.

On the east coast Allied troops reached the river Menocchia, about 6 miles north of the river Tesino, where they were the day before.

Heavy rains limited military movements. The situation was unchanged on the 5th Army front, except for minor tactical gains, said the Allied communique.

Headquarters announced the 1st Tactical Air Force severely damaged a 26,000-ton enemy aircraft carrier in the harbor of Genoa yesterday, it also announced today.

The ship was believed to be the previously damaged Italian carrier Aquila, which has been refitted in the harbor.

The formation scored five direct hits on the vessel, which had not been in service since it was hit previously.

BOMB TIMOR ISLAND

Allied Headquarters, South Pacific, June 21 — (CP) — Bombers of the Netherlands Indies Army Air Force bombed Cape Chater airdrome on Timor Monday afternoon, causing large explosions and starting many fires among aircraft parked in it, it was the first announced attack on Cape Chater since last November.

U.S., JAPANESE FLEETS MAY BE IN MIGHTY BATTLE

Preliminary Blows May Have Taken Place Between Philippines And Marianas

ENTIRE JAP FLEET OUT

Pearl Harbor, June 21 — (AP)— Giant battle fleets of the United States and Japan faced each other today in the 1,500 miles between the Philippines and Marianas amid indications that preliminary blows already may have opened a great naval engagement.

"Possibly the entire Japanese fleet" has entered the area, Admiral Nimitz disclosed. It was the first report on the whereabouts of the long-sought enemy navy since its crushing defeat at Midway in June, 1942.

A Japanese naval spokesman was quoted in a Berlin broadcast today as saying Japan's air and naval forces "will unleash with bigger and more powerful explosives" than those used in the current rocket bomb offensive.

First bomber pilots back at British bases said there was plenty of flak over the targets but they did not see a single German fighter — a rare occurrence in raids on the hub of Germany.

Berlin broadcasts said the Hamburg-Bremen-Brunswick area also had been attacked by the daylight raiders, but there was no immediate Allied confirmation of these reports.

At the same time big fleets of Allied planes were observed streaking out across Dover Strait in the direction of the German rocket bomb bases which now have been pounded continuously for five days.

During the night R.A.F. Mosquitoes thundered out in relays for four hours to harass German lines of reinforcement by blasting the Mestre railroad yards near Caen in the Normandy battle area. Rail yards at Chatires also were hit.

Wednesday night's storms intensified their rocket bomb attacks on southeastern England during the night after a day of comparative inactivity while a few Allied planes also were reported over Scotland.

Some casualties and damage were inflicted on southern England by the flying bombs.

Capping the months of hammering at the Pas de Calais area by the Allied Expeditionary Air Force was —not counting the heavy bomber attacks on which 19,000 tons of bombs were dropped in the course of 420 attacks by a total of 23,500 planes—the 88th Division which used two types blasted 19 separate rocket bomb launching sites.

Tanks Played Big Part in Advance Of Canadians on Normandy Front

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Tanks in France, June 21 — (CP) — Some of the most bitter tank actions in the Canadian sector of the Normandy battlefront have been fought by a unit which operated with the Canadian Infantry Brigade of the Canadian 3rd Infantry Division in the fighting on the beaches of Courseulles to the Caumont-Caen highway.

This unit supported the infantry all the way, fought German guns, panzer formations and played a big factor in the firm stand the Canadians made on the rolling slopes near Bretteville on the main highway which where the Germans threw in some of their strongest counter-attacks.

Two squadrons of tanks went in with the initial D-Day assault on Courseulles and tanks from each squadron engaged beach defences and pushed inland to the area where they landed.

Second in command of a squadron which landed west of the inlet that runs through the town of Courseulles, Capt. Jake Powell of London, Ont., shot up one huge gun position which was holding back his tank up close over the sands and banging 75-mm. shells through the gun's slit. His tank knocked out four hits but the Western infantry had had a chance to get on to the ground the wire and trench system were cleared and mopped up.

Seventeen Germans surrendered and the rest of the garrison was dead inside.

Powell and his crew got into another tank after theirs was disabled and kept going.

This assault squadron was commanded by Maj. W. D. Brooks, of Brantford. Another squadron commanded by Maj. D'Arcy Marks, Toronto, also came in on this beach after the first wave touched down.

Its initial job was to assist in clearof deaple enemy shell and mortar fire for the two squadrons and then support held up on the left flank.

Enemy Broadcasts Admit Casualties And Much Damage

No Fighters Seen Over the Capital Pilots Report On Return to Bases

PROMISE RETALIATION

London, June 21 — (AP) — More than 1,000 American heavy bombers blasted Berlin and the capital's outskirts today and the German radio indicated that at least some of the planes flew on unscathed — possibly in the first shuttle raid from British to New American bases in Russia.

The bomber fleet had an escort of around 1,000 fighters, making a total force of some 2,000 planes which carried the first war once more to the heart of the German homeland.

Basdorf, on Berlin's outskirts, also was blasted.

German broadcasts admitted damage and casualties and threatened "unbelievable terror" and more powerful explosives" than those used in the current rocket bomb offensive.

Berlin broadcasts said the Hannover-Brunswick areas also had been attacked by the daylight raiders, but there was no immediate Allied confirmation of these reports.

At the same time big fleets of Allied planes were observed streaking out across Dover Strait in the direction of the German rocket bomb bases which now have been pounded continuously for five days.

During the night R.A.F. Mosquitoes thundered out in relays for four hours to harass German lines of reinforcement by blasting the Mestre railroad yards near Caen in the Normandy battle area. Rail yards at Chatires also were hit.

Wednesday night's storms intensified their rocket bomb attacks on southeastern England during the night after a day of comparative inactivity while a few Allied planes also were reported over Scotland.

Some casualties and damage were inflicted on southern England by the flying bombs.

Capping the months of hammering at the Pas de Calais area by the Allied Expeditionary Air Force was —not counting the heavy bomber attacks on which 19,000 tons of bombs were dropped in the course of 420 attacks by a total of 23,500 planes—the 88th Division which used two types blasted 19 separate rocket bomb launching sites.

Anti-Tank Unit Of RCA Smashes 9 German Tanks

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in France, June 21 — (CP) — The 6th anti-tank unit of the Royal Canadian artillery has been battling in the front line with the Canadian 3rd Division ever since the beach assault, and in two weeks has knocked out nine German tanks and possibly destroyed two more.

In addition gunners of this unit have supported many infantry attacks by shelling pill-boxes and concrete machine-gun nests, and fortified houses in towns through which the Canadians fought in their push from the coast.

A letter commended by Maj. E. J., Scott, of Lindsay, Ont., has been more action than the others and its guns have accounted for all the tanks in the unit's score. One lone anti-tank gun, commanded by Lieut. Parlane Christie, of Kingston, Ont., has eight tanks to its credit.

In this sharpshooting troop is Sgt. Herman Dumas, of Quebec City, who is No. 1 man on a gun which alone destroyed five of these eight tanks.

This troop has seen some hot action. Once things got so warm that Dumas decided he wouldn't have his crew so exposed to tank and machine-gun fire. So he put a shell "up the spout", put one man by the gun and the rest of the crew slid into slit trenches nearby.

A German tank rolled right up to the gun and, after some fumbling thinking it had been abandoned. But the Germans crouching inside it got a bead on the tank, fired on it, and plunged into his own slit trench.

The shell hit the tank square on the hull and the tank blew up. The Germans inside were killed and his men went back to their regular routine.

10,000 More Students Needed for Harvesting

Toronto, June 21 — (CP) — Agricultural Minister T. L. Kennedy said today that 10,000 students in Ontario this year will have the opportunity to help in many areas. Col. Kennedy, has just returned from a three-week tour of eastern and southwestern parts of the province. During the second week of July he will visit the Haileybury area. He warned, "expected heavy harvests will tax the maximum manpower problem in harvesting" and "we'll need every man, each girl and instead of the 3,200 we now have helping on farms."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

$7,000 EXTRA WILL BE SPENT ON ROADS

Department of Highways approval of all or an additional expenditure of $7,000 for Hastings County roads and bridges in 1944, was announced today by County Clerk Eric Denyes.

The County Council during the June session adopted the Roads and Bridges estimates which called for an expenditure of $95,000. The additional amount brings the total to $102,000.

LONGEST DAY

Today, June 21st, is not only the longest day of the year, but records also as the beginning of the summer period that ends through to Sept. 21st. Of a recent date rather cool weather has been enjoyed, far from hot, torrid days that sometimes mark the beginning of summer.

LOCAL YOUNG MAN DID NOT ENTER PLEA OF GUILTY

In yesterday's account of city police court proceedings it was stated that Stanley Ernest Bell, Belleville, had appeared for sentence, along with Stanley Archer also of Belleville, after pleading guilty to multiple charges of robbery.

Mr. Stanley Bell pleaded guilty to any court charges preferred by police authorities and was represented in court by his counsel, Mr. G. Arnott, K.C., who arranged bail for his client. Sanford has not been asked to plead to charges on any occasions he has appeared before Magistrate J. L. Ellis.

SMOKE BUT NO FIRE

"Where there is smoke there must be fire", apparently is the belief of a local resident who when driving down Front Street, this morning suddenly realized there was smoke billowing from the North Ward auto and as a result called the fire department. After making a hurried run to the scene firemen discovered no fire was in evidence and decided the smoke resulted from an emergency brake which inadvertently might had been set, as when the car was driven away from the curb. Outside the possible necessity of a new brake lining, firemen reported no damage to the car.

17 ENTRIES RECEIVED FOR FIELD CROP COMPETITIONS

Present indications point to a near record entry in the 1944 Field Crop Competitions, according to the Belleville Agricultural Society, officials stated today. Already 17 entries have been received and it is expected more will follow.

The competition was not held last year due to the cancellation of government grants. The year previous some 16 entries participated in the competition, which this year will be devoted exclusively to oats.

YOUNG DEER SEEN FEEDING NEAR PICTON

Apparently enjoying the lush pasture of the district, a young deer has "come near to home" and of late come a summer and fall resident of Prince Edward County. The animal was seen quietly feeding in a bush in the vicinity of the Kinsmen camp near Picton, the other day. Approached by Clifford Head, local Overseer, the animal soon vaulted lightly over a fence and disappeared in a nearby woods.

"A SMALL WORLD"

The old saying — "The world is a small place after all" — is more often accepted by the Samain family than by others.

This all came about in Italy some weeks ago when Gunner Samain, son-in-law of Gaoler and Mrs. J. Samain of this city, was resting behind the battle lines in Italy and reading a magazine of rather recent publication when he came upon a picture of his brother-in-law, LAC. "Jo-Boy" Samain, who has been stationed in Ceylon with the R.C.A.F. for some months past. The magazine was one of a group of R.C.A.F. lads who had won the football championship in Ceylon, "Jo-Boy" played second base" for the team.

EARL WOODLEY MAY RETURN HOME SOON

Inference that he is not feeling normal, and that he may be home in the near future, was contained in a letter from Earl Woodley, eighteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Woodley, Sidley Ave., who was recently picked up in the North Atlantic by the corvette on which he had floated with companions for 36 hours after his ship had been broken in two and sunk.

The letter, written from Kessler Field, stated that "I am feeling as well as can be expected". Young Woodley also stated that he is forwarding his clothes here for cleaning, indicating by inference that he will be heading northward soon.

The young mariner suffered from wind and exposure during his exposure on the life raft.

CLIFFORD McCORMICK HEARD IN BROADCAST

Navy Band. Mr. McCormick, city, clifford McCormick was noted for his ability as a pianist prior to his moving to the United States.

V.O.N. Activities Continue to Grow Meeting is Told

The 16th meeting until September of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held on Tuesday night in the Bridge Street United Church, Miss Bernice Arbuckle in the chair. The routine business was conducted and comprised the secretary's report and the treasurer's statement.

Miss Ethel Gordon, in her nurse's report, said, "With our June nurse it is as we had to say we have come to an end of one section of our work together. When we meet again in September it will be to take on, in a sense, a new place of work for this community and to plan together for the Autumn and for the Winter of 1944-45". She spoke briefly of the acute shortage of nurses and made reference to the government's appeal to all graduate nurses in Canada to consider the possibility of the work they are now doing in the light of the need elsewhere. Miss Gordon went on to say that the Red Cross Outpost Hospital has been steadily increasing since the war. She spoke very highly of all we come a summer and fall resident of Prince Edward County. Mr. Samain was seen quietly feeding in a bush in the vicinity of the Kinsmen camp near Picton, the other day. Approached by Clifford Head, local Overseer, the animal soon vaulted lightly over a fence and disappeared in a nearby woods.

Miss Gordon, in illustrating somewhat graphically the scope of the work of the V.O.N., told briefly the cases one nurse had handled during the month and displayed the contents of a kit that the nurse carries in the course of her duties. During the week of May briefly, she said, the nurse had seventeen calls, some visits, conducted four Well Baby Clinics, assisted Dr. Crook at two toxoid clinics. Miss Gordon spoke also of the success of the Victorian Order of Nurses, staff of the Kiwanis Club when, with the assistance of the staff nurse of the V.O.N., and of the courtesy and co-operation of the staff of the Ann Street School in conducting the toxoid clinics there. Gordon made mention of Miss Muriel Clark, a Public Health nurse from St. John, N.B., who had taken a year's leave from her work to do post-graduate work in Toronto and who had spent a month in this city. Miss Clark spent the latter part of her time observing the work here and the responsibility involved. Finally, Miss Gordon especially mentioned with deep-hearted co-operation that the committee of the V.O.N. as a whole had given her sincere help.

Miss Arbuckle spoke of Miss Soutar and read in part a letter that she had received from her.

Mrs. Ray Orchi gave the report of the Supply Committee, which is composed of Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Short, Mrs. Wilma Mac Gillivray, Mrs. Moynes, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Hitchon and Mrs. Bowen.

During the meeting, Miss Arbuckle extended to everyone the wish for a very happy holiday and complimented the members in particular on their splendid attendance records in the past months.

Maj. J. Cousins Heads Battery In Normandy

One of the crack anti-aircraft units helping to protect the Normandy beachhead from enemy raiders is the battery commanded by Major Jack S. Cousins of this city. A Ross Munro despatch states that the unite of the regiment have accounted for 15 enemy planes since D-Day.

"Anti-aircraft guns are literally packed in the area," Munro writes, "and there is no barrage in the world like this one in which the Canadians are doing their full share of shooting".

Major Cousins is well known in the city especially in educational circles. He taught at King George School for a number of years and was a commissioned officer in the famous 34th Field Battery, commanded by the then Major Van Steenburg, now Col. Van Steenburg, director of Artillery for Canada.

Jack went overseas at the beginning of the war and has he has had a successful military career is evidenced in the fact that he now holds the rank of major, commanding an anti-aircraft battery on the Normandy beachhead.

FARMER LOSES EIGHT HEAD OF CATTLE IN STORM

MARMORA, June 19 — On Saturday morning, George Davidson, well known farmer of Marmora, made the discovery that he had lost eight head of cattle in the storm the previous evening. It was presumed that lightning struck them about 10.30 p.m. The cattle were well-bred Holsteins—five yearlings and three cows. Mr. Davidson said he would have accepted one hundred dollars for one of the cows. It is understood that there was some insurance on the stock.

MR. FARMER — would you be properly protected if this loss happened to you? We sell higher limits on stock. Our office leads in providing broadest cover at lowest rates on livestock. The lightning season is here—phone us COLLECT without delay for immediate protection.

Kinsmen 'Fags' Always Arrive Just in Time

"I hadn't smoked a Canadian cigarette for months when the latest Kinsmen shipment of 300 smokes arrived, you can readily imagine what they were worth," wrote Cnr. H. N. Goslin in reply for Canadian cigarettes sent overseas by the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" recently.

"The good old Kinsmen cigarettes usually arrive just as we're thinking of banging butts. They are really appreciated," wrote Cadet T. M. R. Ware in a letter to Chairman Buster LaBarr, while Sgt. A. A. Soares, R. D. Fischer, Sgt. C. Gow, A. Cooper, F. E. Decarie, Doug Diamond, Bill Donovan, J. W. Ellis, C. Emerson, V. G. The War Today— When Cherbourg Is Taken New Invasion Phase Will Open

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
Substituting for DeWitt Mackenzie
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Capture of Cherbourg, now dependent on hours or days, doesn't want to die first, will bring the Allies to a new phase of the invasion —the establishment of a continental base from which to start for Germany.

That means a concentration which quite possibly could need to occupy all northwestern France, including the Brittany peninsula and the Loire (St. Nazaire) to the present beachhead, Le Havre, which commands the Seine basin.

Otherwise, there seems to be little sanctuar for the Allied southern flank as it turns for the advance into France. Hitler went through northern France in 1940 without any demand for French threats on the southern flank. But, while his army may be the one to disintegrate in time, Allied commanders may not want to chance it.

There could be many reasons for the Allies wanting to occupy the several, Rennes, Bain and Nantes, but designs on the Brittany peninsula seem to be a likely one.

Achieve Impossible

Despite years of surprise, the Allies did the illogical in landing, by overcoming not, by the selected area where nobody could establish a successful beachhead and then build it. But when preparing for battles on a large scale — presumably more than 1,000,000 men and their equipment and supplies, evacuating wounded and engaging in many other important manoeuvres, brother, Bud Whittard, is believed the Allies can achieve the impossible.

The Loire and the Seine are logical flanks for a drive toward Paris. Of course the location of the present beachhead is the only indication we have that the drive will be toward Paris. The Allies still have plenty of room to manoeuvre and can stage an ultimate campaign across the (traditional) battlefields of northern France and Belgium.

Three Wounded

Three Prince Edward County young men have been wounded in action, one in Italy and the others in Normandy. Pte. Kenneth Wallbridge, reported June 19th, has been wounded a third time, but his injury is officially reported to be slight. He suffered a bayonet wound in the left arm. Pte. Bell was wounded in Italy December 12. He is the son of Donley Watkins.

Pte. Stanley Bell, Picton, whose wife resides at Wellington, was wounded in action in the Normandy invasion. His mother, Mrs. Albro Bell, resides in Rednersville. Pte. Bell is well known to sport fans, having played on Picton and Bloomfield teams.

Word was received yesterday that Pte. Russell James Whittard, whose parents reside at Waupoos, has been wounded in Normandy. He is a brother of Sgt. Bud Whittard, also of Waupoos, who is serving with the forces overseas in Army Service Corps.

Among arrivals from overseas this week was Lieut. Norman Hall, who has returned to Canada owing to a lower category. He first went overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, returning in 1941 to act as an instructor. A year ago he returned to England. His present address is Kingston, Canada. His wife, an English girl, resides in Toronto, and his mother, Mrs. D. E. Nelson, here.

THE HOME OF ELIZABETH ARDEN IN BELLEVILLE

Jas. Miller, 22, Admits Robbery Jewellery Stores

Mystery surrounding two of Belleville's long-standing Jewellery robberies was solved today when James Miller, 22, North Front St., pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft at both McCurdy's and the Ellis jewellery stores situated on Front St.

The charges followed extensive police investigations over a period of two years, the McCurdy robbery taking place on Sept. 17th 1942 and the smash-and-grab robbery at the Ellis' jewellers on May 5th last. Miller was arraigned in special police court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today by Police Inspector J. C. Hayes, and after electing summary trial pleaded guilty to both charges and was remanded until Friday for sentence. Miller was being held on other charges when arraigned. Inspector Hayes was materially assisted in the investigation by Provincial Constable E. Soulsbury, who first broke the cases.

Miller was charged with breaking and entering the jewellery store of J. O. R. McCurdy on Sept. 17th, 1942. Inspector Hayes told the court today Miller had admitted by statement to entering the premises by way of a rear window and stealing watches, rings and other jewellery valued at over $500.

Has any of the loot been recovered?" asked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C. who prosecuted the cases.

"Not yet. It is doubtful if we can recover any of it, but we still are hopeful after we took Miller's statement," replied Inspector Hayes.

After Miller admitted to the smash-and-grab robbery at the Ellis store Inspector Hayes testified that Miller had admitted taking one gold watch and one valuable ring. The method he used was by breaking the store plate glass window with a large stone and reaching inside to grab what loot he could.

Miller is also charged with robbery at the National Grocers, Hopkins garage at Foxboro and several other minor break-ins for which he is at present on remand awaiting sentence.

Crown Attorney Donnan commended Police Magistrate Lloyd of the City and Provincial Police in the solution of these and other robberies that had gone unsolved for some period in Belleville.

Nazi Uniform Found Under Peasant's Blouse

Somewhere in Normandy, June 21 —(CP) — A burly-looking peasant with his cap pulled over his forehead and a sack over his shoulder slouched up to Pte. James Leahy of London who was checking the return of French civilians to a village captured by British troops. Leahy felt suspicious about the man. "He spoke to me in French," Leahy said, "but I jerked open his blouse. Underneath was a German uniform."

'Hasty Pees' Had Part in Breaking The Hitler Line

BLEW UP NAZI LEAD TANK, SAVING HIS COMPANY

This 22-year-old British Tommy from Lancashire, Private Jack Hampton, saved his company during the battle in Italy when he faced an attack of Nazi tanks and under heavy mortar fire in an exposed position, blew up the lead tank with a Piat gun. He had walked only 30 yards away. It was the first time he had fired a Piat. The remaining tanks

"The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment led the attack which broke the Hitler line in Italy . . . In three hours of fighting, we alone took 250 prisoners, killed more than that number, while our own casualties were practically nil."

The above is an extract from a Prince Edward County boy's letter to his relatives. He is Sergt. A. Sickle, one of the original "Hasty Pees" and who is a battle-scarred veteran of the now famous Eastern Ontario Regiment.

"We had it a bit tough last week," he writes, "but we did a good job breaking the Hitler line. None of my lads were touched, so I'm thanking God for that. I have seen too many of them go out via the stretcher route."

"Italian weather is disappointing. It rains all winter and is so hot in the summer that one perspires standing still. Still, I've put in a year here, so I think I can stick it out another summer."

The letter was taken of the regiment since it landed in Sicily in September on the "Hasty Pee" landing to Sergt. Sickle "there are only 14 of my original platoon of 36 that landed here with us, so there are a lot of new faces."

Norwegian Government Recognizes DeGaulle

London, June 21 —(CP)— The Norwegian government today announced recognition of Gen. De Gaulle's committee of National Liberation as "the body qualified to conduct and lead the French war effort within the framework of inter-Allied cooperation and also preserve and protect all French interests."

Meanwhile, the London Daily Star predicted that after Cherbourg has been captured Britain and the United States will recognize De Gaulle's organization as the French national government.

Leonia, N.J., June 21 —(AP)— P. M. Fernalld, as chairman of the finance committee of the Leonia board of education, refused to approve a $300 raise for himself as school board clerk on the ground that the $1,080 salary is all the job is worth.

Good Proportion Flying Bombs Are Shot Down

By MELVIN APPEL
Reuters War Correspondent

At an R.A.F. Base Somewhere in England, June 21 — (CP-Reuters)— Invading Allied armies have captured two of the sites in France from which the Germans had been projecting their pilotless aircraft across the channel to Britain.

The sites were captured intact, according to Wing Commander R. P. Beamont, in charge of this station composed of two "ecosse" squadrons responsible for bringing down many of these flying bombs since Adolf Hitler first brought them into play.

A good percentage of the flying bombs sighted crossing the Channel are shot down. Of the total catapulted against the British Isles, a large number are destroyed in the air by planes or anti-aircraft fire.

While pilots of Tempests, who call their planes "the best and most manoeuvrable fighters in the world" get quite a thrill out of destroying the robots, they admit there is not the same kick as in downing aircraft.

While a number of Tempests have been scorched, not a single plane has been lost and none of them has been damaged beyond immediate repair.

It was also revealed here that Mosquitos have accounted for a number of these pilotless missiles while on the other side of the Channel.

The Tempests do not wait for these flying bombs to cross the Channel. They are constantly patrolling the skies in this south coast area. There is complete ground and air co-operation and when the flying bomb comes into sight the Tempests, travelling in pairs, zoom after them.

At first pilots of the Tempests used to fire from 400 yards but they have altered tactics and now fire from 100 yards, dead astern.

Lord Lovat Wounded, Is Out of Danger

London, June 21 — (CP-Reuters) —Lord Lovat, dashing Commando leader, has been wounded in the Normandy fighting, it was learned today. He is in a hospital in England and was reported out of danger.

Reports from the hospital today added that he was making as good progress as could be expected.

Meanwhile a dispatch from a correspondent in Normandy reported a typical Lord Lovat action:

"Before His London wife was wounded we were holding our position until the Commando troops could come and join us," the correspondent wrote. "We had had hard fighting but presently we saw Lord Lovat swinging up the road to the bridges we had captured with a Scottish piper playing on either side of him and looking as casual and carefree as if he were strolling down Piccadilly. We were much relieved to see him."

Chiang Advocates Collective Security, Backed by Arms if Need Be

Chungking, June 21 —(AP)— A general system of collective security, backed if necessary by an adequate international force, was urged by President Chiang Kai-Shek tonight at a state banquet given by him and Mme. Chiang in honor of Vice President Wallace of the United States.

The General said: "We respect the integrity and independence of every nation. We dream no dreams of domination. We have no territorial ambitions."

The Chinese believe, he said, in an ever-increasing co-operation with other countries in matters economic, financial, cultural and political, "and in the development of our (their) own and commensurate natural resources we will welcome foreign investment and foreign technicians."

Family Allowance Schedule Set Out in Govt. Resolution

Ottawa, June 21. (CP)— Family allowances proposed by the Federal government would become effective July 1, 1945, and would range from $5 to $8 a month depending on the age of children, Prime Minister Mackenzie King revealed today in a resolution to the Bill placed on the Commons table at committee proceedings.

The resolution proposed that allowances be paid for children under 16 years old in Canada under 16 years of age on the following scale: $5 a month for each child less than 10;

$6 a month for each child of six or more but less than 10;

$7 a month for each child of 10 or more but less than 13;

$8 a month for each child of 13 years but less than 16 years old.

The resolution provides that the rates should be reduced by $1 a month in respect of the fifth child by $2 in respect of the sixth and seventh and by $3 in respect of the eighth and additional children.

It also provides that the income tax reduction allowable for children would be reduced by an amount at a rate amount based upon the family allowance payable under said measure.

U.S. To Manufacture Whiskey in August

Ottawa to Study Canadian Situation With Regard to Question of Similar Action

Ottawa, June 21. (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe received official advice that Washington was permitting United States distillers to resume manufacture of whiskies during August and the Minister said he would study the Canadian situation and decide whether similar action should be taken by Canada.

Canadian Distillers at present are engaged exclusively in producing industrial alcohol, filling orders from the munitions department. Last fall the distillers produced potable alcohol for about two weeks during the period after the 1943 contracts had been filled and the 1944 contracts had not yet been placed. That was the only lapse there has been.

"We shall study the Canadian situation at once", the Minister said, "and will announce our decision later on. Of course, you know that with the exception of gin any production of spirits now would not affect the supplies in present or near future for consumption because of the time required for ageing."

Toronto, June 21. (CP)—Attorney General Blackwell said today that action of the United States War Production Board in permitting distilleries to resume manufacture of beverage alcohol in August "indicates a common sense and realistic approach to the question of production and distribution or liquor in wartime".

The Ontario government has protested to the Federal government against methods of distribution of whisky in Canada.

WASPS CAUSE 2 DEATHS BY CLOGGING GAS PIPE

Red Lion, Pa., June 21 —(AP)— A nest built by wasps in a gas pipe caused the deaths of Samuel Strayer, 82, his wife, 79, and a neighbor, Miss Cora Workinger, 74, yesterday. The York Gas Company said the nest clogged the pipe, rupturing a line carrying gas into the Strayer and Workinger homes.

Dr. D. H. Ackerill Dies in 83rd Year

Dr. D. H. Ackerill, 208 John St., died in the Belleville General Hospital, shortly before noon today, after an illness of seven weeks' duration. He had practised as a veterinary surgeon here for many years.

The late Dr. Ackerill, who was in his 83rd year, was born in this city and was a member of one of Belleville's oldest and most highly esteemed families, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Henry Ackerill. All his life was passed here and he loved the city of his birth. Some years ago he served as a member of the city council and he was a charter member of the Sons of England. In religion Dr. Ackerill was a faithful member of the Church of England and a regular worshipper in the Church of St. Thomas.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Elisabeth Alma Siddon; two daughters, Mrs. George Ross Beamish, at home, and Mrs. Victor Hiley, Hamilton, and Miss Hilda Gertrude Ackerill, at home.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until after this evening, then at the family residence, 208 John Street. The funeral will be private.

BUCK SAYS YOUTHS WERE ORGANIZED

Refers to Incident at Quebec Where Political Meeting Was Prevented

Montreal, June 21 — (CP) — Tim Buck, National Leader of the Labor-Progressive party, said here today after a group of youths prevented him addressing a political meeting last night at Quebec, that the whole thing was highly organized and was a striking commentary on the situation there nowadays . . . however we will hold other meetings there."

Mr. Buck added, he said in an interview that the hall last night was "filled with children under 15 and youths under 18" and that repeatedly gave the Fascist salute and, from time to time, went to the windows to asinine from there, in the true Nazi way, to mass stillness of a parked automobile across the street from the hall."

Mr. Buck added:

"Soldiers, mostly French-Canadians, were also in the hall and other speakers and offered to clear the hall for us and that the meeting could go on and our party members and others, prevented by the youths from entering, could come in. We declined their offer and I told them it was up to the police.

"The police, I must say, were quite courteous with every one of us; However a police inspector told me he was sorry but could not do anything.

"When we stepped out, stones and bricks were thrown at us. Stanley Ryerson, who came with me from Montreal was seized for a short time by a group of youths who manhandled him.

"A police constable, who was accompanying me, was hit in the leg by a brick which, apparently, was meant for me."

Mr. Buck scheduled to leave later today for Ottawa, added that the Three Rivers rally scheduled for today that was cancelled after the city council refused permission to hold it.

Use CERTO and get ONE-HALF MORE JAM or JELLY from the Fruit you buy

MAKE your jams and jellies with Certo this season and you'll put 50% more jam or jelly on your pantry shelf than you will if you use the old-fashioned, long boil method.

And with Certo you'll not only get extra quantity but extra quality, too. For Certo jams and jellies taste far better—look more appetizing. You make them in about one-third the time and you get sure results.

A pound of jam or jelly made the Certo way contains no more sugar than a pound made the old, long boil way.

A Product of General Foods

CUTS DOWN BOILING TIME

Making jam and jelly with Certo is quick and easy. For jam you need only a one to two-minute full rolling boil . . . for jelly only a half-minute to a minute. This saving of your time, energy and fuel is important in wartime.

MORE JAM OR JELLY

The Certo boil is so short that practically no fruit juice can go off in steam as it does during the old-fashioned long boil. The saving is so great that you get about one-half more jam or jelly without any increase in the amount of fruit you use.

NATURAL TASTE AND COLOUR

The short Certo boil does not affect natural fruit taste and colour as long boiling does. Jams and jellies made with Certo retain all the luscious taste and colour of the fresh fruit.

SURE RESULTS—NO GUESSWORK

With Certo you get a book of tested recipes—a different recipe for each fruit. Follow exactly the recipe for the particular fruit you are using and you can't go wrong. You'll make delicious jam or jelly with the greatest of ease.

WHAT CERTO IS

Certo is fruit pectin—the natural jelling substance in fruit—extracted from fruit in which it is most plentiful. It allows you to make jam or jelly from fully ripe fruit instead of the under-ripe fruit called for in old-fashioned recipes.

British Spirit

Britons have shown no tendency to alarm over the German robot planes or winged bombs which have been launched from the French coast. British fighters have taken to the air and have struck down many of the pilotless invaders which of course cannot reply to any Allied attack for they are sent on their course and have no power to change to meet a new situation. It has been said that Germany will be forced to throw away a great deal of material in these machines for they do not come back.

Meanwhile the coastal area from which the robots have been sent on their way by the Germans have been pounded heavily. Going back further, it is estimated that the jet-bomb bases were so hammered in six months that the possibility of the effectiveness of the pilotless bomber plane campaign had been cut to one quarter of what it might have been without the plastering which the Allied air forces have given the "platforms."

The calmness of the British people in the face of the "secret weapon" display by Hitler is the very thing that has angered the pilot of the robot horde which held this device until they thought they could use it with some effect at a time when Germany was feeling the blow-after-blow which was the result of the fear of the jet-bomb the times a day if the proof that is necessary that the enemy wiles in the nuisance raids of the robot bombs will utterly fail. They will be futile. They cannot affect the resolution of the Briton. Every measure in the nature of offensive against the Germans' plans is being taken and with good results. That is certain.

Success Beyond Expectation

Allied troops continue to increase their hold on the Continent in Normandy France. The wedge driven westward across the Cherbourg peninsula has now cut off about twenty thousand Germans who are trapped and whose only wise policy lies in surrendering as they were told by a speaker over the British Broadcasting Corporation. The beachhead which the Allies set up two weeks ago Tuesday has prospered. It is a bridge for the future in bringing liberation to Nazi-held Europe and in downing the Hitlerites and militarist class of Germany. Addition of terrific impetus to the trap closes tightly about the great port of Cherbourg. Its capture will be of the greatest naval interest to the Allied Nations. It has been one of the great early goals of the invasion.

The great Allied landings in France have been successful beyond expectation. They have been a surprise that has left a permanent result upon the enemy, who has been himself defeated in one of his great aims, to prevent an invasion. The enemy has not been able to prevent invasion nor to drive back the Allied forces which continue to make progress.

This invasion has been the greatest movement of its kind in history, the complete combined operations which have given a powerful foothold on France, from which is to come the leverage that will repel the Germans from the land they have occupied for four years which has been long and wearying to the French population forced to live under the stifling atmosphere of German occupation.

Nazi Invasion Plan Broken in 1940

German planning to invade Britain in 1940 was smashed by the British before the heavy concentrations of German ships and troops were able to leave ports of the Continent under German occupation. This information was given in the British Commons in answer to a series of questions asked of the British Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Tuesday, by Major Vyvyn Adams who sought the details of reported Nazi invasion attempt of 1940. A great deal of the enemy shipping under the German plan was sunk in ports under Nazi rule, and Nazi shipping did not escape from the ports across the Channel and the enemy had then changed their minds, he declared. "Not to my belief," said Mr. Churchill answering the question if any of the shipping of the enemy did emerge from ports.

There were stories about the time that the Nazis were concentrating shipping to make an attempt upon Britain and that British bombers had pounded enemy ports and shipping.

It is recalled that Hitler made his last desperate attempt to dominate the air over Britain on September 15, 1940, when in one day the German Luftwaffe lost 185 planes in battles over Britain. In a speech shortly after that Mr. Churchill made his memorable reference to the Royal Air Force, when he said, "The gratitude of every home in our Island, in our Empire and indeed throughout the world, except in the abodes of the guilty, goes out to the British airmen, who, undaunted by odds, unwearied in their constant challenge and mortal danger, are turning the tide of world war by their prowess and by their devotion. Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Those words were spoken on August 20, 1940.

On September 11, 1940, Mr. Churchill spoke in a broadcast to the nation, saying that all the enemy' plans for invasion on a grand scale were steadily going forward and that "several hundreds of self-propelled barges were moved down the coasts of Europe from the German and Dutch harbors to the ports of Northern France, from Dunkerque to Brest and beyond Brest to the French harbors on the Bay of Biscay. He also spoke at that time of considerable gatherings of ships in the German, Dutch, Belgian and French harbors, all the way from Hamburg to Brest and added, "finally there are some preparations made of ships to carry an invading force from the Norwegian harbors. Behind these clusters of ships of barges there stand very large numbers of German troops awaiting the order to go on board and set out on their very dangerous and uncertain voyage across the seas."

At that time, in September 1940, he said of Hitler, "Little does he know the spirit of the British nation or the tough fibre of the Londoners, whose forbears played a leading part in the establishment of parliamentary institutions and who have been bred to value freedom far above their lives."

Six days later on September 17, 1940, Mr. Churchill described the British air success on the German raiders on September 15. "Sunday was the most fruitful of any fought upon a large scale by the fighters of the R.A.F. up to the present."

At this same time, in 1940, the British Premier again warned of the deployment of German barges and ships in preparation of invasion of Britain and Ireland as continuing he added "We must not underrate the damage inflicted upon the enemy by the very heavy and prolonged nightly bombings upon his concentrations of shipping and upon all focal points of his assembly of troops. Undoubtedly serious damage has been done to his (Hitler's) ships and barges and meanwhile our own strength, I am glad to inform the House, develops steadily by land, by sea, and above all, in the air."

That was nearly four years ago and the threat of British Islands has been inviolate. It is the Allies who are staging the invasion upon the Continent that is calculated to bring the end of Hitlerite Germany.

He Applied the Military Touch

(Chicago Sun)

When a top executive of General Mills, big Minneapolis milling concern, came to Washington to discuss food supply problems with army officials, he found that the only man he particularly wanted to see, Brig.-Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the army service forces, just couldn't be reached for an appointment. A very sweet voiced young secretary gave him a complete brush-off half a dozen times, with no let-through in sight.

Finally, he decided to be his own board of strategy. He called Somervell's office again, and in a tone of crisp authority said:

"This is General Mills. Let me talk with General Somervell."

"Just a minute, General," the secretary replied. "I'll put him on."

Pyle in Normandy:
Terrible Waste of Warfare Vividly Displayed on Normandy Beachhead

By ERNIE PYLE

Normandy Beachhead, D-Day Plus Two—(by wireless delayed)—I took a walk along the historic coast of Normandy in the country of France.

It was a lovely day for strolling along the seashore. Men were sleeping on the sand, some of them sleeping forever. Men were floating in the water, but they didn't know they were in the water, for they were dead.

The water was full of squishy little jellyfish about the size of your hand. Although I didn't see it, the center each of them had a green membrane like a four-leaf clover. The good-luck emblem. Sure. Hell yes.

I walked for a mile and a half along the water's edge of our unopposed invasion beach. You wanted to walk slowly for the detail on that beach was terrific.

The wreckage was vast and startling. There was no touch of destruction of war, even aside from the loss of human life. It was as though here one of the outstanding features of those who are in it. Anything and everything is expendable. And we did expend on our beachhead in Normandy during those first few hours.

For a mile out from the beach there were scores of landing craft, trucks and boats that you could no longer see, for they were at the bottom of the water—wrecked by overloading, or hit by shells, or sunk by mines. Most of their crews were lost.

You could see trucks lipped half over and swamped. You could see pearly sunken barges, and the angled-up corners of jeeps, and small landing craft half submerged. And all low tide you could still see those vicious six-pronged iron snares that helped stop and wreck them.

On the beach itself, high and dry, were all kinds of wrecked vehicles. There were tanks that had only just made the beach before being knocked out. There were jeeps that had burned to a pretty gray. There were big derricks on caterpillar treads that didn't quite make it. There were big trucks carrying office equipment that had been headed for the battalion bys by a single shell hit, their interiors still holding their neat packages of smashed typewriters, telephones, office files.

There were trucks turned completely upside down, and lying there on their backs, and how they got that way I don't know.

There were trucks smacked on top of each other, their sides caved in, their suspension down knocked off. There was shoreline museum of carbarge there were abandoned rolls of barbed wire and smashed bulldozers, and big stacks of thrown-away lifebelts and piles of sandbags waiting to be moved.

There were big floated empty life rafts and soldiers' packs and ration boxes, and mysterious oranges.

On the beach were smashed rolls of telephone wire and big rolls of steel mesh that had been used for drives, and big rifles.

There were beach lay, expended, sufficient men and mechanism for a small war. They were there forever in case they were ever needed.

We could afford it because we had to have, who had our behind, and behind us there were such enormous replacements for this wreckage on the beach that you could hardly conceive of their size. Behind the equipment were flowing from England in such a gigantic stream that it made the whole thing look like a head seem like nothing at all, really, by adding it all.

A few hundred yards back on the beach is a high bluff. Up there we had a tent hospital, and a barbed-wire enclosure for prisoners of war. From up there you could see far up and down the beach, in a spectacular crow's-nest view, and far out to sea.

And standing out there on the water beyond all this wreckage was the greatest armada man has ever seen. You simply could not believe the gigantic collection of ships that

TURPENTINE AND COUGH.

I am unable to get terpin hydrate in capsules (complains R. L. A.) or in tablet form. Can you tell me how to get a liquid form called Elixir of terpin hydrate. The druggist only puts a few drops of the Elixir should be taken on sugar twice daily, the rest is the purified oil of turpentine.

I had two dozen capsules of terpin hydrate which, containing three grains, put up by our druggist (reports R. E. K.) and took one capsule after dinner the first night, and thereafter one capsule after food three times a day. In only two or three days I got great relief from my cough which had been bothering me a lot especially in the night. After ten days I was almost free, or at any rate less troubled than I have been for years—of course my trouble is chronic winter cough with a great deal of expectoration. . . .

Best way to take it for cough is in capsules containing one, two or three grains, depending on your size and the size of your cough. This reminds me of one of my first patients—a grocery man with an "elephant" cough. That was his sole complaint. He examined his chest many times, found no explanation for the cough. He was driving me nearly crazy. A new symptom—sudden queer noise in ears—finally led me to examine his throat. So then I found a plug of hardened ear wax filling one ear and causing the cough. I touched the wall of the canal at a point where it joins the pharynx with a rendition of his "elephant" cough. I examined his chest many times, found no explanation for the cough. He was driving me nearly crazy. A new symptom—sudden queer noise in ears—finally led me to examine his throat. So then I found a plug of hardened ear wax filling one ear and causing the cough. If your cough is not from bronchial trouble, don't blame me if the cough doesn't soon be stopped by the citizens and brigades formed here the same as in other cities.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Everybody's Doing It.

Son, seventeen, nearsighted. Optician said to wear glasses. Boy does not take mechanical drawings, too lay out there waiting to unload. Then there was the blitz. It lay thick and clear to the far horizon with the ships in the middle of it, spread out to the sides and was still stacked with ships, waiting to move the hardest man.

As I stood up there I noticed a group of specially taken German prisoners standing nearby. They had not yet been put in barbed-wire cage. They were just standing there, and looking at the wreckage. Standing together with Tommy guns.

The prisoners too were dressed out in new and clean bit of sea that for months and years had been the safe property of the Germans. Now they stood staring almost as if in a trance.

They didn't say a word to each other. They didn't need to. The expression on their faces was something forever unforgettable. In their eyes was total mortified acceptance of their doom.

Half of Germany could have had the rich experience of standing on the blitz and looking at the prisoners and seeing what their compatriots saw.

Capt. Lyttelton Keeps In Parliament

London, June 21 —(AP)— In a personal apology to the House of Commons, Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, Minister of War Product, disclaimed today any intention of saying in a speech yesterday that United States lend-lease aid to Britain "dried up" following the attacking Pearl Harbor because, he declared, such a statement was manifestly false.

Capt. Lyttelton explained that in his interpretation in a speech which he delivered before the American Chamber of Commerce he had merely tried to make clear Britain's gratitude for the help given by the United States before the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor.

He concluded:

"I want to make it quite clear that I do not complain of being misreported and that any misunderstanding is entirely my own fault.

"I ask the House to believe that the fault was an unintentional one and not of intention, and I hope that this apology will undo any harm which the original words may have caused here or in the United States."

Wing Commander Lloyd Chadburn Dies of Injuries

Aurora, Ont., June 20 — (CP) — Wing Cmdr. Lloyd Chadburn, 24, D.S.O. and Bar, D.F.C., died of injuries received June 13 and has been buried in a cemetery in France, his mother, Mrs. Frank Allen, has been informed.

"We are awaiting an official report on Lloyd's death," said the mother of the Montreal native who was one of the Dominion's outstanding air heroes of the war with a record of 14 German planes shot down, an enemy E-boat sunk, another damaged and a destroyer damaged.

WING CMDR. LLOYD CHADBURN

"At present we are told that he was shot down while flying low over the Cherbourg area and didn't have a chance to bail out. We do not know whether he was hit by an enemy fighter or by flak from the ground. He was buried at Beaucoudray, about five miles from Caen."

One of the youngest wing commanders in the R.C.A.F., Chadburn was mentioned as taking part in D-Green-Action at Dieppe. He had also missing was received Sunday and the report of his death was received Monday.

A memorial service will be held in Trinity Anglican Church here Sunday.

SCOTT'S TRIBUTE TO BIBLE

More copies or the Gospel of St. John have been circulated than of any other book in the New Testament.

Many people regard John 14 as the most beautiful and comforting chapter in the Bible.

Sir Walter Scott died September 21, 1834, at Abbotsford on the Tweed. Few some months his health had been on the decline, and for several weeks before his death he appeared to be unconscious.

One morning, wrote John Gibson Lockhart, the novelist's son-in-law and biographer, Scott was enjoying the Bath chair for perhaps a couple of hours when he suddenly desired to be drawn into the library, and placed by the central window, that he might look down upon the Tweed. Here he expressed a wish that I should read to him, and when I asked from what book he said—"Have you not the Bible in the house?" I chose the 14th chapter of St. John's Gospel; he listened with mild devotion, and said when I had done—"Well, this God."

our Business

"Our business is to look after those who are often overlooked in social planning—the widows and orphans of men who had the courage to save for their own and their families' sake. Higher taxation and lower interest rates mean smaller returns from savings. Necessary in wartime, these hit hard the inarticulate people—widows and orphans; they have no union to protect them and no voice to speak for them. The Trust Company spends its time and performs its services to help them live."

Mrs. Arnold Masters, Melrose, is in receipt of flowers from her husband, Corporal Arnold Masters, in Italy.

LAC. Roy Millar, R.C.A.F., of the West Coast, is spending a leave with his mother, Mrs. R. J. Noyes, 219 Coleman Street.

The recipient of roses and cut flowers from her son-in-law, Capt. J. P. Pearce, in Italy, was Mrs. S. Cherrie, 154 Foster Ave.

A crowd of about eight hundred enjoyed the old time and modern dancing of George Wade and his Cornhuskers in the Arena Gardens on Tuesday night.

Mrs. Jessie Mallory, Coleman St., was the proud recipient of flowers from her son-in-law, L/Cpl. Harry Thibault, with the Armed Forces in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Deyell and daughter, Sheila, of Orillia, are spending a holiday with Mrs. Deyell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred T. Hart, George Street. Miss Meta Hart, of Peterborough, was also a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hart.

The employees of J. & J. Cash held a wiener roast at the cottage of Mr. J. Hanna, of this city, on Thursday last, in honor of his daughter, Miss Doris Hanna, bride of the month. The evening was spent in boating and swimming. Group singing was enjoyed by the guests, who were accompanied by Mr. Herbert Moon on his guitar. The big event of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful pair of woollen blankets and a pair of sheets to the bride by Mr. Art Wesley from the employees. Miss Hanna and her fiance graciously thanked their friends and the evening ended with a "bun-feed" of wieners and coffee.

An informal buffet supper featured the closing meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Guild in the lecture room of the church on Tuesday night. The Guild took this occasion to present Mrs. W. Findley, former Mrs. S. R. McCreary, with an engraved silver cake plate. Mrs. J. Wilson expressed the feeling of the Guild to Mrs. Findley and extended its best wishes to her for future happiness in her new home in Pittsburg. The presentation was made by Mrs. J. G. Hornsby.

Routine business was discussed with Mrs. J. Wilson in the chair. Mrs. W. M. Barlow read several letters from overseas, many from Italy, thanking the Guild for boxes of chocolate sent at Easter. These letters, describing conditions in Italy, proved most interesting. It was decided that Mrs. C. E. Argue and her committee would send parcels overseas again this Summer. The meeting closed with a hymn and prayer.

ROSLIN

BISHOP LYONS CONFIRMS CLASS AT CHRIST CHURCH

99th Anniversary of St. Paul's Church, Roslin, is Celebrated

Roslin — The Right Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, visited the parish of Roslin on June 18th. At the morning service in Christ Church the Bishop confirmed a class of fifteen candidates, which was presented by the Rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer. The Bishop based his sermon on a portion of the Lord's Prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come."

On Sunday afternoon a service was in St. Paul's Church, Roslin, when the ninety-ninth anniversary of the building of the church was observed. The musical part of the service was given by the boys' choir of Christ Church, Belleville, who were present.

The service was conducted by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer. The Bishop delivered the sermon.

Large congregations were present at both services and the churches were nicely decorated for the occasion.

After the service the choir was invited to the hall where members of the Woman's Auxiliary served lunch.

WEDDINGS

LUSH—WOOTTON

A wedding of interest took place in Leaside United Church, Toronto, recently, when Helen Ada Wootton, of Toronto, daughter of Rev. Frank M. Wootton and Mrs. Wootton of Picton, formerly of Trinity United church, Peterborough, became the bride of George H. Lush, of Toronto, son of H. B. Lush and the late Mrs. Lush, of Huntsville. The bride's father officiated, assisted by Rev. H. A. Mellow.

Given in marriage by her brother, A. M. Wootton, the bride wore a gown of white frosted organza, and a scalloped finger-tip veil, falling from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress of shirred net. Miss Ruth Barnes, of Peterborough, as maid of honor, chose melon-shade crepe, with a fitted jacket. Charles S. Hogg was best man, and Gerald Bourne was usher.

KUNKEL—MARACLE

A midsummer wedding of considerable local interest was solemnized in Christ Church, at Tyendinaga, at high noon, Monday, June 19, when Julia Evelyn Maracle, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Maracle, Shannonville, became the bride of Bernard Michael Kunkel, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Michael Kunkel, North Bay.

As the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin was played, the bride entered the church with her brother, Gordon Maracle, who gave her in marriage. She wore an imported model frock of heaven blue sheer, with floor length veil of tulle illusion, and a shoulder bouquet of deep pink roses, bouvardia and maiden-hair fern. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Lydia Fitzgerald, as matron of honor. Mrs. Fitzgerald was prettily gowned in shell pink sheer. The bridegroom was attended by Raymond Maracle.

After the ceremony a luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel left Tuesday for a honeymoon in North Bay. Upon their return they will live in Shannonville. Mr. and Mrs. Levi Maracle entertained at a dance in Shannonville hall, Monday evening, in honor of the young people.

TRENTON

Urgent Appeal Made for Linen In Russian Relief

Trenton, June 21 — An urgent appeal was made at Red Cross work rooms on Tuesday afternoon for more and more new or used linens for Russian relief. For the past week these articles of linen and bedding have been received at Dominion and Loblaw stores in Trenton, where at all times someone is in attendance to receive the articles and give out winning tickets, but still the response is not all that is desired.

The campaign is still open in the stores mentioned for the balance of this week, and until the end of June donations will still be received at the Red Cross work rooms over Shurie's Drug Store. Linens and bedding do not have to be new but should be clean and in good condition.

It is expected the local work rooms of the Red Cross will remain open during the summer months and it is hoped all who can will come out on Tuesday afternoons to assist in this all important work. There is much to be done in the line of knitting, sewing, quilting and the making of surgical and hospital supplies.

Police Court.

Twenty-four cases were before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Trenton police court on Tuesday, County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan prosecuting. First on the list was Wilford Baker, a hit-and-run driver, who crashed into the rear of a car at the corner of Front and Dundas streets and then proceeded across the bridge where he hit another car. He was assessed $25 and costs for not stopping at the scene of the accident.

Walter Lohnes for speeding paid $7.50 and A. Robertson $12.50 for careless driving.

Claude Waddell, Frank Woods, W. Harrison, M. Weeks, W. Downey, Joseph Barnes, all paid $10 for breaches of the Liquor Control Act.

D. Chard, M. Revoy and Ray O'Sullivan paid $10.25 each for breach of the Militia At.

Roy Walt on a charge of fraud was given a month in jail.

John Stewart charged with theft of two bicycles was given two years suspended sentence, ordered to pay $7.50 costs and report to police once a week.

R. Masters and V. Myles charged with theft of gasoline from a truck were assessed $25 each including costs.

Five juveniles appeared before the Magistrate charged with wilful damage to property and each was assessed $16.50 for the damages done in breaking windows.

CASUAL COMMENT

Doris, a six-year-old child had been sent to the grocery store for a few weeks with an aunt. The aunt took Doris for a visit with the farm. She showed her the garden, the chickens, the stables and finally the orchard. As they were there an enormous sow reclined in the sun:

Aunt—"Big, isn't she, Doris?"

Doris—"And so wonderful. I saw her yesterday and she had ten little ones blowing her up.

Softball Stirlings.

Max Peoples' "Marines" are like Old Man Rivers—they just keep rollin' along. Last night they chalked up their fifth consecutive win, behind Jim Hunter's four-hit mound effort and new bats were out and downed every team in the league, except Tweed. Incidentally "Red" Carson is playing a lot of softball for the Marines around the shortstop position and is leading the league in hitting for good measure. Last night he connected at timely homer and a double to drive in the Marines' first three counters. Enough to win behind Hunter's pitching. In the other game Cassie Harris heated his old pitching mate Johnnie Bawden, as Connie chalked up his fourth win of the season set when Alemites beat the C.N.R. 10 to 1. Bob Hall's double helped Harris a working margin with three tallies in the second and Harris did the rest to blank the "Railroaders" for the remainder of the journey.

Sharkey Anniversary.

When Jack Sharkey steps into the Hume Arena ring tonight it should bring back fond memories because it was just 22 years ago this evening that sharkey stepped in Germany, Max Schmeling, of his worlds heavyweight boxing title to bring the crown back to American shores once again. He should get a big hand on this memorable occasion. Of course the "Boston Gob" will be in a much different role tonight as special referee for the return grudge battle between Gerald Gallant and Joe Katan. Promoter Frank Tunney brought Sharkey to town purposely to quell the ring riots of the past and Sharkey should be his man. While on the subject of Sharkey, he recently returned from the Italian theatre of war where he has been boxing and entertaining the Allied troops.

Tunney announced his preliminary bout tonight will see Gordie Christie against Chief Thundercloud, two of the better class cheesgrapplers, to open ring hostilities.

Once-a-Dodger.

One of the most helpful assets a ball player can have, apparently is a history of having played with the Brooklyns. At least you get that impression after watching the breaks Zach Taylor, now a coach of the St. Louis Browns, gets in his travels.

Recently, in Washington, trying to buy a scarce article, Zach was using his most aggressive approach when the storekeeper said: "Hey, didn't you use to play with the Brooklyns?"

Zach assured him, that he had and the article was forthcoming pronto.

And on a train, when all other passengers were scrambling for help from the porter, the train attendant said to Taylor: "I know you used to play with the Brooklyns." And again Zach got what he was after ahead of everyone else.

But the payoff came one night when Taylor started out to visit Otto Miller's emporium in Brooklyn. He walked out of a subway, saw a cop and asked questions. "Sure, I was there! You play with the Bums?" "Yes," Zach replied—and immediately he was a ticket to Otto's place in a squad car.

Yes it's a big help to have played with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

This and That . . .

Doc Spears, Minnesota football scout, recalls he went out to look at a high school football player named Sullivan and his name forgotten. There was another lad on the field doing everything and Doc gave it well . . . It was Bronko Nagurski, whom Spears calls his all-time, all-star, all-everything . . . I'd choose Bronko, mulligied Ky ll, over Jim Thorpe, the Ernie Nevers, or the Don Hutsons," says Spears. "The others were specialists and couldn't do all things as well." . . . Capt. Hank Greenberg is in charge of recreational activities at an army base in India. . . . And unless Greenberg's luck has changed since his baseball days, we'll wager that his charges are as near physical perfection as it is humanly possible to make them . . . Greenberg never had any use for a slacker and many of the "Hank" yarns tell you that they feared his tongue more than the wrath of any manager . . . National League infielders vote Crosley Field, Cincinnati, their favorite layout and the boys in both leagues can hand St. Louis' Sportsman's Park the booby prize for bad hops. . . . You talk about sports-casters, Jack Jackson, format president of the Western Ontario Basketball Association, has them all topped. . . . Spotted on crutches the other day, I asked what had happened: "Believe it or not," he said, "I fell off the sidewalk and sprained my ankle."

Good Fight Card.

Local boxing lovers are quite keen on tonight's mid-summer boxing show card at the Trenton Air Station that headlines a bout between Jerry McHasie, Air Force heavyweight champ, and Vern Price, colored Army champion. Sergt. Hub Smith meets Johnnie Keeley, No. 1 Command middleweight. Bombardier goes in against a Toronto ad who featured the newsboys' show, and the Barber brothers of London will be added attractions, as well as other good bouts.

ATHLETICS MAYBE POTENT FACTOR IN FLAG OUTCOME

Defeat Boston Red Sox When That Team Had Chance to Advance

YANKEES COMING

By FRITZ HOWELL
Associated Press Sport Writer

Connie Mack's Athletics haven't won a pennant since away back when, and they aren't hot choices this year, but they might have quite a bit to say about who emerges on top in the American loop's free-for-all.

Connie's conglomeration of kids, castoffs and Cubans were reeling placidly in last place when Joe Cronin's spurting, second-place Red Sox came to town and 18,500 fans turned out to see the fun.

When the smoke from the double-header cleared away, the Mackmen had jumped to a sixth-place tie, and had spoiled Boston's chance of slipping into first place over St. Louis Browns, who split a twin bill with Chicago's White Sox.

The A's needed 11 innings to beat Boston in the opener 5-4 but the second was easy, veteran Bobo Newsom allowing two hits for a 3-0 shutout.

The Browns stretched their lead to 1½ games by salvaging the second from Chicago 5-0, after losing the 10-frame opener 4-3. Al Hollingsworth turned in his first of the season in the nightcap.

Brewery Hurls Good Game

Hank Borowy came up with another good mound chore, a four-hitter, and the Yanks loosed a 10-blow barrage behind him, as they defeated Washington 3-1 with Bud Methony's homer deciding it.

Cleveland beat Detroit 3-1 but skidded into the cellar, Ray Mack, war worker, flew to Detroit for the twilight tilt and his ninth-inning fly and the winning run home as hard-working Paul Trout weakened.

Bucky Walters copped his fifth win with a neat two-hitter against Pittsburgh's Pirates. The Reds eased into third place, .001 ahead of the Giants.

BALTIMORE BACK IN TOP POSITION OF INT. LEAGUE

Toronto Defeated by Newark Bears Due to Bad Errors

BUFFALO SECOND

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles are having their ups and downs in the torrid International League flag race. Today the Orioles are back on top, and the Red Wings are third, while Buffalo's Bisons stuck in second place.

Baltimore climbed over both Buffalo and Rochester last night by taking a twin bill from the Red Wings 4-0 and 10-6, although each hit 13-10 in the closing slugfest. Buffalo clung to the runner-up spot with a 10 victory over Syracuse in the first half of what was booked as a double-header, but rain washed out the last half.

Jersey City and Montreal, fighting for fourth place, traded a pair of tight ones, the Giants taking the opener 1-0 although the Royals outhit them 5-3. Montreal came back to take the second tilt 3-2 in 10 innings to hold fourth place by .001 of a percentage point.

Sixth-place Toronto used three pitchers in a vain attempt to halt seventh-place Newark, but the Bears emerged with a 7-3 decision in a contest marred by a half-dozen errors, three by each team.

Toronto, June 21 — (CP) — Apparently there was no thought of a lacrosse hall of fame in Vancouver when Sid McLennan offered part of the Forum as a boats trophy room, but the idea is growing now, says Ken (Vancouver Province) McConnell. Before long the fame hall may be a reality, since there seems to be a notable lack of interest in other centres.

No one has arisen to dispute Vancouver's claim to fame fallishness, and in fact Bas (Montreal Star) O'Meara, says in effect wottheheck. Opines Bas: "Vancouver wants to have the lacrosse hall of fame—we guess that's the only place left with a real old-time interest in the game, so let them have it."

Surely other centres of one-time boxia interest aren't going to give in without a fight?

Net Northwood used to run a filling station in Stavely, Alta., before gasoline was rationed and he went into the racehorse game. Now Northwood has closed up his business and is devoting himself to racing, a far more profitable pastime. Northwood invested $50 in a nag, Nanaga Kalliko, seven years ago. From that modest beginning he has developed into one of the Canadian turf's leading home citizens, and owner of Teeworth, the big mare that has brought home $14,900 worth of bacon the past two years.

Hal Pettenuzzo (Bulletin) Jean skirmishes increasing interest in soccer to the large number of Britishers and Empire types who came to Canada to train under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. He predicts a good future for the game.

New York, June 21—(AP)—Ever hear of a school for baseball coaches, in which the small-college, prep and even sandlot tutors could learn a few trade secrets from the game's top-flight? . . . During the off season most big-time college football coaches appear at one or more such schools but as far as this dept. can learn, Alabama's coaching school is the only one that includes baseball—and it is out for the duration.

Shorts and Shells

The A. A. U. is seriously considering night track meets in case the championships remain in New York, because afternoon attendance has been so unsatisfactory. Fewer than 4,000 customers turned out last weekend . . . Note from N. Y. U.: basketball was the most popular intramural sport last season with 814 participants of a total of 4,873 . . . Gil Torres, Senators' infield mainstay, wears wire-hoop pants, like Al Simmons, to conceal what probably are the thinnest legs in Major League Baseball.

Have a Coca-Cola = Come on over

. . . or keeping youth happy at home

Keeping young folks happy at home is mostly a matter of having a house in which they and their friends feel welcome. A radio, or a phonograph and some records; a place to dance, a little food and they're happy. And don't forget Coca-Cola . . . it's always a big attraction for the young crowd. It says better than words, Come on over . . . we're glad to see you. Be sure there's "Coke" in your icebox. In all the world there's no more cordial invitation, nor one more refreshing, than the three simple words . . . Have a "Coke."

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 41

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You lucky people. Learning a opening bids of two in a suit is a cinch by the Horse Sense method. Think of the agony players went through trying to get it according to the cumbersome systems.

Some of them had to learn changeable honor trick fables with fractions. Also tables of winners. Also combinations for bids or that distribution. Enough to drive anybody nuts.

Do you remember that shortcutter that swept the country for awhile? Total your honor tricks. Add your long cards. Subtract your short cards. Divide by two. And if the dog had fleas, or something, you had a two bid.

All that stuff belongs to the ox-cart era of bridge. With the Horse Sense method, you merely count one trick for each high card or short card. If you have nine or more, you have an opening two bid. That's all there is to it.

When you know that, the questions from cumbersome players will sound stupid to you. They ask how many honor tricks you need with it. Or what distribution. And things like that.

Show them any hand with nine tricks. With nine tricks, a hand cannot help but have everything a two bid needs, honor tricks, sure tricks, high cards, distribution, the holy city.

Let's say you have a hand like this:

♠A
♥K Q J 9 6 2
♦K Q 9 7
♣A 7

You have six high cards; two aces, two kings, two queens. You have two short cards in spades and one short card in clubs. Your nine tricks are enough for an opening bid of two hearts.

In that hand you will have enough to satisfy the most exacting desires of any player. Any player who would not start that hand with an opening bid of two should have his system examined.

Also his head.

AT THE McCARTHY—Ida Lupino and John Garfield are the exciting, romantic team in "Out of the Fog," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, along with "Nothing But the Truth."

"Doughboys in Ireland"

Columbia's new picture "Doughboys in Ireland," opening next at the McCarthy Theatre is a "hip-hip hooray" soldier show. It has swell songs, it has a grand romance, it has gusty and explosive comedy. And it is played to the hilt by star Kenny Baker, Jeff Donnell, Lynn Merrick and The Jesters.

Kenny Baker will sing your heart away with new songs and old Irish-American favorites like "Mother Machree" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling", and when Yankee boy (Kenny Baker) meets Irish girl (Jeff Donnell) you'll fear and cheer. The Jesters have never been more laugh provoking, nor Lynn Merrick's voice and charm more captivating.

While "Doughboys in Ireland" is a story about soldiers, it is not a war play. It carries Danny O'Keefe (Kenny Baker) through the rigors of basic training to camp in Ireland where he gets into a pretty kettle of Irish stew. He meets Molly Callahan (Jeff Donnell) and because of misunderstanding with her over her donkey, McCauley, incurs the "rath of the whole clan Callahan."

The Callahan ire doesn't stop at Kenny, his friends, (The Jesters), for merely casting an eye at a pretty village colleen, discover that there is such a thing in Ireland as a shillalah as well as a wild Irish rose. Hilarious Donnybrook, they bleat for Danny to save the day.

"Princess O'Rourke"

Ladies and gentlemen, listen to the year's happy-go-lovingest film fable . . . Once there was a genuine dyed-in-the-ermine princess. Like all princesses, she's very beautiful. In fact she was as beautiful as Olivia de Havilland. And then there was also a genu-ine, dyed-in-the-blue-serge American. Like all American lads he's a very nice guy. As nice, in fact, as Robert Cummings. So what should happen but they go for each other like anything, and oh, boy oh boy, oh boy, it's the biggest, gayest, happy-go-laughingest comedy that ever came your way . . . and it's called "Princess O'Rourke." Now "Princess O'Rourke" is really and truly the most delightful love story ever told by Warner Bros.—and you can see it starting next at the Capitol Theatre. So put on your best smile, take along your loudest laugh, and come along for a royal good time with "Princess O'Rourke," a swell gal.

"Billy the Kid" in Texas"

Bandits such as play their nefarious trade in Bob Steele's latest thriller, "Billy the Kid in Texas," which comes next to the Capitol Theatre, are still operating in the southwest. A recent Associated Press dispatch from Tooele, Utah, narrates the breaking-up by a sheriff's posse of a cattle-rustling ring doing business on a big scale. All brands and breeds of stock were recovered; many of the bands having been blotted out. Over 1,300 sheep were included in the loot, and a sensational gun-battle between the law officers and gang resulted in six bandits being killed and seven brought to bay.

"Billy the Kid in Texas" probably ranks as the last showing of all the Westerns Steele has appeared in.

A colored cartoon and the first chapter of the new thrilling serial, "Captain America" completes the big program.

AT THE BELLE

"The Desert Song" in Color

Playing to capacity audiences, Warner Bros.' Technicolor production of "The Desert Song" in now concluding a highly successful engagement at the Belle Theatre.

A COCO-Selected "Zero Hour" expert action picture of the grand rebearsal for invasion and a funny colored Disney cartoon provide the feature attraction.

"Fly Havoc"

One of the most interesting allfeminine cases ever to appear in a single film has been assembled by Mc-G-M for "Cry Havoc" the stirring filmization of the much-talked-about hit play which opens next at the Belle Theatre.

Margaret Sullavan returns to the screen in the prewar role of Sisley, the one registered nurse in the group of American women who remmafled on Bataan in the last days. Ann Sothern and Joan Blondell are starred with a host of lesser workers. Fay Bainter is cast as 1st Marsh and Connie Gilchrist as Sable, the cook. The other volunteers in the cast are Marsha Hunt, Ella Raines, Heather Angel, Dorothy Morris, Diana Lewis, Gloria Grafton, Frances Gifford, and Fely Franquelli.

Three Varied Featurettes

Three varied featurettes precede the feature attraction including a Pete Smith specialty, "Seventh Column", another M-G-M. Colorfun cartoon, "Tinertube Antics", and a timely and thoroughly entertaining Passing Parade subject, "This is Tomorrow."

Stephens Adamson 'Marines' Make it Five in Row Taking Garrison Soldiers into Camp

SMART CONTESTS

Stephens Adamson "Marines" made it five in a row to increase their lead in the top slot of the Belleville Men's Softball League last evening by rolling through to a 10 to 1 win over the Garrison "Soldiers" in the curtain-raiser of a twin bill. The nightcap saw Bob Best's Alemites blank the C. N. R. "Railroaders" 4 to 0 as the victors took over sole possession of second place in the league standings and dropping the losers to a bad fourth.

Connie Harris's brilliant four-hit pitching chore was too good for the "Railroaders" as Harris batted his old pitching mate, Johnnie Barton, who was hit hard in the early frames, when the Alemites hammed a substantial lead they continued to protect as the game progressed. Harris was in rare mound form striking out six C. N. R. letters in the first two frames to run his string of whiffs to eleven in seven innings. Bawden struck out six and yielded no seven safe hits.

Best's Alemites got the jump on Bawden and the "Railroaders" in the second inning by virtue of three runs when Martin, Tebworth, Harris and Hughes hit in succession. Booth scored the winner's fourth and final tally in the next inning on a hit and run pinch fielder choice play. Wright was the only "Railroader" to reach third base as Harris left seven stranded on the runways. Bawden had seven strike outs.

The line-ups:-

C. N. R.—Martin 1b, Carson ss, Murray 2b, Bellis 3b, Langman rf, Day cf, Bawden p, Wright lf and S. Bellis c.

Alemite—Hughes lf, Dickie ss, Booth 1b, Jenkinson rf, Martin cf, Philip 2b, Hammett 2b, Tebworth c and Harris p.

Scores by innings	runs
Alemite	001 000 0—4
C. N. R.	000 000 0—0

Extra Bases Helped

Extra base hits helped elongated Jim Hunter and the Marines down the Garrison 10 to 1 in the opening game as Hunter fired a four-hitter at Garrison. Manager Max Peoples' Stephens Adamson crowd scored a little bit here and each of the first two frames to coast in behind Hunter.

"Red" Carson hit for the circuit in the first with Jim Barriage aboard and drove Bellis home in again in the second with a double. Jack Callaghan hit a triple in the second as Wilf Latchford counted two doubles with the Marines scoring two runs in the first, second, fourth and four in the sixth.

Marcelle was the big swatsmith for the Garrison with a single and a triple. Doug Fishell pounding out the only other Garrison extra base hit, a double. Hunter struck out eight, Reid one and Marcelle two.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 22.

"Bruce knew you were driving Cala to him?" I asked Curtis Avery. "I thought Cala had a date."

He came back from the door. "No. It was Bruce's idea. He'd called me up about it, long distance, at my office. I have an office, you know. I'm supposed to handle all my wife's properties, under the sole provision of her trustees. In other words, I'm her errand boy. And, to be honest with you, I did elope. Not with any woman. Away from Stella. Bruce had come into his mother's money and—well—I hoped he'd find us opening for me in one of the enterprises he controlled, but—"

He broke off with a helpless gesture. And I murmured "I'm sure he would, not because I believed it, but to say something in answer to his unusual confidences.

"And he didn't tell you he was coming back? You didn't know he was here?" I asked.

He shook his head, "If only I had known! I could have made him help me. If I'd had a chance to talk with him. He would have placed me, now that he had his whole interests there. He penned again, as if debating something, and then burst out desperately: "Miss Westworth, please! I have to presume. I know I have no right, but nearsightedly I'm me. But—I know all along you and Bruce were friends, and—I've kept your secret. Won't you help me, in Bruce's place? Take up my job, do anything, or anywhere! So long as it takes me away from here—makes me free!"

It was very embarrassing, and rather terrible, seeing a man go so utterly to pieces but in Curtis Avery's case I could understand it. No one could endure Stella Avery forever, not for all the money in the world.

And yet, something in me rebelled against being drawn deeper into the hidden life of Cliffport, and I was greatly relieved when Sergeant Hatch appeared in the door at this crucial moment, announcing: "The Inspector asks will you come in, Mr. Avery. You too, Miss Westworth, he said. If I could find you".

"Why, certainly, sir," Avery was all this murder business is over". Confidence restored considerably in his chair behind the desk.

"It's a shame to bring you a hundred times it's a lie!" she was saying sharply when we came in. "Get that dirty liar and I'll tell her so to her face".

She swung around at the sound of the door opening, saw her wish fulfilled and stopped for a second. Then her fury poured forth—in a torrent.

"So here you are at last, you liar," she apostrophized me. "You're ready. "Saying I was in the Burton house Friday night, when I was home and in bed with a sick headache and can prove it! Tell them I was home, Carl," she ordered her husband, and then turned on the Inspector again. "What had you believe her, and not me? What right have you to doubt my word? It's an outrage, and I promise you it won't be overlooked when the next promotions come up. I'll have you demoted. I'll have you pound the pavements again, down by the wharves. I'll—"

The Inspector stopped teetering and leaned his arms on the table. "I'm have you put in the lockup now, if you don't stop raving," he assured her amiably.

It cut off her breath. She turned purple, gasping with the shock of it. And the Inspector used the momentary hiatus to address her husband.

"Mrs. Avery says she was to home by the time Miss Kay heard her scream in the Burton house. Was she?"

Curtis Avery had calmed down remarkably. "I—I'm not sure exactly what time you do refer?" he asked politely.

"Half past eight to nine."

"Yes, she was home." Asked in bed," he said quickly. "I asked the time, because I'd been out once myself. Out of town, visiting some—er—illiatory tenants for my wife."

"Coming home for the late rents, you mean?" the Inspector inquired.

"Yes. It's one of my less enviable duties." The man actually had the courage to be sarcastic in Stella's presence! "I returned rather late. Past our dinner hour, My car developed some minor trouble that delayed me. And when I came in, I told me Mrs. Avery had one of her bad headaches and wasn't coming down for dinner."

"So you went up to the sickroom visiting — was your hundred duty?"

"I did. That is, I peeked in." Avery informed him. "But my wife was sleeping and so I went downstairs again and had my dinner."

"How do you know she was sleeping? Did you see her?"

Avery ignored the Inspector's sarcasm. "I did. After she woke up. We spent the rest of the evening together, in her private sitting room."

"That ain't what I meant. When you 'peeked in': did you see she was sleeping, his inquisitor persisted.

"Why—the room was darkened. I only saw what was in bed. And when she didn't answer when I spoke to her—softly, of course—I presumed she was asleep," Avery explained coldly, with a puzzled expression.

"Hmm. You saw her in bed. Turned the other way?"

"That's right."

"Then you're sure it was her? Couldn't been a roll of blankets? See about it, Mrs. Avery?"

Stella's face had turned blue by this time, and she was full of fear and fury; the last vestige of her habitual dignity had evaporated. "You—miserable flatfoot! You—I'll not have you demoted, I'll have you dismissed! Get out of my house—out of Cliffort!" she sputtered and shrilled.

"Sure, sure! Go ahead and smash!" Hatch urged the Inspector, ed at her. "But first: tell me what you're doing in the Burton house? Why, you take all that trouble, saying you was sick, and you're in a dummy in your bed?"

The rage left Stella's face. She suddenly looked sick and very frightened. "It's a lie. I was ill in bed. I didn't go out—not to the Burton house or any place," she brought out in sighing gasps that hinted to work themselves up into screams. Then she sits-ended around and flung herself on her husband, grasping his coat and pleading with him in a frenzy of excitement: "Help me, Curt! Help me. He's trying to frame me! I was home. I didn't go out at all. I didn't! Don't listen to what he's saying. He's lying. Believe me! You must. You've got to believe me, Curt. Please say you do!"

"I suppose the Inspector was afraid she'd had really and truly gone insane. At any rate, he motioned Avery to go, and Avery nodded and picked Stella up bodily, supporting her with the deep Scotsent Hatch hastily opened for him.

Then Curtis Avery, in a moment it looked as though he were going to rebel. His face turned black with indignation, almost to most threatening. But he quickly became the subservient, tyrannized-to-please husband again.

He walked out through the door he was smiling placatingly at his hysterical woman's ear, and—

"Do you really think she rigged up a dummy to look like she was going out to the Burton house?" I asked the Inspector when Stella's moans had died away in the hall.

"I told you before: I don't think. I know," he smiled, pleased with himself. "We had her French maid down to the station, and the girl spilled the beans plenty, after a little persuasion. She admitted—confessed to have rounded up the suburbiti, undressed her, and propped her through the door he was smiling placatingly at her hysterical woman's ear, and—

"Do you really think she rigged up a dummy to look like she was going out to the Burton house?" I asked the Inspector when Stella's moans had died away in the hall.

"I told you before: I don't think. I know," he smiled, pleased with himself. "We had her French maid down to the station, and the girl spilled the beans plenty, after a little persuasion. She admitted—confessed to have rounded up one, I figured, to help her out the house and back in again, unseen. Mrs. Avery?"

"Then I was right. It was she who was there, in the house. But why? Why did she go there? Have you an idea?"

"I also told you before: ideas don't make an arrest," he reminded me.

"But sometimes they lead to other ideas that may lead to it," I came back.

He grinned jovially. "When you say 'ideas,' you mean 'questions.' What's on your mind?"

"The gun," I confessed. "One always reads how the police trace a murderer by his gun, and—"

"And you'd like to know, have we found the one killed Mr. Bruce." The Inspector chuckled, starting his tottering again. "We-ell, we have and we haven't. There's a thirty-two automatic from the desk in the Burton library. Always lay there in the unlocked drawer, says Roberts—and Mr. Furrestall. So we figure that was the one used."

"And—where is it now?" I asked unpreasedly.

"In Eagle Lake, likely," he shrugged. "Easiest way to get rid of it. It's only a step and a straddle from the grounds and the watery depths of deep down there, with a mighty swampy bottom."

The rest of the afternoon was uneventful. The only important news was Forrestall's report that his appointment had gone through and I could start examining my future riches in the morning—came over the phone.

Otherwise Aunt Millie and I just sat and talked.

That is, I talked, and she listened, receiving my account of the extraordinary events in the Averys with a shrug and an unchanged sniff—the latter in recognition of the fleeting crack in Curtis's armor of meekness—and a getting quite worked...up over the description of my visit to Cala, for which I suppressed all references to Bruce's murder.

Aunt Millie is a born nurse. Any mention of illness rouses her to action. Within five minutes of my saying the word "cold" for the first time, she was on her way to the upstairs apartment, her arms full of throws, blankets, and—as an mitigating afterthought—some choice preserves from Mary's pantry shelves and the sum total of excitement.

The evening also promised to be blessedly everyday and serene for a change.

Dad brought Allan home with him for dinner, and afterwards retired to his study, not to work, but for a prolonged telephone conversation. Aunt Millie went to her room to catch up with her correspondence, and Allan I had the evening to ourselves, for once.

At first we related a little in the country, but—perhaps it was the atmosphere of the Burton house, the camp, and perhaps the beauty of moonlight on the reflection of the terrace lights—anyway, we stayed home. Sitting in one of the spare Adirondack chairs Allan presently, admiring the lovely old house between the pillars, he said that our life together in it—for our whole future—

But we were jerked back forcibly into the present.

Nettie's black silhouette appeared on the terrace with another, taller one behind it, beside her. Peering into the dim garden and calling "Miss Mary! Miss Mary! Are you there. Mr. Jordan come to see you, say it's urgent."

Allan heaved himself out of the chair with a groan. "Drat the boy!" he said under his breath. "D'you want to see him?"

I afraid so. It's a case of wanting," I told him ruefully, and then called out to Nettie, "Show him in, Nettie. Where can I find him?" he asked the Inspector irritably as a greeting.

"At police headquarters, or his home," I told him.

"I don't like to go to the police and I don't know his home address," he said querulously. Looking in the telephone book plainly hadn't occurred to him.

"And I got to see him. I thought maybe he'd be here."

"Why have you got to see him?" Allan inquired unfeelingly.

Bobby glanced uncertainly from one or us to the other and then made up his mind. "I want to tell him the truth. Maybe I'd better tell it to you, and you tell it to him?" he broke out hopefully.

"Maybe," I temporized. "Sit down. Get it off your chest—that you've never been inside the Burton house."

"How did you know?" He dropped into a chair, round-eyed and openmouthed.

"Oh—you aren't the type to hide in corners," I flattered him.

The compliment went over big. His puny shoulders straightened under their padding. "You're quite right. I'm not," he said with a swagger. "The sconey the Inspector suspects it, the celebrity Dr. And will I ever do a girl a favor again? I will not!"

"Oh? You were doing Amy Forrestall a favor by getting engaged to her?" Allan sounded so cynical he almost spoiled the good flattery I achieved.

Young Jordan became flustered and wary. "Well—not exactly, but well—yes," he stammered uncertainly. "I mean—a man can says he'll marry a girl who—well—"

"You mean: a girl who—who's in love with another man," I helped him out, pinching Allan's arm to caution him against further sarcasm.

"Sure—that's what I meant. Only —I couldn't very well come out and say it," the younger man admitted unhappily.

"You didn't say it. I did," I consoled him tactfully. "And perhaps it'll help you, if I tell you we—Mr. Reid and I—have known all along you were only a substitute, a—a scapegoat. Won't you tell us the whole story?"

"Gosh, you're swell!" Young Jordan blew up his cheeks and let out his breath in a long sigh of relief. "Gosh, it's a help, telling someone you aren't scared of! The thing that —the way the Inspector grilled me! I thought I'd die!"

"I know how you felt. I've been through it," I helped matters along. "I bet you have," he agreed, and then delved into his pocket. "Well, it was this way. I've been crazy about Amy all my life. And when a girl she's been crazy about all his life comes to a feller and asks, will he help her get a man from out of town has ditched her, and that saved Amy's reputation is on to it and makes her life miserable if she can't show a fiance, and will make him a good wife if—golly he'll say he was glad to help her! Get the meetings him with—what a feller to do?"

"What you did—if he is a gentleman," I commended him.

He grinned and wriggled in distressed embarrassment—and then suddenly became angry. "Okay," that's what I thought and why I did it," he burst out truculently. "And then I found out it was all bonny and baloney. Amy acted as if I was poison, by, wouldn't even let me kiss her. And this afternoon—after I'd stood all that questioning from the Inspector—she told me right out she'd never meant to marry me. That I was just a blind. And I was in it now and had to go through with it. Or she'd go to the murderer. And her mother said she'd write me a check and get me a good job in another town if I didn't give the show away. Now I don't want to go away from Cliffport, and I don't like being mixed up in murders."

"But—what have the murders to do with it?" I asked, pressing Allan's arm hard for support. "Tell me."

"Sure will." He hitched himself forward in his chair, trembling with excitement and importance. "You see, I'm figuring it different ways. And when Mrs. Avery got me out on Amy. She made that part up to Amy, and—and—and take the place of this feller she was meeting in the Burton house, and she could shift him from being accused of murdering that Professor Stoddard. Never mind what they'd do to me" he finished bitterly.

"Sounds possible. But—who was the man?" Allan prompted.

Of course, Bobby's shoulders rose till they touched his ears.

"I dunno. Maybe an out-of-towner, like you said. But it must have been someone Mr. Burton knew by sight, 'cause Stella and Mrs. Forrestall that Mr. Burton would tell the police. He's by, and he thought had killed the Professor. I bet he'll tell them, too, so maybe Amy told this man and he went out to the camp and shot Mr. Burton, so he couldn't tell on him."

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Trend—June 21 —(CP)— Industrial and Western Oil stocks were up at noon today on the Stock Exchange, while golds showed little strength in the early afternoon. Base metals were down on the whole. Volume was again fairly large with 600,000 shares for the first three hours.

Canada Oils, Utilities, Foods, Steels and Liquors advanced moderately and the papers were mainly unchanged. Hollinger, Pamour, and 2 points and Hiram Walker firmed 1-8 to 1-4. International Pete was active and 3-8 higher at 12 3-4.

Several new highs were posted on the Curb where Yellowknife issues specially were strong. Giant sold up 70 cents to 10 cents to $1.65, Conwest added 8 and Negus 10 cents. Pickle Crow, Leitch, San Antonio, Buffalo-Ankerite and Lake Shore were all gainers of 5 cents or more.

Gold up 1-3 to 35 and Smelters and Ventures added 1-8. Wells-Amulet and Steep Rock were up 5 cents.

Home, Calgary and Edmonton, Dominion Tar, Calmont and Imperial Petroleum Consolidated were strongest issues.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, June 21—(AP)—Selected liquor shares turned resistant in the stock market today after losing part of their sizable early gains, scored on announcement a "temporary holiday" would be permitted the companies which have large alcohol inventories.

Steels, which had attempted to rise, motors, and rails were among the laggards. Profit cashing on the extended list appeared to shadow continued favorable reports from war fronts.

LONDON LETTER

BY FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 21 — (CP) — It's confusing, to say the least, when you ask a pretty red-head for a date and are told to meet her on Samuel Johnson's tea party and after thanking her to get "Allah's"-Abba" tossed at you.

All this and more was merely caused by a meeting the Baha'is had recently, or, to more explicit, that the girl wanted you to go with her to the Baha'i centenary exhibition.

No, the meeting was not a get-together of Baha'is but a meeting of lovers of the occult — merely a religious gathering of English people who had embraced Baha'ism and were simply celebrating the fact.

Their religion was founded in Persia in 1844 by Baha'U-Llah who was followed by his followers as "The Bab" or "The Gate." He preached of the inevitable victory of Islam on earth, and when he died his son, known as Abbas Effendi carried the faith into British shortly before the First Great War.

According to the Baha'is this is the year 101, their calendar being made up of 19 months with each month or asamat containing 19 days. The greeting "Allah'U-Abha" means, "God is most glorious."

Those attending this religion, which was first expounded in 1844, met in conference recently at the Royal Albert Hall with one session for at least a year.

The faith also proclaims the oneness of mankind and religion, with the result that at this centenary celebration those attending were treated to selections of readings picked from the Bible, the Koran, the Baha'a scriptures and books by George Bernard Shaw; H. G. Wells and Aldous Huxley.

Among those present were as ordinary as the people who had come from typical English homes in London, Manchester and Liverpool, with a smooth to attend the celebration. They met quietly, listened to sermons and occasionally prayed.

Butter Production Off During May

Toronto, June 21—(CP)—Creamery butter production in Ontario in May totalled 8,310,000 pounds, 2.9 per cent less than the 8,559,000 pounds produced in May, 1943, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in its monthly dairy report. Cumulative production for the first five months of 1944 was 41,330,000 pounds, 12.9 per cent less than the 29,418,000 pounds in the corresponding period of 1943.

Dairy factories in the province had standing orders for 1,318,000 pounds of cheese for May and 1,318,000 May 1 and 1,982,000 a year ago.

Cheddar Cheese Production in May was 1,318,000 pounds, compared with 11,181,000 in May, 1943. Production for the first five months of 1944 was 23,005,000 pounds against 20,637,800 last year.

Fruit Trees Reported In Excellent Condition

Toronto, June 21 —(CP)— The Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in its monthly crop report that fruit trees are generally reported in excellent condition. The peach crop will probably exceed 1943 acreage by 20 to 25 per cent. Conditions, however, the report said, is expected to be a week or two later than last year.

Damage to apple tree by rodents was reported below average, except for girdling by mice in Carleton and Prescott and Ontario. In most sections weather conditions were not too favorable for natural pollination and this may affect the set of the crop. The weather in Western Ontario has been conducive to apple development. According to the bloom showing, prospects are for an average crop of fall and winter varieties of apples.

More than normal mortality to peach and cherry trees in the Niagara area and Norfolk county is anticipated because of the cumulative effects of injury in the winter of 1942-43. Replacement of younger trees has been carried out. Generally speaking, there is good promise condition except for some damage to sweet cherries. Bloom on both sweet and sour cherries was above average.

Pear bloom is exceptionally good in the Niagara district. Conditions are generally pruned trees weakened by injury during the winter of 1942-43, and will show a heavy showing of bloom and little injury or disease. Show prospects are for a good crop of plums, but a possibility of some frost injury to blossoms in eastern districts, plums produced a heavy bloom.

The strawberry crop is estimated at only 75 per cent of last year. A good average crop of raspberries is anticipated.

Despite too much rain, backward cool weather conditions, the outlook at the middle of May in Eastern Ontario, commercial plantings of vegetables are in much better shape than was the case last year.

SOLD BINDER TO BISMARCK

Glendale, Calif., June 21 —(AP)— Charles H. Haney, 61, former farm implements company executive who sold the first grain binder to reach Bismarck and introduced American-made farm machinery to various parts of the world, died today. He was a former executive of the International Harvester Company.

Concrete Forts Near Prize Harbor Prove Formidable

However German Radio Says Port Cannot Hold Long Against Attackers

CAPTURED ROAD JCT.

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP) —American infantry units fought house-to-house with the Germans today for possession of Cherbourg and in swift advances on the east and west threatened to cut Nazi forces on the peninsula into three segments, while in the British-American Tilly sector there was little activity noted in today's communique No. 33, apart from heavy enemy shell and mortar fire.

American troops have captured St. Pierre Eglise, the last road junction leading to Cherbourg from Cape Barfleur, Allied headquarters announced. Advance units also entered Montebourg, a large town near St. Vaast La Hougue on the east coast.

Strong Fortifications.

In the close-up fight for Cherbourg the French-built concrete forts—Octeville and La Roulerie about 1,500 yards from the prize harbor were proving formidable obstacles to the attacking American troops. The fighting appeared to raged at the edge of town, in the suburbs and possibly inside the town itself.

The BBC said today German fortifications on the outskirts of the port are "the strongest yet encountered by the Americans."

The German radio, in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press, said yesterday the Nazi home front for loss of the fort, speaking of how it could not hold out long against overwhelming attacks.

The German-controlled Paris radio said warships offshore were supporting the American land forces, and the broadcasters said it had no knowledge of such a bombardment.

Many Barriers Demolished.

The Germans still were rushing to destroy everything in the port and city which could be of use to the Allies.

Reports here said that Cherbourg's airfield appeared to be within the Allied grasp if not already taken. This would be the first sizeable field captured in the beachhead drive and, when repaired, would provide a base for medium bombers.

Bad weather yesterday hampered air operations and also delayed unloading of supplies on the beaches. A strong wind from the northeast whipped up a heavy surf on the beaches.

A dispatch last night from Associated Press war correspondent Don Whitehead quoted French civilians straggling through the battlelines as saying the Germans in Cherbourg had prepared for a street-by-street defence by knocking holes in the corner of buildings and setting up machine guns and anti-tank guns to cover the openings.

Whitehead's dispatch, sent at 5:35 p.m. (12:35 p.m. E.W.T.) said leaders had "encountered the core of the German last line defences —blockhouses and concrete pillboxes—and forts 12 to 13 miles [illegible] had been probing enemy positions "and getting ready for the final assault."

The infantrymen, he said, were meeting stiffening opposition from strong points fixed "so that the field of fire of each one—nearly each point supporting its neighbors."

But Whitehead expressed the view that there would be little chance for the enemy to make a "Stalingrad" of the city because the Allies have vastly superior fighting power on land, sea and in the air.

Guillotine Set Up in Town of Dax By German and Vichy Forces

By LOUIS NEVIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Irun, Spain, June 22 (AP) — German and Vichy forces have set up a guillotine in the town of Dax, approximately 50 miles west of the French-Spanish border, to execute French patriots captured in southwestern France, advices received here today said.

This information was given by Belgian employees of the German general headquarters for southwestern France at Mont-De-Marsan and was confirmed by French refugees who crossed the frontier and by two foreign laborers who are working for the Germans in the Dax region.

All these informants said many French patriots already had been executed.

Severe repressive measures were being applied in the area of partisan warfare followed the Allied invasion of Normandy, the informants said. Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters and the French National Committee at Algiers are reported to have been sent the "Maquis" leaders asking them their uprising was premature and would only betray themselves to the Germans.

Since then the warfare has subsided but sporadic but disciplined sabotage activities which, coupled with the bombings, are a headache to the German communications system.

FIRE-BLACKENED CITY OF BERLIN AGAIN HAMMERED

Ruhr and Rhineland Bombed in Follow-Up Of Shuttle Mission By U.S. Planes

ROCKET COAST HIT

By GLADWIN HILL
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22 (AP) —The R.A.F. bombed the Ruhr and Rhineland and hammered Berlin yesterday in the night's most powerful follow-up of the historic first shuttle bombing mission against the German capital carried out yesterday by a gigantic American aerial armada.

The Berlin attack, second pasting the fire-blackened city received in 12 hours, was made by speedy Mosquitos while big British Lancaster units hit industrial objectives in the Ruhr and Rhineland.

Rocket Gun Barrage Dwarfed.

The daylight blow followed a night of far-flung aerial attacks stretching from France to Germany's industrial Ruhr and Berlin —thwarting the Germans' cross-channel barrage of rocket bombs, which they asserted today are now coming over with the increasing frequency.

(The Germans also said, without Allied confirmation, that the American planes with bombed Berlin yesterday and flew on to Russia used an airbase at Poltava in the Ukraine, 1,500 miles from London. The Allies announced that some fighter planes escorting the Berlin bombers also flew to Russia.)

Last night Berlin was attacked by speedy R. A. F. Mosquitos while British Lancasters hit Ruhr and Rhineland objectives. Canadian bombers, without loss, attacked the Pas de Calais area late yesterday.

24 Hours of Activity.

Over-all was the American blow at the Pas-de-Calais area in the enemy-held area great fires were seen out over the channel in the same direction this afternoon, stirring up the belief that the German rocket and rocket fire from the Germans' launching sites.

These attacks capped 24 hours of tremendous activity including the U. S. air force's shuttle raid on Berlin and Ruhr.

A Moscow communique from the headquarters of Gen. Joseph Stalin announced that the U. S. Strategic Air Force said three bombers and two fighters failed to return from the flight to Russian air bases. Synthetic oil refineries and other installations at Ruhland, southwest of Berlin, were bombed by a large force.

Mustangs provided constant cover for the bombers during the flight and shot down five enemy fighters in communique-claimed bombers shot down a sixth. Yank fighters shot down 27 Nazi planes supported the Mustangs in the last half of the 24-hour announcement added.

"Weather over the targets was fair and the results excellent," the communique said.

Canadian Units Which Took Part in Invasion On D-Day Made Public

By ROSS MUNRO
(C. P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in France, June 22 (C.P. Cable) — Four Canadian battalions—the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, the Regina Rifles, the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, and the North Shore from Montreal's Regiment—were the heroic assault infantry units which stormed the fortified Norman beaches on the morning of D-Day.

Tanks from the 1st. Hussars of London, Ont., and the Fort Garry Horse of Winnipeg, also in the first assault, too, with daring assault engineers from the Royal Canadian Engineers and machine-gunners of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa.

On the western flank a company of the Canadian Scottish from Victoria also was in the first wave to hit the beaches.

Names of these and other units which followed them up closely and rapidly ashore in the battle were released for publication only today. The unit names previously had been held up for security reasons.

It was these first assault troops, with parties of gunners and signalmen, who so gallantly attacked the fixed defences and prepared the way for speedy and direct landing of craft and troops spilled from them right on the beach.

Some craft hit mined obstacles which blew up craft, canes in German machine-gunners laced the stretch of sand with tracers while shrapnel and mortar bombs burst

CAPTURE CAMERINO

By LYNN HEINZERLING
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 22 —(AP)— Allied and Italian troops are within 32 miles of Ancona on the Italian coast on the Adriatic coast, while British 8th Army troops are approaching Camerino, approximately 30 miles east and a little north of Arezzo, Allied Headquarters announced today.

American forces to the west have pushed on 15 airline miles northwest of Grosseto. In all these operations, although weather has improved, misty conditions are preventing close support of the beach by officers of a forward brigade just back of the line.

Rain is the only instrument of warfare they have not had something to do with and they naturally are curious as shutters. Many also have aces and close friends back in the area where the pilotless planes or flying bombs are thumping this particular new weapon with more apprehension for the home folks than warranted on the facts so far. About all a new comer can tell them is that you only know a certain amount of damage and casualties have been caused, together with some story about the loss, the same as is caused in ordinary air raids.

BRIDGEHEAD MEN CURIOUS ABOUT NAZI BUZZ BOMB

Top-Priority Subject of Interest to Troops in Bridgehead

COAST LIKE ROADSTEAD

By CHARLES BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

(Somewhere in Normandy, June 22 —(CP Cable)—The first thing the bridgehead man asks when he has met a new face from across the Channel is "What about these buzz bombs?"

Before I landed for a conference with Ross Munroe and William Stewart, Canadian Press war correspondents, I asked the bridgehead troops, on problems of covering the British-Canadian front, that was the top-priority subject of interest to them. I found it on the beach to officers of a forward brigade just back of the line.

Some, apparently enough high-voltage humor, perhaps are regarding this particular new weapon with more apprehension for the home folks than warranted on the facts so far. About all a new comer can tell them is that you only know a certain amount of damage and casualties have been caused, together with some story about the loss, the same as is caused in ordinary air raids.

TWO NEW DRIVES TO END QUICKLY WAR WITH FINNS

Reuters Stockholm Report Says Finnish Peace Cabinet Has Been Selected

NAZI TROOPS MENACED

London, June 22—(CP)—The Red Army hurled masses of men and equipment into two new drives on a broad front north of Lake Ladoga today in an effort to make a quick end of the war with Finland, already reported in the throes of a government upheaval which may lead the premier to sue for peace.

Launching of the drives was announced Wednesday night in a Moscow communique, which also disclosed that Soviet troops are advancing from captured Viipuri on the Karelian Isthmus and north of Lake Ladoga were within 20 miles of the border fixed at the end of the 1939-40 Finnish-Russian war.

The political situation in Helsinki as the Finnish interntified pressure on the staggering Finnish army remained obscure, but there were strong indications the Finnish government was facing a crisis.

A Reuter News Agency dispatch from Stockholm said Finnish peace cabinet had already been selected. An Associated Press dispatch from Stockholm said the Swedish paper Svenska Dagbladet declared the Finnish interntified pressure on the staggering Finnish army remained obscure, but there were strong indications the Finnish government was facing a crisis.

A Reuter News Agency dispatch from Stockholm said Finnish peace cabinet had already been selected. An Associated Press dispatch from Stockholm said the Swedish paper Svenska Dagbladet declared the Finnish government crisis had been "de facto solved," that a government had been formed and the cabinet was reformed, and could ask Moscow for armistice conditions.

The new Russian offensives were launched on the Mannerheim sector of the German invasion of the Soviet Union, and apparently were aimed at clearing the Murmansk-Leningrad railway of Finnish forces.

Direction of Thrust.

One of the thrusts was launched along the Svir River, between lakes Ladoga and Onega, and advanced approximately 150 to 200 miles northeast of Viipuri, the other was started about 100 miles further east, between Lakes Onega and Vegozerskoye, at the northwestern tip of the lake.

The Wednesday night Russian communique said that in the first day of the attack along the Svir river than 200 populated places had been occupied, including Lodeynoye, a district centre of the Leningrad region.

Plunging beyond the burning ruins of Viipuri, other Red Army troops were within 20 miles of the Finnish capital of Helsinki after taking more than 60 inhabited places, the Soviet communique added.

The new drives menaced seven German divisions reported disposed in Northern Finland as protection for the metal mines located at Petsamo, on the Arctic, speculation that the Nazis might set up a government-in-exile in that area to protect their interests.

Tempest, Fastest Thing on Wings, New Weapon to Counter Doodle Bug

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An R.A.F. Station in Southern England, June 22 —(CP Cable)— It's tremendous, the way the young pilots of this fighter station have adjusted their methods of attack to counter the menace of the Germans' pilotless plane, which the pilots call the "doodle bug."

As it happens, Britain has come up with a new weapon to counter the doodle bug, the Tempest.

British weapon is the latest fighter plane developed—the fastest thing with wings. It is the nemesis of the doodle bug.

I watched yesterday while these Tempest pilots practised the art. They got off and knocked down doodle bugs headed into southern England. Faster and faster they are getting a high percentage of all the doodle bugs they see and a large number of all the doodle bugs which cross the Channel.

One key man in the fight against the robot planes is Wing Cmdr. R. P. (Bee) Beamont, D.S.O., D.F.C., with Bar. He is the leader of famous R.A.F. unit which operates two Tempest squadrons.

Beamont watched the first doodle bugs come over and suggested quickly to his men that they would have to take some steps to cope with the new weapon. He drew out the tactics. Then he sent his men into action. In one period of 24 hours they got 14 and headed down seven out of seven they saw and destroyed. Beamont himself talked to a young pilot who was flying an early model Tempest and testing a plane at the same time. He got six doodle bugs in one day.

The ace of this short robot campaign to date is Flt.-Lt. R. Moore of Mitcham, Surrey, who shot down his fifth over the Channel yesterday.

Beamont said the squadrons maintain constant and complete patrols over the area where the robot planes are being launched.

Usually the flying bomb comes in at 2,500 feet and the wing commander told me he and his men started attacking them at 400 yards but now have got it down so that they creep up to 100 or 150 yards and then blast the robot plane out of the sky.

Surprise Attack Between Marianas, Philippines Staged

53 PLANES DOWNED

By CHARLES MCMURTRY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, June 22 (AP)— The United States 5th fleet sank four and possibly five Japanese ships and damaged nine or 10 in a surprise attack between the Philippines and Marianas Monday.

Headquarters reported in a communique that carrier planes sank one Japanese carrier, three tankers and possibly a destroyer.

The American carrier force under the immediate tactical command of Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mitscher suffered no ship losses. Forty-nine American planes were lost. Many of them were forced to land in the water at nightfall.

The battle ended at nightfall with the Japanese fleeing and there was no indication the battle had been resumed.

151 Planes Shot Down.

Headquarters also announced, that 151 enemy planes were shot down in the Japanese battle attempt. Sunday on Admiral Mitscher's force. This added 53 enemy aircraft to the previous estimate 300 destroyed.

Two U. S. carriers and one battleship suffered superficial damage" and 21 aircraft were lost in combat. A fleet spokesman said the superficial damage means the ship's capacity for combat was not impaired, indicating that three probably participated in Monday's action.

Admiral Chester Nimitz, Pacific Fleet commander, said the Japanese forces consisted of four or more battleships, five or six carriers, seven tankers and unspecified numbers of cruisers and destroyers.

He listed these casualties inflicted on the enemy:

One carrier, believed to be the Zuikaku (17,000 tons) received three 1,000-pound bomb hits.

One cruiser was damaged.

Two destroyers were damaged, one of which is believed to have sunk.

Helping to sweep the enemy poisoned in Northern Finland as protection for the metal mines located at Petsamo, on the Arctic, speculation that the Nazis might set up a government-in-exile in that area to protect their interests.

14 ships was the third greatest single blow dealt the Japanese fleet in the war.

The greatest was the battle of Midway in June, 1942, when the other carrier force under Admiral Spruance sank four enemy carriers and nearly a score of other ships.

The second biggest defeat was Nov. 13-15, 1942, in the battle of Guadalcanal when the enemy lost more than 30 ships sunk and damaged.

Fairly Well Established.

The enemy fleet has been fairly well established as the one which attacked the American force Sunday. Loss of 150-planes from its five or six carriers virtually wiped out the planes so that it had to rely largely on land-based fighter defence.

Because the battle was closed so late in the day and at nearly evening ranges in order to catch the Jap fleet, all American planes were not able to return to their carriers. Many of the 49 lost landed in the water and the crews took to rubber life rafts.

Some of these already have been picked up and others undoubtedly were rescued after dawn Tuesday by planes and fleet units.

The Nyasaka carrier sunk in the Philippines area was at least the eighth Japanese flat top sent to the bottom. In addition to four at Midway, the Japanese lost two in the battle of the Coral Sea and one at Guadalcanal.

Sighted June 19.

The afternoon of June 19 carrier-based reconnaissance planes of the fleet first sighted a Japanese fleet, which included carriers and battle ships, approximately 300 miles from the Marianas Islands and Lyson (Philippines) — a communique announced Nimitz added.

"Aircraft of our fast carrier task force," Admiral James Associate Press War Correspondent, said more than 1,000 planes were available, "were immediately ordered to attack and made contact with the enemy fleet before dusk. Enemy losses and our own losses have not yet been learned.

The major point left unanswered by the communique was how its Japanese fleet was moving east to the enemy. Tokyo said the fleet in its supporting an invasion of Saipan, which would be for the Americans to close the gap.

Savage Blows.

The rival fleets have exchanged carrierplane blows reminiscent of the Midway battle of May 26 June 1942.

Sunday, the Japanese lost 300 carrier planes while striking vainly at Admiral Spruance's fleet. Its fifth commanded by Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, Monday in the first time since the battle of Santa Cruz in October, 1942, American planes in the Philippines struck at the Japanese battlewagons.

Attack Between Invasion June 14, enticed the Japanese navy out from Philippine waters, Americans holding the southern third or that island group. 500 miles east of Tokyo, lunched north along Magindenao Bay.

"Seven fighting continues", the Wednesday communique said, echoing the previous day's announcement that the southeastern tip are being wiscused into a tighter gocket.

TAG DAY TO SECURE SOLDIERS' COMFORTS

Now that the invasion has begun many of our wounded Canadian boys are lying in hospitals over there. Although they will be provided with the necessities, other comforts are necessary to keep up their morale. It is for the purpose of providing these extras that the White Shrine of Bethlehem is holding a tag day on this coming Saturday, June 24th. So, in view of that fact, the Shrine asks the people of Belleville and district to give generously to this worthy cause.

Obituary

SIDNEY SIMPKINS
(Eastwood, Ontario)

Following an illness extending over the past four years, Mr. Sidney Simpkins of Eastwood, Ontario, died at his home on Wednesday.

Born in Melrose 73 years ago, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Simpkins, the deceased had lived in Eastwood for the past 25 years, and prior to that had resided in Detroit for four years. He went to Detroit from Melrose. He was a member of the United Church in Canada.

Funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper. (Napanee papers please copy.)

GEORGE TILLEY

In failing health for the past three years and seriously ill for the past five weeks, Mr. George Tilley, 300 Charles Street, died at Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, June 20th. He was in his 74th. year.

Born in Newfoundland, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tilley, Mr. Tilley came to live in Belleville when fifteen years of age. For the past 23 years he had been caretaker at Queen Victoria Public School.

A veteran of the Boer War and also the last Great War, Mr. Tilley had a number of decorations of which he was justifiably proud. Decorations received at various times during his long military career, were the Queen Victoria South African Medal; the King Edward and Queen Alexandra Coronation Medal; the British War Medal; the Victory Medal and the Long Service Medal.

Predeceased by his wife, the former Matilda Renfrey, three years ago, Mr. Tilley is survived by one son, R.Q.M.S. T. H. Tilley of the Peterboro Training Centre; two grandsons, Harry Tilley, Peterboro, and Kenneth Tilley, of the Armored Corps, overseas; and one great grandson, Garry Wayne Tilley, Peterboro. Also surviving is one brother, Joseph Tilley of Belleville, and one sister, Mrs. Isabella Smith, of Toronto.

Bob Kennedy, Now in France, Promoted W.O.

Mrs. F. Kennedy, 241 Foster Avenue, received a cablegram on Wednesday from her son, Bob, stating that he was in France and well and had been promoted to warrant officer.

Bob Kennedy left Belleville three years ago this coming September, for overseas and has been in the same unit with Major Cousins, whose name was mentioned in a press dispatch in this newspaper on Wednesday. Bob is with the anti-aircraft unit.

Mayor Appeals For Support Of Linen Shower

Mayor Harry Rollins today issued a further appeal to the citizens of Belleville to support the linen shower for Russia campaign which has been going on in the city for some time.

"The campaign has been extended until July 3" he said, adding that this information had been received early today from campaign headquarters in Toronto.

"I respectfully solicit all residents of the city", he went on, "to support this worthy cause to the limit. Each and every one of us knows what a magnificent job our Russian allies have been doing and it is, indeed, a small token of appreciation of their splendid efforts in assisting to defeat the common enemy, on our part to help them in this manner.

"Any contribution, no matter how small or how large, will be gratefully received by the local committee," said His Worship, "and I trust that all who can, will add his or her measure to the general collection which will bring much needed respite to a war-scarred and heroic people."

Belleville Brothers Serve in Normandy

The city of Belleville has at least one brother act in the battle zone of the Normandy beachhead, it was learned this morning with the announcement from Defence Headquarters of the various Canadian units, which took part in the invasion. The local brothers known to be in action in Normandy are Lieut. John G. Fulton, 32, of the Fort Garry Horse (Tank), and Pte. Bill Fulton, with a Field Ambulance Unit.

The two local brothers are sons of Mrs. Violet Fulton, 149 Church Street.

Doing a good job with his field ambulance unit is Pte. Fulton, who was mentioned in a Canadian Press despatch following the securing of the beachhead. Still only 19 years old, he enlisted in Toronto last July and went overseas in February of this year as reinforcement for the R. C. A. M. C. Lieut. John Fulton was associated with the Argyll Light Infantry prior to his enlistment more than four years ago. He took his officers' training course at Brockville and completed his training at Camp Borden before going overseas three years ago.

Fine Cabin Cruiser Bought by Local Man

Gleaming in her spring coloring of dark mahogany, a queen of the whitecaps, or in nautical parlance a sleek cabin cruiser, is the newest addition to Belleville's fleet of pleasure craft.

Thirty feet in overall length and with a nine-foot beam, the new boat was recently acquired by Frank (Duke) Smith, well-known bus proprietor, and long connected with sailing and boating activities along the city waterfront.

The "Triton" as the cruiser is at present named, but which will be changed in the near future, is powered with a 95 Mercury Marine engine. The craft which has planking of one and one-half inch solid mahogany weighs approximately six and one-half tons.

She is the last word in cruising comfort. Sleeping compartments are available for four people. Upholstery is done in a rich red leather. Seats can be readily converted into bunks. A galley, toilet, fresh water tanks, refrigerator, electricity and other modern conveniences contribute to sea-going comfort. The "Triton" can attain a 15-knot speed.

Seaworthiness of the cruiser received an acid test when Mr. Smith and friends brought her down from the Windsor Yacht Club where the boat was purchased. With Mr. Chris Lewis, and a retired sea captain as his crew, the new owner ran into extremely rough weather on Lake Erie. "She behaved like a beauty," he said, "and rode the waves like a corvette. She will be an ideal craft for short cruises and fishing in the Bay of Quinte. Gasoline restrictions will necessarily eliminate all thoughts of long cruises until after the war."

Parking Problems Discussed At Special Meeting

Picton, June 22 — Parking problems and enforcement of traffic regulations were discussed at a special meeting of the town council. As a result, motorists are to be allowed to park behind cars at the curb for a sufficient length of time to pick up parcels. It was felt that the rural public should be catered to. They had protested when the bylaw was enforced and they were forced to carry parcels long distances to cars.

Council decided that stop streets are to be respected, and the bylaw covering parking near fire hydrants rigidly enforced.

Taxi drivers were refused a special parking space on Main St. and must take their chances at finding places to park.

Council favored keeping open spaces in front of hotels as bus stations.

The opinion was expressed that painting of lines to indicate parking spaces, would be helpful.

The Chamber of Commerce is to request merchants to encourage employees to keep their cars off the streets on Saturdays.

Police were instructed to check on minors frequenting pool rooms.

Councillor Moore referred to enforcement of the nine o'clock curfew. Girls 11 and 12 are to be seen with servicemen, he said. "People ought to be ashamed. Adults are the ones who should be flogged, not the children." The curfew law in future is to be enforced.

Council decided to have the town observe Monday, July 3, as a holiday, instead of Saturday, the statutory holiday.

CANADIAN UNITS

ed it. Somehow the Western infantry got over the beach and stormed into the dunes.

The rest of the Canadian Scottish came in to link up with the Winnipegs and Reginas and the rest of the 1st Hussars and the field artillery also landed. This powerful force rushed south on a line west of the river Mue, capturing town after town and beating up German strongpoints in fields, woods and villages as it went.

The momentum of the attack never slowed down and the Canadians broke right through to their final objectives at Bretteville on the Caen-Bayeux highway.

There was no initial advance like this in the whole Allied invasion effort and it was the Winnipegs, the Reginas, the Canadian Scottish and the Hussars Gen. Montgomery, the Allied commander, referred to when he complimented a Western brigade for its first-day push.

Gen. Montgomery told correspondents June 11 that this showing was "excellent."

A mile east of the Reginas' beaches, the Queen's Own landed under similar conditions at Bernieres. The biggest gun casement on this sector was located there and the Toronto troops went right for it.

They crawled over a high wall, with machine-gun bullets falling around them, crept through the dunes into the German trenches and with outstanding courage hurled the enemy from this very strong position.

Other Queen's Own Riflemen went right into Bernieres, driving snipers and groups of Germans from houses, the fine Gothic Church, cafes and from woods on the outskirts. A long line of integrated pillboxes west of Bernieres in the Dunes was attacked in another brilliant foray and the Germans were ousted from them.

The Fort Garry tanks were delayed by a heavy sea in getting ashore there to lend support to the first attack but they came in shortly afterwards and joined in the thrust inland.

Through crops, past minefields and in the face of enemy artillery, machine-gun and mortar fire went the Queen's Own and the tanks, blasting their way through strongpoint after strongpoint to the Tailleville area, southwest of Bernieres. They consolidated there and carried out some sweeps over the countryside toward Douvres to the southeast.

A mile east of Bernieres, the North Shore New Brunswick Regiment landed at St. Aubin and battled their way through the western section of the town which had been heavily hit by naval bombardment and air attacks.

Royal Marine Commandos landed there, too, and remained in St. Aubin to clear the town as the New Brunswickers pushed inland to fight for and capture some of the strongest underground positions in the district.

One position had big dugouts 40 feet underground but the Maritimers took it.

Extensive Program of City Street Resurfacing Will Be Undertaken

The city of Belleville will engage in one of the largest street oiling and surfacing programs since the early twenties, beginning the first week in July, City Engineer Charles Mott stated today.

Liquid asphalt amounting to 66,000 gallons, and 3,000 tons of washed pea gravel will be used in the program which calls for the treatment of 25.7 miles of city streets or a coverage of 322,000 square yards.

Asphalt will be applied by a spraying process after which the gravel will be spread. This in turn will be subjected to heavy rolling.

The program is the aftermath of four years inactivity in this phase of city streets improvement, due to the fact that materials were impossible to obtain. This year, restrictions have been lifted and the city is taking full benefit of the situation.

City Public Works personnel have been working for the past 6 weeks patching city streets. This work is expected to be completed by the first week in July.

Comment of the travelling public, especially those who have travelled long distances, would infer that Belleville is noted for the appearance and condition of its streets, City Engineer Mott stated. Rapidity and efficiency in clearing its thoroughfares of snow in wintertime has drawn favorable comment from many strangers to the district.

Pte. Adams, Frankford, Gets Plenty of Food As Prisoner of War

Taken prisoner last July 19th during the Allied invasion of Sicily, Pte. Jack Leroy Adams, of Frankford, is working steadily on a German farm and is in the best of health. This information was conveyed to his sister, Mrs. L. Rielly, of Batawa, in a recent letter from his prisoner of war camp in Germany.

Member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Pte. Adams went overseas in 1939 with the first Canadian contingent. Going to the Mediterranean area with the Allied invasion forces, he had seen action only a few days in Sicily when taken prisoner by the Germans.

"I am working every day on a farm so there is no need to worry," he wrote his sister. At the time of writing, on the 16th of April, he had been busy sowing grain and said the weather was lovely. There were 27 others in the particular camp in which he was interned. He seemed to be content with his lot stating "there was lots of enjoyment all the time, and plenty to eat."

He advised the folks at home to send no parcels. "Send only smokes if possible," he said, "the rest is just a waste of money."

Heavy Casualties Inflicted.

A field dispatch from Associated Press war correspondent Sid Feder said casualties inflicted upon the Germans during the past 41 days of the Allied offensive in Italy were estimated unofficially at between 80,000 and 100,000 killed, wounded and captured. More than 27,000 Nazis have been taken prisoner.

The Mediterranean air force stepped up its activity, making 1,100 individual plane flights in attacking shipping in Livorno harbor, battle area targets and a railyard at Ventimiglia on the Italian Riviera. There were no losses.

The communique disclosed that in a "spirited naval engagement" in connection with the ousting of the Germans from Elba, light coastal forces torpedoed three loaded enemy lighters attempting to evacuate troops, and possibly sank a fourth. In another engagement a single enemy lighter was sunk.

The Berlin radio said German troops were evacuated from the island of Pianosa, south of Elba, and the island of Palmajola, between the mainland and Elba, at the same time the Allies seized Elba.

Arthur L. Burke Named President Life Underwriters

The meeting of the Belleville Life underwriters for the current month was held at the Belleville Golf Club, Wednesday June 21. Following a delicious luncheon, the following officers were elected:

President — Arthur L. Burke, Great-West Life.

Vice President—Mr. R. B. Morden, Canada Life.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. A. G. Stackhouse, Manufacturer's Life.

Directors—Mr. Harper Kelly, Metropolitan Life; Mr. G. V. Weir, London Life; Mr. J. J. Bruyea, National Life; Mr. Don G. Williams, Mutual Life; Mr. Harold Dowden, Metropolitan Life, Trenton; Mr. F. G. Creeggan, London Life, Picton.

The meeting was sponsored by Mr. A. G. Stackhouse, district manager of the Manufacturers' Life Company, who arranged various contests, golf, horseshoe pitching, etc. Prizes were given.

Mr. Stackhouse is to be commended for his untiring interest in the preparation and successful outcome of the initial recreation day of the Association.

Mr. Ralph B. Morden, district manager of the Canada Life Co., and president of the Association, welcomed the various representatives at the luncheon table and conducted the business of the hour.

Rule of Law Essential For Happy, Prosperous And Secure World

Cornwall, June 22 —(CP)— Hon. Leslie Blackwell, Ontario Attorney General, said last night that stability and security cannot be provided "unless Canadians have learned the essential and elementary lesson that to be happy, prosperous and secure we must have a world in which the rule of law will prevail."

"It is our duty to see that this time we do not lose the peace we won in 1918," he said in addressing the annual rally of Stormont Progressive Conservative Association, at which Gladstone MacLean of Finch was elected president, succeeding S. E. Fennell as head of the Stormont riding association.

Mechanics' Section Of Garage Operators' Assoc. Proposed

Formation of a mechanics' section of the Garage Operators' Association to create greater interest in the organization by mechanics and to better their working conditions, was mooted at the regular monthly dinner meeting of the Operators held at the Y.M.C.A., Wednesday evening.

Speaking in support of the move Mr. J. B. Boyce expressed the opinion that mechanics would welcome the move and if adopted provincially would serve to unionize garage mechanics. Such mechanics were among the highest skilled of tradesmen, yet their remuneration was below that of other trades. "We as Garage Operators must give leadership to mechanics. If we don't some other body may", stated Mr. Boyce.

Following discussion on the subject members voted the matter be opened for further discussion by the directorate pending recommendation to headquarters for provincial adoption.

Mr. Harry Moorman, as district representative of the Automotive Dealers' Association, told members that the 48-hour per week regulation which was to have come into effect the first of July has been postponed. According to the Industry and Labor Board, garage operators can continue to operate the same as in the past as long as the present labor scarcity is evident.

President Don Brown presided over the meeting calling for reports of committee chairmen. Felix LeSage of Tweed, advocated discontinuing meetings for the summer months but following discussion it was decided the July meeting would be held in Tweed with Tweed members responsible for the program.

The door prize was won by Felix LeSage of Tweed.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Arthur Francis, local C.D.S. manager, who, demonstrated his ability as a narrator by telling humorous and interesting incidents of the last war. As a closing note he asked that soldiers not be patronized when they return home after victory is won. He indicated that in many instances it would be hard to arouse the interest of those returning from the fighting fronts, mainly because of the aspect of melodrama which they have learned to place upon tragic happenings. Strict observance of the Golden Rule would assist greatly in their rehabilitation into civilian life.

IN MEMORIAM

LOTT, William Allen — Died June 22nd., 1942.

It's just two years ago, dear father
Since God called you home to rest,
To live with Him in peace and happiness.
Life was full of heartaches and care
With no one, your troubles to share.
Dear father those days have gone forever more,
Since you have reached the other shore.
—Sadly missed by Carman and Family.

CLARKE — In memory of Norman Clarke, who passed away June 22, 1943.

Our lips cannot tell how we miss him,
Our hearts can not tell what to say,
God only knows how we miss him
In a home that is lonely today.

Debate in House Becomes Controversy Over Private, Public Ownership Of Civil Aviation in Canada

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 22 —(CP)— Debate on changes in aviation laws in the Commons yesterday developed into a controversy on the merits of private as opposed to public ownership between Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. members, with Liberals saying comparatively little on the issue.

Munitions Minister Howe intervened at one stage to say that the bill before the House did not "nationalize anything." He did so after Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York Sunbury) complained it was a socialistic measure and in line with the views of those who wanted to nationalize all large enterprise.

The measure under discussion was a bill amending the Aeronautics Act and creating an Air Transport Board with powers to deal with standard of airworthiness, rates in air transportation, the granting of licences to air lines and to advise the Minister responsible for aviation on policy regarding aviation development.

Granting of Licences.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver South) led off the opposition to the measure by charging that it would make the Minister responsible—at present Mr. Howe—"the dictator of civil aviation in Canada." He objected particularly to the provision that the granting of licences by the Board would require the approval of the Minister.

All annual licences were granted by the Board of Transport Commissioners and the new measure would take away from the people the protection afforded by an independent Board over a vital form of transportation, he said.

The proposed cancellation of all licences one year after the war in Europe was "dead wrong." The policy of issuing no air transport licences to agencies operating other forms of transportation also was wrong. The bill hung a sword over the head of every small operator. It yarned him that if he became successful and grew big he would lose his franchise.

Must Not Throttle Aviation.

With young Canadians gaining a name for themselves in wartime aviation the country should develop all possible air routes and give scope to every agency instead of "trying to throttle aviation development," Mr. Green said.

"The purpose of this bill is that the government of the day shall be responsible for the administration of Canada's air policy," said Mr. Howe. "I believe that is a sound principle and I am astonished that there is not general agreement on it."

He said the choice was between administration by a minister responsible to parliament and a bureaucracy which would not be responsible. Members of the opposition had condemned both.

Referring to a decision of the Board of Transport Commissioners that trans-Canada Air Lines could carry mail but not passengers from Vancouver to Victoria because Canadian Pacific Air Lines already was carrying passengers, Mr. Howe said it was a correct one under the Transport Act but he questioned if it was in the interests of Canada at a time when the public required transportation, and equipment was limited, that T.C.A. operated on the route with empty seats and the C.P.A. was over-crowded and could not handle the traffic.

Conservative Protests

J. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. Leader, drew conservative protest when he said the battle was between those who believed services should be run by the nation and those who wanted Canadian Pacific "to get in on the ground floor."

He said if Mr. Green considered he had made any personal imputation he would withdraw after the Vancouver member moved to divide the House on appeal from a chairman's ruling.

It was impossible for a young man to come back from the war and start an air line. The list of applicants for franchises showed that an attempt had been made to gather up franchises while the war was on. Routes pioneered by airmen in the past had passed out of their hands and into the Canadian Pacific system.

"The alternative with which we are faced," he said, "is whether a private corporation, powerful in itself, shall be permitted to obtain a monopoly of the new franchises that may be granted or whether this great natural monopoly shall remain in the hands of the people wherein such monopoly properly belongs."

Diefenbaker's amendment.

Mr. Hanson asked if the bill was an attempt to outbid the ruling power of socialism and said it was the negation of everything a Liberal party sought to stand for. He said the proposed Board would be "emasculated" and would be mere-ly advisory.

John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) said he would move an amendment to strike out the necessity for the Minister's approval on the granting of licences, and also objected to the barring of operators of other forms of transport from aviation.

The bill will be further discussed tomorrow after debate on the bill to create a reconstruction department ends.

German Wall of Men, Armor About Beachhead Wears Desperately Thin

By MARSHAL YARROW
(Reuter War Correspondent)

With British Forces in France, June 21 —(CP Reuter)—The German wall of men and armor around the beachhead is wearing desperately thin.

With the situation around Cherbourg rapidly developing in our favor and Allied strength building up steadily, Field Marshal Rommel is in the unenviable position of having to hold an enemy of growing power with his own forces dwindling.

It is believed that the German pause divisions have many tanks in the workshops.

The Allied situation is regarded as promising.

Blood Plasma and Wounded

Those who have been donating their blood at clinics have the intense satisfaction in knowing that it is helping to save the lives of heroic boys and young men who are wounded on the battlefields of the world. Reports of the effectiveness of the medical services and the Red Cross show that in giving blood the people on the home front have been saving lives on the beaches of Normandy where the blows are being struck which will help to end the war.

No blood donor regrets his gift of blood to save the lives of this war in the cause of world freedom.

Donors of blood should increase in number with the knowledge that battles are raging and that wounded fellowmen are fighting for all of us and in need of the lift that blood plasma will give them.

Well might everyone ask himself or herself who can donate blood, was my blood in the bank established to help save the lives of the wounded on the Normandy beachhead and will it be in the bank that will serve those who will yet be wounded?

Optimism of Mr. Churchill

Prime Minister Churchill who has throughout the four years of his leadership as Prime Minister been careful never to arouse undue optimism or to depress the understatement and has always balanced his words with great care for the sake of the cause of Britain and her Allies, said the other day that "the months of this summer will be the virtual end of the allied campaign, bring success to the cause of freedom." This is the most encouraging statement he has ever made and approaches nearer to prophecy than anything he has yet said.

The imposing fact is that the Allied position is so improved that it has to reflect itself in any statement on the war. The United Nations have been wisely advised again and again not to allow overconfidence to detract from the war effort. Now the effort is moving at or near the peak that it itself ought to be and the hands and minds that are engaged in the war effort even more alert to outdo and outstrip what has been done in order to keep the allied mechanism of war sweeping forward to victory.

Now seems a time when such a statement cannot lessen initiative and energy but will rather inspire all lovers of freedom.

Mr. Churchill in his wisdom made the statement. The fact that it was released not until four days after he delivered it in the Mother Parliament in London shows that having considered it duly those in authority have judged it timely and so allowed its publication.

For it proceeds on the basis of the great offensive power of the United Nations today. It reiterates what Mr. Stalin has said at various times, and all the factors that are necessary to triumph over the Nazis are at work as the Allies as a unit have prayed and desired. The United Nations have all the essentials for victory while the enemy has shown deterioration that is gaining momentum.

Mr. Churchill's mention of the surprise the Germans experienced when they saw in the mist the Allied ships approaching Normandy's shore on the morning of June 6th notes a significant fact—the Germans were so busy with their vast coastline that they knew not where to expect invasion and had to wait until they saw the Allied ships. That at this time is a sign of the weakness of Hitler's Reich.

Mr. Churchill noted that the invasion came as surprised at Teheran. There had been no setbacks, as failures. It was and is as the Allies planned.

He reiterated in other words what he had said "it may be that events will occur in the few months which will show us whether we are soon to be released of the curse which has been laid upon us by the Germans."

And again whether the Germans are defeated this year or next the British and American peoples will never falter or withdraw their hands from the task which they have undertaken.

"Together with our Allies we will go on to the end and the end will be all the more terrible for our foes the longer their struggle continues and the longer this war is protracted."

Mr. Churchill was speaking more than a week after the successful landings, which had met with favorable weather conditions. He knew of the success of the invasion in its early stages and of its expansion. Whdn he said in the struggle in Normandy "the lives of 1,000,000 men may be engaged now on both sides" he gave some hint of the massive character of the launching of the great invasion on which so much depends and of his optimism.

Intensification of Gun Fire

There was good news the other day that the Allies are giving the Germans both barrels or in other words they are increasing the expenditure of artillery shells to an unprecedented degree and making the enemy take the punishment. Since Sicily it is known what modern artillery fire power can mean in shattering an enemy.

The United Nations have the factories and the work of the manufacture of ammunition is being speeded up.

Intensification of fire power of small arms and guns has a devastating effect upon morale greater than the extra outlay of ammunition.

Now the Allies are showing that they have the men, they have the will and the courage and they have behind the lines the lines furnishing the food for the hungry guns in their assault upon the foe.

Dig for History

(London Evening Standard)

People of Britain are to be asked to dig for history.

Thousands of amateur archaeologists, act as observers, will be required if the Council of British Archaeology are able to carry out plans they are making for a nation-wide survey after the war.

In a guide to be sent round to local authorities the Council tells observers some of the things they can look for wherever earth is disturbed. Here are some of them:

Any foundations or floors (except of course, those of modern buildings, just destroyed by bombing). They may be only beaten earth, stained black with charcoal, or elaborate mosaics.

Objects, such as tools, weapons or ornaments of stone, flint, bone or bronze. Human burials, or large numbers of animal bones. Coins of silver or bronze. And gold objects, which are subject to the law of treasure trove and finders are rewarded by their full value.

Kind Word for the Farmer

(Daily Express, London)

In spring 1942, when the guns were being sunk at the rate of over a million tons every month, the British farmer was a fine fellow with one and all. And the farmer deserved the praise. For every one with a ration book while Admiral Doenitz has still a fleet of 500 U-boats. But fear of starvation is not the only cause of the farmer's new status in the community. He has done a brilliant war job. After plowing up some of his best land for airfields and camps, he is raising nearly twice as much food off fewer fields than he tilled before the war. He is a humble British farming Exhibit No. 1 among all the farming nations of the world.

Nephew Trouble

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

This editor has had quite a time keeping track of three nephews in the air force and a fourth, a padre in the navy, The padre appears to be pretty well fixed now—in Newfoundland—but these air-nephews do get around. One came out of the West to Trenton Air Station to take a special course and ended up in setting a record that heads all graduates of any class to this date. Another is a flying gray man at Fort Albert, up near Goderich, while a third is at Mountain View and was fishing with us on Sunday.

Aim at perfection in everything, though in most things it is unattainable. However, they who aim at it and presevere will come much nearer to it than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as unattainable.—Chesterfield.

FINAL STRAW

The last straw broke the camel's back;
Nor beast nor master could foresee it.
Some day will come the last attack.
Strike hard for freedom! This may be it!

Heed not the tyrant's boastful shout.
Loud is the voice of desperation.
Men who begin themselves to doubt
Cover with words their hesitation.

Strike hard, and follow up the blow!
Already victory's in the making.
Yet one straw more! We cannot know
How close the enemy is to breaking!

Pyle in Normandy:

Personal Gear of Those Who Died On D-Day Littered Beach for Miles

By ERNIE PYLE

Normandy Beachhead—(by wireless)—In the preceding column we told about the D-Day wreckage along the machines of war that were expended in taking one of the Normandy beaches.

But there is another and more human litter. It extends in a thin little line, just like a high-water mark, for miles along the beach. This is the strewn personal gear, gear that will never be needed again, of the men who went and died to give us our entrance into Europe.

Here in a jumbled row for mile on mile are soldiers' packs. Here are sacks and shoe polish, sewing kits, diaries, bibles and hand grenades. Here are the latest letters from home, with the address on each one, neatly razored out—one of the security precautions enforced before the boys embarked.

Here are toothbrushes, and razors, and snapshots of families back home staring up at you from the sand. Here are pocketbooks, metal mirrors, extra trousers, and bloody, abandoned shoes. Here are broken-handled shovels, and portable radios smashed almost beyond recognition, and mine detectors twisted and ruined.

Here are trench pistol belts and canvas water buckets, first-aid kits and jumbled heaps of lifebelts. I picked up a pocket Bible with a soldier's name in it, and put it in my jacket. I carried it half a mile or so and then put it back down on the beach. I don't know why I picked it up, or why I put it back down.

Soldiers carry strange things ashore with them. In every case I can recall at least one soldier hitting the beach at H-Hour with a banjo case. Some had the most ironic piece of equipment marching over the beach—that is, at first glance, then victory—is a tennis racket that some soldier had brought along. It lies lonesomely on the sand, stamped in his name, and a string broken.

Two of the most dominant items in the litter are cigarettes and writing paper. Each soldier was issued a carton of cigarettes just before he started. Today these cartons by the thousand, watersoaked and spilled out, mark the line of our first savage blow.

Writing paper and air-mail envelopes come second. The boys had, indeed, started to do a lot of writing in France. Letters that would have filled out to be many, many pages.

Always there are dogs in every invasion. There is a dog still on the beach. He is a big, and pitifully lonely mongrel.

He stays at the water's edge, near a boat that has been sunk half sunk at the waterline. He barks appealingly to each soldier who approaches, trots eagerly along with him for a bit, and then, presenting himself unwanted in all this haste, runs forlornly wait to wait for his own people at his own empty boat.

Over and around this long thin line of personal wreckage the infantry today are rushing vast supplies to continue the momentum of the attack. Tank squads of men pick ammunition and equipment. Salvage ammunition and equipment. Salvage are still usable.

Men worked and slept on the beach for days before the last D-Day victim was taken away for burial.

I stepped over the form of one youngster whom I thought dead. But when I looked down I saw he was only sleeping. He was very young, and very tired. He lay on one elbow, his head supported by the air about six inches from the ground. One of his hands, the left hand he held a large, smooth rock. It looked queer, that rock in his hand. He seemed in his sleep to hold that rock lovingly, as though it were a pet, as though it were his only world. I have no idea at all why he went to sleep with the rock in his hand, or what kept him from dropping it once he was asleep. It was just one of those little things that happen, that a person remembers for a long time.

The strong, swirling tides of the Normandy coastline shift the contours of the beach daily as they move in and out. They carry soldiers' bodies out to the sea and later they return them. They cover the unrecovered dead. They bury soldiers then in their whims they uncover them.

As I plowed out over the wet sand of the beach on that first day I noticed, as I looked down, that it seemed to be a couple of pieces of driftwood sticking out of the sand. But they weren't driftwood.

They were the feet of men. Every one I saw completely covered by the shifting sands except for his feet. The feet told us that a man lying toward the land he had come so far to see, and which he saw so briefly.

Toronto, June 21. (CP)—Matthew Halton, CBC overseas correspondent, in a dispatch from France today quotes a British army officer who has seen British prisoners on the way as saying that German morale is falling fast. "I left it in 1918 but taking their army as a whole it's quite finished," he said.

"They have some superb divisions', the officer said of the Germans fighting in Normandy. "Our fighting men know that. Their personnel, gunner and panzer grenadier formations are obviously first class but even in these we can see the beginning of deterioration.

Evidence added the most German prisoners complain of lack of air and artillery support and of skilled air attacks and shelling are becoming unbearable.

KEEP IT CLEAN

More than twelve thousand open wounds resulting from more than twenty thousand industrial injuries, over a period of five years, have been treated by proper cleaning and dressing of soapy water, and nothing else, with uniform success, according to a report by Dr. R. L. Kerrigan in Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics, Chicago, Aug. '43.

Hospitalization was necessary for only 18 cases in which primary soap and water cleansing and excision of only devitalized tissue was the treatment.

Wounds of the wrist and hand are generally contaminated with dirt. Yet of more than nine thousand such wounds for which only the soap and water treatment and removal of devitalized tissue (tissue apparently destroyed or damaged past saving) only ten required hospitalization. This is a severe test of the efficacy of the treatment. I doubt if any antiseptic ointment or even the sulfonamide drugs just now so extensively used, could do as well.

A correspondent cites the statement of ether now connected with Red Cross First Aid Instruction who says "there is no first aid treatment for blood poisoning" and a statement from a doctor in a doctor's Hospital staff who says the best first aid treatment for blood poisoning is "to put on a tourniquet."

Personally, I'd prefer the Veterans Hospital doctor's treatment if I had an infected wound or similar condition from which "blood poisoning" (blood poisoning) might develop.

These septicemias that septicemia is developing: Reddening and swelling about the wound or sore, throbbing pain, chilliness or actual chill and then feverishness and perspiration. Usually a streak is seen coming down with grip or crl. irregular red line under the skin extending toward the nearest lymph node from which the "secret" (those under the armpit if the wound is in arm or hand.

But first and in my opinion, is a voluminous dreanin of gauze (washed cheesecloth) kept constantly wet with hot soapy water—just plain soap, not carbolic soap or any kind. Medicatihy or adding an "antiseptic" or "germicide" to soap

CROSSES IN HEAVENS

The cross, recently reported seen by hundreds of persons in Scotland and England, is not the first to Constantine the Great.

In the year A.D. 312th of Constantine, written 26 years after the Roman Emperor had slipped to his eternal sleep, Eusebius relates the incident that is alleged to have occurred about 312 A.D. when Constantine was in the neighborhood of Rome shortly before the battle of the Milvian Bridge.

While the Emperor was praying, writes Eusebius, a most marvelous sign appeared to him from heaven, the account of which might have been hard to credit had it been related by any other than the Emperor himself long afterward, declared it to be writer of the truth. Constantine was honored with his acquaintance and society, and confirmed his statement by an oath, who could hesitate to credit the narrative, especially since the testimony of afterttme has established its truthfulness?

"He said that about midday, when the sun was beginning to decline, he saw with his own eyes the trophy of a cross of light in the heavens, above the sun, and bearing the inscription, 'Conquer By This.' At this sight he himself was struck with amazement, and his whole army also, which happened to be following him on some expedition, and witnessed the miracle.

Eusebius is not always trustworthy and his passage is not confirmed by contemporary writers, but an actual meteorological phenomenon may have been the basis of the story.

In the autumn of 1926, thousands of persons saw a fiery, blood-red cross appear in the sky over England. The upright bar was formed by a vertical "sun pillar" and the horizontal bar by an incomplete solar halo.

Sun pillars and solar halos are produced by the reflection of the sun's rays from tiny particles of ice or droplets of water suspended in the atmosphere. Science, of course, has nothing to say about the allegedly celestial cross.

It seems, however, from subsequent paragraphs in Eusebius' narrative that part of the story with the dream in which Constantine saw that he had been commanded to place the monogram of Christ on the shields of his soldiers.

Lactantius, who spent several years in Constantine's household says, however, that the sign Chrysos, meaning "Constantine was directed in a dream to cause the heavenly sign to be delineated on the shields of his soldiers, and so to proceed to battle. He did as he had been commanded, and he marked on their shields the letter X, with a perpendicular line drawn through it and turned at the top, being the cipher of Christ. Having this sign, his troops stood to arms."

Bracken Speaks At Sharbot Lake

Kingston, June 22. (CP)— John Bracken, National Leader of the Progressive Conservative Party yesterday for the second time this week criticized the Federal government's manpower policy and said "if the government feeds men overseas, as it says it does, it should call on the 70,000 men now sheltered in the home defence army at a cost of $150,000,000 a year to the taxpayer".

Addressing the annual meeting of the Frontenac-Addington Progressive Conservative Association at nearby Sharbot Lake, he said the government should call on home defence army men "before proceeding to make demands on the boys now in industry and on farms".

Speaking of his party, Mr. Bracken said, "the prospects are we shall be called upon to form a government following the next (Federal) election".

The Liberal party, he said, had small success in recent by-elections and had been swept out of power in Ontario and Saskatchewan.

"The province of Saskatchewan", he added, "was the only one in which the C.C.F. could win". He stated there were three provinces in which the C.C.F. was not likely to win a seat but did not name them.

Large Attendance At Hospital June Fete

More than six hundred ladies attended the June fete in Picton' ar mouries Wednesday afternoon. In aid of Prince Edward County Hospital. During the afternoon, a local store staged a fashion show. Miss Ruth Jones provided music at the piano. Mrs. George Haddon, president of the Women's Auxiliary, received the guests. Mrs. T. H. Minaker and Mrs. Clarence Walker received admission. The flower booth was a fragrant and colorful spot. Mrs. C. A. Pubiow, Mrs. Gus Johnson, Mrs. J. H. Cryan in charge. The touch-and-take table was conducted by Mrs. T. Owens and Mrs. R. S. Thresher. Mrs. J. T. Fraser convened the apron booth.

Bridge was convened by Mrs. J. R. Batten and Mrs. Roy Leavitt and the tea by Mrs. E. Friend, Mrs. C. Madden and Mrs. M. W. Dow. In charge of the raffles was Mrs. Neal, R. S. Thresher. Mrs. J. F. Fraser and Mrs. J. Hepburn.

In the evening a dance was held with a very large crowd attending. The Legion Ladies' Auxiliary had charge of the refreshment booth.

Women's Institutes of the whole county and all churches of the town joined with the Women's Hospital Auxiliary in arranging the fete.

Prince Edward County Tax Rate Ten Mills

Picton, June 22—Due to a deficit incurred by County Council last year, Prince Edward's tax rate this year will be ten mills, three quarters of a mill higher than last year.

To avoid a greater increase in the rate, and to wipe out the entire deficit, council decided to reduce expenditures on roads by $3,000 to $85,000.

As well as incurring a deficit last year, the entire surplus was also exhausted, it was revealed. This was due to expenditures on roads with unexpected work being necessary due to high-water damage.

Councillors debated the points as to whether the entire deficit should be wiped out this year, or paid only in part; but supported a motion by Reeve Roy Ketcheson to pay it in its entirety by reducing road expenditures and letting the incidental "fever" any unforeseen expenditures.

Reeve Earl Brummell, chairman of the Road Committee, stated $37,000 had already been expended on roads his year and other contracts for materials had been made.

At yesterday's session of council the resignation of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Monroe, as superintendent and matron of Prince Edward County Home, was received. This was accepted. No appointments have been made.

$75,000 FIRE NEAR OWEN SOUND

Owen Sound, June 22 — (CP) — Damage of about $75,000 was caused by a fire at the Renkel Flour Mills at Ingles Falls, two miles south of Owen Sound early today. The fire which began at 4.30 a. m., was fought by firemen from Owen Sound and volunteers from nearby villages and towns for five hours. The building, much valuable equipment and a large stock of grain and flour were destroyed.

Bloomington, Ill., June 22. (AP) —When the Weeds twins, Patricia and Rosemary, tried to enlist in the Waves together a fraction of an inch nearly separated them. Patricia was sworn in but Rosemary was a quarter of an inch short. Rosemary, however, made the grade and was able to join. In a week she had gained the necessary height by special stretching exercises.

Good Fortune Smiles On Treverton Family

The popular saying that lightning does not strike twice in the same place does have exceptions. At least that is the contention of the Treverton family in Belleville —and they have the goods,'so to speak, to prove it. Last night Mrs. G. Treverton won first prize in the draw at Bells Theatre.

Since the inauguration of the Dimes For Victory campaign sponsored by the local Kiwanis Club, father, mother and daughter have won no less than five prizes, each of them worth a $20 war savings certificate. Mrs. Treverton and her husband have won single first prizes while their daughter has taken the first prize on two occasions. Since the start of the campaign the Kiwanis Club has given away $950 in certificates.

Mighty Land, Air Attack Launched Against Cherbourg

By—DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

With American forces Before Cherbourg, 3 p.m., June 22 —(AP) —By land, and air, a mighty attack was launched on the defenses of Cherbourg today.

At 12:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. E.D.T.) waves of British and American medium bombers and dive-bombers roared in and began the pounding of fortifications in the Cherbourg line, a pounding which continued for 40 minutes.

And when the bombers had stopped, the artillery opened up and battered at the line in thunderously drumming explosions.

Behind the artillery American troops moved up and began storming the Cherbourg defences.

This was the great assault intended to crush the last German resistance on the Cherbourg—a mighty land and air assault greater than any since the Allies fought their way onto Normandy's beaches.

The Americans were drawn up this morning waiting for the air bombardment and then the artillery barrage which covered their infantry.

The barrage pounded the line until 1 p.m. when the infantry was within close range of its objectives and then was lifted.

Fishermen Warned To Stay in Port

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 22. (AP)— While fighting raged at Cherbourg the Germans today radioed to their Germans today that they could not give protection along the coast of that port.

In a radio warning the Allied commander-in-chief told the fishermen of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France to stay in port until nine p.m., June 30 at least. The second seven-day extension of the original supreme command warning to fishermen.

Oust Last Japanese In Few Days From Kohima-Imphal Rd.

Kandy, Ceylon, June 22—(CP)— Ouster of the last Japanese from the Kohima-Imphal road in Manipur State, India, is expected within a few days, headquarters reports said today.

Clearing of the road was said to be proceeding much faster than originally expected, partly because the Japanese are short of artillery and their ammunition is proving faulty. Recent reports said 60 per cent of Japanese artillery shells are dude.

Today's communique said British forces had advanced southward from Kohima until they were only 10 miles from troops operating northward from Imphal, and that enemy forces caught unaware by the rapid march fled after being shot up. Much equipment was abandoned by the enemy.

In North Burma troops occupied Mahaung, a mile southeast of Mogaung on the Mandalay-Myitkyina railway.

At besieged Myitkyina local gains were made by Chinese tunnelling into north and south Japanese positions, and a large force of the enemy attempted to escape from the base by floating down the Irrawaddy river on rafts. Most of the Japanese were shot or drowned, however, the communique said.

BUILDING BOOM CONTINUES

Lord Lovat, Standing on Hilltop While Sniper Bullets Fly About, Tells How Commandos Landed

Terrific Job Well Done, Says Commander, of Deeds of Young Daredevils

TOO HOT FOR HUNS

By ROGER D. GREENE
(AP War Correspondent)

With the British Army in Normandy, June 13 (delayed)—(AP)— The story of the green-berets daredevils who scorn battle helmets and fight German armor with small arms was told today by their leader, Lord Lovat, a 32-year-old brigadier.

(Lord Lovat was wounded in Normandy and, in a British hospital out of danger, it was disclosed Wednesday in London.)

Lord Lovat, standing erect on a hilltop fanned by a cool easterly breeze in which sniper bullets frequently whined, related how his commandos stormed the beaches on D-Day and jog-marched nine miles inland weighted by rucksacks weighing up to 150 pounds.

"I'm proud of them, really proud," the tall commando chieftain said. "They knew they had a terrific job to do and they did it." Many Had Been at Dieppe.

I had come ashore with the commandos at 8:45 a.m. or 60 minutes after zero hour on D-Day. I had lived with them for several days in camp before the cross-Channel embarkation on the night of June 5. Many of them had been at Dieppe on that bloody venture in August of 1942 in which the majority of the attacking force was Canadian, and I knew how they felt about getting another crack at the Germans.

If ever men were itching to tear an enemy apart with their bare hands, it was these magnificently trained young fighters.

From the Caen canal, the commandos stormed and captured a vital hill and since then, without relief or reinforcements, they have held it against all comers. Fry the first four days, they fought without a wink of sleep in 48 hours on field rations.

Only 2,000 strong at the outset, they beat off an attack by a German brigade and subsequently smacked back a brigade supported with self-propelled guns still using the Russian front and the remainder on their backs.

Finally the enemy decided they were too hot to handle.

London, June 22 — (CP)—British and the United States have exchanged ideas on a world peace setup as recently suggested by president Roosevelt, but the stage of making a decision has not yet been reached, Deputy Prime Minister Attlee told the House of Commons today.

Rhys Davies, Labor; asked if Britain and the other Allies were consulted by Washington before Mr. Roosevelt disclosed his views, Attlee said ideas are being exchanged intermittently and were especially touched on during the recent visit here of Edward R. Stettinius, United States Under Secretary of State.

Grand Encampment Officers Appointed

Other officers elected were: Grand Senior Warden, George Kidd, N. Bay; Grand High Priest, Walter Dobson, Preston; Grand Junior Warden, Harold Hale, Toronto; Grand Scribe, Roy C. Jones, Hamilton; Grand Treasurer, George Elson, Toronto; Grand Auditor, Carl J. Parker, Brantford; Grand Marshal, W. L. Wilson, Oshawa; Grand Inside Sentinel, Thomas Bell, Ottawa.

W. F. Burns, Kingston, and Roy Bradshaw, Wilkerport were elected representatives to the Sovereign Grand Lodge.

"What a Blooming War!" Parrot's Voice From Ruins

London, June 22 — (CP)—(Reuters) — Firemen digging for victims of a flying bomb in the south of England early today heard a hoarse voice crying from beneath a heap of rubble: "Blimey, what a blooming war." The exclamation was repeated again and again and fireman cleared away bricks which had become unbalanced because of shock.

After digging for a half-hour the firemen cleared away broken floor-boards and saw in a cage —a parrot. The bird was taken away, still screaming: "Blimey, what a blooming war!"

WEDDINGS

HART—WILSON

A wedding of wide interest took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Dundas Street, Napanee, Monday, June 19, at 12.30 p.m., when their only daughter, Anna Jean, was united in marriage to Vincent Orlando Hart, M.D., C.M., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hart, Napanee. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. R. Whitlock, B.A., of Mossford, before a floral background of rose peonies. Miss Mary Ingram, of Desaronto, cousin of the bride, presided at the piano.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a white satin gown, with a finger tip veil, arranged in sweetheart halo style, and edged with seed pearls. She carried a crescent bouquet of Baptiste roses and bouvardia, tied with satin ribbon.

Miss Evalene Clarke, Kingston, as maid of honor, was charming in a pink taffeta gown, and floral toque. She carried a Colonial bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. Miss Hester Cook, Belleville, as bridesmaid was gowned in white embroidered lace, and wore a flower toque. Her flowers were a Colonial bouquet of Johanna Hill roses.

A reception for over 100 guests followed in the Superior Tea Rooms, Dundas Street, Napanee, when the bride's mother, gowned in delph flocome sheer and matching accessories, and wearing a corsage of Talisman roses, and Mrs. Wilson Hart, mother of the groom, navy crepe, with white accessories and a corsage of red roses, received the guests. The bridal bouquet was presented to Mrs. M. Dale, grandmother of the bride.

For travelling, the bride donned a blue, pink sheer wool suit, and Alice blue hat and matching accessories.

Upon their return from Western points, Dr. and Mrs. Hart will make their residence in Napanee, where the groom is a prominent young physician.

Among the out-of-town guests was Mrs. Minnie Hart, Picton.

CALDWELL—WARTMAN

A lovely June wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Wartman, Church Street, Napanee, at three o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, June 20th, when their only daughter, Hazel Phyllis, became the bride of Harry A. Caldwell, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. and Mrs. H. Caldwell, of Port Colborne. The groom is a member of the Provincial Police and has served for some time in Belleville as traffic officer for this district.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked unusually lovely gowned in floor-length white slipper satin, with Chantilly lace yoke, finger tip veil gathered at the crown with a net halo, and carried a nosegay of pink roses and pink and mauve flowers.

The ceremony took place in front of the fireplace in the drawing room with a profusion of flowers, composed of baskets of white and pink peonies, orange blossoms, etc., as a background for the charming event.

The bride's mother was gowned in British tan crepe with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Miss Alice Wartman, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and wore a beautiful street-length two-piece model in delft silk crepe with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Miss Sarah Madden, as maid of honor, was gowned in a two-piece pale blue crepe, street length, with white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Miss Nancy Wartman, young sister of the bride, was flower girl and looked very attractive in white silk and a corsage of sweetpeas.

Mr. Doug. Ellis, of Belleville, acted as best man.

The bride's going away attire was a two-piece blue and white printed silk with white accessories.

The happy couple will spend a short honeymoon trip at Roaches Park, on Lake Erie, after which they will reside on Bridge Street West in Belleville.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served, the bridal table being centred with a lovely 3-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bouquet of roses, and surrounded with tulle and dotted with sweetpeas and roses. And at each end tall white tapers and small crystal bowls of sweetpeas.

Those serving were: Mrs. Harry Moore and Miss Gordon Wartman, sisters of the bride; Mrs. Alvin Wartman, Colborne, sister-in-law of the bride; Miss Bruce Norris, Kingston; Mrs. Edward Sills, Orangeville; Miss Vera Caskey, Napanee, and Miss Doris Allen, Reg.N., Kingston.

RAINEY—McCREARY

The marriage was solemnized in Runnymeade United Church parsonage, Toronto, on Saturday, June 17th, at two o'clock in the afternoon, of Miss Mildred McCreary, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John H. McCreary, of Plainfield, to Erwan Rainey, son of Mrs. Robert Rainey and the late Mr. Rainey, of Omemee, Ont. The Rev. Mr. Conning officiated at the ceremony.

For the occasion, the bride was attractively attired in a turquoise blue ensemble, accented with a matching hat, the fashionable navy and corsage of sweetheart roses.

Mrs. R. D. Knowlton, sister of the bride, from Brantford, was wearing a particularly striking dress of aqua blue jersey with matching accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Percival McCreary, brother of the bride, of Brantford, acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Fox, 146 Pritchard Ave. The rooms were beautifully decorated with an array of roses, peonies and ferns in colorful Summer bloom.

On the wedding trip to Brantford, Ont., and Rochester, N.Y., the bride donned a beige dress and top coat complemented with navy accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Presentation Made To Young Couple

Harold—On Friday evening near-by one hundred neighbors and friends of the community gathered at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hadley and Mr. Donald Stewart, of Harold, Ont., to honor Mr. Stewart's daughter, Olive and her husband, on the occasion of their recent marriage. Mr. John Carlisle acted as chairman.

Mrs. Harold Elliott presided at the piano and all joined in a round of sentimental songs. Readings were given by Mrs. Roy Elliot and Miss Gertie McMullen.

Piano solos were rendered by Ronald Hadley, Bernice Hagerman and Audrey Brown. Three vocal duets were rendered by Dorothy and Vivian Cooney, Jean Wilks and Betty Hall, Colleen Coulden and Gwenie Hay, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Wm. Wartin. A piano duet was given by Dorothea and Vivian Cooney.

Mr. Ivan Heath read the address signed on behalf of their friends in the community, by Kenneth Hagerman, Raymond Cooney, Donald Heath, Harold Morgaret, Harry Kirby, Allyn Bateman and Walter Danford.

The young couple were presented with a beautiful floor lamp suite by four Duncan Phyfe chairs, the latter was a gift of the chairman. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart suitably replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts.

Refreshments were served by the young folk, which brought to a close an enjoyable evening, each one leaving behind their best wishes for years of happiness.

Many Friends Join In Gifts To LAC D. McLaren

One hundred neighbors and friends from Campbellford, Seymour and Frankford, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLaren, 6th Sidney, to honor their son, LAC. Donald McLaren, of the R.C.A.F., stationed at the east coast. Mr. J. A. Lott called the gathering to order and introduced the chairman for the evening, Rev. Alfred Barr. Mrs. Avery Martyn presided at the piano for community singing and choice selections took part in the evening's program were as follows: Accordion band, Mrs. Sirtzer; solo, Miss Lyra Frost; instrumental, Mr. Robert Elliott and Miss Rose Rose; speech by Mr. J. A. Lott, Mr. H. W. Rose and Mr. C. U. Rose.

The address was read by Miss Helen Lott, and the presentation made by Miss Ethel Sirtzer of a portfolio, pencil and identification case.

Donald made a most appropriate reply, thanking friends in a few well chosen words.

The dainty program was brought to a close with a lunch served by the ladies.

Importance of Good Posture

Ruth Warrick has beautiful posture.

By HELEN FOLLETT

YOUR GOOD looks reporter sometimes suspects that the average girl's idea of posture is practically null and void. When walking she just endeavors to get where she is going, not giving a thought as to how it looks when in a state of motion. Instead of standing in a chair air and gracefulness she folds up. It would be of benefit to her general if she would life her chest, give her lungs a chance to air out their cells, and to so carry her torso that there would be no bulge at the waistline.

Good Posture.

That desires this is our pet peeve. Good posture is not only conducive to an attractive figure, but contributes to health and vitality. The girls who slouch in her teens throws her shoulders forward, will have a meal bag figure before she gets out of her thirties. It is just as well to keep a weather eye on our future. Muscles will lose tone and resiliency. Fat cells will have a field day, accumulating on hips, abdomen and thighs. What's the sense in all this?

With the backbone kept tall, the abdomen will be flat, the waistline trim. The chest will be full, breathing deep, and that means that the cheeks will carry a delicate, rosy coloring.

Helps Develop Bust.

There are girls who complain bitterly about underdeveloped breasts. Let them carry themselves beautifully and this condition will be corrected, especially if they practice deep breathing at every opportunity.

Stand erect, hands on hips; chest, hip, head on the level. Take a deep breath that tightens the muscles below the waistline and expands the chest. Hold your breath while you count three. Exhale through the lips making an effort to free the lowest cells of the lungs of stale air.

OSHAWA CLUB BUYS BOAR

Guelph, June 22—(CP)—Oshawa Kiwanis Club will top 1945 price of $125 for a nine-month-old boar at the Yorkshire Breeding sale at the Ontario Agricultural College here yesterday. The animal will be used as a foundation for pig club work in Ontario County.

Wife Preservers

Nuts, raisins, citrus fruit, dates, etc., may be run through the food grinder, finely cut with a sharp knife, or broken up with a rolling pin. Use as much or as little as part of the flour that is to be used in the recipe. Dredge the fruit with flour, so the fruit will not stick to the chopper.

HOT SOUPS for SUMMER ENERGY

HEINZ CONDENSED SOUPS

THROWS PIE IN MAN'S FACE

Fort William, June 21 — (CP) — Without apparent reason a young woman recently entered a cafe here, walked into the kitchen and picked up a pie which she unhesitatingly threw in the proprietor's face. The direct hit smashed the victim's glasses and the lady was taken into custody by police.

If it's hard to believe that Heinz Vegetarian Vegetable Soup is made without meat or mock—it's so rich, lusty, satisfying. And just now the stores have plenty. Warm up cold summer meals with a main dish of soup—a heap of nourishment in itself. But be sure it's Heinz.

Stirling

Stirling — On Sunday morning the members of Stirling Orange Lodge and a large number of the Ladies Lodge marched to the United Church to attend Divine Service. The Rev. R. Lloyd preached an informing and helpful sermon on the principles of the Protestant faith." The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Chute, sang "I Send Out Thy Light."

On Sunday evening St. Paul's United Church was well filled when the Roll of Honor was unveiled and dedicated. The Rev. David Crockett conducted the service assisted by the Rev. W. H. V. Walker, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Taking part in the ceremony of the unveiling of the Oliver Stapley who unveiled the roll, Mrs. Frank Stapley who read the names inscribed on the roll, and Mrs. A. Gordanier, read the dedicatory ment. This was followed by a beautiful prayer of Dedication. Artistically inscribed on the roll are the names of forty-nine young men and two young women, belonging to St. Paul's United Church. Of these young men and women, two have paid the supreme sacrifice in Italy and one is missing after an operational flight over Germany. The Rev. David Crockett delivered a fine address and the choir gave a very fine rendering of "The Miss Crossing" and Isabelle Hellwell sang "Land of Hope and Glory." At the close of this very impressive service, many of those present went forward to the Communion Table, to view the Roll of Honor.

The War Today—

Has Jap Fleet Evaded Action? Allies Have Power for Any Task

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
Substituting for DeWITT MacKenzie
Associated Press War Analyst

Latest reports from the Pacific indicate the Japanese fleet may have evaded battle again.

Reubert James, Associated Press war correspondent with the American fleet off Saipan, says that the Japanese have manoeuvered out of the way, doing much to dampen yesterday's enthusiasm in naval circles which produced statements of exhilaration over prospects for a showdown.

It is too early to be positive, but this would seem to eliminate the prospect of a battle in the area where it was originally expected. The Japanese are either running away or manoeuvring for a better spot. The former seems the more likely.

Forrestal, King and Nimitz are not men to go off half-cocked. Their enthusiasm yesterday surely means that the Allies have the power for any job in the Far Pacific.

That the Japanese would, voluntarily accept battle on such terms is improbable. The fact that the fleets were hundreds of miles apart would have given the enemy ample time to run for Manila or for home. Had both fleets intended to accept battle, they were less than 24 hours steaming time apart.

Which brings us to the question of why the enemy was not there to fight.

The Japanese have been saving their fleet for a long time. Recently, when an Allied task force made its appearance in the Bay of Bengal, three Japanese aircraft carriers regularly based at Singapore were reported to have headed for home.

We have had reports that Truk and Palau were never the bastions which they were cracked up to be. There are reports of no more strength in the Philippines than throughout the rest of Japan's hastily-smashed perimeter defenses. Eugene Burns, Associated Press war correspondent who has covered the circuit from Attu to the South Seas and up to Rumania, said the whole Japanese idea of a defence perimeter has been a bluff.

If this is true, and if the expected far-Pacific battle does fail to develop now, we have some excuse to believe that the blows across the central Pacific are getting us closer to Manila to suit the enemy, and that he was streaking for home, leaving his land garrisons to fight the delaying action, as he has done ever since Guadalcanal.

Sen. Haig Attacks Manpower Policy Of Federal Govt.

Ottawa, June 22—(CP)—Revision of the government's income war excess profit tax policy was called for by Senator John Haig (PC—Manitoba), speaking in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Haig, acting Progressive Conservative Leader, also expressed criticism of the government in its manpower policy and said either conscription for overseas service should be adopted or men not available overseas for service in Canada should be released for work in factories and on farms.

Discussing the government policies came when the $3,057,000,000 war appropriation bill was up for second reading. Debate will be continued on it today.

Senator J. H. King, government leader in the Senate, said the measure was the most important to come before the present session of parliament and recalled it had received careful study by the Senate in committee.

Senator Haig said he had "violent opposition" to the present government policy of restricted conscription.

"If the men are not needed at the front conscription should be abandoned and the men called up and the hundreds of thousands of tons of cargo they are bringing to back up the front.

As for Britain, there are lush fields of grain and a sprinkling of British poppies, poignant reminder of another war. The country is flat, with patches and belts of woodlands, rather than sloping valleys. It reminds you somewhat of some stretches along the upper St. Lawrence around Cornwall, Ont.

Bayeux, back of the line now, is an attractive town reminiscent — making allowances for the high-shouldered Norman architecture and the narrow, cobbled streets —of places like Lindsay, Ont., or Amherst, N.S. And plenty of faces one saw in Lindsay or Amherst years ago now are familiar in Bayeux.

FIRE-BLACKENED

Keeping the assault going on the Germans' still-active rocket bombs launching bases in the Pas de Calais area, R.A.F. heavies followed American heavy and medium bombers over that region yesterday evening and delivered what was officially described as a, "devastating" blow at the German installations there.

Forty-six bombers were missing from the widespread British operations, which included mining in enemy waters.

The warning said against Berlin by a fleet of more than 1,000 U. S. heavy bombers and 1,200 escorting fighters was the greatest ever directed against the Reich capital. It was disclosed that some of the fighters as well as some of the heavy bombers made the shuttle flight between Britain and the Soviet Union.

Making Progress.

While robot flying bombs continued droning through English skies causing a steady increase in weight of bombs dropped on the Pas de Calais area indicated the Allies were making progress in their campaign against the launching mechanisms by those projectiles.

BRIDGEHEAD MEN

Coast Crossed Roadstead

The most amazing thing about the Normandy coast now is the fact that it is a crowded roadstead as far as the eye can see along the invasion strip. For anyone who has been brought up around saltwater ports, it is even more impressive than for an inlander who just sees lots of ships without perhaps realizing fully the amount of manpower, oil, coal, labor, skill and seamanship required to put them there and the hundreds of thousands of tons of cargo they are bringing to

East of the battle area in Normandy bombing was concentrated on the dismantled and choked railway and highway network over which the Germans are striving to push reinforcements. Over an area of several hundred square miles British and American fighter-bombers battered bridges, railroad yards, tracks, barges and all tanks at different places. Air bases at St. Quentin and Rreux also were hit.

The fighters which accompanied the Flying Fortresses and the daylight raid on Berlin may have set a distance record, operating on bow far beyond the Russian border the German capital.

The border itself is some 900 miles from Britain, American fighters have gone some hundred miles further than that on round trips escorting bombers to Poland and targets farther east in Germany.

Still Greater Range

Opening of the new Britain-to-Russia shuttle route brought with it the prospect of still greater raids against Germany.

The shuttle operations already has been established between the U.S. S.R. and Allied bases in Italy, and the new use of eastern bases by British-based aircraft multiplies the possibilities for bewildering, co-ordinated air attacks against the Reich.

The Russian terminal also will give additional help in beating the weather's intermittent interruption of operations. Attacking forces operating from the Mediterranean and Russian bases can cover virtually all of Germany and most of its occupied territory.

The raid yesterday was the Americans' 12th on Berlin. It cost 43 U. S. bombers and 15 fighters. 49 German fighters were knocked down, 20 by the fighters and 29 by the bomber gunners.

It was revealed that American fighter planes now based in France are equipped to carry 2,000 pounds of bombs across the front lines in addition to their normal equipment of machine guns.

Also, auxiliary fuel tanks the fighters carry a 1,000-pound bomb under each wing.

Sharkey Forced to Concede Bout to Katan When Garibaldi Injures Knee Early in Bout

Loser, However, Scores Victory in the Second Fall

GOOD PRELIMS

John Katan, that villainous wrestler from Palermo, still remains undefeated and the No. 1 villain in the minds of local wrestling fans.

Wednesday night before 2,000 rabid fans Katan out-witted his rasping adversary, Ralph Garibaldi. Referee Jack Sharkey, the ex-heavyweight boxing champion of the world, who refereed and Dr. Bob Wyatt, local chiropractor, who assisted Garibaldi after he had sustained an injured leg early in the main bout of a Tuesday Incorporated three-bout wrestling show at the Hume Arena, Sharkey stopped the bout in Katan's favor to save Garibaldi further injury.

Fans by the hundreds went to see Sharkey celebrate the 13th anniversary of the night he won the world's heavyweight boxing championship in New York and sad-un-dry were satisfied Sharkey would eventually pit loose with his famed "one-two, left feint and right cross punch", but only once did the ex-champ, revert to pugilism and even then Katan exchanged punches with him momentarily before retiring under the impression that discretion was the better part of valor. Then the eager Katan went on to prove he is still the No. 1 villain-wrestler of the muscle-bending business as he outsmarted and out-roughed his foe early in the match, but particularly his opponent, Ralph Garibaldi, whom the fans had pinned their hopes upon.

Injured His Knee

Early in the initial round, ropes saved Katan from disaster as Garibaldi had him at a disadvantage with his famed arm-wheel hold and down for the count of three. While attempting a subsequent flying tackle Garibaldi slipped between the ropes and the outer skirt to badly injure his knee. Realizing on the helpless St. Louis lad Katan applied a crab hold and Garibaldi conceded the fall in hopes of retaliation.

Although Katan secured his sit-tack on Garibaldi's injured limb in the middle session the lithe, young-er Garibaldi again regained his grip-wheel hold into position and evened matters in short order. It was in this round that Katan elected to stand before Referee Jack Sharkey in defience of fisticuffs, but the "Boston Gob" squared off, measured Katan and the palermo Panther went for more cautious atmosphere and tangled with Garibaldi.

The third and final round was short as Katan relentlessly belabored Garibaldi's injured leg even after Dr. R. Wyatt had massaged it and lured limb throughout the rest period. Finally Katan gained a full leg-lock and after exacting terrific pressure Referee Sharkey asked the St. Louis lad to again concede, but he refused. Sharkey had no alternative than to call the bout in Katan in order to save Garibaldi from further punishment and perhaps a permanent injury.

Referee Punished

Once again those two arch enemies of the squared squirm circle met and wrestled to a 30 minute draw during which Referee Cliff Fox took the most punishment. The referee is to Al (Boo) Dunlop and Vern (Baby-face) Baxter. At one time during this muscle-bending performance Baxter had Dunlop down, but unfortunately Arbiter Fox was still further down — to wit on neath both grapplers with some 500 pounds of humanity lying astride him and that's far from comical, at least Fox is so convinced. However, 30 minutes doesn't seem of sufficient time to have these lads settle their difference, maybe a no time limit bout would bring about better results.

Curtain-Raiser Good

For unadulterated action the curtain-raiser took the night's bouquet when Jim Hatlo tangled with 10 baffle Chief Thundercloud's flying tackle. gain a flying head scissors hold on the latter's leg. The winner's tap on his back. Don't forget the fact the Semblanced Indian Chief didn't like this, but the fans saw more action and they even had to come to Christie's rescue and untangle him from the leather lungs of Jim Hatlo at the Hume Arena again next Wednesday.

London, June 21—(CP)—Herbert Sutcliffe, internationally known England and Yorkshire cricketer, has received offers to participate in first-class league cricket so that he can be near his son and give him advice.

The Sutcliffes, senior and junior, may fogether as an opening pair in the less distinguished circle of the Leeds League and young Herbert has inherited much of his father's talent. He already has appeared at Lord's in a public school's match.

The father, incidentally, has one little-known distinction tucked away in his achievements. He was the only batsman to score 1,000 runs before the end of the '21 years of first class cricket between the First Great War and this one.

For 15 long years, owner Claude Harper sent his horses to the post with never a win. Then the unprecedented losing streak was broken the other day when Career Joe romped home first at Salisbury.

The persistent Harper told the press he considered the triumph a omen and looked forward to the running of his rank outsider, Treble Crown, in the Derby.

Practically no one had heard of the Warsop Main Colliery Boys Football Club until it was revealed this Nottinghamshire team had scored 239 goals and let in 17 in strict league and cup games this season.

Big-league scouts, with an eye to peacetime team building, discovered that average age of the boys was 15 1-2 and that they were no prolific on the attack that even the goalkeeper had scored.

Cricketers throughout the Empire were saddened at word of the death of Harry White, 74, for 27 years groundsman at Lord's.

As keeper of the most famous turf wicket, he had a place in cricket history and was central figure in probably the most sensational Test incident.

That was back in 1926 when, only

Navy was knocked out last night at Portland, Me, by Coley Welch, 160, New England welterweight champion in the second round of a scheduled 10-round feature .

Pitcher Ewald Pyle was fined and suspended indefinitely, it was announced last night by Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants, who declared the player had become involved in fisticuffs with a fan at Boston last Saturday. Pyle broke a bone in his hand and remains suspended until he is fit to play.

Leo Durocher was removed from the active player list of the Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday and he has resumed the role of bench manager. He has been replaced at second by Clyde King, 19-year-old

Moose Jaw Royals, but lost out 2-0. And then in an intercounty game between Kitchener and Preston, Ont., Maynord Knorr kept Preston from collecting a solitary safety, but lost 4-0 as his mates errored and kicked the goal around. It just ain't no use!

Allied Troops Use Rome Field To Conduct Track, Field Meet

By The Canadian Press

The 1944 Olympic games, once scheduled to be held in Rome, never reached realization but Allied troops of the 5th Army yesterday made good use of a magnificent but unfinished stadium for a track and field meet. Despite lack of athletic training and sport equipment, the soldiers turned in excellent performances. Pte. Zemer S. Cox, a negro from Wichita, Kan., won the century in the reported time of 9.9 seconds and the 220 high hurdles in 25.1 seconds. L. Cpl. W. Rayner of the British Army copped the one and one mile events. Loud speakers were rigged to huge statues to keep the large crowd informed. Winners are to represent the 5th Army in the Mediterranean track and field championships shortly.

Toronto, June 22 — (CP) — This one is told about Tom Sunkel, Montreal Royals' purposeful mound star. With the invasion going on and everyone much interested in events on the beachhead, his teammates got to talking about the war and his part in that.

"What do you think of the international situation," queried Leroy Grier, batting-practice pitcher for Royals, as well as sportswriter for the Montreal Standard.

"Well," replied Sunkel reflectively, doubtless shifting a cud of tobacco in the approved fashion for these anecdotes, "there's nothing wrong with the international situation that a little better pitching won't cure."

'Ware Squalls:

Mother Nature pulled a little sabotage on yachtsmen in a race up Sarnia way the other day. The boats were bunching along right merrily with a spanking breeze when a sudden squall struck them. The storm held the water back from the end of the lake the boats were sailing in, and the lake level dropped four feet in an hour. As a result only two of the yachts with smaller keels were able to finish the race, while the others limped and snapped their halyards.

Bit Discouraging:

We wouldn't blame some pitchers if they got a little downhearted. Frankie Germann hurled a one-hitter in a girls' fastball game against a few hours before the scheduled start. Then he pitched England-Australia match. White discovered a large section of the infield in the park in-lon end was a mud swamp. Water was pouring down the hill from a hose-pipe.

What actually happened always stayed a mystery. Special editions of evening papers, however, started hunting with such headlines as "Foul Play on Lord's Wicket."

Work crews achieved miracles and play started only a few minutes late from the original wicket. Some of the players fielded all that day on a Sahara of sawdust.

SWACO LASSIES IN A TIE WITH LEAGUE LEADERS

Defeat Combines 11-7 by Scoring Six in the First Frame

MANY HOMERS

Six runs in the initial frame were sufficient advantage for Terrence Cobb's SWACO lassies to continue through and beat Jim Semark's Combines 11 to 7 in a Ladies Softball League fixture at the Armouries Lawn Wednesday evening. The win kept the SWACO lassies up on the heels of the league leadership, while for the Combines, suffering their first defeat the season, dropped into second place.

Circuit blows far over the Pinnacle St. wall by Reie Colden and Hilda Steens helped SWACO on their way in the first inning when they batted around, scored six runs. The Colden crowd had made it ten by the end of the third before the Combines found their batting range to score two each in the third, fourth and fifth with a singleton in the sixth. Pat Semark, D. Reid and C. Pelton fielded the most potent bats for the losers.

Besides her circuit blow Hilda Meens had a triple, while Peg Rowbotham counted a double and a single for Alemite, Madge Kelleher led the pack with three hits in four trips.

Lois Calcutt, in her first start of the year, went the route for the winners while Marg Reynolds, who also is back in the game after a long layoff, gave way to Norma Cook as the latter took the hard end often in the initial frame.

The line-ups:

SWACO—Calcutt 2b, Allin cf, Meens c, Haslip 3b, Colden ss, Rowsby lf, Kelleher rf, Rowbotham 1b, and Calcutt p.

CASUAL COMMENT

By K.J.C.

No Chance

A young woman whose beauty is equal to her intelligence and conversation was visiting a house where a number of guests were assembled, among them the eldest son of a wealthy manufacturer. The talk turned to matrimonial squabbles. Said the young man:

"I hold that the husband for the husband to do is to begin as he intends to go on. Suppose the question was one of smoking, I would at once show my intentions by lighting a cigar, thus settling the question for ever."

"And I," said the young woman, "would at once knock it out of your mouth."

"Do you know," replied the young man thoughtfully, "I don't think you would be there."

Baseball Looms Up.

Baseball, a game that once brought sport prominence and distinction to Belleville, is headed for a revival of major proportions. This return cannot be accomplished overnight, but the steps in that direction have slowly been taking form.

The recent city council news announcement that the Stewart-Wright Alemite Corporation had offered to purchase the old baseball grounds (Pine St. at McDonald Ave.) is one of the steps that will mean a great deal eventually, the eastern extremity of the city. The purchase was announced by A. Stewart, general manager of the SWACO plant, who has long been interested in baseball in this city. Mr. Young's first intention, it is understood, is to have a playing field, back-stop and other primary necessities for a junior baseball diamond.

Art Young was always of the opinion that the old grounds lay-out, with the patrons or fans so conveniently surrounding the field of game and players, was one of the finest baseball diamonds in Belleville.

"Get the fans along the base lines — here they can become part of the game. Where they can sit in comfort, have a natural vantage-ability abuse or annoy the players by their comments, and above all what the fans go to a ball game for" — is Mr. Young's theory and it holds considerable logic providing their is no interference on the part of the fans.

After the new SWACO field is laid out, Art Young hopes the nucleus of a city baseball league can be formed and that next year a start made towards the return of baseball to its former lofty sport perch.

Foundation Laid.

Already there is a foundation for the revival of baseball in Belleville. Two teams of junior softball — the old Sunday ball game, one nine from Foster Ward and the other from the community of St. Michael's Academy, Toronto — these lads have the bats and catchers' paraphernalia. They have uniforms, will travel on buses and shoes and are not asking for uniforms at present. Big-ger softballers need a little interest and financial aid in the purchase of baseball equipment and bats.

Last Sunday the St. Mikes nine journeyed over to Trenton where they lost 10 to 6 to a team of older players. But the experience gained was invaluable. Trenton had Jack Moffatt, former Bell Hill pitcher on the slows and Jack whiffed seven-batters while 15 Belleville batters-hing like 15 Belleville batters. Dick Fitzpatrick, a junior in his first year of pitching, hurled for the Irish. This Sunday both Bland's Foster Ward kids will engage the Trenton boys in a game to be played at the Alemite Field in the afternoon. Sunday's game was played quietly without any disturbance to the good scene-people of Trenton. Some of the town police cruiser drove up, the occupants looked the situation over and saw everything was peaceful and in order and drove away. All of this reminds us there is a ball game played at Shannonville nearly ever Sunday.

Thanks, Mr. Moore.

When the locals played in Trenton they were surprised to see the hometown nine walk out in new baseball uniforms. We have been informed that Harry Moore, president of the Trenton Courier-Advocate is personally responsible for the provision of these uniforms. And Harry didn't go about it with any thought of recognition for philanthropic practices either. Maybe after a few more weekend baseball games are played locally the kids here will be able to blossom out in ball toggery also.

Just to show there is a definite trend towards the return of baseball in these parts, it is many years since Trenton even boasted of a ball team. Then across the bay in Prince Edward a county league of four teams is now functioning. Gerald Barrigar and some of the boys around Consecon Village have organized a team they hope to enter in a proposed city baseball league. Tweed also is interested in baseball and a game between the boys from Sam Curry's adopted village and the St. Mikes kids is slated for the making. In the meantime Bland's Foster Ward boys hope for a revenge for their rival Irish nine by beating Trenton here over the week-end to start the old ball game rolling in Belleville once more. Some organized old or used baseball mitts, bats or balls are particularly in order to help the revival by giving the same to these kids. After all old ball players is doing no good in the attic or cellar.

Remember When.

Joe Louis became the second negro in the history of boxing to hold the world's heavyweight championship seven years ago Thursday night. Louis battered James J. Braddock off the throne with a knockout in the eighth round of their scheduled 15-round bout at Chicago. Joe Johnson was the other negro titleholder, 1910-'15.

H. Armstrong Will Continue In Boxing Ring

Washington, June 22 — (AP) — Henry Armstrong, one of the biggest little men in ring history, said again today he would continue fighting "as long as I can, win—and make money out of the game.

"I like boxing and everything that goes with it," he said. "I'm the fans like me," he said. "I'm going to stay in the game while they quit paying to see me. When the gate receipts drop, then I'll know it's time to quit.

Henry declaimed Nick Latzios, an almost unknown Greek-American lad from Alexandria, Va., over a 10-round route last night. About 8,000 spectators paid to see the bout. In previous appearances here and elsewhere he's attracted far more of the ring faithful.

Armstrong, the only man who ever held three world championships at the same time, currently is campaigning to regain the welterweight crown he once held along with those of the feather-weight and lightweight divisions.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 411

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Fabulous claims may be made for an opening bid of two in a suit. Diving into its heart, you will find two of its outstanding virtues.

First, it promises nine or more tricks. Count one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one for each short card. With nine or more, you have a two bid.

Second, it is a one-jump bid. And as one-jump bid is a forcing-to-game signal. It demands that the bidding be kept alive until a game contract is reached.

With these as its hub, it spreads out into several channels of utility. From that basic spot, a pair of partners can unlax while they spin their yarn into their most desired pattern.

You see, the opening two bidder says he can furnish a game all by his lonesome. Consequently, he is interested in only two kinds of advices from partner.

One thing he wants to learn from partner is what suit, if any, should be trump. The other kind of advice he wants is whether partner has help for a slam.

Desired first is advice as to whether there is a slam. They then know the limits to which they are confined. And the trump situation can be discussed with freedom.

So, in answer to an opening bid of two in a suit, partner's first reply must say whether he has help for a slam. And that is done by means of a bid that acts as a signal.

Pluck a hand like this:

♠ K Q
♥ A J 9 4
♦ A K Q 9 5
♣ A K

Your opening bid with that hand is two diamonds. That says you have at least nine tricks. It orders the bidding to continue to game and asks partner to say whether he has help for a slam.

All you can do then is wait for the rebound.

"Princess O'Rourke"

Men? Do you twitch? Do you twitch sideways, or up-and-down . . . or both ways? Now there can't be once a guy with a long royal title who twitched. After all you know you couldn't expect a genuine 24-carat princess who looks as luscious as Olivia de Havilland to go for this guy who twitched. Especially when there happened to be a young and good-looking guy like for instance Robert Cummings . . . who did not twitch! So that's how it starts and from then on gets better and better and better until you're limp from laughing at Warner Bros.' royal, romantic treat, "Princess O'Rourke," which you can see and must see today at the Capitol Theatre.

"Billy the Kid in Texas"

Bob Steele, star of "Billy the Kid in Texas," now playing at the Capitol Theatre, has a national reputation as a crack marksman. He asserts that whereas most anyone can be taught to shoot fairly well with a rifle in a short time, the accuracy of aim with a revolver is only achieved after months of strenuous application.

The story is an original by Joseph O'Donnell. It was directed by the very capable Peter Stewart, and the production duties were in the charge of Sigmund Neufeld.

A color cartoon and the first chapter of the new serial "Captain America" will also be shown.

AT THE BELLE

"Cry Havoc"

Margaret Sullavan is cast in the important role of Smitty in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Cry Havoc," now playing at the Belle Theatre.

Miss Sullavan has been off the screen since completing her starring role of "Back Street," and has been devoting herself to her husband and family. She heads a cast which also stars Ann Sothern and Joan Blondell, and features Marsha Hunt, Fay Bainter, Zilla Raines, Diana Lewis, Heather Angel and Dorothy Morris.

"Cry Havoc" is a screen adaptation of the hit play and tells the dramatic story of the last hours on Bataan, as seen through the eyes of civilian aides.

Cementmen Win Over C.N.R. As Squires Triumph

Softball played in the Belleville area last evening saw Point Anne "Cementmen" and Columbian Squires win league games while the Stephens Adamson "Marines" took an exhibition decision from the Mountain View "Bombers".

At Point Anne the "Cementmen" came from behind to down the C. N. R. "Railroaders" 7 to 5 after the latter had lead the parade for the greater period. Actually the C. N. R. loosed the game early in the later stages after Johnnie Bowden had held the pennants in tow for seven frames. Bubby Gaulin, who was forced to retire from the game early due to an ankle injury, pitched the Cementmen to a belated win. Whitehead, Whalen and Hutchinson spearheaded a rally that saw Point Anne score four runs in the last three frames to win. Bob Bunton was on the hilltop for the homesters and one big batsmanes moved to the attack Bunton bore down and halted the "Railroaders" in their powerful pallis to advance the Cementmen into second place in the league standing.

Out at Tweed the Columbian Squires shook up their team and with Don Boyle on the hilltop emerged winner over the homesters by a 10 to 8 count. Jack Doran's Squires came from behind to give their mates their first win since the opening of the season and it happened to come at the most opportune time, in Mr. Doran's native haunts.

At the Fair Ground the Stephens Adamson "Marines" downed the Mountain View "Bombers" 6 to 1 to chalk up their third consecutive win this week. Jim Anderson was on the hilltop for the Marines while Chambers pitched for the Bombers. Carson hit a triple and then a double for Marines. Tuning a doubleheader is slated in the city league.

CHICAGO FAILS TO WIN ONE GAME AGAINST CARDS

Cubs Have Been Beaten Eleven Times This Year by St. Louis

DODGERS DRUBBED

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Chicago Cubs are headed for a Major League futility record, unless they do better in the next 11 games against St. Louis Cardinals than they did in the 11 times they've met. The result: Cards—11, Not 0.

The Cubs have not fared so poorly against the Redbirds since 1902, when they dropped 17 of 20 games to the Flatbirds.

Manager Charlie Grimm used six pitchers and six pinch-hitters against the Cards yesterday, but lost, 6-4 and 7-2. George Munger won his 8th game against 2 defeats in the opener, although he needed late help from Mort Cooper. Harry Brecheen took his third straight from the Cubs in the finale. The double win increased the Cards' lead over Pittsburgh to 8½ games, their biggest margin of the season.

New York Giants drubbed Brooklyn 11-2 for their 18th triumph in the last 24 games, to take over third place in the National League. Bill Voiselle gained his 9th victory, holding the Brooks to six hits. Mel Ott scored his 1,761st run to break his tie with Hans Wagner and set a new National League record.

After eight scoreless innings, Cincinnati scored in the clutch, but Pittsburgh Pirates, counted two in their half to take the game, 2-1. Babe Dahlgren's single scored Tommy O'Brien with the winning run.

Philadelphia Athletics made it 11 games in a row by trouncing Chick Siebert drove in three runs with a double and triple.

New York and Washington divided a double-header, the champions taking the first 4-3, after losing 1-3 until the seventh. The Nats took the second 6-4, with a five-run first inning at the expense of Spec Potter. Mike Ryba, Cincinnati hurler, was fined $50 by National League President Ford Frick for "indecent and abusive language" to Umpire Joe Paparella.

Detroit in a slugfest, 8-7. Rudy York of the Tigers and Mickey Rocco of the Indians blasted home runs.

With the R. C. A. F. somewhere in England, June 22 —(CP)— The Boothys of Horsham had been after Sqdn. Ldr. Hugh Norsworthy of Westmount, Que., to come and visit them. He was hoping to get down to it, when flying operations allowed the time, and then, bango, before he knew it he was almost in the Boothy's back yard.

Sqdn. Ldr. James R. M. Boothby is an R. A. F. armament officer on the airfield from which Norsworthy's squadron operates. He and Norsworthy take off for a raid on Germany, and Norsworthy, after reaching back to his base from a refuelling station when his engine caught fire.

"I decided I had better land," Norsworthy. "I saw a field and broke my speed by cutting through a hedge just before landing."

There he was just 25 yards from the home of his pal, Sqdn. Ldr. Boothby, while Mrs. Boothby and her two children watched the forced landing.

In a joint service of dedication for "D-Day", officers and men of two R. A. F. and one R. C. A. F. fighter squadrons packed the 13th century east Protestant chapalnia of the three units particpated. Group Capt. Paul Davoud, D. S. O., D. F. C., of Kingston, Ont., who commanded the sector, read the scripture lesson.

In his sermon Sqdn. Ldr. H. E. D. Ashford, M. B. E. of Calgary, said, "we are here to dedicate ourselves and our lives to this campaign . . . It may demand more from us than we expect and with God's help we will be ready to give that more."

"Vicki," a small chocolate-colored, satin-covered rabbit, the gift of wife of Pit. Off. J. E. R. St. Amour of (314 King Edward Ave.) Ottawa has been taken on strength of the Alouette bomber squadron as mascot. Her enlistment appeared in D. R. O.'s with the following proviso—"No advance, no rations, no complaints." Vickie has done 10 operations, among them Essen, Cologne and Stuttgart.

FO. Francis Joseph Crowley, (77 Wall St.) Brockville, Ont., parachutist into the Channel when his Typhoon fighter-bomber was crippled by ack-ack as he headed home from a raid. He just said over his interconm: "Stinky's goin' to bail out." Then he went and in no time at all was rescued from the Channel.

FORTRESS LIVED OUT STRANGE NICKNAME

U. S. Bomber Base in Britain—(CP)—A crew with a weakness for the game of blackjack christened their Flying Fortress "Twentyone or Bust."

The pilot was killed on his 21st mission. A huge chunk of flak severed the engineer's right leg on the same flight. The crew was changed but "Twentyone or Bust" took off on mission No. 21 and was shot down over Germany.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 23

My head reeled with the effort of following who told whom. But once the maze was unraveled, young Jordan's deductions made sense. And illustrated the Inspector's warning against talking to Conley Forrestall besides.

"And what's the other way you've 'figured'?" Allan's voice cut into my reflections.

"Oh—that!" Bobby Jordan became distinctly embarrassed. "That second way is sort of far-fetched, I guess. Just something I thought."

"We're anxious to hear it just the same. Out with it!" I invited.

He picked invisible bits of dust from his sleeves. "Well—if you promise you won't get mad—I've been thinking maybe there was no man a-tall. Just Mr. Burton. Of course, he was your husband, Miss Wentworth. But I guess that didn't count so much and, well—maybe Amy had her eye on him. And—" he suddenly broke off and jumped up. "Aw, I'm gabbing too much. I'd better be going. Just tell the Inspector—"

It was incredible. The boy was accusing Amy! There wasn't the slightest doubt of it. That's where his 'figuring' was leading—

"No, Mr. Jordan. You tell him," I said firmly, getting up also. "I'm sorry, but we can't take the responsibility. Your ideas sound too important. Mr. Reid will drive you to the Inspector's house right now."

"That's right. Come on, young man!" Allan seconded me grimly.

Aunt Millie took young Jordan's surmises philosophically, when I told her about them after Allan's departure with the boy. Just as she'd taken Curtis Avery's unwarranted plea for assistance and Stella's scene in the Inspector's office.

"There may be something in Forrestall's tattling to his wife, but outside of that, it seems to me like nothing but conjectures, spite and —fright," she shrugged.

"I'd agree with you, only—unfortunately his conjectures tally with a theory I've had all along—one of my earliest nightmares," I told her.

"Let's hear it," she invited calmly.

"Amy's companion may have been Bruce, coming and going at random, without Forrestall's knowledge."

"Bruce?" But why should he have met Amy on the sly when he was all fussed up about Gala? Besides, Roberts would have known him in his sleep," she objected.

"Roberts did know him. He simply invented the story of an unknown man because Bruce had ordered him to keep his visits quiet. Just as he said he'd thrown the stone away," I argued. "And as to his meetings with Amy—he may still have been fighting against his love for Gala, and used her as he used me five years ago: for a guinea pig, to see could he get over Gala with her 'help.'"

"Sounds goofy. But from all I hear about the precious Bruce, I gather that's what he was," Aunt Millie said dryly.

"If I'm right—it also would explain Amy's dislike of me," I went on. "She may have known my relationship to Bruce—he may have told her—and she resented it."

"Yes. May have thought you'd come here to get him back. And when she found out it wasn't you, it was Gala, she—well, hadn't your restraint and—got even," Aunt Millie followed my reasoning. "But I still don't see where the Stoddard murder fits in."

"It doesn't. It's a thing apart," I maintained. "Bruce caught Stoddard ransacking his library and killed him—unintentionally."

Aunt Millie considered the idea for a while and then shook her head. Not in negation. As if to shake off something.

"I can't make head nor tail of it," she said at last testily. "And I'm not going to spend a sleepless night over it either. Let the Inspector worry, and let's you and I go to bed and have a nice long sleep. Or —is Allan coming back?"

I told her he wasn't. "He and Dad have to get up early, for Bruce's funeral," I reminded her.

"Well here's hoping you sleep through it," she offered unfeelingly.

I must confess to my shame, I did oversleep the next morning. Nettie omitted to call me at six I had asked her to do—on Aunt Millie's say-so, I inferred—and I only woke at nine—to the shocking realization that the mortal remains of the man who had been my husband, for a few transitory days, had been placed in the Burton family vault two hours earlier.

The reporters of Cliffport's only paper had been less remiss. In spite of the secrecy observed, and the early hour of the ceremony, the front page of the late morning edition screamed over Bruce's funeral.

There were pictures of him, of Ellis Burton, of the Burton house. Dad's presence was duly mentioned —Allan's discreetly overlooked— and I was "the lovely young widow, too prostrated with grief for a public appearance."

It was pretty depressing reading, and I welcomed the Inspector's unexpected arrival. Then Forrestall and Aunt Millie entered. Forrestall said. "I'd like to show you the safe right away."

Soon afterwards the four of us were standing in the library of the Burton house, where only the absence of the dark-grey stone on the desk was an indication of what had happened.

"Now if you'll watch carefully," Conley Forrestall invited, stepping to one of the wall cabinets and putting his hand on the handle of one of its small drawers. "You give this handle a twist to the right, until it is in its old position, then you push in and—let go."

He accompanied the words with the action and, to my surprise, the whole cabinet slid forward, all but the bottom drawer, until it had moved completely out of its niche. Then it swung, just as slowly, to the right disclosing an open space between its neighbors, with the door of a safe clearly visible in the wall behind it.

"Simple if you know how," the Inspector commented.

Forrestall nodded. "Yes, and almost impossible to find. The safe itself is an old coffee mill. If a burglar ever discovered it, getting into the thing would be child's play for him. Here's the combination. Will you open it., Miss Wentworth?

I stepped on the shallow platform formed by the stationary drawer and turned the knob according to the directions on the slip of paper Forrestall handed me.

It really was easy. The safe swung open instantly, and all that would be mine in a few short months lay before me: bundles and bundles of securities, records of separate enterprises, stacks of heavy account books—

Forrestall pointed out one batch after the other, with voluble explanations about the investment value and general desirability of each and as a good showman left the biggest plum to the last.

"'And here is the famous letter," he announced, pulling out a small inner drawer. "Opened, as you see—by the late Bruce Jollimar-Burton."

I couldn't help it, my scalp was tingling as I took it from him and walked to the desk, sitting down in the chair behind it, which Ellis Burton had occupied all his life—in which Bruce must have sat recently. It was like a symbolic action, a taking-possession of the Burton estate.

I slowly pulled five large, closely written sheets from the envelope and began to read.

"My dearest son," the long letter started. And went on from there, with protestations of love, and regrets about their "misunderstanding" for the whole first page. Then it mentioned Gala, with many pangs of conscience about her accident, which wouldn't have happened if he, the writer had been less prejudiced. And at last, on the third page,it got around to the radium find.

"We were on the right track, the last time we searched for it in Central America," Ellis Burton wrote "The only mistake we made, was at our last camp. I'm not mentioning its location, for fear this letter may fall into the wrong hands. You will know the one I mean, if I tell you we took the right fork of the river from there. We should have followed the left one—"

Then came directions. Speaking of rivers and mountains in miles and altitudes, mentioning good camping sites, or how to avoid certain swampy stretches, and ending with a description of their goal.

Nowhere, in the ten long pages, was there a clue to the locality of the valley. Not even to the country in which it was, or the year in which Burton and Bruce had searched for it the last time. 'Central America" was the only geographical term in the whole involved epistle.

I read the letter through twice, sure I must have overlooked something. And then, just as I opened my mouth to speak of the astonishing lack of information, I remembered the Inspector's warning not to talk too freely in the presence of Conley Forrestall, and changed what I'd been going to say into: "Amazing! His desciption of the place. Listen to this!"—and read them a part of the letter.

"The floor of the whole valley shows small outcroppings of pitchblende of ordinary strength. Immensely valuable, but nothing unprecedented. Only toward the center, in a bowl-shaped depression, does the ore show the unheard-of radium content of the stone I have brought home with me for demonstration and testing purposes. But that small area contains enough radium in my estimation, to supply the world's needs for generations—

I put down the letter, still a little uncertain how far to proceed.

"But where is this little valley? In what country?" Forrestall interrupted me.

I tried to look innocent. "Don't you know? Didn't you read the letter?"

"Certainly not," he informed me angrily. "No matter what Inspector Pettengill thinks, I'm not in the habit of reading letters addressed to other people—which, however doesn't say I'm free of all natural curiosity."

"I'm sorry, but—I can't tell you," I said firmly. "Mr. Burton especially asks Bruce not to divulge the location to anyone. He wants him to go to the valley with the best scientific equipmment obtainable, and taking a certain famous geologist with him—he mentions the name—but he wants no one, not even this geologist, to know where they're going"

Forrestall made a slight grimace and shrugged. "Sounds like Burton. And it isn't important, except —this thing does get one, rather. I guess it's the hidden adventurer in the staidest of us. Well, I have to run. I'll be late for the meeting as it is."

"Good girl! Remembered what I said about keeping you're mouth shut to Forrestall!" the Inspector praised after my administrator's departure. "Now what really is in the letter? Or—were you telling the truth?"

"Yes and no," I told him, picking up the sheets and handing them to him. "Read it yourself. You too, Aunt Millie."

Silence followed. The only sound in the room was the soft rustling of the paper as the two readers turned the pages.

"I'll be a monkey's grandson!" said the Inspector when the last sheet had been turned and read. "So now they's no stone and no radium, far's you are concerned!"

I nodded mutely.

"Perhaps it's better this way," Aunt Millie tried to console me. "Heaven knows what trouble the stuff might have caused."

I nodded again, and said, "Oh, I don't know," listlessly.

There was no use denying it to myself: I was frightfully disappointed. Somewhere in the back of my head the picture of a unique honeymoon had been taking shape —a pilgrimage on horseback into the depths of gorgeous tropical forests—and now the pretty picture had dissolved—

I pulled myself together. "Well, it can't be helped!" I said resolutely, getting out of my swivel chair. "Anyway, I didn't lie very much as Forrestall. All the things I told him really were in the letter. I merely let him imagine I was keeping back vital information."

"And what harm would it have done if he had heard the truth?" Aunt Millie challenged not me, but the Inspector. "You can't seriously suspect him of—anything. Look how decent he is. He didn't even read the letter after Bruce opened it."

"Never said he wasn't decent," the Inspector told her briefly, and turned to me switching the subjects in his usual unconcerned manner.

The following morning found me behind the desk in the Burton library pouring over a formidable array of ledgers and business reports

I felt distinctly out of sorts—injured and abandoned, even if I had had a hard time keeping Aunt Millie from coming with me.

No matter where my thoughts started, these days, they ended with the murders. I thought angrily, trying in vain to add up a five-figure column for the second time, with the same result. It was stupid of me. I mustn't think of all that horror constantly. The murders were over—a thing of the past—

Or—would there be other killings, as Gala had hinted? I pushed the account books aside, leaned back and for the thousandth time reviewed the list of my suspects.

If the two murders were unconnected. . .if radium was at the bottom of both murders—

Suddenly an icy finger tapped down my spine.

I'd been a fool! An abysmal fool! Inspector Pettengill had warned me against confiding in Forrestall, giving as a reason—a reason Bobby Jordan had unwittingly corroborated in his surmise number one—his inclination to tell all he knew to his wife and daughter, and through them, by some mysterious, roundabout route, to the murderer.

And I—I had let him believe the letter contained the directions to the fabulous radium deposit! That meant—

I didn't dare finish my thought, didn't dare draw a deep breath, in the sudden wave of fear that surged over me.

I don't know why I didn't jump up and run home, once I'd convinced myself of my danger. I think I was too numbed by the discovery of my awful blunder, and too scared of what I might meet on the stairs, or on the lower floor. At any rate, I didn't. I just sat there, tense, listening—waiting.

Waiting for the murderer to come for the radium directions and— to kill me.

Twice I was sure I heard someone in the hall, sat staring at the door until my eyes ached with the strain. And twice no one came, and I relaxed and called myself names.

And then, when I hadn't heard so much as a whisper, and was trying to go on with the list of securities I was making out, a meek voice said: "May I come in?" —and there was Amy Forrestall, standing in the door.

I blinked and gulped. She certainly had been among my imagined suspects, after young Jordan's tall story. Still, I couldn't connect her presence with the murders, felt instinctively there must be another reason for her coming. Perhaps because of the way she looked.

All her affected arrogance and cocksureness was gone, and so was her meticulous elegance. Her dress was smart, of course—Amy didn't own anything but exaggeratedly smart dresses—but she'd put it on any which way. Her hair straggled. Her makeup was smudged. And she looked scared. Young, and helpless, and scared. As scared as a human being can look.

"Certainly. Come on in, Amy". I invited her, when my first stupor had worn off. "What can I do for you?"

"You can give me—something. A stone. And an envelope", she said, coming into the room. And her lips trembled so violently the words were all blurred.

"The stone, and the envelope?" I couldn't shake off a feeling of unreality, even in the face of this proof of Amy's guilt!

"Yes", she nodded. "Give them to me—quickly. I —we—haven't much time. I'll have to be out of here in—twenty minutes".

"Why?" I inquired.

FELT RUNDOWN AND TIRED; NERVOUS; HAD NO APPETITE

Nerves on Edge; Couldn't Sleep. "I Never Felt Like Eating Because Everything Disagreed with Me," Says Nearby Resident, Tells How Syntona Helped Him.

At this season of the year many people feel fatigued, wornout and nervous; appetites are lost and they have no energy to do anything; from suffering with indigestion, dizzy feelings, headaches and rheumatic aches and pains, and the bowels become constipated. Now is the time to take Syntona Herbal Compound for results like that experienced by Mr. George King, well known resident of Waterdown, Ontario.

"I was very rundown and felt fatigued all the time," said Mr. King. "I had no appetite to speak of and I never felt like eating because everything disagreed with me. My food just seemed to turn to gas and give me a full, heavy, bloated feeling. I'd belch up hot, sour liquids. At times I had dizzy spells with dark spots floating before my eyes. My back hurt and I had a lot of pains in my limbs, joints and muscles. I couldn't get restful sleep at night, because my nerves were all on edge.

"I tried one thing after another, but, if anything, I kept getting worse. When I read about Syntona being made from herbs and roots I thought it might help me, so I began taking it. Before I finished the first bottle I knew it was doing me some good. Now I am here to tell you that it proved to be just what I needed. I can eat regular meals again and my food is doing me some real good. The gas, sourness and acidity have stopped. I am rid of the dizziness and the pains have just about all gone from my back, joints and muscles. I am also getting sound, restful sleep at night, so I don't have that tired feeling and my whole system feels toned up and improved."

CENTENARY

Rev. J. Spence And Mrs. Spence Honored at Social

Bid Farewell to Congregation on Eve of Departure for Cambrai

Centenary — Rev. J. Spence and Mrs. Spence were guests last Monday evening at a social gathering held in the church.

Mr. Spence, having received a call to Cambrai, will be leaving this pastoral charge in a short time.

Wishing to pay tribute to their ministerial friendship during the past two years, the members and friends assembled to honor Mr. and Mrs. Spence, who have endeared themselves to many friends.

Mrs. Geo. Shortt, acting as chairman, called on Mrs. Percy Sutherland, who led in community singing, accompanied at the piano, by Miss Eleanor Noble.

After a few remarks from Mr. Shortt, Mrs. Dorothy Holton sang a solo and Mrs. Fred Aikens favored with a reading. A duet was then given by Mary Anita Calvert and Evelyn Ray and a reading by Douglas Hacker brought the program to a close.

Mr. Shortt then requested that the guests of the evening take the chair of honor, Mrs. Elwin Hartz, on behalf of the congregation and friends of the community read an address and Mr. H. Empson, Mr. C. Hills, presented them with a beautiful chesterfield.

Mr. Spence, in a few words, expressed both his and Mrs. Spence's appreciation of the kindness paid them. The members of the Y. P. U. of the church presented Mrs. Spence with a lovely end table.

In replying, Mr. Spence thanked the young people, saying that his only regret was that he had not been able to attend more of their meetings, which had been a splendid success in their work.

The ladies served a lunch at the close and the enjoyable evening was brought to a close by singing "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 22. (CP)— Industrial issues worked here on Toronto Exchange today, and gold and western oil stocks were lower and the base metals held steady in the dull session. Volume was the lowest than in earlier sessions of the week at 56,000 shares for the first three hours.

Steel, senior oil and miscellaneous issues held to the up side. C.P.R. was active by heavy volume at a gain of 3-4 to 12 5-8. Imperial Oil advanced 1-2 and smaller fractions were added by Penny Farmer, Ford A., Simms Walker, Dominion Steel of Canada, Algoma Steel and Burlington Steel.

Dome, O'Brien, Pickle Crow, Giant Yellowknife, Negus, Preston and Sherritt were all sold again by the gold list. Conwest and Springer-Sturgeon continued on the upward trend.

WALL ST.

New York, June 23 — (AP) — Leading stocks retreated again today but wider market trends were downward, resistance increased and there were selected issues according gains.

Transfers tapere off toward the fourth hour.

While first reports from the big Pacific naval battle encouraged sentiment, investment caution remained unchanged further news.

Rising occasionally were Nickel Plate common and preferred, N.Y. Central, Graham-paige, Sears Roebuck, Texas Co. and American Smelting.

Canadian issues were mixed with Canadina Pacific and Dome showing fractional improvement.

HOGS

Toronto, June 22 — (CP) — Prices were unchanged at/seeday. Receipts reported early 50. Dressedweight: London grade A $17.35 delivered, Hamilton A $17.35, B1 $17.10 delivered, Brantford A $17.60 delivered, Stratford, delivered, A 17.35 to farmers, 17.50 to truckers, Hull A $17.60 delivered.

KING VISITS INVASION BEACHHEAD

Collect 41,200 Pennies and Send Currency, Appoint "AP" as Agent

New York, June 22 (AP) — The Associated Press is in receipt of the following communication from a self-tered airmail, marked as coming from the U.S.S. Cous Boy, a seaplane tender, and stamped "passed by naval censor."

U.S.S. Cous Boy (AVP-25)
C/o Fleet Post Office
San Francisco, Calif.
10 June 1944

The Associated Press
Editorial Department,
San Francisco, Calif.

Sirs:

We the crew of the U.S.S. Cous Bay, which consists mainly of survivors of other naval ships or veterans of sea duty, have collected 41,200 pennies and all who have seen action not once but many times and while on this cruise, have not had a liberty for more than 10 days, so we can do more than fight and even give our lives if necessary for our country. We are willing to help pay the wage increase from our meagre pay that striking defense strikers are demanding if they will just continue to produce the implements necessary so that we can end this war. We have seen war—and we hate it.

We have chosen you as our agent to go between the strikers in our campaign to 'buy off' the present strikers of the Wright Aero Corporation with the money we have collected and that amounts to a total of 41,200 pennies.

U.A.W. President's Comments

At Washington, the Associated Press sought comment from Pat Frankel and R. Thomas, national president of the United Automobile Workers, mentioned in the letter received in an unauthorized strike at the plant of the Wright Aeronautical Company at Lockland, Ohio. Comment was withheld by both officers of the union.

Thomas said at Detroit May 27 that "public opinion has become aroused against our union because of unauthorized strikes in war plants and mines."

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. today faces one of the greatest crisis in its history. On the outcome of this crisis will depend the possibilities of its future survival in the post-war period. The test is this: are the membership of the union and its leaders willing to abide by the democratic decisions of the majority of our constitution and conventions."

In a walkout of 15,000 started at the Wright plant June 5, after seven Negroes were transferred to a department which had been operated by white workers, 75 workers remained at their jobs throughout the strike, it was ended June 12. The company said approximately 240 workers were discharged when they refused to return to machines.

No Comment by Navy Secretary.

Navy Secretary Knox declined to when shown the contents of the letter during a press conference.

Thomas issued the following statement at Washington:

"These men in the armed service have been propagandized. Every international effort has been done everything it possible can and will continue to be done to end all strikes as the Wright strike. The people of cincinnati know that there was no wage issue involved. It was a jurisdictional dispute and they also know our international union demanded that these men go back to work and that members returned to work on our demands, and 6,000 non-union workers did not return to work and were disciplined by the management which obviously we have no control over people who do not belong to our union. All the people in the armed services can rest assured that the officers of the U.A.W. will do everything they possibly can to help them get back to work and bring the war to a successful conclusion."

Please implore them to end their strike and assure them that no pay their wage increase which they feel is more important than our lives.

Ask Them Not to Strike

Ask them not to strike in the future but, instead, to let the men in the air some know of their dissatisfaction and they will gladly chip in each month to save them

Germans Fail To Make Progress Against Patrisans

London, June 22. (CP)—Marshal Tito's Partisans have wiped out about 500 of the German Nedic's third-rate fierce fighting in Eastern Bosnia, a communique broadcast from Tito's headquarters in Yugoslavia declared today.

The communique said the Germans were bringing up reinforcements in an effort to avert disaster. They claimed the Nazis had not as yet made any progress against the Partisans in force.

Rome, June 22. (AP) — King Peter of Yugoslavia and his Prime Minister Ivan Subasic, conferred with the Allied High Command in Italy today concerning the military situation in Yugoslavia and later were expected to tour the Italian front as guests of Gen. Alexander.

King Peter, a communique disclosed, conferred with Subasic, where he was a visitor during the recent Partisan offensive against the Germans and Marshal Tito, head of the Yugoslav Army. Secretary Churchill's conference resulted in "agreement on many points in the Partisan leader and the exile government.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 22 —(CP)— Prices were steady on the few lots of cattle offered in cattle trade on the livestock exchange today. Weighted steers were $12-$13.20, butcher steers and heifers $11-$13.50, butcher cows $9-$10. Unsold from yesterday were 200 head of cattle, mostly stockers.

Veal calves sold steady at $8-$8.50. Lambs were steady for the 200 head offered at $15.

Sheep were offered.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 30, calves 30, hogs 200, lambs 10.

Need Salesmen to Sell Production Of Post-War Era R.B. Perrault, Montreal, Tells Kiwanis Club

Dealing with the post-war world, R. B. Perrault, of Montreal, gave to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday, one of the most interesting and instructive addresses, that the club has had in some time. He spoke on the subject, "A small business man looks ahead." This week is All-Kiwanis Week and Past President Bruce Lattimer, now chairman of Kiwanis Education, was in the chair, although the president, Jack McVeigh, was on hand for the opening business of the club. Dorland Houston presided at the piano and Bill Steer collected the fines. A report on the inter-city meeting held in Kingston on Monday night was given by the president. About twenty-five members took part in the trip and Kiwanians were present from Watertown, N.Y., Ottawa and Belleville. A large delegation was present from Brockville, a new club that Kingston club is sponsoring.

Bruce Lattimer in Chair

Bruce Lattimer, in giving the activities of the Kiwanis International stated there were at present 2,210 clubs in Canada and the United States with a membership of 130,000 of which nearly 12,000 are in the armed services. "Believing it to be a good idea in Kiwanis Week to give the activities of the local club with respect to the war effort I have asked Jim Barclay, chairman of the War Services Committee to briefly review these activities," said the speaker.

Mr. Barclay told of the assistance that had been given the Red Cross blood donor clinic, stating that the club had given the building at Kiwanis Centre for the use of the clinic, that the maintenance was maintained by the club. "We do appreciate the donation of the building to the club by Lt.-Col. P. H. Wills," said Mr. Barclay, but it must be remembered that the club has spent over $7,000 on the remodelling of the building. He also told of the collection of magazines for the armed services, which now amounts to 50,000 and of the tokens sent to the boys at Christmas. He also spoke of the Dimes for Victory over $850 being distributed in prizes since its inception.

Members in Service

The speaker was followed by Eddie Logan, who stated that the club was well represented in the armed services. Flt. Lt. Reg. Anderson, who was instrumental in the establishment of the blood donors clinic is now at Ottawa in charge of an important medical branch of the R.C.A.F. Squadron Leader James Forrester is located at Trenton, as an eye, ear and nose specialist and the speaker showed that both these men gave up lucrative practices to serve their country. Flt. Lt. Sid Howell in the legal branch of the R.C.A.F. at Ottawa, and Squadron Leader Ted Willing is stationed at London. Charlie Tripp, although not a member of the services is an inspector for the Department of Munitions and Supply and has given his two boys to the cause of freedom. "The late George Pepper, D.F.C. and bar, was an honorary member, and was testing planes at the time of his death, although he was a night fighter and not requested to carry on this work. "This is a fine record for any service club," said the speaker in conclusion.

The speaker of the day was introduced by Frank Follwell and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Cliff Baragar. Mr. Perrault told a number of humorous stories, all bearing on his subject, but in seriousness, he said:

"They tell us that the public is hungry for any old products, so in the post-war, we will be able to keep factories humming with old products. How hungry is the public? That is a matter of paramount interest to us. I will tell you how hungry the public is, not in my opinion, but in the opinion of people running surveys. You've heard of George Gallup? His organization goes around and asks people a lot of questions. They went out and talked to a lot of those people who had savings. Fifty per cent have no plan for letting loose one single dime. Of the fifty per cent remaining, only 27% said they would spend right away. The other 73% said: "We will wait and see." Any man in business who is counting on this backlog of savings to give him a post-war market, beyond a very limited time is kidding himself and riding for a fall.

"The Advertising and Sales Executive Club of Montreal had a survey made last month by Elliott-Haynes Ltd., a leader in that field in Canada. They asked young men in the Armed Forces, War Industries and the University, a very pertinent question: "What kind of work will you probably undertake after the war?" Less than 8% voted for sales as a career. Across the line, the January 15th. issue of 'Sales Management' reported a survey showing that selling ranked eighth in choice with only 5% choosing it as a career.

"Red" Motley, publisher of the American Magazine spoke in Montreal last February, and wanted to know who was going to buy all the products that would be made after the war. He said that "production for use" was a wonderful idea. But for what use? And by whom? Ask anybody, he said, and they can't answer you. Production doesn't guarantee a thing. People won't buy unless they want something. Who is going to create these wants? You people, and many others like you, can. Selling and advertising create work. You fellows in the insurance business ought to understand that. Nobody is breaking down your door to buy that God-given, priceless boon to humanity—insurance! What do we need? Specific plans, so specific that when peace comes none of us in the business of moving goods and services from producer to consumer are going to have to improvise. It will be too late for improvising. That was tried in France in 1940, and at Pearl Harbor, and it didn't work; there is no substitute for being prepared.

"Did you ever hear of a man called Elmer Wheeler from Sizzle Ranch in Texas. He wrote a book some years ago called "Word Magic" and he is considered an expert on the correct words to use when speaking to customers. He said recently: 'I have a little black book. In this book I am carefully listing all discourtesies, insults, impoliteness and bad service rendered me by business today under the excuse of "There's a War On!" — "When the war is over, I plan to take out my little black book to see whom to do business with. Where I was high-hatted, I plan to transfer my business elsewhere." His pet advice to salespeople is: "Take an hour to say no!"

"In spite of the implication of these exhibits, it has become recognized in Canada, that one of our most pressing post-war emergencies will have to do with marketing the products of our farms, mines and factories. However, one thing that does not yet seem to have become so widely recognized is that if it is going to be commercially possible to maintain the high levels of productive employment that is being planned it will be necessary for our factories and our merchants not only to rebuild their sales forces, but, in addition, to employ something like twenty-five percent more salesmen than before the war or train salesmen to be 25% better. This is obviously true if we do not want to face the unemployment we had before the war. If we are agreed on this last point, let us examine again my pet exhibits:

"What about the millions in war savings? Last January the people of Canada, owned 2,500 millions in bonds and certificates and today it is even greater. What a tremendous volume of prospective purchasing power! But will there be an orgy of spending after the war? There are many signs that point to a clear-cut "No." In the first place, these savings are in the hands of people who have learned to save. Most of those who are spending recklessly today will have few savings after the war and perhaps no job. What about the others? What they spend will depend on how much money is in those pay envelopes at the end of every week and if it is there, we will do well. If it isn't there, we will have a real man-size headache on our hands. Post-war markets will depend on post-war income—not on savings.

Improvements Gradual

"Do you want other reasons why wartime savings will be held close to the chest? One of them is that durable goods, (automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, etc.) will be of the type available when the war began and not the new type of products made possible by wartime advances in science and industrial processes. That's all we'll have to buy for some time, and most improvements will be gradual. Right at start the prices will be 30-40% over the pre-war figures. This estimate is not mine but a forecast of the Wall Street Journal, a few months ago.

"A great number of people are mindful of "Social Security." It is not unreasonable to assume that many will think of possible rainy days ahead and be cautious in the use of savings. The ending of the war will not bring immediate relief from high taxation and the need of subscribing to further government loans. The final Victory Loan of the last war took place in October, 1919, eleven months after the actual fighting stopped. This time we will need more money for demobilization and general reconstruction. Again these financial ideas are not mine.

Barron's Weekly of Cleveland, the Bankers' Journal, and, in Canada, P. M. Richards, the financial editor of Saturday Night have been preaching this sort of thinking for over a year.

Only 8% Wanted Sales Training

"Point No. 2 concerned the young men of today who should be salesmen after the war. The survey that was made in Montreal, showed that the young men at the University and the Armed Forces came from all over Canada. The war workers were more localized with a fair number from Eastern Ontario and the Maritimes. It was interesting to note that one war industry was conscious of the need of the survey by granting permission to interview the men at their work. Only 8% of the sample in this study mentioned sales as the kind of work in which they expect to make their anticipated incomes. Most of these were recruited from Service Men. Only a solitary student and four war workers voted for sales. However, there is a substantial increase in the number of young men checking sales as the type of work that would interest them if training were readily obtainable and practically all of them were recruited from among war workers. This report is not conclusive but there are other signs also pointing in the same direction.

David Osborne, Training Director of the Studebaker Corp., told us in Montreal last winter that most of their dealers would have a permanent loss of salesmen from 50/100%. They had moved on to production, purchasing and engineering and they were not coming back to sales. Those in the Armed Forces were favoring electrical engineering and radio after the war.

Here's another. The Servel Co. of Indiana made a survey of the people in their plants who had been retail salesmen. They asked all of them what they wanted to do after the war and 80% said they would not go back to retail selling.

Savings Have Glue on Them

"I've tried to show that some of the savings may have a little glue stuck on them and that it may be hard to pry it loose. And I'm afraid that we must accept the trend shown in surveys that many young people want "safe" jobs principally in large corporations and in government jobs. Well, what is going to happen to production and all these products we are going to make after the war? The Reconstruction Committee said some time ago that there would be available one million to one million five hundred thousand more jobs in Canada than there were before the war. How long will these jobs last if these goods are not sold? What's to be done about it? Well, I'll tell you.

"We've got to get rid of these ideas that everything will be just dandy after the war, that we won't need any selling because everybody will rush to your door and all you'll have to do will be to ask them to line up and wait their turn. We've got to get rid of the "can't be done" boys and the "now is not the time" boys and listen to men like Eric Johnson, the President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce who tells us that there is a big task ahead and small business men even as you and I, have got to roll up our sleeves and go to work on planning and training the finest sales and advertising organization that this continent has ever seen. Some of you may have read his book "America Unlimited"—what he says applies equally well to us in Canada. Here are his six potentials:

Six Potentials

(1) We will have the greatest plant capacity in our history.

(2) We will have the greatest number of skilled mechanics and technicians ever available to any nation.

(3) We will have greater sources of raw materials, natural and synthetic, than we ever had in the past.

(4) We will have a tremendous backlog of accumulated demands for all types of commodities.

(5) The people will have accumulated unprecedented large savings with which to satisfy their deferred demands.

(6) An economic vacuum will exist in most of the nations of the world and it is an immutable law of nature that a vacuum must be filled.

Whether these potentials become pillars of strength or sources of economic embarrassment depends on our clear vision, unblurred thinking and courage as a nation, at least, so says Mr. Eric Johnson. Well, what's the first step? We've got to have the best planned advertising program that we have ever had. We've got to use newspapers, radio and everything else to start people thinking about those products of ours because although we may think our own product is the best that is made, we will have to sell it when shortages are over and the lights come on again.

Need More Salesmen

"What else do we want? We need more salesmen and they have to be good. Where are we going to find them? Let's take a lesson from industry. They have found that they could reach out and make mechanics out of people from all walks of life, and they did it. We have to reach out for sales power and sales brains and sales initiative and intuition in our factories, in our offices and train them to sell, because we are going to need a lot more salesmen than engineers when this war is over. We will have to improve our selection too and for that we will need aptitude testing right from the start. One salesman alone sells the products that give employment to four men engaged in production and services. I'm getting near the end and I must say something about what the public has put up with ever since shortages and manpower problems have made most of us forget some of our manners and friendliness in our business dealing. Industry and merchants know that something must be done about it and many business heads will someday be running aimlessly around and asking someone else to do something about it, saying: "Our customers are not coming here any more, now that the shortages are over." This has brought a new development in business known as public relations. In its simplest form it means other folks relationships with whatever you are, or do, or say. It means getting along well with people you deal with, your community, it means a good neighbor policy in business. There may be danger ahead in this because some undesirables are announcing themselves as public relations counsels and equally dangerous are the actions of some companies who believe they can hire some expert to whitewash some defects in their business practice. These should be corrected in the heart and mind of the president of the firm. Good public relations must start with the head of the organization in business.

Already men are coming back from overseas and we will be asked what jobs are available for them. These men will and should have preferences over all others and may they find employment that is fair, lucrative and permanent. The quality of these jobs will depend on what we prepare and plan between now and their return. The time is all too short!"

50 ALLIED AIR OFFICERS MURDERED SAYS EDEN
R.A.F. POUNDS HUN REINFORCEMENT LINES

Slaying Followed Recapture After Escape Attempt

The Men Were Last Seen Leaving The Prison in Charge Of Gestapo Men

PUNISHMENT PROMISED

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 23 — (CP Cable) — A story of cold-blooded murder by the Gestapo of 50 Allied air officers, including six Canadians, who were prisoners of war in Germany was given the House of Commons today by Foreign Secretary Eden.

The foreign secretary called it "cold blooded butchery" and promised "exemplary justice" eventually for the murderers.

The slaying followed recapture of the airmen after an escape attempt at Stalag Luft III last month.

The murdered men, according to information given the British government by airmen repatriated from the camp since the escape attempt, were last seen leaving the grim Gorlitz prison, handcuffed and in charge of Tommy-gun-carrying Gestapo men.

"The explanation now put forward by the German government is in fact a confession of an odious crime against the laws and conventions of war," Mr. Eden said.

The recaptured men were placed five or six to a cell in Gorlitz, he said, and were told by the Gestapo: "We have got you here. Nobody knows you are here. To all intents and purposes you are civilians, wearing civilian clothes and we can do what we like with you. You can disappear."

After interrogation and after some men had been taken back to the cells, German officials picked out a number.

"Those picked out," Mr. Eden said, "were seen from the prison being driven away handcuffed and in charge of Gestapo officials who were armed with Tommy-guns while the remainder were handed over to the Luftwaffe and brought back to camp.

"Those shot included all officers of European Allied nationality who were recaptured. These were taken away on different days in small parties, with one larger party of about 20."

They had been told that those in civilian clothes would be without protection of the prisoners of war convention.

It previously had been reported that some of the men were shot and killed while making a second escape attempt after recapture but Mr. Eden said it was known now that, owing to physical exhaustion and ill treatment at Gorlitz, the men were incapable of any such attempt.

It was known also, he said, that all the officers knew the futility of attempting to resist if recaptured and at no time have British prisoners of war been ordered to take part in any subversive action in the event of their escape, as the German government alleged.

Mr. Eden reassured the House that the government has no reports of mass killings except the one involving British and Allied officers.

A German note claimed that serious mass escapes in March endangered public security and forced adoption of stern counter measures.

Shot Resisting Capture, Claim

The Germans in a communication sent to the British government claimed the officers were shot while resisting capture after their escape from a war prison camp near Dresden, March 25, or while attempting to make another getaway following their capture, Mr. Eden said.

This was the same explanation the Nazis previously offered Switzerland, the protecting power.

Flatly rejecting this answer to the mass killings, the foreign secretary said: "The explanation now put forward by the German government is in fact the confession of an odious crime against the laws and conventions of war."

Declaring the British government would never cease its efforts to collect evidence "to identify all those responsible," Mr. Eden said the government was resolved "that those foul criminals shall be tracked down to the last man wherever they may be and when the war is over they will be brought to exemplary justice."

Female Factory Workers Must Wear Headgear

Toronto, June 23 — (CP) — Labor Minister Daley Ontario said today his department plans strict enforcement of a regulation approved at the last session of the Ontario legislature requiring all female factory workers to wear head covering while at work. The regulation became effective June 3.

There have been several accidents in factories because women have not had their hair covered and some have been "disfigured for life," said the minister, adding that the regulation requires that the hair be thoroughly covered with a bandana or some similar covering. Nets may not be used. Penalties are provided for both employer and employee where the regulation is not observed.

EXECUTED AS SPY

London, June 23. (CP) —Execution of a 28-year-old former Belgian army officer convicted of being a spy in the pay of the German Secret service was announced by the Home Office today. The office identified him as Pierre Charles Neukermans, and said he was found guilty under the Treachery Act last month.

Neukermans was the 15th spy executed in Britain during this war and the second this year.

Heavy Air Attacks, Some 'At Pistol-Range' Hammer At Cherbourg Forts

UNDERGROUND ACTIVE

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 —(AP) —American forces have captured one of the three defence peaks dominating Cherbourg. Allied headquarters announced today.

The Americans are now storming the remaining two fortified peaks.

Supreme Headquarters said Cherbourg's defences were "fairly formidable but a prolonged siege is unlikely."

American operations against the great port of Cherbourg "are proceeding satisfactorily," today's Communique No. 35 said, while in the eastern sector of the invasion front, where British and Canadian troops are engaged, enemy formations have been "pinned down."

Another headquarters announcement said one Allied column, driving on it from the east, has advanced two miles from St. Pierre Eglise to Carneville, and now is within sight of the sea.

TAKE 2 OE ON b

Today's bulletin told of heavy air attacks on the Nazi defences around the city, some "at pistol-range," which hammered at forts, oil stores, pill-boxes, ammunition dumps and troop concentrations.

On the Canadian sector, a four-day stretch of bad weather abated yesterday, Ross Munro, chief of war correspondents in the field, said last night, and the Canadians resumed patrol activities.

Lt.-Gen. Bradley's all-out offensive, now in its second day, struck fierce German resistance at every point. A particularly vicious battle raged for control of the big airfield at Maupertus, five miles east of Cherbourg.

Brig. Lovat and His Tough Commandos Fought Epic Battle to Keep Pledge

By LEONARD MOSLEY
(Released by the British Information Service and Distributed by The Canadian Press)

Somewhere in Normandy, June 23 —This is one of the stories I have been aching to tell ever since I landed with the British 6th. Airborne Division by parachute in Normandy—the story of a small group of daredevil men to whom most of the airborne troops owe their lives and safety today.

It is the story of tall, handsome Brigadier Lord Lovat and the group of tough Commandos under his command and how they fought, were wounded and killed in order to keep his pledge to the airborne forces, "we won't let your paratroops down."

Lord Lovat gave that pledge to the general commanding the 6th. Airborne Division at a conference which the two men held somewhere in Southern England just before the invasion began. He had just heard what the airborne troops were expected to do—how they were to descend by glider and parachute upon vital bridges spanning the River Orne and the Caen Canal and were to hold on until help arrived.

"Yours will be the first help we shall get," the general said. "You'll land on the beach ten miles from us. I want you to fight your way across country, reach the bridge we are holding and pass through to aid us in fighting the Nazis in the country beyond, and I want you to be there on time. You land on the beaches sometime after 8 a.m. on D-Day. I want you to be at the bridges by 12.15, 4¼ hours later. Do you think you can do it?"

Lord Lovat said "We may be a bit pressed now and then, sir, but at 12.15 we shall be there."

It was a promise that could not have been made good had not he and his men been of such calibre. For the Nazi opposition in the bridge sector was fiercer than we might have expected. Though the Germans defending the bridge were taken by surprise at first, their reaction was swift. All through D-Day morning from 1 a.m., when our paratroops and gliders landed, the Nazis counter-attacked and re-attacked our defenders on the bridges, and guessing that we were expecting help from the sea and they massed men, tanks and guns between our airborne troops and the roads to the beaches. As attack succeeded attack the paratroopers looked at their watches gloomily and began to feel that hely would not get through.

At 12:14 a paratroop officer said, "They'll never make it now."

Even as he spoke amid the noise of exploding shell and mortar bombs and the rattle of machine-gun fire there was the wailing of pipes in the distance and grins cracked the sweating, painted faces of the weary paratroopers. From mouth to mouth the message passed, "the commandos are here."

That skirl of bagpipes was the recognition signal. If the bridge were cleared we were to send back the "Reveille" signal by trumpet. But the road wasn't clear and instead we sounded "Defaulters" to give Lovat the hint that he must find another way round. He found it. It was just 17½ minutes past 12 when a tall slim man in a green beret, with a rifle slung over his shoulder scrambled up the bank of the Caen canal.

Behind him came the sweating piper, 21-year-old William Millin from Sandy Hills near Glasgow, and in the rear a line of green-bereted commandos stretching as far as I could see.

The British brigadier was waiting. He smilingly shook Lord Lovat's hand and said: "We really are most pleased to see you."

"Thank you," said the commandos' leader. Then, glancing at his watch, "sorry, we were 2½ minutes late."

He and his men had fought their way through some of the fiercest opposition the British troops had encountered in the landing. They had come the whole 10 miles afoot.

Robot Bomb Causes Little Effective Damage Morrison Tells House

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 23—(AP)—German flying bombs have caused little damage of national importance and public utilities have been affected only slightly, Home Secretary Herbert S. Morrison told the House of Commons today.

The situation they have created has no resemblance to the lurid and over-dramatized picture German propagandists have been painting for the German home front, Mr. Morrison said, adding that if the enemy intention was to upset British morale the robots had been a signal failure.

"There have been periods when some 10 or more flying bombs were in the air at the same time," the Home Secretary said.

A few hours before he spoke the Germans sent incendiary and explosive flying bombs against southern England in one of the heaviest attacks since the new weapon was put in action. Two fires were started but they were quickly extinguished. R. A. F. night fighters, guided by powerful searchlights, knocked down a number before they could do any damage.

"Last February there were raids on Southern England on five nights between Feb. 18 and Feb. 25, lasting an hour or two each night," he said. "I have compared the number of persons killed in Southern England on five nights of attack by the flying bombs and the number is less than the Febraury figure."

He described the results achieved by the British fighters and anti-aircraft batteries in shooting down the flying bombs as "substantial."

He told of German radio claims that the British government had abandoned London and provoked laughter with the dry comment: "Well here we are assembled in parliament in London."

20,000 JAPANESE ABANDONED ON SAIPAN ISLAND

Troops Hit High and Low by U. S. Invasion Army

FOE OUTNUMBERED

Pearl Harbor, June 23 (AP) — Twenty thousand Japanese, apparently abandoned to their death by a routed Imperial fleet, were hit high and low today on Saipan by an Allied invasion army which now outnumbers the foe.

Sensing almost certain victory in the distant Marianas as the aftermath of a one-sided sea triumph, the reinforced invaders scaled the heights and probed the flatlands of that island gateway to Japan, China and the Philippines.

The scales were tipped heavily in favor of the Allies Monday by Task Force 58, a newly-disclosed fast and mighty armada with perhaps 20 of the nearly 100 U.S. carriers in action against Japan.

Saipan's potential naval support was sent scurrying between Luzon and Formosa into the far China Sea by carrier planes of this specialized group which sank one Japanese carrier, heavily hit three others and damaged a battleship and cruiser. In all, four enemy ships definitely sunk and ten others hard hit.

Stepped-up Drive

Task Force 58, which navy officials in Washington said has been assigned "the entire Pacific Ocean to the gates of Japan as its stamping ground," thus paved the way for a stepped-up drive on Saipan itself. Last night, Admiral Nimitz reported that the invasion of that island, 1,500 miles from Tokyo, but 3,800 miles from Pearl Harbor, was going well.

Japanese imperial headquarters acknowledged today the loss of a Japanese aircraft carrier, two oil tankers and 50 planes in an engagement with an American naval task force west of the Marianas, and admitted that the Japanese had been "unable to inflict a decisive blow upon the enemy."

In a broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, Tokyo said part of the Japanese combined fleet had participated in action which began June 19 Japanese time and continued until the following day.

The Tokyo communique asserted the Japanese had sunk or damaged five Allied aircraft carriers and one or more battleships, and asserted that 100 Allied planes had been destroyed.

2 AIRMEN INJURED; PRACTICE BOMB EXPLODES

Jarvis, Ont., June 23 — (CP) — Two airmen — C. K. A. White of Toronto, and LAC. Wilfred Jacklin of Oshawa — were seriously injured yesterday when a bomb they were loading exploded at the R. C. A. F. Bombing and Gunnery School here. The bomb was to have been used on a practice mission.

ALLIES ADVANCE ON BOTH SECTORS OF ITALIAN FRONT

AIR FORCE ACTIVE

By LYNN HEINZERLING
(A. P. War Correspondent)

Rome, June 23 (AP) — Allied forces in Italy have made progress along both coastal sectors, but the Germans apparently are planning a determined stand along strong positions between Lake Trasimeno and Lake Chiusi and north of Perugia in the central sector, Allied headquarters indicated today.

The British 8th. Army is encountering "strong resistance" north of Perugia, and southwest of Lake Trasimeno, where a number of German counter-attacks have been repulsed, the communique said.

An Algiers radio news roundup said Allied forces on the Adriatic were 25 miles from the important seaport of Ancona. The communique said troops in that sector have continued their "rapid advance and are now approaching the Chienti River." The Chienti is about 25 miles south of Ancona.

On the west coast the Allied 5th. Army, despite strong resistance, has pressed forward astride Highway 1, leading through Livorno to Pisa, and is approaching Folonica, some 55 miles south of Pisa, believed to be an anchor for the next major German resistance line.

Increased Resistance

Associated Press war correspondent Sid Feder, in a delayed dispatch dated yesterday from Giuncarico, on Highway 1, 11 miles north west of Grosseto, told of increased resistance by the Germans.

Folonica is in the centre of the gulf of the same name, on the upper tip of which is Piombino.

Flying 2,300 sorties, the Mediterranean Allied air force attacked targets in Northern Italy and the battle area, and also in Albania and Yugoslavia. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed, compared with ten Allied planes missing.

Heavy bombers hit rail yards at Parma, Modena, Bologna, Castel-Maggiore, Fornovo and Ferrera, rail bridges at Rimini and Treviso, industrial targets in the Turin area and an airdrome at Forli.

Tactical aircraft, ranging over a wide territory north of the battle area, attacked rail lines and bridges, motor transport, roads and other targets. A night attack on the rail yards at Vado Ligure in Northern Italy capped the operations.

'DUMBFOUNDED' BY GOOD NEWS

Toronto, June 23 — (CP) — Mrs. William McBride said last night she "lived a lifetime" from last Friday when she was officially informed that her husband, Rfmn. William McBride of the Queen's Own Rifles, had been killed on D-Day, until Wednesday when official word arrived that he had only been wounded. "I was dumbfounded," she said of welcome news that her husband was still alive.

GERMAN'S REPORT RUSSIAN SUMMER DRIVE STARTED

Between Mogilev And Vitebsk Small Local Advances Made Says Communique

NO CONFIRMATION

By LEWIS HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 23 —(AP)— Just over three years from the day they struck into Russia, the Germans reported today the opening of the Red Army's long-awaited summer drive, an offensive which may be combined with the American-British invasion from the west for the crushing of Hitlerdom.

Ernst Von Hammer, chief military correspondent for the International Information Bureau, German Propaganda Agency, said in a Berlin broadcast that the Russians had made "small local advances" between Mogilev and Vitebsk on the White Russian front—the most direct route from Moscow to Berlin. The announcement of the new Russian drive also was mad. by DNB, the official German News Agency, and Transocean, another German News Agency.

While making the usual claim that the Russian gains were sealed off promptly, Von Hammer said the Red Army was using artillery and tanks on a grand scale.

There was no confirmation from Russian sources concerning the reported offensive and London military men adopted a wait and see attitude. Three days after the Allied landings in Normandy the Germans announced the opening of a new Soviet drive which did not materialize.

Aimed at Berlin.

However, in the past German reports of Russian drives almost always have preceded those from Moscow, which is inclined to wait for substantial results before putting out communiques.

An offensive developing along the Mogilev-Vitebsk line could be aimed almost straight west at Berlin, southwest of Warsaw about 420 miles away or northwest to lop off the Baltic states by cutting 250 miles to Riga.

It is certain the Russians are employing only a small percentage of their rested and re-equipped forces against Finland, and that the Red Army is in a position to strike anywhere it chooses along the front from the Black Sea to the Baltic.

Transocean said a "big attack with very strong forces" was made by the Russians on the third anniversary of the war along a front of about 95 miles from just south of Mogilev to just north of Vitebsk, and that fierce fighting continues there.

There was a possibility that the operations reported by the Germans merely were masking attacks for a main Russians blow which would fall elsewhere later. It seemed likely the Russians were satisfied that the Finnish clean up was in hand and were moving into the main battle in co-ordination with the Allies.

Caps Biggest Day Of Air Operations Since the Invasion

Reims and Laon Rail Yards Heavily Hit Also Lines Closer To Paris

ROCKET COAST BOMBED

By GLADWIN HILL
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 23 —(AP) —R.A.F. heavy bombers attacked the Nazi reinforcement-crammed railway yards at Reims and Laon Thursday night, capping one of the Allies' biggest days of aerial operations since the Normandy invasion was launched.

Seven bombers were missing from the assault on these key rail points, both about 80 miles northeast of Paris. The yards are in the network of lines leading toward the battle-front from Germany and the Lowlands, and both now are jammed with Nazi reinforcements struggling to get through.

British light bombers hit rail targets at Lisieux, Dreux and Evreux last night while fighters and intruders destroyed seven German planes over northern France.

6,000 Planes Out Thursday.

The night blows came after at least 6,000 Allied planes dumped probably more than 8,000 tons of bombs on targets from Cherbourg to Paris from dawn to dusk yesterday. More than 6,000 sorties were made, compared with the D-Day record of approximately 10,000 sorties.

The aerial assault yesterday supported at pistol range the advance of ground troops at Cherbourg. Co-ordinated blows were struck at German headquarters, first-hidden fuel dumps, railroad and highway traffic as far inland as Paris, and at the Germans' rocket-hurling bases in the Pas de Calais.

In the Cherbourg operations low-swooping fighter-bombers first drove the Germans under cover, and then medium bombers came in to hammer the enemy.

The big British aircraft took up the assault as darkness brought the Germans the only period around the clock that they now dare move forces in any considerable amount. British Mosquitos also made an attack on Hamburg Thursday night, the Air Ministry announced.

Heavy Attack on England

Southern England today received one of its heaviest flying-bomb assaults since the Germans launched the robot attacks a week ago. New incendiary types of robots, along with the now-familiar high-explosive winged bombs, were used by the Nazis.

During yesterday's titanic Allied daylight operations, ground troops in Normandy received the best air support since the invasion began, and powerful blows were scored against robot launching-platforms in the Pas de Calais area.

Canadian Has More Professional Approach to Fighting Than American

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the American forces in France, June 23 — (CP Cable) — There doesn't seem to be much difference between the individual American doughboy and the Canadian soldier although the average Canadian, with longer training, has a more professional approach to his fighting.

The Americans are just as cheerful as the Canadians and just as enthusiastic. In may cases the only difference between the two fighting men who are neighbors in North America is the uniform.

The doughboy is the more talkative, particularly about home. He also is inclined to discuss the strength of all aspects of the American offensive which has been powerful indeed. The Canadian gives more attention to his individual role, looking upon such features of the invasion as the overwhelming air strength as something to be grateful for but which still leaves him the job of rooting the German out of a house or strongpoint by his own initiative.

The Canadian is more skeptical and takes less for granted. The Canadian, like the British Tommy, does more to be comfortable even in the front line.

On the matter of food, both soldiers agree. Because of the monotony of his individual rations the Canadian, who has tried American rations, thinks they're wonderful. The American for a change likes British army food which the Canadian eats.

The American can't forget home. The Canadian thinks as much about it but doesn't say as much. The doughboy is confident the war won't last long now; the Canadian hopes it won't last long.

FOUR LOCAL OFFICERS IN FORT GARRY HORSE

Associated with Lieut. John G. Fullon of the Fort Garry Horse, famous Canadian cavalry regiment and now a reconnaissance unit fighting in Normandy, are several Belleville officers. Included are Captain Owen Atkins, Lieutenant Harvey Theobald, Captain Bill Burgoyne and Lieut. Jeff Dodds.

BOY SCOUTS OFFER SERVICES TO SHUT-INS

Ever seeking to add variety to their service to the community and to evolve new ideas for the fulfillment of their scout pledge to "do a good deed every day", members of the 1st Belleville scout brigade under the leadership of Scoutmaster Lloyd Gladwell, are offering their services to assist in providing suitable reading material from the City Public Library.

Realizing that many members of the local library who happen to be shut-ins or are for some reason or other invalided, arrangements have been made between library officials and the local scout brigade for the carrying of books from the library to the homes and return. Library members who are ill and have no other means of obtaining books are invited to communicate by phone with library officials indicating their choice of books. Scouts will then call at the library and carry books to the various homes, later returning them to the library for exchange.

This service will be given free of charge by members of the scout brigade and is only one of many such services which go to make up a good member's day. . .

CANADA EXTENDS MUTUAL AID TO HER ALLIES

Under the Mutual Aid Plan, Canada has expended close to $1 billion in goods and services for the United Nations. The extent of this help is portrayed above.

While to date, the assistance to the Fighting French has not been extensive—mainly naval ordnance—a larger program has been initiated to meet their needs.

Member of 'Hasty Pees' Says Officers of Regiment Were Group of Real Soldiers

The platoon of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment infantry wound slowly through a rocky hill in Sicily. Tommy Guns carried at the alert. Keen Canadian eyes swept the countryside for signs of a lurking enemy. Ahead lay Ortona.

Behind lay the main body of the regiment ready to support tanks which would take part in a concerted drive for the Italian port.

Suddenly the chatter of machine guns shattered the morning air. The Canadians ducked for cover but before several were killed and wounded. Among them lay Private Murray Ferguson, of Bay Street, Trenton. Blood streaming from a wound which an enemy bullet had ripped in his head, he staggered to his feet and went to the assistance of his more seriously wounded comrades.

The enemy artillery suddenly opened up, and heavy shells dropped in and around the little band of Canadians. Under heavy shelling fire the wounded were brought out and sent to the regimental aid post.

Among them was Lord Tweedsmuir, better known as Major Buck Ferguson in the ranks of the regiment "Major Buck" With part of his left leg shot away, Major Buchan calmly refused medical aid "until all of my men have been treated."

"A Regular Guy."

"He is a real soldier and a regular guy," Pte. Ferguson, who is back in Canada for treatment and rest, stated yesterday. "The fact that he is a blueblood never bothered him at all. He was just one of the boys. He also had command of the regiment for some time previous to his being wounded."

Ferguson went over with the original "Hasty Pees" from Picton under Lieut.-Col. Sherman Young. Gossiping about the regiment, he stated that Reg. Abrams is now a lieut.-col. and Captain Herford has been wears a major's crown. He took part in the flying trip to England and was present when the famous regimental mascot, "Little Jerk", was given a nine months' charges against this young man." Archer's record of previous convictions dated back to 1935 and were six in all, four less than Woods'.

James Miller was given two years after admitting robbing McCurdy's jewelry store of $500, worth of watches and diamond rings back in 1942 and also two years consecutively for the robbery of Grocer Roberts. On six other charges Miller was given two years each to run concurrently with his four-year term. Constable Soublière told the court that the robbery of the National Grocery lost was $300, Archer taking the remainder of the cash and losing cheques amounting to over $600 into the Bloody River. Mr. Donnan introduced Miller's previous record, which showed he had been convicted five times before. His total aggregate of the loot was estimated at $2,775. Miller admitted to the smash-and-grab robbery at the Elite Jewelry store of last May.

Two other persons involved in this multiple series of robberies have yet to face trial.

Wood, Archer and Miller Given Prison Sentences

Penitentiary sentences scaling from four to eight years were given three local young men by Magistrate J. L. Threlfall in city police court today after the trio had pleaded guilty to a collective total of 31 charges of breaking and entering and theft. Archer, who was given Raymond Wood, 22, who was given eight years; Stanley Archer, 25, who was sentenced to six years, and James Miller, 24, who was given four years to the Portsmouth Penitentiary. The trio had previously elected summary trials and after pleading guilty appeared for sentence today.

Wood was given two years for carrying a revolver, two for the breaking of the Trudeau's garage, two years for robbing Patterson Motors, another two years, two years for robbing Hopkins garage and two years for theft, to run consecutively. On ten other charges Wood was given 15 months and after pleading guilty appeared for sentence today.

Last Japs Are Cleared From Imphal-Kohima Road in Manipur

Kandy, Ceylon, June 23 —(CP)— The last Japanese troops have been cleared from the Imphal-Kohima road in Manipur state, and British troops driving from both ends of the important highway have effected a juncture, it was announced officially today.

Kohima is about 65 miles north of Imphal, and re-establishment of direct overland communications between the two bases was regarded as an important success in the Allied counter-offensive to drive the Japanese from northeast India.

The Japanese had controlled the Imphal-Kohima road since March 30, and Allied troops on the Imphal plain had been supplied entirely by air.

The rapid advance of the Allied forces disorganized the fleeing Japanese, who failed to destroy the Kanglatongbi bridge, the largest structure on the road, some 25 miles south of Kohima.

The War Today—
Observers Watch Russian Front In Expectation of Offensive

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
Substituting for DeWitt Mackenzie
Associated Press War Analyst

Germany's announcement of the beginning of a big Russian summer offensive on which has been expected to tie in with the western front to win the war in Europe may be premature, but both the time and place fit closely into previous expectations.

It is quite usual for Berlin to announce important Russian military moves ahead of Moscow. The Germans were wrong recently about the importance of local Russian attacks on the Rumanian front, but in general they have been fairly accurate, at least up to the point where accuracy might interfere with propaganda.

Ever since the Russians recaptured Smolensk observers have been watching for a blow-off on the north-central front. It is there that the Germans occupy most Soviet territory, and it is there, from Vitebsk Leki to Gomel, that it is easiest for Russia to concentrate great forces and supplies. It is the area through which the Germans made their principal stab at Moscow in 1941. The Vitebsk-Mogilev sector which Berlin reports ablaze is believed by the main Moscow front headquarters now, ultimately, to Warsaw — and Berlin.

Russia's "One-Two" System

A drive here, in addition to having the best supply routes from the rear, also would serve as a line-straightening effort.

Mogilev is about 400 miles from Warsaw, while the farthest advanced Russian sector around Kovel is 200 miles nearer.

The Russians are addicted to the "old one-two" system, getting one drive well-started, as they have in the Crimea, and then turning loose another. If the north-central drive has started it will be followed by others. Then, wherever the break-through is, everything will be thrown in for the knockout.

Whitehall Notebook

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 23 — (CP)—Bitter words were used in criticism of Prime Minister Churchill's kind words to France during the foreign affairs debate and none were more bitter than those of the Economist, highly-regarded weekly with a reputation for weighing its words carefully.

The Prime Minister's Spanish references caused such an outcry that he made a special press conference to explain Mr. Churchill's position.

As it turned out, the press conference might better not have been held. The Economist's comment spurred the original reaction and A. J. Cummings' acid remarks generally reflected the feeling over Bracken's smearing of the "consistency" of the Prime Minister's attitude toward Spain. To do this, Bracken quoted a speech Mr. Churchill made in 1941.

The Economist said: ". . . Can anyone maintain that this is the time to praise and double praise a regime as hostile to European government? . . ." Was it really right to devote so many words to Spain and none at all to the sacrifice and devotion of the resisting peoples?

"If Mr. Churchill has addressed to France and the French Committee one tithe of the effusions he devoted to Spain every Frenchman would have faced the coming of British troops with warmer hopes and readier friendship. Of all the peoples in Europe at this decisive hour the Spaniards are probably the least important."

The country, however, was strongly in Mr. Churchill's favor as Prime Minister. The latest gallup sampling of public opinion showed 87 per cent of the people polled supporting him, not necessarily his Spanish policy but his premiership. He had regained all the ground lost in the early months of 1944.

CAPS BIGGEST

With reports on some missions still unannounced, it was disclosed that 21 Allied planes, including 11 heavy bombers and two mediums, were lost and six German planes were shot down.

These were the highlights of yesterday's operations:

1. More than 1,000 U. S. medium and fight bombers and fighter-bombers pounded the last wall of Nazi fortifications separating American ground troops from the Cherbourg waterfront. Attacking planes swept over the German lines every five minutes for two hours, and some were only 500 yards away from frontline troops. So closely were these operations co-ordinated that only one plane in the air over the target area before operating radio orders from advanced posts on exact objectives.

Eight Bombers Used

2. A force of 250 U. S. heavy bombers and hundreds of tac British and Canadian fighters raided the Pas de Calais rocket-bomb emplacements. British heavy bombers, normally used in night operations, flew out in mid-afternoon for the first time since 1942.

3. Some 750 U. S. heavy bombers escorted by 500 fighters made an evening attack. While some of these planes were attacking Calais' 3rd/3 punch at rocket bomb emplacements, others struck at airfields, bridges, transformer stations, railway workshops, oilstores and rail yards in a wide area. Railway yards at Lille, France, and Gent, Belgium also were hit.

4. U. S. 9th Air Force medium bombers struck at railroad centres miles west of Cape de la Hague, near the tip of the Cherbourg Peninsula, and also hit German field headquarters, fuel dumps and railroads behind the Normandy front.

PREMIER GODBOUT VISITS OTTAWA

Ottawa, June 23—(CP)—Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec yesterday was a visitor in Ottawa and conferred with his provincial colleagues members, including Justice Minister Lapointe.

There was no statement as to the reason for the Premier's visit but it was understood that it was probable he conferred with federal Liberal leaders on plans for the forthcoming Quebec provincial election.

The Godbout administration, elected in 1939, must go to the people in the fall unless the legislature re-assembles and passes a measure extending its life.

They were identified as: Don Ellis, 11, of London, Ont.; Russell Hannent, 38, of Ilderton, Ont., and Mrs. Ida Lavine of Calgary, who was stationed at nearby St. Thomas.

FARMER LOSES EIGHT HEAD OF CATTLE IN STORM

MARMORA, June 19 — On Saturday morning, George Davidson, well known farmer of Marmora Township, made the discovery that he had lost eight head of cattle in the electric storm the previous evening. It was presumed that lightning struck them about 5 p.m. The cattle were well-bred Holstens—five yearlings and three cows. Mr. Davidson said he would not have accepted one hundred dollars for one of the cows. It is understood that there was some insurance on the stock.

MR. FARMER — would you be properly protected if this loss happened to you? We sell higher limits on stock. Our office leads in providing broadest cover at lowest rates on livestock. The lightning season is here—phone us COLLECT without delay for immediate protection.

Uniformity is Most Important Objective in Valuating Property For Assessment Says City Comptroller

Mr. Harold Bateman Addresses Assoc. of Ont. Assessing Officers at Toronto

Uniformity in assessment is the most important objective in valuation of property for assessment purposes, Mr. Harold Bateman, City Comptroller told the Association of Ontario Assessing Officers at their third annual meeting in Toronto on Thursday.

The fundamental requirement of an assessment roll is that it distributes equitably the burden of paying the multitudinous services now required from a municipality, and uniformity can best be secured by the application of established rules and principles concerning values, Mr. Bateman said.

In a concise address, the speaker emphasized the need of standard practices; factors of land value, and brought out the importance of differences in the valuation of buildings and improvements from that of land.

Urban land values, he said, should reflect the expression of comparative usefulness and importance of different "locations" to the life of the community. Location, therefore is an important factor in land values.

Buildings should be grouped into classes, and each class governed by setting a unit for a standard building, with additions, deductions, or additions, from the standard ones allowed for accordingly.

Mr. Bateman delivered the address in response to a request from ranking officials of the Association. It was his maiden speech to the assessing officials and was well received by them.

The text of his address follows:

"Assessment is the basis of the municipal revenue structure. It is as important to the municipality as the rate structure of a railroad or the price structure of a mercantile business. It establishes justice as between man and man, business and business etc. If a property is assessed too lightly others pay part of its taxes, if too highly it helps pay the taxes of others. The fundamental requirements of an assessment roll is that it distributes equitably the burden of paying the multitudinous services now required from a municipality. Uniformity then is the most important objective in the valuation of property for assessment purposes.

Standardized Practices

Uniformity in assessment can best be secured by the application of established rules and principles concerning value. The once almost universally used "eye-ball" method of valuation for assessment purposes, which, it is admitted, served the purpose in days when land was relatively low and real property largely rural in aspect — is not sufficient for present day needs. One of the fundamental requirements for obtaining uniformity in valuation is the use of a unit of measure by which to compare the relative importance of Urban parcels of land. Units such as the ton and pound have long been used in valuating quantities of such materials as coal, and the gallon unit is used in gasoline, and many other substances. Yet until comparatively recently no adequate unit of measure which could be adjusted according to depth, size, shape, location etc., for use in the valuation of Urban land had been satisfactorily worked out.

Factors of Land Value

In determining units and rules for use in valuating land certain important factors must be considered. There is a basic difference between the so called reproducible goods and land. Most improvements on land can be reproduced. Their supply can be increased by the energy of man. Land, therefore, in contrast to buildings has no supply value based on the cost of production, but derives its value from the importance which various members of the community attach to the possession of it. Urban land values therefore, should reflect the expression of these comparative usefulness and relative importance of different "locations" to the life of the Community. "Location" therefore, is thus an important factor, in land values.

Another important factor contributing to the values of Urban land is "access". In connection with the use of a parcel of land for general commercial business and also for residential uses, it is readily recognized that the part, frontage on, or nearest the street is generally more valuable than the part at some distance from the street, in residential properties the so called back lots are not valued as the front portion which usually provides the main access to the street and upon which the house is usually located. Experience has shown that a depth of 100 feet would not usually be considered twice as valuable as an identical parcel of equal frontage 100 feet deep.

Corner Influence

Another factor which indeed may be also included under the broad heading of "access" is that commonly called "corner influence". Commercially located on important street intersections have advantages over others in respect of location having frontage on one street only. Buildings erected on corner properties usually have the advantage of greater window display and light, coming from two streets, better light and air, and access to two streams of traffic, all important advantages.

To obtain uniformity in valuation of land for assessment purposes, it is therefore necessary to use a unit of measure which can be adjusted readily and systematically in accordance with the factors which may influence the value of any particular parcel of land. The unit used in valuing residential and business land is that now generally accepted in Canada and known as namely: "The Unit Front," — land with one foot frontage on Street by 100 feet in depth, but when lots have a depth less or greater their value per foot is determined by applying the depth rule.

Buildings and Improvements differ from land in as much as they are man made products, and are capable of reproduction. Their value therefore, in general must bear some relation to the cost of production. In the process of valuation of buildings the reproduction figure is for that reason, a logical starting point.

In commercial appraisals of buildings where time and expense are not the all important factors that they are in valuation for municipal assessment purposes, it is usual to make an elaborate detail of material quantities and unit prices for each item and adding thereto, labour costs, cost of financing, contractors profit, architect fees, and so forth, to obtain the total cost of reproduction of the building or buildings in question. Even when this process is followed it is not unusual to find commercial appraisers on contract vary as much as 25 per cent in the estimated cost of the building.

In a wholesale process such as that required of a municipal assessor in the limited time available for his purposes it would of course be physically impossible to value buildings in such a fashion. Even if it were not, the expense of such a process would be out of all proportion to the value obtained.

Fortunately such a detailed method of valuation is not necessary in order to obtain uniformity which, as has been stated, is the main objective to be striven for in valuation for assessment purposes.

Group Buildings Into Classes.

It has been found by extensive study that for assessment purposes buildings may be grouped into classes, depending upon the equipment of the building, the class of material and workmanship, both exterior and interior, employed in the construction, and various other factors, and by setting a unit for a standard building in a class, the relative cost of reproduction type in that class. Therefore, the main characteristics of each building must be known and when the building being valued varies in any material degree from the standard building for its class, additions or deductions from the reproduction figure, calculated as described above, must be made accordingly.

Also where the square foot unit is used, variations within the class and must be made according to whether the building is a storey in height, storey and a half, two storeys, etc.

It will be seen from this that before this system of valuation can be applied all the important facts in connection with each building must be determined. The advantages of this practice are obvious since it makes possible a valuation based on fact and not on personal opinion as is the case in the "eye-ball" method still frequently used by some assessors.

Factors For Consideration.

The reproduction figure for a building, however, is not necessarily the value. Allowances have to be made for a number of factors which may affect its value. For instance, most buildings require an allowance for physical depreciation. Such allowance is determined by the condition of the fundamental characteristics of the building. Lack of paint is not an important consideration but structure is sound. Physical depreciation is controlled by repairs. The amount of allowance required can best be determined by examination and the making of such allowance requires the appraisers best judgment.

It should be emphasized again that valuation is not an exact science. Rules and systems are guides to judgment but an absolute measure, but some system such as outlined in this talk is required if a high degree of uniformity is to obtained.

I wonder if the assessed value used for taxation purpose is not confused with sale value because, sale value is very often determined by how badly owner wants to sell or the prospective purchaser wishes to buy.

In conclusion I would like to suggest that every assessor use the most up-to-date forms showing all the information essential respecting each property, so that as far as humanly possible each and every taxpayer will be treated on the same basis. Belleville is using probably one of the most modern and up-to-date field sheets and I would be pleased to show them to any one interested."

WARMOBILIZATION STORY OF BRITAIN TOLD IN BOOKLET

Vast Fighting and Industrial Machine Welded by Powers Granted to Labor Minister as Nation on Brink of Defeat

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — Britain has finally told the war story that made possible all the other war stories of the last four years.

In a booklet entitled "Manpower" the Ministry of Information has told simply and with a wealth of detail just how it came about that an easy-going nation was mobilized for total war. And, while speaking of ponderous rules and regulations, it didn't forget to tell the stories of the Mary Browns and Joe Smiths who made this possible.

The booklet is dated May 22, 1940. On that day Britain regrouped her resources for total war.

Hitler's troops were rolling down through the Low Countries. Norway and Denmark had fallen and Britain stood alone.

Then, while she wavered on the brink of defeat the world believed inevitable, Parliament went into the hands of the ministry of labor and national selective service powers to weld the man and woman power of the country into a vast fighting and industrial army. It took just three hours to make the laws that constituted the greatest change in her way of life Britain has ever seen.

Since then 24,000,000 persons have been directed into the services, the factories, civil defences and a variety of voluntary but essential organizations.

While Goering's bombing force was only a half-hour away, and often just overhead, these men and women who had been lifted from their homes and put to work in strange but essential industries, fought and worked and won.

Story of Little Man

It is essentially a story of the little man—the shop assistant, the domestic servant, the gardener and the unemployed. But primarily it is the story of the common sense of Britain.

Example after example is cited in the booklet to tell how these women were called up, registered and then sent, by the thousands and sometimes seemingly repulsive tasks. And how, despite natural com-

But these delights were brought out in bolder relief the success of the effort as a whole. And emphasized the fact that "the machinery of mobilization is a most unusual apparatus. Its component parts are nothing less than flesh and blood, and the driving force in it is really the will of the people themselves."

WASH-TIME ON A CHINESE FARM

Every person in China, regardless of age and sex, has turned to the huge job of growing, and preparing the food to sustain personnel of Allied air and ground crews that operate in China under Maj.-Gen. Claire Chennault and his 14th U. S. Army Air Force. Here a group of Chinese farm women, after a hard day in the fields, wash their clothes in a small stream. The woman carries her baby "papoose fashion" on her back. Since supplies brought into the country by air over "The Hump" from India, are restricted almost entirely to fuel, parts and equipment of planes, the feeding problem devolves upon the Chinese, who are meeting it splendidly.

Steady Allied Progress

On all fronts events move with a steadiness of almost unlimited Allied power. There is Finland, whose Mannerheim defence system, one of the greatest in the world, has been broken down by the Russians in the blow to knock the ally of Hitler out of the war. There is France where the Allies are expanding their positions and the peninsula. There is Italy where the Germans have made a long flight since before the fall of Rome. In the Far East is the evidence of unrivalled Allied power to strike blows that are bringing the capital of Japan steadily closer to the British and American forces. Viipuri in Finland has fallen. In Cherbourg peninsula is another instance of imposing power's victory over the enemy whose power is shrinking.

In Italy are the evidences of Nazi weakness in manpower which is beginning to affect the whole Nazi defence of Hitler's "Europe." Germans shifted from the Belgian front since the invasion in Normandy have been made prisoners of war by the Allies in Italy.

In the Pacific

Three hundred Japanese planes went down one day recently in the American operations at Saipan in the Marianes, a most magnificent proof of the superior power of the American force.

Japan must see the swing of events which are steering definitely towards one end, the demolition of Japanese tyranny in the Pacific.

On Tuesday came news that is was possible the Japanese fleet which has been carefully avoiding action may make an attempt against the United States navy. All the while the Japanese ships have been suffering a terrific pounding. It may be that the Japanese have changed their minds and are going to throw their navy against the great U. S. fleet in the faint hope of achieving something. But if they do, they are answering the wishes of the Americans who have been waiting for a chance to exact full penalty of the Nipponese for the treachery of Japan whenever she has had a chance to exercise it.

To the criminals will come home the birds of ill-omen, their own evil deeds. It is the inevitable doom for those leaders and those nations that plan and enforce evil.

American airmen are now only four hours' time from Tokyo in their latest airfield capture. And four hours is a short distance for modern bombers to go to reach their target. The Allied power in the Orient is great and growing.

A Polish Underground Suggestion

When the Germans early in the war in the pride of their assault upon Europe overran country after country, the names of the main squares in European cities occupied by them were changed to "Adolf Hitler Platz," the latter word being the German for square or place.

Things have changed greatly in the world as the Hitlerites saw it in the years 1939-41. The city which has received the worst pounding in the world's history is Berlin, the place from which came the evil that has brought war upon the earth for more than four years. Time brings its changes. Hitler who had used the offensive at first has lost it long since and the Allies everywhere are on the offensive.

As the world wonders what to do with the enemy, so as to make certain that no Hitler and no repetition of the Third Reich will ever be allowed to rear its brutal head again to attempt to enslave the world, an idea has been suggested that Berlin be largely left in ruins.

An underground Labor paper (WRN—Workers in the Struggle) had an article which proposes the establishment of a real Adolf Hitler Platz after the war—Berlin itself as it lies in ruins.

The paper says, "We are happy indeed when we hear about bombs dropped on Berlin. Today when a third of the city lies in ruins (the article appeared in the December issue) we feel that this is the just punishment for the Germans' criminal attack on Poland and their bestial occupation regime in our country. The destruction of Berlin carries still another important meaning. Berlin has become the symbol of Germany led by Prussians, of Germany fed on the blood of our forbears who were enslaved and subjugated centuries ago, a monument of violence and murder unavenged. It grew at Poland's very side and became the expression of the German drive to the East. Within its walls were hatched plans for the dismemberment of Poland; within its walls the plans for the conquest of our country were nurtured for decades, despite the various changes of government.

"But this war will turn a new page in the history of mankind. To Europe it signifies, above all, the end of the German spirit of conquest. To achieve this, Prussia's role in Germany must be ended once and for all and the Prussian spirit of militarism and conquest must be destroyed at its very roots. Berlin is the heart of Prussia. Should Germany ever come to occupy the place of an equal member in the family of nations, her power would have to be centred in provinces other than Prussia and about a capital other than Berlin. Berlin, adjacent to Poland, must be no more than a provincial town."

The article goes on to suggest that "it would be a good true expression of historic justice and a lasting reminder to the world of the crime of total war, if this city were left in ruins for many years to come, a fitting monument to violence, a true Adolf Hitler Platz, to which regular educational tours would bring Germans from all parts of the country, until violence and dreams of conquest become a thing of the past."

Hepcats of War

(Topeka Capital)

American youngsters have never been regimented. In fact, the majority of parents have probably let their children give full rein to their normal taste for foolishness. And sometimes they have been pretty foolish. They have spent too much money, driven their cars too fast, swallowed goldfish, worn zoot suits, gone wild over swing and jitterbugging.

When the war came along, a lot of older people clucked their tongues and wondered. Our youth was soft, they said, spoiled by luxury, irresponsible and comfort loving. How could they stand up against the German and Japanese youth, who had been put through a fanatical, toughening process in preparation for war?

The answer is pretty obvious by now.

Ripping Up the Rails

In the past nine years, 16,000 miles of American railroad have been abandoned, says The Christian Science Monitor. Offsetting this, there has been almost no new construction. The prime cause, statistics show, is highway competition, affecting fifty-eight percent of the mileage abandoned. Two years ago, under the impetus to find scrap steel, railroads were able to dispose of many miles of track for which they had previously been unable to secure authority to abandon.

A bill in the Senate now seeks to curb the trend, by modifying the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to allow this. Communities, it avers, are left with no rail service.

Unions favor the bill to curb authority to abandon trackage. They foresee fewer employees, of the trend continues. It is a broad question, for the current exigency has proved the need of rail service to many points which, for years, had relied largely upon now almost motorless highways.

From the time when the exercise of the intellect became the source of strength and wealth, every addition to science, every fresh truth and every new idea became a germ of power placed within reach of the people.—De Toqueville.

Mr. Keith, baggage master at the G.T.R. station here had three fingers on his right hand badly injured yesterday.

A meeting of those interested in yacht and skiff racing was held at Hotel Quinte last evening and was largely attended and much enthusiasm manifested. The following officers were elected: Commodore, H. Corby; Vice-Commodore, E. Guss Porter; Captain, "King" Rogers; Committee, Dr. Yeomans, Thomas Wills, T. S. Carman, J. H. Starling, W. Black, J. V. Jenkins, W. H. Campbell; Timekeepers, Ald. McFee and H. P. Thomas. Starters, "King" Rogers, Captain H. D. Hulme and Wm. Carnew; secretary, Fred W. Burrows. Last year the citizen subscribed for two cups which had to be won twice in succession before becoming the property of the winner. One cup was for yacht races and the other for skiff races. Last year the Yoda, sailed by P. H. Wills won the yacht cup and the Viva, sailed by Fred Burrows, won the skiff cup. They will have to compete again this year and they will have several speedy craft to reckon with.

50 YEARS AGO

JUNE 23rd., 1894

Last evening there was a joint meeting of the Industrial and Executive committees of the city council to meet Messrs. S. A. Lazier and Sons, and Mr. Henry Pringle with regards to the requisition of the above named firm for a franchise to build, equip and run an electric railway in Belleville and also the right to erect poles upon which to string wires to carry light, heat and power. The basis of the agreement was drawn up in brief and received the sanction of both committees and the promoters. There is no doubt the project will be carried out. The promoters agree to have a line on Front Street in operation by August 1st., next year.

The engine will shortly be placed in Mr. M. M. Thompson's yacht. He will then have a yacht which will make the other craft hustle to keep up with it.

Pyle in Normandy:

Pyle Compares Notes With Other Correspondents Covering Invasion

(By ERNIE PYLE)

Normandy Beachhead —by wireless)—When I went ashore on the soil of France the first thing I wanted to do was hunt up the other correspondents I had said goodbye to a few days previously in England, and see how they had fared. Before the day of invasion we had accepted it as a fact that not everybody would come through alive.

Correspondents sort of gang together. They know the ins and outs of war, and they all work at it in much the same manner. So I knew about where to look, and I didn't have much trouble finding them.

It was early in the morning, before the boys had started out on their day's round of covering the war. I found them in foxholes dug into the rear slope of a grassy hill about a half-mile from the beach.

I picked them out from a distance, because I could spot Jack Thompson's beard. He was sitting on the edge of a foxhole lacing his paratrooper boots. About a dozen correspondents were there, among them three especially good friends of mine—Thompson, Don Whitehead and Tex O'Reilly.

First of all we checked with each other on what we had heard about other correspondents. Most of them were o.k. One had been killed, and one was supposed to have been lost on a sunken ship, but we didn't know who. One or two had been wounded. Three of our best friends had not been heard from at all, and it looked bad, but they have since turned up safe.

The boys were unshaven, and their eyes were red. Their muscles were stiff and their bodies ached. They had carried ashore only their typewriters and some K rations. They had gone two days without sleep, and then had slept on the ground without blankets, in wet clothes.

But none of that mattered too much after what they had been through. They were in a sort of daze from the exhaustion and mental turmoil of battle. When you asked a question it would take them a few seconds to focus their thoughts and give you an answer.

Two of them in particular had been through all the frightful nightmare that the assault troops had experienced—because they had come ashore with them.

Don Whitehead hit the beach with one regiment just an hour after H-Hour, Thompson at the same time with another regiment. They were on the beaches for more than four hours under that hideous cloudburst of shells and bullets.

Jack Thompson said: "You've never seen a beach like it before. Dead and wounded men were lying so thick you could hardly take a step. One officer was killed only two feet away from me."

Whitehead was still asleep when I want to his foxhole. I said, "Get up, you lazy So-andso." He started grinning without even opening his eyes, for he knew who it was.

It was hard for him to wake up. He had been unable to sleep, from sheer exhaustion, and had taken a sleeping tablet.

Don had managed to steal one blanket on the beach and had that wrapped around him. He had taken off his shoes for the first time in two days. His feet were so sore from walking in wet shoes and socks that he had to give them some air.

Finally he began to get himself up. "I don't know why I'm alive at all," he said. "It was really awful. For hours there on the beach the shells were so close they were throwing mud and rocks all over you. It was so bad that after a while you didn't care whether you got hit or not."

Don fished in a cardboard ration box for some cigarets. He pulled out an envelope and threw it into the bushes. "They ain't worth a damn," he said. The envelope contained his anti-seasickness tablets.

"I was sicker than hell while we were circling around in our landing craft waiting to come ashore," he said. "Everybody was sick. Soldiers were lying on the floor of the LCVP sick as dogs."

Tex O'Reilly rode around in a boat for six hours waiting to get ashore. Everybody was wet and cold and seasick and scared. War is so romantic—if you're far away from it.

Whitehead has probably been in more amphibious landings than any other correspondent over here. I know of six he has made, four of them murderously tough. And he said:

"I think I have gone on one too many of these things. Not because of what might happen to me personally, but I've lost my perspective. It's like dreaming the same nightmare over and over again, and when you try to write you feel that you have written it all before. You can't think of any new or different words to say it with." I know only too well what he means.

It is an ironic thing about correspondents who go in on the first few days of an invasion story. They are the only correspondents capable of telling the full and intimate drama and horror of the thing. And yet they are the ones who can't get their copy out to the world. By the time they do get it out, events have swirled on and the world doesn't care any more.

There that morning in their foxholes on the slope of the hill those correspondents were mainly worried about the communications situation. Forty-eight hours after H-Hour, correspondents who had landed with the first wave felt sure that none of their copy had ever reached America. And even I, a day behind them, feel no assurance that these feeble essays of mine will ever see the light of day. But in philosophical moments I can think of greater catastrophes than that.

Fighting the C.C.F.

(Ottawa Journal Editorial)

Following Saskatchewan, the old parties exhort us to fight the C.C.F. But while the old parties talk one way they increasingly act another way; their idea seeming to be that the way to fight the C.C.F. is to appease and surrender to it.

Not that way will the C.C.F. be defeated. If the old parties want defeat of collectivism and all that goes with it they will have to offer something better, something more courageous than a collectivism of their own. They are not doing that now.

What they are doing now, in the main, is to try to compete with the C.C.F. in promises of a heaven on earth; telling people that this or that can be done, no matter how costly, regardless of the national income, and, what is more, regardless of the national will.

That sort of talk, abandonment by the old parties of their traditional principles, not to speak of abandonment of common sense, is not helping the old parties. It is helping the C.C.F. Because people who want radicalism, who want change for the sake of change, are not going to seek it from the old parties. They will seek it, and naturally, in a radical party.

There is something else. If the leaders of the old parties want the support of the mass of the people they must go out and talk to the people. Democracy just can't be carried on, and political parties can't be kept alive, when political leaders adjourn discussion. That —adjournment of discussion — is what has happened in Canada. True, there has been talk—all too much of it—in Parliament; but most of it has been so irrelevant and so futile that the public has ceased listening. What hasn't come, and what should come, is a revival of the old, sound practice of public men going out into the country to meet and talk to the public; the old tradition of platform discussion now superseded by radio talks or no discussion at all.

The leaders of our old parties will have to learn that people don't sit glued to their radios awaiting pronouncement or speeches from public men. They want to meet them; see and hear them on the platform; be in a position to cross-examine them, if necessary.

The C.C.F., with its crusading zeal, know this. Much better psychologists than Liberals or Conservatives, they know the value of intimate contacts; have their discussion clubs and their volunteer workers — have what we call the "common touch."

A little more of the "common touch", of getting back to the people as the source of power, might do the old parties some good. That, plus more of courage in sticking to their principles.

MORE SALAD

The benefits derived from the habit or custom of eating raw vegetables as well as raw fruits are not sufficiently known to the public, I judge from the frequent inquiries I receive from readers. It seems that certain individuals feel a craving for eating such raw vegetables as potato, carrots, turnips and the like, and worry about imaginary harm from indulging the craving. They should not worry. They should enjoy the raw vegetable almost to their heart's content.

Man is the only animal that cooks his food. And it is not so long ago, measured in terms of evolution that he acquired the habit. There is therefore very little sound sense in the argument that man has become accustomed to cooked food and cannot get along without cooking most of his food.

I do not mean to advocate any fanatical or faddish dietary scheme. I want my meat very thoroughly cooked indeed, and I simply can't understand the taste which calls for underdone or rare meat. But I do wish to advocate more salad on more tables, and to assure the many misinformed people who like raw things but are afraid to eat 'em, that they should indulge such appetite for the benefit of health.

There is nothing in the way of a food which more deserves the name of health food than raw onion and taken with your favorite salad dressing it makes a dish fit to tempt Esculapius or his daughter.

Then there are lettuce, celery, tomato, carrots, cucumber, parsley, watercress, mint and several other things which may be advantageously eaten raw in salad combinations or alone.

There is a taboo against feeding raw vegetables or even raw fruits to children under 4 years of age, particularly in the summer time. I am not prepared to overturn all the rulings laid down by the masters about this. I should feed my own young children almost everything I have mentioned, but in only minute quantities at first and very carefully scraped or broken up and run through a coarse sieve to remove the coarser woody fibre which is not so readily handled by the digestion of an infant. As for feeding very young children raw fruit, this too, is in my judgment a healthful and advisable practice, provided the fruit is thoroughly ripe and unquestionably clean.

Fruit purchased in the market is sometimes seriously contaminated by filthy handlers or diseased handlers, and for that reason it must be carefully washed if it is to be eaten raw. Any excess or error in feeding a young child raw vegetable or raw fruit may cause an upset, but it does not cause any serious illness.

There are several reasons why we should eat more raw food. From such sources we get the vitamins in their richest concentration. We need also the mineral matter, the mineral salts, which are furnished by raw foods, particularly green stuff. Cooking extracts and wastes considerable of this mineral food. We need the gentle natural stimulus to digestion and especially to intestinal digestion which the roughage, the cellulose, the indigestible woody fibre in raw vegetables and fruits gives us.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Balsam Pillows

Are balsam pillows healthy for children and adults to sleep on? (Mrs. C. K. R.)

Answer—They're as healthy as any other pillow. If one likes the fragrance, it may help to bring sleep.

Eat Your Way to Coma

Does excessive eating stagnate the functions of the brain? I am 16 years old, have a ravenous appetite and am about 15 pounds overweight. Is it advisable for me to try to reduce? (Evelyn J.)

Answer—Excessive eating tends to make one "dopey." A regular girl of your age should have a ravenous appetite and satisfy it at regular meals with regular food. I should not advise you to reduce, but maybe you can save on sundaes, candy and other odd sundries until your height and age catch up with your weight.

Raw Oatmeal

Is it harmful to the stomach in any way, to eat raw oatmeal with a pinch of salt? I have a hankering for it. (O. D. W.)

Answer—The oatmeal is all right, but better not eat too much salt.

SPRUCE AND PRUSSIA

"Spruce" is derived from "Prussia."

To spruce up originally meant to dress up like a Prussian.

"Spruce" in Middle English was the common form of "Pruce," meaning Prussia, and that German state was known as Sprucia or Spruceland.

It seems to be well established that the spruce fir, which is a member of the pine family of trees, was so named from having been first known in commerce as a native of Prussia.

This theory is supported by the fact that "Spruce" for "Prussia" occurs in the English names of numerous products exported from Germany to England by the Hanse merchants; as, spruce leather, spruce canvas, spruce boards, spruce chests and spruce beer.

"Spruce" in the sense of trim, neat, dapper or smarter than usual in apparel, undoubtedly comes from the same source.

To dress sprucely or "to spruce up" originally meant to dress in the Spruce or Prussian manner, particularly in the smart Spruce or Prussian leather jackets that were the fashion in the sixteenth century.

Some writers have questioned the derivation of "spruce" from "Pruce" because they could not account for the prefixed "S" and because the Germans call the evergreen tree "Sprossen fichte," sprout fir, from "spriessen," sprout.

But that "spruce" is an alteration of "Pruce" is seemingly established by an unbroken chain of etymological evidence.

Spruce beer may not have received its name directly from the name of the country, although a product from Prussia was so referred to already in 1741. It is a fermented beverage made from a sweetened concoction of spruce leaves and twigs or flavored with spruce extract, and it was probably named for the tree long after the tree had come to be called spruce.

$30,000 To Be Rebated To Belleville Electric Consumers

Following a resolution passed by the Belleville Utilities Commission on April 28th, 1944, and after several weeks of negotiating with the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission it has been finally decided to rebate to the electric users of Belleville a total of approximately $30,000 which amount is over and above a surplus that they should necessarily be retained by the electric utility.

This decision was made at the last meeting of the Commission at which was attended by Chairman M. P. Duff, Mayor W. H. Rollins and Commissioner P. R. Wotten. The rebate will be in an adjustment of rates to 1944 consumers of electricity and will amount to 15% of the total amount paid in 1943 and the adjustment will embrace every type of user including factory, home and farm.

Belleville formerly had very low and favorable electric rates but this latest reduction puts Belleville in one of the lowest categories in Ontario.

The rebate will take place on electric bills being rendered in August and end with the September accounts.

Text of Eden's Statement On Butchery by Germans Of 50 Allied Air Officers

London, June 23— (CP-Reuter)— Following is the text of Mr. Eden's remarks in the House of Commons today regarding the fatal shooting of 50 Allied air force officers at Stalag Luft III.

Before dealing with the facts I wish to state that the government have no knowledge of any mass shooting of British prisoners of war other than that which has already been reported in connection with Stalag Luft III.

I make this statement in order to allay fears aroused by rumors which have received wide circulation recently.

In my previous statement I to the House of British and Allied airforce officers had been shot as a result of digging from the camp. This information was based on the figures given to the protecting power by the German authorities during the routine visit to the camp.

We have now received an official communication on the matter from the German government. It states that fifty officers had been shot and not 47 as previously stated.

Same German Explanation Repeated

The German communications gave the same explanation and attempted justification as was given in the Swiss representatives on April 17, namely, that they were shot while offering resistance on being found after their escape or while attempting a renewed escape after capture.

The note adds that during the month of March there was a number of mass escapes of prisoners of war from camps throughout Germany involving several thousands persons, and that these escapes were systematically prepared partly by the general staffs of the Allies and that they had both military and political objectives.

This situation is said to have endangered public security in Germany. In order to suppress these undertakings specially severe orders were given to pursue at all costs those who failed to halt upon challenge or offered resistance or made renewed attempts to escape after capture and to make use of weapons, and the latter had been deprived of all possible means of resistance or further escape.

The note states that 83 the prisoners who escaped, in March crossed for about 100, search for whom is continuing, were recaptured but weapons had to be used against some of the latter including 50 from Stalag Luft III.

Ashes of 26 of Victims

Taken to Camp.

It is also stated that the ashes of 28 of the 50 of the officers reported to be shot have been taken to the camp.

I now propose to inform the House of the facts as we have learned them from statements by officers who were in the camp at the time of the escape and who have recently been repatriated.

They include Group Capt. H. M. Messey, son of the Canadian High Commissioner, Britain, Vincent Massey, who was senior officer for their camp and acted as the prisoners' representative.

(Mr. Massey's son is Capt. Lionel Massey, son of the Canadian High Commissioner, was reported in October and was recently repatriated. It was not known immediately if Mr. Biles had wrongly identified Capt. Massey or had erroneously described an air force officer as being the High Commissioner's son.)

Information by British Group in Camp.

The information they give is as follows:

Early in this year a tunnel which had been excavated by the prisoners of war, was ready and escape was made on the night of March 24 to 26. Some 76 prisoners of war got out of the tunnel during the night but four who were following them were detected and arrested in the mouth of the tunnel. These four were immediately removed to camp cells.

I do not propose to give details of the plans of escape but it is well known that these prisoners intended to make their way in pairs by different routes to different destinations.

During the day following the escape the Gestapo arrived and took control of the camp. On April 6 Group Capt. Massey was informed by the camp commandant that he had been ordered by the German High Command to give him some information about the escape. The commandant then read out a statement to the following effect:

Commandant's Statement.

"With reference to the recent escape from Stalag Luft III," was commanded by the German High Command to state that 41 of the escapees were shot while resisting arrest or in their endeavors to escape and were either dead or seriously wounded.

"On being pressed for further information regarding the circumstances as to whether all the men were shot dead or some only wounded, the commandant merely repeated the statement and said he could not amplify it except to say: 'All were killed and not wounded'."

A similar statement with the substitution of 47 for 41 was posted up at the camp and Group Capt. Massey and other repatriates were removed on April 11 on their journey home.

With the exception of one shot fired at the last of the 76 as he got out of the tunnel, no shooting was heard by anyone in the camp at the time of the escape.

Camp in Mourning.

After news of the shooting had been given to Group Capt. Massey, the whole camp went into mourning.

The Germans at the time refused to allow the bodies of those shot to be brought back to the camp for burial in the camp cemetery. But information which the repatriated officers have, goes further; within a few days of the escape most of the officers were brought back to the camp under heavy guard and put into the camp cells. According to a report of the protecting power they are still in the camp.

They reported that after capture they had been taken over by the Gestapo who had removed them in a Gestapo prison at Gorlitz, some 40 miles away. On the way there, cars with armed Gestapo both preceded and followed the vehicles in which they were driven.

At Gorlitz they were put in cells containing five or six each. They were all interrogated by the Gestapo and in the meantime were kept under shocking conditions with very little food.

Among other threats, the Gestapo used the following words to them: "We have got you here. Nobody knows you are here. It is our intent and purposes you are civilians, wearing civilian clothes and we can do what we like with you. You can disappear."

Others were told that anyone dressed in civilian clothes would be without the protection of the Geneva) Convention. After their interrogation had taken place, some of them were taken back to the cells and German officials came and picked out a number of the men.

Men Picked Out Were Driven Away

Those picked out were seen from the prison being driven away, handcuffed and in the charge of Gestapo officials armed with Tommyguns, while the remainder were handed over to the Luftwaffe and brought back to the camp. Those shot included all the men of European Allied nationality who were recaptured. Those were taken away on different days in small parties, with one larger party of about 20.

On April 6, the very day on which the Commandant of the camp informed Group Capt. Massey that the number shot was 41, a party of 8 six of whom were later shot, were taken away. The number given to the Swiss Inspector on April 17 was 47.

A German note states that a final communication giving further details will be forthcoming, but His Majesty's government feel obliged to decline at once that the explanation now put forward by the German government is in fact a confession of an odious crime against the laws and conventions of war.

Facts Presented By Eden

May I draw the attention of the House to the following Facts:

1. No orders have at any time been given to British prisoners of war to take part in the event of their escape in any subversive action as alleged by the German government.

2. All these officers knew the futility of attempting any resistance if recaptured.

3. As to the possibility of a renewed attempt to escape we now know that owing to physical exhaustion and ill-treatment at Gorlitz they were incapable of any such attempt.

4. Whether these officers escaped in small or large numbers, there can be no justification for the German authorities executing them. We know further that during the original escape officers were in pairs and when last seen after leaving Gorlitz prison they were in comparatively small numbers, handcuffed and under heavy guard.

Significant of No Wounded

Fifthly and most significant, there were no wounded as there would have been inevitably if the shootings had taken place during an attempt to resist capture.

6. The German statement omits all references to Gorlitz and contains no account of the circumstances which led to the death of any single officer.

The ashes of 26 of the escaped prisoners have been returned to Stalag Luft III, although Germany had previously refused to send back the bodies for burial. This is the only occasion known by His Majesty's government or protecting powers in which the German government of war who has died during captivity has been cremated.

Conclusion Is Men Were Murdered

It is abundantly clear that none of these officers at their death in the course of making their escape from Stalag Luft III were resisting capture. . . . The Gestapo contention that the wearing of civilian clothing by the officers of war deprived him of the protection of the prisoners of war convention, is entirely without foundation in international law and practice.

Whatever these facts there is only one possible conclusion: These prisoners of war were murdered— at some indefinite place or places in their removal from the Gestapo prison at Gorlitz to the several dates unknown.

"His Majesty's government must therefore record their solemn protest against these cold blooded acts of butchery.

They will never cease in their efforts to collect evidence to identify all those responsible. They are firmly resolved that these foul criminals shall be tracked down to the last man wherever they may take refuge.

When the war is over they will be brought to exemplary justice.

Lt. L. Maraskas Returns to Canada On Hospital Ship

DISTRICT MEN RETURN

Veterans of the fighting in Sicily and in Italy, and some of them casualties, both accidental and in action with the troops on the front lines, a group of May 27 Quinte district soldiers returned to Canada this week on a hospital ship, which docked in Halifax.

Two Belleville boys are included among the personnel listed as aboard the hospital ship. They are Lieut. L. Maraskas, son of Mrs. Catherine Maraskas, 133 Charles Street, a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, who has been overseas for the past two-and-one-half years. The other local boy is Lance Corporal B. Wells.

Lieut. Maraskas was seriously wounded by shrapnel during the fighting in Italy several months ago, while Lance Corporal Wells received a gunshot wound in the hip last October 2nd, shortly after the invasion of Italy proper began.

Mrs. Wells at one time had four sons in the armed services, two of them still being in uniform. Pte. Percy Wells suffered his discharge after three years overseas, while a second brother, Pte. Kenneth Wells is now in hospital in Italy after having been wounded for the second time this May. All three brothers were members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas together in December, 1939. The youngest Wells boy, Wallace, enlisted in the R.C.O.C. at 16 but was discharged when his true age was learned by military authorities.

District soldiers to return to Canada included Cpl. A. Forbes, R.R. 4 Trenton; Sgt. L. I. R. Hornsby, Cordova Mines; and Pte. G. E. Stacey, Wooler, Ontario.

Associated with the Ontario Intelligencer this morning a member of the Maraskas family indicated that they had received a wire from Lieut. Maraskas following his arrival in Canada stating that he was known by the family when he would arrive in Belleville at 4 p.m. and expected he would be placed in hospital.

Premier Godbout Criticizes Speech

Quebec, June 23—(CP)—Levesque Government Journal said today that in a long-distance telephone interview yesterday Premier Godbout said he considered "absolutely unjustified" the speech made Wednesday in the Senate by Senator Bouchard in which he attacked the clergy and the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

The Premier's brief statement said: "I consider them absolutely unjustified and very damaging, and I affirm that they do not represent in any way the opinion of a single member of the Quebec provincial government."

Germans May Have Evacuated Caen

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian Forces in France, June 23 — (CP Cable) — The Germans may have evacuated Caen, eastern pivot of their Normandy defence lines, and dispersed their forces around the city, observers believed today. The reason for such evacuation would be the terrific bombing to which the town in the Buffalo-Canadian sector has been subjected since D-day.

Military objectives and the city were bombed before the invasion, particularly the night before the landings, and blasted by hundreds of tons of bombs in a heavy R.A.F. raid a week later. Photographs revealed the vast destruction caused.

SALE and DELIVERY OF HOT AIR FURNACES

Temporarily suspended—commencing June 20th

Due to shortage of materials and labor, the supply of hot air furnaces will not meet overall requirements for replacements and new buildings, by a wide margin.

To ensure that the limited supply is made available to those most in need of them, the sale and delivery of hot air furnaces to builders, building owners and other users is temporarily suspended—pending a detailed inventory of stocks throughout the country. This temporary suspension does not apply to sales and deliveries by manufacturers to wholesalers, retailers and other established sellers of hot air furnaces—who may purchase for resale, but who may only sell to users against Certificates of Essentiality.

Manufacturers — Importers — Wholesalers — Retailers ARE REQUIRED TO REPORT DELIVERIES IN 1943 AND 1944, AND STOCKS ON HAND:

MANUFACTURERS:
Each manufacturer or importer must report to the Administrator not later than July 10th, 1944, the following information:

(a) A list of the names and addresses of all the customers to whom he made deliveries during the year 1943, and the number of hot air furnaces delivered to each customer (i) in the aforesaid year 1943, and (ii) during the first six months of the year 1944.

(b) Each manufacturer or importer who sells any hot air furnace or furnaces to a user (i.e., to building contractors or other users of hot air furnaces as opposed to retailers or others who buy for resale) must place a distinguishing mark against the name of each such customer on the list referred to in paragraph (a) above to indicate that they are users and not retailers.

(c) His total production or importation of new hot air furnaces during the first six months of 1944.

(d) His stocks of new hot air furnaces on hand as at June 30, 1944, not including "retained stock".

(e) The number of hot air furnaces held in "retained stock".

WHOLESALERS AND JOBBERS:
Each wholesaler or jobber dealing in hot air furnaces must report to the Administrator not later than July 10th, 1944, the following information:

(a) A list of the names and addresses of the customers to whom he made deliveries during the year 1943, and the number of hot air furnaces delivered to each customer (i) in the aforesaid year 1943, and (ii) during the first six months of 1944.

(b) Each wholesaler or jobber who sells any hot air furnace or furnaces to a user (i.e., to building contractors or other users of hot air furnaces as opposed to retailers or others who buy for resale) must place a distinguishing mark against the name of each such customer on the list referred to in paragraph (a) above to indicate that they are users and not retailers.

(c) His total stocks of hot air furnaces on hand as of June 30, 1944.

RETAILERS: Each retailer dealing in hot air furnaces must report in writing to the nearest office of the Board not later than July 10th, 1944, the following information:

(a) The stocks of hot air furnaces at close of business on June 30, 1944.

(b) A list of the names and addresses of his suppliers showing separately with respect to each (i) total deliveries received in 1943 and (ii) total deliveries received during the first six months of 1944.

(For the purposes of this Order, Retailers include plumbers, tinsmiths, and heating contractors who buy for resale).

REGULAR REPORTS of stocks on hand and deliveries must be made monthly by Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Retailers, on or before the 20th of the following month, starting August 20th.

APPLICATIONS FOR CERTIFICATES OF ESSENTIALITY for the purchase of hot air furnaces will be available after July 1st at Regional and Local Offices of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Applications must be completed by the person who owns the building in which the furnace is to be installed. Certificate will be granted in accordance with available supplies in each area, and only in cases of essential need.

No retailer may accept an order unless a Certificate of Essentiality has been presented.

Complete information and instructions are being sent direct to all sections of the trade. If not received by June 30th, applications should be made at the nearest Wartime Prices and Trade Board office.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY, CELLIST

ETHEL BARTLETT AND RAE ROBERTSON, PIANO TEAM

What is reputed to be the finest series of concert ever offered a Belleville public, will be staged here during the coming season, according to an announcement today by officials of the Canadian Concert Association.

Reservation finances from the highly successful membership campaign of a month ago has placed the association in a position where-by it can now obtain the services of outstanding artists. These have been selected and confirmation received from New York.

Gregor Piatigorsky termed by critics the greatest living cellist who is reported to have given more performances in Canada than any other artist of this instrument, is among the headliners.

In the piano field comes Bartlett and Robertson. The New York World-Telegram critic says of these artists," All other piano teams are measured by Bartlett and Robertson, while the New York Transcript says of them "the best beloved piano duettists in the world."

A high class musical treat is in store for those who love quartette music when they near Walter Cassel, Helen Oldham, Donald Dame and Josephine Tumbisi, all of whom have won fame in Metropolitan opera. Each is an individual artists and Enterprise the quartette program with solos, deuts and trios.

Kurt Baum, outstanding Metropolitan Opera tenor will ring up the curtain on the local concert season with his appearance here on Sept. 29 Mr. Saum was unable to appear here last season due to illness. His performance rounds out a quartette of appearance that music lovers can ill afford to miss

Wellman's Anniversary Supper Enjoyed by Very Large Crowd

Rawdon, (Special)—Over four hundred people, young and old journeyed to Wellman's United Church on Wednesday evening to enjoy the Anniversary Supper.

The church shed of Rawdon and Wellman's was tastefully decorated with greenery, and flags for this auspicious occasion.

The long tables were laden with a bountiful supply of appetizing food, the main item being pressed chicken. Visitors are to be congratulated on the splendid success of their supper in these days of rationing. It required the third sitting to accommodate the huge crowd and by this time Wellman's United Church was packed to the doors with standing room at a premium. Many people stood from 5.30 until nearly seven.

Early History of the Church Given.

At 8.45 Rev. Arthur Bryan, pastor of the church, called the gathering to order and the assembly sang "How Firm a Foundation".

A letter of history was read by the chairman paying tribute to the fathers who built the founders of Methodism and giving some pioneer stories of Methodist ministers in the years gone by.

In 1849 Rev. Abraham Dayman wrote the first history of Methodism in the Marmora district.

In 1850 Rawdon circuit was organized with fifty-three members and the parsonage was situated at Madoc.

In 1852 Mr. Totten's appointment was renamed Wellman's.

In 1853, Miss Priscilla Clancy and Miss Margaret Vandervoort were the collectors for missionary funds.

In 1854 Rawdon Circuit was composed of five appointments.

In 1860, the brick church was built in the present location and Rev. George Carr was the minister. Previous to this the log school house across the road was used as a meeting house.

First Settler.

Mr. Peter Hubble was the first Rawdon settler and hewed his home out of the bush as Wellman's Corners. The second settler was Mr. Nelson Wellman.

Mr. James Vandervoort owned the first cost-oil lamp in the district and after using it successfully in his own home he brought the lamp to church where its bright flame was a big improvement over a tallow candle.

The land for the present cemetery was bought in 1876 from the late Emmanuel Mackey and the grounds are well cared for. The old cemetery was on the Dafoe farm, previous to this date.

Sons of Temperance.

The Sons of Temperance had a splendid organization at Wellman's for many years and their influence was great in the "abolish the bar movement".

The fame of Wellman's lawn socials spread throughout the township and large crowds used to gather for these events which were held annually during the years from 1905 to 1915.

In 1938, the church and public school yearly held a very special re-union when large crowds attended.

Visiting After Church.

The church and their members on the Rawdon circuit have always been noted for their friendly attitude and their happy idea of visiting together on the church lawns following the services. Forty years ago a bride from a city church came to Wellman's to make special duties and was delighted to find such congenial people and the chance of visit friendly. She said after coming to the country she thought the city service was a cold reception. This is still true today for farmers, their wives and families always visit after every service on Rawdon circuit.

Doris Pollock recited "It Takes a Heap of Living in a House to Make it Home". Miss Dorothy Hinds contributed a musical number, "Home Sweet Home", with - variations.

Messages Read.

The pastor read messages from Mrs. Will Jackman, (Bethel); Mrs. Russell Clancy Prentice, (Peterborough); Mrs. Phoebe Saxer Bedford, (Rawdon); Mrs. Ross Reid, Belleville; Mrs. Nellie Totten Irvin, Swift Current, Sask.; Mr. and Mrs. James Mills, Campbellford; Mrs. John Reid, Mount Pleasant; Mrs. Elizabeth Bird, Belleville; Mrs. Emma Morton Harker, Herchimer, N.Y.; Mrs. Ida Wellman Vandervoort Dracup, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Webster Hinds, Kingston; Mrs. Totten, Toronto; Miss Delia Johnston, Belleville; Mrs. Ida Saunders Campbellford; Mrs. Ernest Honey, Cavan; Mrs. James Maidment, Belleville; Mrs. W. R. Hendry, Toronto.

All these were not in attendance and were given a special oration and several of these messages contained donations of cash to further the church funds.

Several others who were present also sent messages and among these were Mrs. Thomas McCaughen, of Stirling; Mrs. James Baker, Belleville; Mrs. Blake Totten, Toronto; Mrs. Sam Gummer, Thurlow, Candelighting Service.

At eleven p.m. the candlelighting service was begun and this closed the celebration.

The first candle was lighted by the pastor and he handed it to Rev. W. H. Clarke, who with Mrs. Clarke 75 candles placed on a painted frame to represent a cake.

Rev. Clarke spoke briefly and lighted his candles in Reclaiming memory of all former ministers, especially those who had spent the longest years and invoked God's blessing on the minister, who was serving at present—Rev. Frederick Beckett.

The descendants of the fourteen families who built the church, succeeded to light candles in the following order:— Mrs. Frederick Beckett for the Vandervorts; Miss Annie Dracup for the Dracups; Mrs Ruth Clancy for the Clancys; Mrs. Marguerite McMullen for the Macks; Miss Bernice Rawdon for the Dunhams; Miss Mary Panning, (Kingston) for the Pannings; Mrs. Wanda Beckett for the Snarrs; Miss Hazel Pursley for the Pursleys; Miss Shonna Rahnie for represents the Mortons; Mrs. Blake Totten, (Toronto), for the Tottons; Mrs. Walter Scott for the Hubbles; Mrs. Fred Mitchell, (Thurlow), for the Burgess; Mrs. Charles Dunham for the Gardners; Mrs. John Preston for the Mayhews.

The church lights were turned out and in the glow of candlelight all sang "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow" and prayer was offered by the pastor.

The candles were then lit and souvenirs and the vast crowd wended their way homewards.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! To give an epicurean appearance to the cheaper cuts of meats and simpler desserts, pour sauce over the food before it is brought to the table. Serve additional sauce in your best gravy-boat—the plainest food can be exotic.

Besides, a good sauce is like money in the bank—when an emergency arises, you can meet it successfully. A repertoire of sauces is a quick way to give flair and swank to any otherwise drab meal.

When carrots or snap beans seem too monotonous for repetition but the victory garden is producing both, vary them with a parsley or egg white-sauce.

For inexpensive meat which seems to lack character, marinade in barbecue sauce and then simmer on low heat. Serve this to the guests your boy-in-uniform brings home and you need enough for second helpings.

When bread pudding or gelatin puddings lose interest, revitalize them with a generous serving of custard sauce. A new favorite in our kitchen is Roxbury Sauce. It will make the dreariest-looking dessert come to life.

So here are a few recipes for sauces and sauces. Dress up foods to make them attractive.

COLD SPANISH SAUCE

1 1-2 cups canned tomatoes, 1-4 onion, sprig of parsley, bit of bay leaf, 2 cloves, 1-4 tsp. salt, 1-8 paprika, few grains cayenne, 3 sgs yolks, slightly beaten, 3 Tbsps. salad oil, 1 Tbsp. gelatine dissolved in 3-4 tbsp. vinegar and 3-4 tbsp. cold water.

Cook tomato and seasonings 15 minutes. Rub through sieve. Add oil to egg yolks. Combine mixtures, cook over low heat, stirring constantly. Add dissolved gelatine. Strain and cool.

BROWN MUSHROOM SAUCE

3 tbsps. baking fat, few drops onion juice, 3 tbsps. flour, 1 cup hot milk, 1-2 pound mushrooms, sliced, 1 tsp. beef extract, salt and pepper. Melt baking fat, add onion juice and flour. Brown on electric element. Add milk gradually, while stirring constantly. Add mushrooms, cooked in fat. Season with beef extract, salt and paprika.

MARASCHINO SAUCE

2-3 cup boiling water, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1-4 cup maraschino cherries, cut in halves, 1-2 cup maraschino syrup, 1-2 tablespoon butter.

Mix sugar and cornstarch, add gradually to boiling water, stirring constantly. Boil 5 minutes, and add cherries, syrup, and butter.

ROXBURY SAUCE

1 egg yolk, 1 cup powdered sugar, 1-3 cup scalded milk, 1 teaspoon cornstarch, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, grated rind 1-2 lemon, 1 egg white.

Beat egg yolk until thick and lemon-colored. Add and 3-4 cup sugar gradually, while beating constantly. Mix remaining sugar with cornstarch and salt and pour on, gradually, scalded milk. Cook in double boiler ten minutes, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and afterwards occasionally. Combine mixtures, add flavorings and egg white beaten until stiff.

THE QUESTION BOX:

Mrs. J. C. says: I have always put a piece of paper under the dish pan to keep the metal tub marking the porcelain sink.

Miss R. M. says: Try Bacon Muffins—after you've put a plain muffin batter into the muffin pan with finely chopped raw bacon. Bake as usual. They are a real treat.

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

Warm Weather Grooming

There are beauty curses that can't be cured—like a nose that does not qualify or hair that is so much like crêpe that even the best permanent won't put in a decent light wave. You have to go on living with these defects as comfortably as you can, reconcile yourself to them. But there are beauty blessings that are possible to any girl, which makes things fair enough.

One of the best of these blessings is the freshly-washed, radiant appearance that makes one look as if one had just had a refreshing bath, a facial, a baby dimple, a manicure, a relaxing hour. It is a better treat to the observing eye than fine features, squeezed on the first warm days of summer, when the mercury in the thermometer is trying to boil up, out and over. "Crisp as a lettuce leaf; fresh as a daisy"; that's the look that is right for the summer lassie.

You can't look like that without diligent, daily bathing. No cosmetic can do for you what the good old stand-by soap suds and a heavy brush will accomplish. The skin is constantly sending noxiously, though you may not be aware of it. Dead skin scales are present; they must be removed because they are odorous.

Then there are the little details or grooming—small attentions to one's toilette that must not be overlooked. A dingy spot on the stocking ruins the picture of sartorial perfection. A run? Well, that happens to the best of us sometimes. One good thing about war shortage, it isn't as runny as chiffons.

As for the handkerchief that is done duty a second day! That won't do! You always take a fresh one. We're telling you what the woman next door whose purse is always in a grab-awful mess, and whose handkies are not strictly immaculate.

The cute blouses we are wearing, with frilly decorations, may be troublesome to iron—those of us who never ironed before are learning how—and they must be odorless. Cleanliness is the first law of beauty; you can't get away from that fact.

While handing out well-intentioned insults to our sisters, we might mention powder pads that are in need of soap and water. They are the chief source of blackheads, often cause skin infections, particularly if allowed to remain in dusty places.

A bedraggled, untidy hair-do one seldom sees. We are chiffure-conscious as never before. But, as shoe thatches lack lustre, we suspect that shampoos are often postponed and brushing dispensed with entirely. That's no way to treat your hair!

Be fastidious. Be fussy, you can't be too fussy about appearance; it means so much in human affairs, walking alone; bridesmaid, walking alone, or with another bridesmaid, if you wish to add one; and last, the ushers, walking two by two.

Thank-You Notes Are Necessary.

Dear Ann:

I am just about to mail my wedding invitations. My mother told me today that she read in your column recently that even though the bride-to-be thanks personally the givers of wedding gifts for their ample, co-workers or other friends whom she happens to meet directly or in the course of receiving gifts she should write thank-you notes to them just the same. Is this really necessary?

Phyllis

Yes, this is really necessary, Phyllis, if you wish to have the friends who have been so kind and generous to you regard you as a courteous and appreciative person. If you don't write them thank-you notes, they sometimes feel resentful with the savor of your being far too casual. And that's not a pleasant taste to leave in the minds and hearts of your friends and fellows!

An Informal Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married in the near future. My fiance wants very much to have a big wedding with our relatives and a few close friends present at the ceremony. I would like to have this kind of wedding, too, but I am very much opposed to wearing a bridal gown. What is the proper attire for maid of honor and me to wear at street-length dresses, instead of long ones?

M. J.

Yes, you may both appropriately wear street-length dresses at such a time as a formal wedding.

Fiance and Fiancee.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: . . . always two especially important words. A man who is engaged is a fiance. A woman who is engaged is a fiancee. Look at the words carefully, and remember: fi-an-cee, ending in e's. (And don't let your pen slip and spell them with an a!) And there it's funny how often this happens in the letter-writing.

Fiance and fiancee are pronounced alike. The first syllable is easy . . . fee. And the last syllable is easy . . . say. The second syllable isn't so easy, especially if it's plain in print. But if you pronounce ahn nasally you will come pretty close to the right pronunciation. And don't accent any of the three syllables .fo there you are. . .fee-ahn-say.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Ask Your New Minister's Formulas.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—In June I am to be married in the church. I have always attended. Our former minister has recently been transferred to a church not very far away from here. I would very much like to have him perform ceremony. If he will do this, do I need to ask our new minister if he minds if I have my former minister? If you say, "I should do this, what would I say to him? My fiance, of course, will do the talking to the minister.

2.—I am going to have a maid of honor and one bridesmaid. My fiance is having a best man and an usher. Would it be all right for us to have two more ushers?

R. N.

1.—Yes, you must ask the new minister for his permission to have your former minister perform the marriage ceremony. This is not only a required courtesy, but is usually a definite church rule. And this is your or your family's responsibility to provide his travelling expenses to and from the city.

To send him a round-trip ticket, to avoid any discussion about this on the part of the minister, and that he has a room for his convenience, is the kind thing to do for any incidental expenses. In other words, the bride seeking a special favor of him, and so you must be considerate and thoughtful for his comfort and convenience. (Added to this, it is the bridegroom, of course, who pays the minister's round-trip fee.)

2.—Yes, you or you and your mother, (it is customary for the prospective bride to consult with her mother about the wedding arrangements) go to see the new minister, it will be quite simple and easy to ask him if the commission of two is not your former minister to perform the ceremony. He will, I am sure, decisively understand (what I judge is true) that you and the family have a special devotion to your former minister because of long association and friendship.

3.—Yes, of course, there may be two more ushers in your wedding party . . . but, better for the balance of your ceremonial and processional, either one more or three more, so that the ushers may walk in pairs, in the processional, and preferably too, in the recessional. Then your recessional could be (as is best taste and form) in the reverse of your processional: first, you and your bridegroom; matron of honor, ahn-say.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall She Listen to Her Heart or to Her Head

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My fiance and I are very much in love with one another. He is 28 years old, in the service, and expects to go overseas in about six months. I am 26 years of age. He wants me to marry him on his next furlough, when he is sure for wartime marriages. Both our families approves.

If we marry I would have to live with them as my relatives who live near the college where he is in training. I love my fiance dearly, and know he loves me, but I'm afraid of leaving the securities I now have, to go to a home I don't know, in a strange city, where I could see my husband only over the weekends. Even then he would be studying most of the time.

I'm all mixed up and undecided. Shall I listen to my heart or my head? Shall I give up my good position for an uncertainty? I don't know whether I could get a job in his city.

B. J. O.

Your problem is one of those fifty-fifty cases, so difficult to solve. At 26 and 28 you're both old enough to know your own minds. You dislike the idea of a wartime marriage, and you'd have to give up a good position for an uncertainty and live with people you don't know in a strange city where you could see your husband only over weekends.

Wisdom would seem to dictate that you should be swayed by your head rather than your heart. Your fiance does not expect to go overseas for six months . . . Perhaps by that time there will be some adjustment in war conditions that would give you a new slant on the picture. And in six months you can always change your mind, and let your heart rule your head.

Why Be They Hesitate When Marriage Would Solve All 'Round

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You give me such wonderful advice once before that I'm coming again. I haven't had a very good education, but will try to do my best. My husband and I are divorced, and I live with my widowed mother. I have a four-year-old son.

My stepfather died about two years ago and mother was so much in love with him that she talks of nothing else, and if I try to change the subject, she gets angry. She finds fault with all my friends un-

Vary Materials In Gay Blouses

By DOROTHY ROE
(Associated Press Writer)

Are you long on ideas but short on cash? In need of a wardrobe lift—one pep but unable to fit it into your budget? Discouraged by the high prices in the shops?

Then get your learn, dust off the old family sewing machine and get to work.. After all, your grandmother never had to what it was to buy a ready-made dress. She sewed her own and managed to cook, keep house and turn out patchword quilts on the side.

One of the simplest ways to perk up a summer wardrobe is to stitch up a series of gay, pretty and inexpensive blouses, to wear with odd skirts. If you find a pattern you like, stick to it, and make a series in different materials.

One of the smartest and most adaptable blouses pictured on the season is the tie-necked style.

Save-Sew-Wear

You need only five-eighths of a yard of material for each blouse, you can make one in an afternoon, and the cost of three will be less than you would pay for one good blouse ready-made.

Make one in matched embroidered eyelet, wear it with a dark, slim skirt, long sleeves and a bit of starch to keep gay forth in the form of bridge or an evening of dining and dancing confident that you're at your best.

Or, for shopping wear, make a blouse of gay printed linen and team it with a casual light or dark skirt.

A third variation on the theme can be made in crepaldé with a triple play of brilliant colored ruffles on the neckline and sleeves. Wear this one with a peasant skirt, for beach, picnic or a day in the park.

Jim Tobin of Boston Braves Hurls Second No-Hitter In Defeating Philadelphia Phillies

Brings Lifetime Average to Even .500 After Eight Years in Majors

HARD-WORKING

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Jim Tobin, after eight years as a Major League pitcher, became a .500 won-lost performer today, and you can chalk up that .005 surplus to yesterday's no-hitter—not second of the season—against Philadelphia Phillies.

The Boston Brave ace had a tough time hurdling that .500 mark. After losing 94 games in 1942, the most in the league, the veteran knuckleball expert had a lifetime pitching record of 60 wins and 60 losses. Last year he divided his decisions to retain his .500 level. Prior to yesterday's game, big Jim had won seven and lost seven for his 42-42 win and loss record.

The hardest-working pitcher in the Majors—he is 31 next month—he tops all both circuits—allowed only two walks in the abbreviated contest, which was called at the end of five innings because of darkness, with the score 2-0 in Boston's favor.

The tall Texan took the opener of the twin-bill 1-0 in 15 innings on Ron Northey's home run.

Whit Wyatt hurled his first complete game of the campaign, allowing the Cubs only six hits as Brooklyn won 10-3 over the New Yorkers.

Pittsburgh took both ends of a double-header from Cincinnati, 9-4 and 7-4. Rip Sewell won his ninth game in the opener, after Bucketing accounted for the second game, hitting his second pinch-hit homer in a week, with two on in the sixth.

Philadelphia A's took the second game of a twin-bill 3-2, after Boston Red Sox captured the opener 8-4 to snap the Mackmen's six-game winning streak. Mike Ryba helped himself to his seventh win against one defeat by doubling in the 12th of the curtain-raiser, and scoring on Al Brancato's single with the bases full and two out in the ninth inning of the second contest.

Joe Orengo's eighth-inning double which scored Dick Culler enabled Detroit to edge out Cleveland 4-3 in the fourth one-run margin of the day.

A seven-run outburst in the eighth gave Chicago White Sox an easy 10-3 victory over the league-leading St. Louis Browns.

SCHOOLBOY SPEED KING

Charley Parker Has Run the 100 in 9.5

By WALTER J. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian

Track and field athletics badly in need of a headliner to place it back in the top category of athletic competition for spectator attention, may have one in 17-year-old Charley Parker, the new, unofficial "world's fastest boy."

Parker, the schoolboy speed king of San Antonio, Tex., who has been undefeated in three years of competition embracing 50 races and who has run the century in 9.5 seconds, only a fraction of a second off the world record, is scheduled to hogtie the headlines the weekend of June 26 when he competes in the national A.A.U. track meet in New York.

If it hadn't been for an appendectomy, Parker would be a national figure right now.

Appendectomy Stops Him

He was scheduled to compete in the A.A.U. meet last year at this time. When he was sent to the hospital a few days before the meet, in 1941 he turned in times of 9.3 for the 100 and 20.6 for the 200 and he hadn't even run against anyone who could push him to the limit.

The boy whom track observers expect will be the amazing performances of the Olympic king of 1936, Jesse Owens, has a thoroughly flawless natural form, according to students of the game.

He's so perfect, 'tis said, that Coach Clyde Littlefield of the University of Texas, who expects to get Parker in school next fall, has made no effort to set the boy for the boy is beyond coaching—he's a perfect running machine already.

Capable Student

No less an authority on track than Dan Ferris, secretary treasurer of the A.A.U., says that Parker "looks like the greatest thing that has come along in years" and confidently predicts the youth will crack both the 100 and the 220-yard marks before he's through.

This season the "Texas Tornado"

CHARLIE PARKER . . . . MR. SPEED HIMSELF

has run in 14 races and set nine new records of one kind or another besides tieing the others. A capable student in addition to his track abilities, Parker plans to study law after the war.

STILL GOING

Toronto, June 25 — (CP) — It's war to the teeth on the soccer front in Toronto, but it looks as though the referee — like papa — is going to pay as usual. Aftermath of the officials' strike for higher fees is a mass, enforced exodus of referees from their posts.

Public opinion, for once, was with the refs, who asked an increase in their fees from $3 to $4, but league officials said they were powerless to raise the ante until the annual meeting rolls around.

It just goes to show you, the referee has replaced the bison as the most-hunted animal on the face of the continent. If they keep getting booted around like this, the day will come when we have to go to the zoo and park to see a member of that rare species—referreicus zypbotile dogmaticus.

Life Begins at 60:

When a reporter spied aging Jimmy Wright, one-time star centre-half with Belleil soccer teams in Montreal, he asked him how long he played soccer before retiring. Jimmy, 60 last month, finished him by telling him he hadn't thought of quitting yet.

He started playing regularly in 1897, but had to ease off in 1939. Not because of his age — simply because a guy named Hitler started something that took most of the soccer players away. Now Jimmy can get into only the amateur game, but says he plans to get back into it again when the boys return.

Incidentally:

After that triple dead heat in the Carter Handicap, the boys started looking in the record books and found there had been two such three-play finishes before. The first was at Victoria's Willows Park in Sept. 21, 1940, and the other in the Fall term in Detroit in 1941 . . . Red Kress, ebullient Toronto Maple Leaf player-manager, takes on a new role at baseball star charity game in August. . . . Baseball Pete Compbell of the club suggested Red might perform the plate umpire's chores that day, since he had been him on every other spot except behind the plate for the Leafs. . . . They're talking about matching Dave Castilloux and Johnny Green, two ex-servicemen, in Montreal, but Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick is doubtful it will ever come off. . . . In first place, he points out, no one has ever been able to determine just what he's managing the fighters, there has been so much bickering over them, and a promoter likes to know those things before he gets his fingers burnt. . . .

'MARINES' BEAT TWEED BY 9-4

Stephens - Adamson "Marines" went around the complete circuit of the Belleville Softball League on the out sustaining a single defeat when they downed Tweed 9 to 4 at the Exhibition Grounds Thursday evening. It was the Marines sixth consecutive win in as many starts.

Teddy Hynes started the works with a first inning triple with Mac Carson coming through with a single and with subsequent errors the Marines counted four runs before the dust had settled. The Marines went on to score a run in the second and two more in the third before Tweed first tallied in the fourth when Conner's triple drove home Woodcock.

The line score:

Tweed	000100003—4 runs
Marines	412100013—9 runs

PTE. VERN ESCOE DEFEATS MCPEAKE IN TRENTON SHOW

Canadian Army Heavyweight Wins in Short Time of 45 Seconds

OTHER BOUTS

RAF Jerry McPeake, heavyweight champion of Trenton air station, seeking greener fields to conquer, had his wings clipped in record time on Wednesday evening at the boxing show staged by Sgt. Ernie Rowe, Boy, sports officer of the station and his able staff. Pte. Vern Escoe, a colored boy, who won the heavyweight title of the Canadian Army in Ottawa this spring, scored a technical knockout over McPeake in just 45 seconds after they entered the ring. Escoe, a clever puncher with either hand, had McPeake in difficulty from the first round and the referees stopped the fight to save the loser from further punishment.

The show was one bf the best ever staged at the station and more than 2,000 persons were in attendance, showing that a good attraction will always draw a crowd. Station Warrant Officer John Silvey, O.B.E., efficiently acted as toastmaster of ceremonies, while Flt. Sgt. Thomas Lamb, R.C.A.F. band, had referees with Major Lingham, PO. Davies and WO.2 Nick acting as judges. Flt. Sgt. Rowe was timer for the bouts. The bouts were preceded with one of the finest singers ever pulled at the station. Three of Canada's entertainers, Sergeant Major W.O. 2 Nick, Flt. Sgt. Greenley and Sgt. Harding put on a swell show in aerobatics and singing and wound up a clown boxing match, that was a scream.

Exhibition Bout Smart

One of the finest items of the night was the exhibition bout by Pte Barney Watson and Pte Lawrence years old respectively of London, Ont. Their father, Flt. Sgt. Barber was Canadian amateur featherweight champion in 1924, and he has taught his two boys a few clever points of the boxing profession. They are clever and have been boxing most of their time to entertain the service boy in camp, their bout on Wednesday night was the first one in the camps. Group-Captain Bell-Irving, Commanding Officer of the station thanked everyone, who in any way assisted in the program and Flt. Lt. Pindley, Sqdn. Ldr; Wommesford, Flt. Lt. Coady, Sqdn. Ldr; Mc-Kinnon, Flt. Lt. Wilder, Flt. Commanders Shaw, Polkins and Hodgett and P/O. Wall were thanked for the prizes at the conclusion of the bouts.

Besides Jerry McPeake taking a trouncing, Flt. Sgt. Hub Smith lost his first bout in the ring since he was declaioned by LAC Johnny Keeler of Ajax. Keeler was the No. 1 training command welterweight champion and in four decisive rounds, he showed why he held the title. Smith came back in the last round with a rush but could not come the points piled up against him. Jerry Blanchard will meet Trenton, saved the night for the station boxing team. Sergeant Major Perrier of Toronto in three rounds LAC Hutchison of Mountain View scored a technical knockout over Ken Williams of Trenton station while AC1 Johnny Saunders, Montreal, stationed at Trenton, defeated AC2 Bob Clarke, Montreal, stationed at Trenton, defeated AC2 Peter Wink of Windsor also on the station.

A Real Fanny Bout

The funniest bout of the night but yet one of the best, was the last on the card, when Cpl. Lebkin, Brooklyn, editor of "Comical Comment" met "Firefly" Stiles of the Fire Department and really battled for 3 rounds. The match was the result of a challenge, neither boy knowing anything about the art of fisticuffs. They were taken in hand after being matched and thoroughly trained and Wednesday night, they marched into the ring followed by their seconds each. A lengthy discussion was held in the centre of the ring, with the seconds having a prominent part. It was only fun until the first contest started and then it was every man for himself and "Firefly" acquitted himself well.

Nope Ran High

The farmer's wife had a very sharp tongue, but one day he got a rest from her nagging. A farm horse kicked her so badly that she had to go to hospital for treatment.

During her absence there was an unusual run of callers at the farm.

"It's very nice of the neighbors, especially the men, to call and ask after the missus," the farmer remarked to the servant-girl.

"Ay, sir," replied the girl; "but most of them want to know if you'll sell the horse."

Not Like Father.

Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world who refereed the other night's wrestling show at the Armouries, isn't exactly what you might term a conversationalist. However we ran into his most vulnerable conversational topic namely John Jr. The younger Sharkey is a sophomore at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Md. and although but 18 years of age hopes to be commissioned to the U. S. Navy before the present world hostilities cease. "Do you think Johnny junior will take to the boxing ring like dad?" we asked Sharkey Sr. regarding his six-foot tall son.

"Well, the kid won the boxing title of his class and played football for the Navy and basketball as well," admitted Jack. "However, I hope he'll stick to his studies. After all I didn't have the opportunity of an education, so I hope he'll take advantage of his studies", added Jack Sr.

"If Johnnie decides to turn to sports as a vocation after the war what line do you think he'll excel in?" we asked Sharkey. Without hesitation Jack answered—"Baseball".

Picks Fighters.

We asked Jack to select the best all-time fighters he has been boxing shows and here's what he came up with:-

Heavyweight—Jack Dempsey.
Light heavyweight — Tommy Loughran.
Middleweight—Harry Greb.
Welterweight—Mickey Walker.
Lightweight—Benny Leonard.
Featherweight—Kid Chocolate.
Bantamweight—Pete Hermann.
Flyweight—Frankie Wilder.

He agrees with Dempsey's recent estimate that the army commando course is tougher than any ring fight.

He says Tunney is doing a magnificent job with the navy, and he adds, that he is in touch with Sharkey mallce, that Dempsey's still great but, if not punchy, at least wobbly on the pins.

A Going Concern.

Allan Meagher, promotional director of the Hume Arena, has completed arrangements for a goodly number of sundry and all-star outstanding attractions at the local palace de sport and Market St. Barn dance gardens. Apparently Allan has connections and influence with the Canadian Sport Enterprises, the same under which Promoter Frank Tunney now operates his wrestling business. So-called so because the maestro talked Tunney into bringing Jack Sharkey to town and now hopes to give the patrons even more excitement at the local sports emporium. He also has been instrumental in bringing some of the better known ranking dance bands in the business to Belleville and adds to his prowess by seeking new entertaining projects whenever available.

However, if promotional director Meagher wants to get in the good graces of the fans all he has to do is bring Sanjo Singh, the mad Hindu by Belleville, for a wrestling appearance against Katan.

Flyer Grounded.

Jerry McPeake, Air Force heavyweight boxing champ, who has won his last six bouts by the K.O. route, ran into an abrupt snag at the hands of the Army boxing champion, Vern Escoe, over at the Trenton station on Wednesday night. McPeake lasted exactly 45 seconds with the colored Army title-holder, who is just a little to rich for F/O. Charlie Box's pride of the Air Force.

Upwards to 2,000 boxing fans took in the mid-summer boxing show at the Trenton air base Wednesday night when eight capitol bouts were presented. Flt.-Sergt. Hub Smith, who had been undefeated in four years ago tonight at Chicago. Ross won the decision after an electrically contested affair. Then he went on to win the welterweight crown in 1935.

Around We Go.

Maz Peoples' Marines have met and downed every team in the district softball loop. Their final triumph came last night when they beat Tweed 9 to 4. As a matter of fact the Marines played and won three of four games in as many nights. Their third win was with No. 6 Repair Depot on Wednesday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 412

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There is no question about the real meaning of an opening bid of two in a suit. At least, not with those who are in the know. Like the Culbertsons.

The most understandable statement on the subject is the one made by Mrs. Culbertson. She has a way of simplifying the most complicated bridge items. Her statement follows:

When a player makes an opening forcing two-bid, he says to his partner: "My hand is so strong that no matter what you have, I want to bid a game.

"For all I know you may not have as much as a ten-spot in your hand. But still I will not be content until we have arrived at a contract of at least three notrump, or four in a major suit, or five in a minor suit; in any case, enough for game.

"I think we can make a game on my hand alone, without any help from you. If you have, well, so much the better, of course. Anyway, do not allow the bidding to die until we are safely at a game contract.

"Whatever you bid, make some response to my two-bid. Twill then relabid and then if my rebid is still not enough for game, then you must again make some response. Like that eventually we will be sure to play the hand at a game contract.'

That is the end of Mrs. Culbertson's quotes. Packed into a short sentence it would say: "When your partner starts with an opening bid of two in a suit, keep it open to game if it kills you."

But the first response from partner must signal whether there is help for a slam. If not, that first response from partner is a bid of two no-trump.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two clubs and you have this hand:

♠ K 10 8 5
♥ 7 4 3
♣ A 10 4 3

Your immediate response is two-no-trump. That's the equivalent of saying you have not help for a slam. That's telling him.

may begin to wonder where all the horses come from that you have watched in Western Theres plenty of equine performers in the new Zeele Western, "Billy the Kid in Texas," now playing at the Capitol Theatre. There has to be, for what would a Western be like without the four-footed Thespians.

To complete this splendid program a colored cartoon is shown as well as the new thrilling cliffhanger serial "Captain America," featuring Dick Purcell.

AT THE BELLE

"Cry Havoc"

Several hundred extras were used by M-G-M for outdoor hospital scenes in "Cry Havoc," screen version of the story of thirteen women in Bataan, now playing at the Belle Theatre. Five nurses were also assigned to the production to bandage the playcry for a scene which features Ann Sothern and Joan Blondell. The cast also includes Margaret Sullavan, Marsha Hunt, Fay Bainter, Diana Lewis, Ella Raines, Dorothy Malone, Frances Rafferty, Kay Gratton, Pely Franquelli and Connie Gilchrist.

An interesting Pete Smith specialty "Seventh Column" and the latest Crawford-Avery cartoon "The Inner Tube Antics" and a John Nesbitt Passing Parade, "Home Front" to-morrow complete the program.

Wednesday and Thursday a new picture starring Ginger Rogers has come to the screen of the Belle and when that picture dramatizes a human interest situation reflected in thousands of homes in an America that is at war — an enormously added importance is given the production. This is the case in "Tender Comrade," in which Ginger Rogers is starred by RKO Radio, with a new leading man, Robert Ryan, playing opposite her, coming to the Belle Theatre this weekend. The story of "the girl next door" and the boy she marries, and of what happens when he goes off to war, is the simple but powerful theme of "Tender Comrade" which strikes a timely note in presenting the star of "Once Upon a Honeymoon" and "Kitty Foyle" in a picture enacted by so many American women today.

Poignant and appealing, but with many gay comedy moments to offset the tragic scenes, "Tender Comrade" is hailed as one of the finest pictures which is now showing ged young actor whose portrayals in recent offerings won him the favorable lead as the gay and likeable Chris, turns in a notable performance, as does Ruth Hussey as the willful, impatient Barbara.

Patricia Collinge and Kim Hunter, are the two other members of the group, Mady Christians plays the Austrian housekeeper, Richard Martin and Jane Darwell are also featured in this brief Hempstead production. Walt Disney's Donald Duck in "Trombone Trouble" and the Canadian News of the Day will be presented on the same program on Saturday matinee the 5th chapter of "The Phantom", the year's most thrilling serial will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

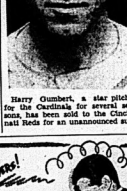
Only 4,003 Customers Saw Tobin Pitch His Two No-Hitters

By BILL KING
Associated Press Sport Writer

Boston, June 23 — (AP)—Pitching two no-hit ball games in less than that many months is thrilling, Jim Tobin, Boston Braves' knuckleballer, admits — but he laments that a total of only 4,003 saw him perform these prodigious feats.

A crowd of 3,506 was almost lost the vast Graves Field stands yesterday when Tobin retired all but two Phillies during a doubleer. They explained that threatening weather probably frightened away many of his admirers and that failing light had sent the photographers scurrying home before his latest epic was hailed.

"Never mind how many saw you do it, you'll go into the record book with Johnny Vander Meer, the only other major leaguer to turn in two no-hitters the same season." A consoling writer said. Then he asked Tobin, "Don't you wish you could finish up the last four innings?"



"No," Tobin replied. "Let Vandy continue to be acclaimed as 'double no-hit.' I'm satisfied to be known as 'one and five-minths no-hit' Tobin."

Anyone but this self-effacing 31-year-old righthander probably would resent the fact that he did not have three no-hit performances in his 1944 record. Three turned back those same Phillies with one hit been April 22.

Most Effective Pitching Given By Cleveland, St. Louis Hurlers

By The Canadian Press

Based on the first 10 weeks of the major baseball season, statistics published last night show the most effective pitching by the Cleveland Indians in the American League and the St. Louis Cardinals in the National circuit. Cleveland twirlers had held opposing hitters to a mere .219 batting average while the Cards allowed batsmen to secure a .240 showing. New York Yankee hurlers and those of the Washington Senators have been the most yielding in the American League, Yankee pounders having been touched for 30 home runs. In the National loop, the Chicago Cub pitchers have been clubbed for a .276 average. Portyfive home runs have been scored in games against the New York Giants.

A big upset occurred yesterday at Chicago in the Women's Western Open golf tournament when the 1941 champion Betty Hasmerle of St. Louis defeated defending champion Patty Berg one up in 19 holes, in today's semi-final round Miss Hasmerle faces Grace Lenczyk who she meets Babe Didriksen Zaharias, former champion.

Lawrence Bulton, 35, former baseball player, died last night at his Brooklyn home. After umpiring in the International League he served for many years as a scout of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Baron Gratian, Jr., owned and driven by P. Million of New Hamburg, won two of three heats to capture the three-for-all feature of yesterday's harness card at Peterson Park, Mitchell, Ont., his best time for the mile being 2.11 3/4. Million's Minto Harvester also captured the first.

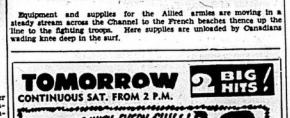
TORONTO HURLER JUST MISSES PERFECT GAME

Alex Mustalkis Pitches One-Hitter Against Jersey City

ORIOLES WIN

By The Associated Press

Alexander Mustalkis of the Toronto Maple Leafs almost became "Alexander the Great" as he came close to hurling a no-hit no-run game last night.



The 25-year-old veteran had a no-hitter until two were out in the eighth, when a single by Jersey City's Mike Schemer not only spoiled it, but his shutout as well. However, Alex notched his sixth victory of the season with a 3-1 triumph over the Jersey Giants after Toronto dropped the first game of the double-header, 4-2.

Baltimore increased its first-place lead over the Bisons by defeating Buffalo 6-4, as Bobo Pallos allowed the Herd only six hits for his seventh victory.

The Rochester Red Wings and Syracuse Chiefs battled 14 innings before the latter edged out a 7-6 decision. Trailing 5-0, the Wings tied the score with three in the seventh and one in the eighth, and seemed to have pulled the game out of the fire with a tally in the 13th. But Syracuse tied the count in its half, and won on the next frame when Ben Geraghty and Len Rice singled and Geraghty scored on a wild throw by catcher Del Rice.

By HYE BOSSIN

Who do you think ought to play Will Rogers on the screen? Right now John Wayne looks like the choice. . . The late John Barrymore, despite the family tradition, started out as an artist. Some fine short stories were found among his effects and they will be published by his brother Lionel. . . Gens Fowler, friend and biographer of Barrymore, has a trick which he claims saves time. After reserving seats to the theatre he sends a note to the manager the night before attending to the effect that "tomorrow night my wife will lose a pair of gloves" at stand-at-seat. . . The Red Cross and St. John Ambulance Corps each received a cheque for $12,500 as partial payment of the Canadian profits from "Forever and a Day," the RKO all-star film made gratis by British stars for USA, British and Canadian funds.

Joseph Calleia, the screen villain, is a British subject, having been born in Malta and educated in England. His debut as Maltese screen was quite an event, the citizens of Valetta crowding the theatre and his father occupying the Governor's box. In the film Calleia was killed. His father waved wildly to stop the film and ran weeping out of the theatre. It took the whole family to convince him that his son was still alive.

On the set of "None But the Lonely Heart" there is a private amusement arcade. The extras, while waiting, put pennies in the machines. Each night the prop man removes the pennies and divies them. . . Cary Grant's marriage to the five-and-ten store heiress, Barbara Hutton, has provided a headache for Betty Hutton, who isn't even a relation. People keep writing to her to ask this and that about Cary, under the impression that he is Betty's husband. Many of the questions are very personal. The other day a woman asked Betty where she could find Cary Grant. "I haven't the slightest idea," Betty answered. "I should think," said the annoyed enquirer, "that you would know where your husband is!"

A number of Canadian newspapers have been editorializing about ladies who wear their eye-obstructing millinery in theatres. Bill has been part of a game, each making suggestions about what to do with them.

One paper said: "How about making it legal and to good taste for a man to give in to his real inner cravings; to plant his head on the screen and grab trapeize and slowly grind it down to her ears."

The "Tugboat Annie" stories will return to the screen soon, with Marjorie Rambeau doing Marie Dressler's role and Charles Winninger the part originated by Wallace Beery. A studio has just purchased 21 of the stories from Norman Reilly Raine, the author, who hails from Toronto and was with the RCAF in the first World War. . . Judy Garland will have the lead in the new version of showboat. . . Mae West, preparing for that role, signs her letters "Catherine the Great."

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Ghost That Walks Alone"

When advance notice comes out on a motion picture about to arrive at the town it usually features the name of Arthur Lake in the cast, a Dagwood has learned to expect laughs. Lots of them. Add to this title such as "Columbia's "The Ghost That Walks Alone" scheduled to arrive at the McCarthy Theatre this weekend, and it means a host of chills, thrills, and reams of screams. This particular show, filmed by Clarence Upson Young from the novel of Richard Shattuck, is said to be history-making.

It all has to do with a radio sound effects man (Arthur Lake) and what happens to him on the first night of his honeymoon with the lissome (Lynne Roberts) of his fast-flying airshow. And from advance reports, what happens is plenty.

No sooner do Arthur and his bride arrive at a mountain lodge than the other participants in the radio show follow. They build upon Martha's refusals for the next appearance, which must be good or else. But they don't every fear.

Through somebody's changing the number on his honeymoon suite, Arthur wanders into the wrong bedroom and finds a dead man-the show's producer. Wildly he seeks aid from the fellow guests, but when he returns the bodies and screams are said to pile up to a climax of dangerous suffixes.

Ghosts wail, deagenian talk, cops stalk and girls balk. While the identity of the killer will keep everyone guessing.

Aiding and abetting the mystery and laugh proceedings is a staff of expert thespians. Featured with Arthur Lake are the well-remembered and beauteous Janis Carter whose last Columbia picture was "Swing Out The Blues" and the blonde and glamorous Lynne Roberts.

Others in the cast are Frank Sully, Warren Ashe and Matt Willis, remembered for his fine-some performance in Columbia's "The Return Of The Vampire," "Moon Over Las Vegas"

Milton Rosen and Everett Carter composed four original songs for "Moon Over Las Vegas", Universal comedy musical with Anne Gwynne and David Bruce, opening this weekend at the McCarthy Theatre.

The numbers are: "So Good-night" played as an accordion specialty by Ann Triola; "Faithful Forever" sung by The Sportsmen; "Moon Over Las Vegas", sung by Lillian Cornell and "A Dream Ago" featuring Connie Haines.

In addition to the Rosen-Carter songs, the tuneful film features "Trunk Of Texas" by Jimmy McHugh and Frank Loesser; "My Blue Heaven" sung by Gene Austin and a specialty number by Austin and the Sherrell Sisters, "You Marvelous You."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Princess O'Rourke"

Ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls. . .If ever there was a motion picture to leave you with a good, glad, happy-go-lucky feeling its "Princess O'Rourke," co-starring Olivia de Havilland and Robert Cummings, which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre. We honestly can't find words to tell you how big and lovable it is. So see it for yourself. "Princess O'Rourke" at the Capitol.

"Billy the Kid in Texas"

When you see Bob Steele pursuing a madly-fleeing bunch of horse thieves their wildly galloping steeds forced to the speed-limit in an attempt to shake off the grim avenger riding on their trail, you

Who said there wasn't any glamor in sports? Well, how about these two golfing gals? They are Kay Byrne, left, of Rye, N.Y., and Katharine Fox of Glen Ridge, N.J., and both are topnotch golfers. The two were snapped at Pinehurst, N.C., where they played in the North and South women's tourney.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE O. ROWE

CHAPTER 24

"Don't ask. Give them to me. It means our lives. Yours—and mine". She tried to keep herself on this desk with arms that shook.

"I still don't get it," I insisted. "Why, and for whom, do you want them?"

Her trembling became worse. "Don't ask. Give them to me. I want to live!" she begged.

I didn't know what to make of it. But I saw I wouldn't find out a thing unless I gave her what she asked for.

"I can't give you the stone", I told her. "It's gone. Bruce hid it in the woods, outside his camp. But the envelope is in the safe—behind you—in the small compartment in back, at the left".

She turned around to the open safe in answer to my gesture toward it and said: "Oh!" and: "Thank you", as she pulled the poor, futile letter from its hiding place. And then she asked: "Shall I close the safe?"

It was such a ridiculous thing to say, under the circumstances, I couldn't help smiling.

"If it makes you feel better, I told her. "Only, if your time is so short: don't you think you ought to use it for reading the letter, so that you know—what's in it?"

"I know what's in it. All I want is, to get rid of it—be free—live!", she burst out passionately. And, shaking herself: "Come yourself, Stella! Walk! You're too heavy to drag all the way up!" And the next instant Mrs. Libby appeared in the door, firmly holding on to Stella Avery—livid, disheveled, whimpering, and pulling in reverse like an obstreperous child.

For a long moment the picture held. The four of us remained motionless: Mrs. Libby small, aristocratic and determined; Stella on the verge of hysterics; Amy trying to shrink into the wall with fear; I who turned to stone behind the desk, staring at the other three. Very stupidly, no doubt.

Then Amy, and the most important Mrs. Libby appeared in the door, firmly holding on to Stella Avery—livid, disheveled, whimpering, and pulling in reverse like an obstreperous child.

For a long moment the picture held. The four of us remained motionless: Mrs. Libby small, aristocratic and determined; Stella on the verge of hysterics; Amy trying to shrink into the wall with fear; I who turned to stone behind the desk, staring at the other three. Very stupidly, no doubt.

Then Amy, and the most important Mrs. Libby appeared in the room, and Stella's hands took the struggling and squirming Stella away from her victim, holding her without apparent effort.

"It's awright,-Miss Amy. I got her fast. Sorry I wasn't here quick-er". I heard him say in his usual, surly drawl, as Amy collapsed in a chair, fighting for breath and nursing her bruised throat.

After that I have no clear memory of the chronological order of what happened. I only know that all at once the room was full of people. Inspector Pettengill. And Millie and Conley Forrestall poured in, and behind them the hall was crammed with policemen.

Aunt Millie rushed toward me, I remember, and Conley Forrestall reached his daughter in a few long strides and bent over her. I think he said something.

Whatever it was, it broke Amy down. She gave a great sob and flung herself at Mrs. Libby's feet. "Oh, Dad!" she wailed pitifully. "I didn't know! Not until last night! He was going to kill her too, and I couldn't let that's why I came back here, for the stone and the letter. I had to. He said he'd kill me too if I didn't bring them to him. Oh, Dad, I can't believe it! I—I loved him so!"

Then more sobs. Deep—racking. And after a while, silence.

Mrs. Libby broke it. "A niece to be proud of, that's what I have!" she addressed the exhausted Stella, who was standing limply in Roberts' big, white-gloved hands. Then she told the Inspector: "My sincere apologies, Josiah Pettengill. For the whole dumb bunch of us. Now if I hadn't been blind, I'd have seen what was going on, in time to save Bruce Burton's life—long before that. Or Stella's, for that matter, unveiling and shaking. And if Stella hadn't been the unnerved old fool she is, she'd have—"

The Inspector cut into her harangue with his quiet authority. "Never mind all that, now. Main thing is, it's over. We got the murderer. Bring him, in Flynn!" he ordered, over his shoulder.

The next moment Sergeant Flynn was coming through the door, closely followed by a group of his men. Between them, by him—his collar and tie torn and one eye swollen shut and blackened — was Curtis Avery.

Two hours later we were all in the drawing room, waiting for Inspector Pettengill's return: Mrs. Libby, Amy and her father, Aunt Millie,I—and Roberts. Even Dad Forrestall had been there, called into town by Aunt Millie. And the perfectly impodent Cats, still pale, but over the worst of her shock.

Only Stella Avery was missing. She had been carried off in hysterics by the hastily summoned Dr. Masterman, after hearing her husband's acknowledgement of his guilt.

I was still in a sort of trance—and, I am certain, so were the others—after the many surprises and shocks of the last hours, because I don't believe Mrs. Libby's decision, accompanied by threats and bribes, to keep that announced to an accusation of his wife.

Inspector Pettengill had been first.

"I should have known you'd lead them—Providence, perhaps your stupid mouth shut!" he'd spat at the cowering girl. "I was a fool, thinking you'd keep your word!"

"I didn't tell anyone. I came here as I promised you and—"

Amy's quavering defence had been drowned in his furious: "Shut up! And Lord help you if I ever get out of Thermaman!" Then he had sneeringly indicated Stella: "Look at her! And listen to her! To 'extenuating circumstances'! Wouldn't it drive any man to murder—having to live with that?"

It had hardly been the time or place to remind him that he had become Stella's husband of his own greedy will, and the Inspector can him short by ordering Sergeant Flynn to take his prisoner to headquarters.

Amy had followed the sergeant as a matter of course when he walked out of the room with Avery. But the Inspector had not allowed her: "Heh! Miss Amy! Where you think you're going?"

"To jail", she said epitelly, her face dearly gold in her dress, whiteface. "You're arresting me, too, aren't you? As an accessory. Isn't that what they call it?"

"An accessory to what?" he had asked with gruff kindliness. "A silly love affair? Would have to run in half the girls in town, if that was a crime. Or—for risking your skin to save Miss Kay's? Don't be foolish. Go home for a rest. Or, no. You take her over to your house with you, Miss Kay. I'll be back after a spell, to talk to you".

Amy had come with Aunt Millie and me, mutely and unresistingly, and we had made her comfortable in my room, Aunt Millie dosing her with aromatic spirits of ammonia and logne on her temples. I don't know what else they might have had done the trick, or whether the fact that we were fussing over her had worked as a distraction. Anyway, she had actually smiled, after a while.

"You're terribly kind. I don't deserve it. I—I've hated you before you came, and now she said contritely.

"It wasn't I know it! Why, in heavens name? I'd asked.

Because somehow he—Curt — had heard of Bruce's marriage to you and said—said—". She gulped and helplessly, and then burst out: "He said you'd come here to force Bruce to live with you, or give you half his fortune, and if he could help his friend to get rid of you that way he—he'd make love to you himself."

"And you were jealous of me, sight unseen, when you didn't even know if I would fall for the scheme?" I marvelled — thinking that the Burton's one humbling attempt in that direction.

"Yes. Yes, I was", Amy confessed. "I knew it was stupid, when I saw you were interested in Allen Reid. But it really wasn't what you did, or might do, that mattered. I feel so awful. It was Curt was raving about you all the time—".

So Avery had fostered Amy's jealous dislike of me, to make sure we wouldn't become friends, she wouldn't confide in me! What a strangely simple explanation for the one riddle I'd never been able to solve in my mind, when I had found some kind of an answer to all the others.

At last the Inspector came in—much graver looking than usual—and for the last time took his seat behind the improvised desk.

"Well, it's all over," he told us with calm satisfaction. "We got his confession—in writing. So now I guess you'd all like to hear what I have to say, and want you to fill in a couple of holes for me."

Then he started his beloved testering, and presently was thinking out loud.

"Had me stumped at first, this case had. Mostly 'cause everybody was lying to me. Looked like something was up for fair over to the Burton house, when even the maids was in it. Nettle acting like she was Miss, with them changed brooches—and compacts lost all over the place, and Miss Amy having raadyvoos there and all. Thought of all kinds of shenanigans, but never that it simply was Mr. Bruce was hiding. Didn't even guess it Sunday, when Miss Kay told me who the murderer was".

He paused and teetered, and his face hardened.

"Awful dumb I been Sunday," he said in a voice stiffed to him—his collar and tie torn and one eye swollen shut and blackened — was Curtis Avery.

Two hours later we were all in the drawing room, waiting for Inspector Pettengill's return: Mrs. Libby, Amy and her father, Aunt Millie,I—and Roberts. Even Dad Forrestall had been there, called into town by Aunt Millie. And the perfectly impodent Cats, still pale, but over the worst of her shock.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop and we stopped in front of the fish market to watch the fish swimming around in the tank in the window and I said, "Pop, they wouldn't look so happy if they knew what was going to happed to them, would they?

Who would? pop said.

Mealing nobody, and just then some man stopped eating peanut, shells. Poor little things, pop said, it always makes me sad to see a fellow human being called on a bed of onions it no longer impresses me as being part of a fellow creature. In other words, I don't know any better things to said.

Ah, yes you do, the man said. You are a human being endowed with the faculty of reason, and you know in your inmost heart that you are being a cannibal, he said and pop said, I respect your feelings sir.

Oh thank you, how I wish you could share them, the man said, and pop said, at least I can go so far as you with you joy when you go fishing and you use a worm and a skeleton of innocent plants.

Such a thing as worm you have no right to make such a shocking statement, the man said, and pop said, I'm glad you see it that way.

Meaning he had as much right to use a worm as me in the man did, and we kept on going and I looked around for the little man was still shaking his head sad at the fish.

Prisoner-of-War, Employed In Lumbering, Drowned in Canoe Upset

Port Arthur, June 23 (CP) — Provincial police today announced that A. Kaz, a prisoner-of-war, formerly of Schud, drowned last Tuesday when a canoe upset north of Nipigon, Ont. a few hours after R. Schud, another German prisoner, escaped from the Nonwatin River, 55 miles east of here.

Death of Schud, whose body has been recovered, was announced yesterday by provincial authorities who are under way to recover the body of Kaz. Both were German employed in timber camps in Northwestern Ontario.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 23 — (CP)—The mining groups and the industrials worked higher in the early session and the western oil stocks weakened moderately. Trading volume held up at 670,000 shares for the first 3 hours.

Dome gained a point, McIntyre 1/2 and Hollinger 3/8. The Yellowknife stocks were also wide gainers. Gunnar gained 40 cents to 7.90, Consolidated Mic 25 cents to 1.35 and Bear 10 cents to 1.72. Other strong golds were O'Brien, Marbenor Gold Fields, East Malartic, Pickle Crow and Seattle. In the base metal group prices were up for Noranda, Sherritt Gordon, Smelters, Labrador and Mining Corporation.

The utility, food and building groups were declining. Senior oils and golds held steady and in the liquors Distillers-Seagrams was stronger by a point.

The stock of Thompson-Lundmark gold mine was listed today. It opened at 74 and worked back to 70.

Western oils were a bit heavy in-cluding Royalite, British-Dominion, Pacific Petroleum and Mid-Continent. Ajax gained 10 cents to 1.50.

WALL STREET

New York, June 23, (AP)—Speculation and a handful of "blue-chip" attracted buyers in the stock market today but the advance generally was ragged and a number of favorites ran into heavy going. Price changes for the day fractional range toward the fourth hour.

Occasional support was accorded U.S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Dome Mines, Homestake, Certain-Teed Common and Preferred, Eagle Picher, Sperry, Public Service of New Jersey and Columbia Gas.

New highs for 1944 were touched by Fanny Farmer Candy, Sears Roebuck, American Beach, Curtis Publishing and Air Reduction.

Canadian issues were about evenly divided on minor changes.

Moments for Reading Rare On Board A Fighting Frigate

By ROGER TILL
In John O'Londen's Weekly

When a hardened old sailor walked into a public library the other day and asked for the latest novel by Trollop, he was making a break with tradition.

By nature and nurture sailors are not bookish men. The great sea-dogs of the past knew their Bibles and their text-books, but the bulk of their knowledge was drawn direct from life.

"Books—what are they?" growled a Chief Gunner's Mate. "I read the papers and I like Dickens, but when I joined the Navy thirty years ago I never had time for reading—except the Seamanship Manual." Then he added, with a smile: "Of course, we did have a ship's library, but that means going down to see the parson.

Even now there is probably less reading in the Navy than in the other Services. There simply are not the opportunities. When Dr. Johnson compared a ship with a gaol, his ready gift for analogy may have run away with him, but he was at least right in emphasizing the lack of room. It is one thing to read a book in barracks on dry land, and quite another in a mess deck, packed with hammock-stand bedraggled humanity, on a small ship rolling in rough sea.

Again, there is very little time. When a man has done his watch, his mess duties and his dhobeying (the naval word for laundering) he has only scraps of time left and his one desire is "to get his head down." That is one reason perhaps, why sailors are unpolitical animals, interested only in the politics of the ship. They live in a world at once broader and narrower than Chevy Street.

My own experience in a frigate confirmed these impressions. When I first went to sea I thought, "Ah, now I shall be able to do some reading. At last I shall be able to fill in those gaps"—and I banged several books into my kit-bag. I did read when I had the opportunity—but those golden moments were few and fleeting.

My stand-by was "Alice in Wonderland," and when I look back on those burly-burly days in our little ship I realize what a lucky choice I made. How madly just, how accidentally ago seemed the tea-party and the croquet tournament! How well versed I must have been in the finer points of topsy-turvydom!

At a time when winter and rough weather were likely at any minute to fling us from one side of the deck to the other, I not only relayed Alice's Adventure: I believed in them.

My other books were chosen at random. There were Tristram Shandy, easy to dip into; a collection of English essays (Bacon on Adversity was good medicine); and Graham Green's psychological thriller, A Gun For Sale, which was read with relish by several of my shipmates.

We had a ship's library too, but apart from a few World's Classics the shelves were full of dull stuff. Titles that impressed themselves indelibly on my memory were Mrs. Simpkins' Tea-Party (published in 1902) and Lives of Early Methodist Preachers. Some of us patronized the library during the dog watches, but we couldn't help wondering why people sent us only those books they had obviously found unreadable.

Generally speaking, sailors are not especially fond of books about the sea. They see quite enough of it as it is. Also, they have a sneaking suspicion that many of these stories are written by people who have never sailed the seas.

On the other hand, sailors are human enough to like reading about themselves; hence the popularity of Nicholas Monsarrat's records of his own experiences in convettes during the war. C. S. Forester and James Hanley give the feeling that they know what they are writing about; and it is significant that Hanley, who used to be a merchant seaman, is himself an admirer of Conrad.

When a man is on foreign service he reads little apart from Westerns, thrillers and humorous books. With the older generation Jeffery Farnol always goes down well. As an old sailor put it to me: "He wrote nicely about the country, and that's what I like to think about when I'm at sea."

It is when they are ashore that sailors have a chance of catching up with their reading. Sometimes they have a severely practical purpose. Courses have to be studied and there is a need for reference books. Some of the higher ratings give lectures, to prepare which they must consult authorities on everything from radium to soya beans.

To be a Janelite in the Navy is not necessarily to be a devotee of Miss Austen. More than forty copies of that invaluable reference book, Jane's Fighting Ships, were sold recently to sailors (at three guineas each) at one railway bookstall alone.

Discussion groups are becoming increasingly important, too; and perhaps it is a sign of the times that a literary society has been started at the naval Three Arts Club at Scutthes. Poetry and modern plays are in particular demand.

The golden rule seems to be, that given the books that are worth reading, the Navy will finish the job.

PICTON

Canneries Freeze Strawberry Pack

Picton, June 23 — Strawberries are being accepted by several canneries causing factories to note are being placed in tin cans due to the shortage of metal, it is not permissable to can strawberries. Instead they are being frozen at the local cold storage plant for shipment to Toronto for processing into jam or for canning. Here, they are hulled and placed into barrels with sugar.

Those factories which had licences to make jam in 1941 may do so now, but no local factories have such permits.

While not as profitable as canning, the local factories are trying to hold their customers until restrictions on cans are lifted. Cans are being freed for the canning of raspberries.

Postwar Committee

Prince Edward Cûnera Rehabilitation Committee met Wednesday with County Council to discuss plans in connection with returned men. A reception committee was appointed, consisting of Reeve W. Henley, chairman, Warden Earl Oosterhout, Picton, and the Canadian Legion, Service Clubs, Mrs. A. Beckwith and the women's Institutes, Mrs. C. H. McGibbon for the Red Cross, Mrs. W. G. Orndorff for the I.O.D.E., and Mrs. A. Jones for the Naty League

Finance committee members are J. M. Harkwik, W. A. Branscombe, R. H. Read, Mrs. A. Arnold, C. C. Welsh, D. J. Baxter, Philip Doddo.

J. B. Dunkley is president and J. P. Williams, secretary.

The finance committee is to meet with County Council May 30 to discuss financing, which would include a secretary. Speakers stressed the importance of having some qualified person to look after the interests of returned men.

Township Programs

At County Council yesterday, Provincial Engineer C. A. Poynton urged that each township present its post-war plans to the Highways Department. He said only two townships here had done this so far. Some enterprises suggested were setting back fences, dealing with curves, hills, and bridges.

WOUNDED TAKING PICTURES DURING OCCUPATION OF ROME

Sarnia, June 22 (CP) — Lieut. Fred Whitcombe of Sarnia, was wounded while taking pictures during the occupation of Rome, his father, W. J. Whitcombe, was informed.

BANCROFT

Orangemen Attend Divine Service

Bancroft — Orangemen of Bancroft Lodge L.O.L. No. 684, held their annual church walk 85 St. John's Anglican Church on June 14. There wasn't as large a turnout as usual. The Rev. W. L. Simmons gave a splendid address dwelling on the story of Gideon leading his chosen Israelites against the enemy and also deliberating on the part Orangemen of the present time can do to better the country as a whole. The hymns chosen were very appropriate for the Orange service. The altar was nicely decorated for the occasion which gave the whole service a pleasant setting.

A new coal chute is being installed in the yards just north of the Canadian National Railways station at Bancroft which will be much more up to date than the present chute now being used. In future the engines will be able to coal up much more conveniently.

Miss Patricia Fuller commenced her new duties as bookkeeper at the Bancroft Garage, for Mr. C. E. Stringer, proprietor.

Mr. Ross Plumley of the Ordnance Corps at Ottawa, is spending a furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Plumley, of Bancroft.

Sgt. Harry Plumley and Mrs. Plumley of Peterboro, are spending a couple of weeks in Bancroft with relatives.

Marjorie Rae of the Provost Corps at Trenton, spent the weekend at the home of her aunts, Misses Edith and Alice Mullett of Bancroft.

Mr. Chauncey Rae, of Timmins, is in town on business visiting at the home of relatives.

Miss Betty Sproule, of Picton, is spending a holiday in Bancroft, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Sprung.

Mr. Edgar Stapley has commenced work on his property on North Hastings Street, filling in the premises with fill preparatory to erecting a new home and also a garage to house his new fire equipment.

Mr. Murray Maxwell, teller at the Bank of Nova Scotia, Bancroft, is spending his annual vacation, and is in Toronto at present.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Fuller were in Peterborough on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wiggins, of Belleville, were visiting with relatives at Baptiste and Bancroft over the weekend.

Mr. William Moxam, Mr. G. L. Moxam, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moxam and Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Wiggins motored to Forrester's Falls on Monday evening to attend the funeral of the late Wesley Corrigan whose funeral took place Tuesday afternoon.

INJECTS PEP INTO BALLET

New York (CP) — Agnes de Mille, five feet-three, brown haired with aquiline features and a witty, direct way of talking, is injecting "Virginity" into American ballet. Success—a fabulous New York engagement—came just as she had about decided she public was getting enough ballet at Radio City Music Hall.

She has never excelled as a technical dancer. She gets an idea first, then works out the movements and patterns. She dances as she thinks these on herself, or asks other dancers to try them. Sometimes she works seven hours straight.

It thrills her that Hollywood where she, movie-struck, lived as a child, wants her back. But she remembers a sad experience in '36 when she did a dance for "Romeo and Juliet." The dance was cut out, for closeups of Norma Shearer.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Pearsall were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Hudgin of South Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tubbs and Karen visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Tubbs, of Picton, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Pearsall, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Pearsall and Mrs. Earl Pearsall were among the guests entertained by Mr. and Mrs. M. Brummell of Wartins Corners Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton Vincent and family of Cannifton, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wager and Jean, of Picton were Sunday guests of Mr. C. A. Vincent.

JUST FOR THE RECORD

Butte, Montana (CP) — Harvey D. Howard walked into the draft board office and said he'd never been registered for Selective Service. He was in the Montana national guard when war came to the U.S., served 11 months in the Pacific and was wounded. Recently given a medical discharge, he enlisted his name be placed, at last, on the draft list.

Post-War Reconstruction Proposals Heard in House

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 23 —(CP)— Members of the House of Commons yesterday peered anxiously at the shape of things to come as they set forth their proposals for reconstruction in Canada after the war.

Their discussion—on a bill to set up a department of reconstruction—ranged from work projects in the Maritimes to financing by the issue of currency; criticism of the economic forecasts; the need of joint Dominion, provincial and municipal action; major grants for education and export trade in post-war years.

Debate on the reconstruction bill will continue today.

Speaking on the reconstruction bill, Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant to Mr. King, said that if new capacities and skills developed during the war were used in reconstruction, "we can produce jobs for everyone, jobs at wages, that have never been known before."

The war had brought a change in the Canadian spirit "and no longer shall we be willing to face anything like the old days. We will not stand it, and there is no reason why we should."

Grayson Gives Views.

Gordon Grayson, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said the ministry of reconstruction should be associated with a joint Dominion-provincial-municipal research council so that their plans could be correlated, and rights protected.

Mr. Grayson said there must be no "economic thuggin" and progressive ideas must be kept to the fore. It was very appropriate to look on the future as being dark, and the state should be prepared to intervene for the security of the nation.

Canada had to guard against monopolies whether they came from big business or big labor or from "forms of state monopolies which can be just as dangerous," said Mr. Grayson.

Rational reform was necessary. It could not be achieved if every plan put forward was belittled and attacked without careful consideration.

Woolly and impractical, radical and revolutionary thinking was to be expected, he said, but what he hoped would come a united and a better Canada, going into the battles of peace.

Wants Federal Grants

J. W. Noseworthy (CCF — York South) said the reconstruction program should contribute $40,000,000 to education — $40,000,000 annually to raise teachers' salaries to a decent standard; $40,000,000 to give equality of educational opportunity to students in rural schools and to poorer provinces; $40,000,000 by way of capital expenditure over seven or eight years to build schools and replace outworn buildings; $3,000,000 for scholarships for gifted students.

Assistance should be given higher education also. A federal grant, of $5,000,000 would allow universities to put their financial affairs in order and reduce students fees. Adult education should be assisted by grants for library facilities and other community services.

Mr. Rose said that even if Canadian armed forces were kept at a level of 200,000 men after the war, there still would be 1,500,000 men and women in need of jobs. The present national income was $10,000,000,000 and to give employment to the additional 1,500,000 persons an increase in that income of at least $3,000,000,000 would be needed.

ENEMY DEFENCES AT CHERBOURG CRUMBLING TORNADO LEAVES 126 DEAD IN TWO STATES

Americans Within 2,000 Yards of Port On South Side

British Forces in Caen Area Advance Against Heaviest Sort of Resistance

HUGE TANK BATTLES

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24.—(AP)—American troops smashing into the powerful outer shell of the Cherbourg defense this morning within 2,000 yards—little more than a mile—of the port on the south and "enemy defences showed signs of crumbling," a field dispatch said, while British forces in the Caen area also advanced.

Tank-escorted British troops took Sle. Honorine La Chardonnerette, four miles northeast of Caen, against the heaviest sort of resistance as Gen. Montgomery lashed out with his first swift attack to break the German hold on that sector.

Associated Press War Correspondent, Roger Greene, reported that in a desperate tank battle yesterday in the woods between Sle. Honorine and Cuverville, a mile to the north west, British tanks and anti-tank gunners knocked out 23 or 32 German tanks. British losses were described officially as "very small".

Pulverizing Air Assault

In the Cherbourg fighting an American spearhead punctured the stubborn interlaced Nazi pillbox defences southeast of Quettehy, the fortress just southwest of Cherbourg, after a pulverizing air and artillery preparation, Associated Press War Correspondent, Don Whitehead said in a dispatch filed ten at 9.15 a.m., today (2.15 a.m., E.D.T.)

Headquarters said the Americans fought forward slowly and had all but reached the sea on both sides of the besieged port in hand-to-hand struggles with Germans retasting frantically. The assault troops are battling "within sight of the docks", supreme headquarters said.

Line a "Death Trap"

Whitehead wrote that 1,200 prisoners have been taken in the last 24 hours, and that the Cherbourg line had become a "death trap" for hundreds of Nazis who refused an allied ultimatum to surrender, and were forced to fight by German officers holding guns at their backs.

In bitter battle, the Americans have blasted a wedge deep into the German defences. The Cherbourg is doomed as a enemy stronghold".

A field dispatch from the British sector at Sle. Honorine declared the German command was trying desperate counter-attacks from deep within France, and even drawing on strategic reserves in the Cherbourg area "to replace forces thrown into the bloodshed area".

Reinforcements Flow In.

Clear, calm weather speed the flow of power into Normandy today from hundreds of landing craft and sky-trains of Allied bombers roared over France.

Throughout elaborate defences bucked under the massive artillery and air bombardment, and inclose were the Americans to the Germans in the desperate struggle that Lt.-Gen Bradley pulled his men back while the Navy and air force in so soften up the enemy pillboxes and trenches.

A field dispatch said an American breakthrough was made between Montebourg and Quettehy. Fortified Mont Du Roc is 2½ miles southwest of Montebourg and three near Nouainville, where rises one of the three peaks dominating the port. Octeville is a fortress six two miles east of Nouainville.

Before this breakthrough other American forces captured by storm a fortified high point of Quettehy, a mile east of Cherbourg, another of the peaks.

Breakthrough Explained

Presumably these two breakthroughs were being exploited to bitter fighting because the supreme command's Communique No. 37 noted this morning that "we are making steady progress and now are within a few miles of the port north coast on both sides of the fortress."

Berlin radio this morning said after several hours of heavy fighting the American lines had broken the outer defense zone in the south and southeast, but asserted they were stopped there. It declared "no less than eight infantry and two tanks divisions" had been thrown into the assault.

(The German communique today acknowledged that Americans had captured a number of strong points and made further progress toward Cherbourg. Local attacks were repulsed, the enemy declared, and two Nazi coastal batteries "scattered" an Allied landing unit east of the Orne River, the high command conceded, with naval units sinking a 2000 ton Allied landing vessel and a destroyer.)

Canadian Govt. Associated With British Protest

Ottawa, June 24 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the Commons yesterday the Canadian government is associated with the British government in the solemn protest against the "cold blooded act of violence" of German authorities in shooting 50 Allied prisoners, including six Canadians.

Mr. King said Canada would join with Britain and other Allied governments in taking steps to ascertain the individuals responsible for the shooting of the prisoners and bring them to trial.

For the assurance of relatives of men who are prisoners Mr. King said the government had no knowledge of any other mass shooting of British prisoners of war.

Mr. King said it was natural that men deprived of freedom should attempt to regain it and German prisoners of war in Canada occasionally escaped from camps in which they were held.

Each recapture a German prisoner was subject to confinement of a period of 28 days, during which he was confined to normal full rations, opportunities for exercise and reading. This was the only penalty for attempting escape authorized in the International Convention.

MEDIUM BOMBERS RIP GUN POSTS BLOCKING DRIVE

More Than 250 Tons Of Explosives Dumped On the Heavy Guns Near Cherbourg

RAIL YARDS BLASTED

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
AP War Correspondent

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 24.—(AP)—American heavy bombers, ranging over France with escorting fighters which made up a total force of 800 planes, hammered rail yards, airfields and other land enemy installations behind the Normandy battle front today while medium bombers ripped up four German gun positions blocking the advance of infantry into Cherbourg.

The raids followed R.A.F. night blows at Nazi rail bottlenecks and R.C.A.F. attacks on flying bomb installations in France.

The Berlin radio reported U. S. heavy bombers also were heading into northwest Germany.

Flights of bombers were jammed with Allied planes of all types which roared back and forth continuously for more than five hours this morning and which were still going on at noon.

Keep Up Close Support.

Renewing their close support of the Allied invasion troops, the bombers, under fighter-bomber escort, dumped more than 250 tons or explosives on heavy guns near Cherbourg. Crew members described the results as devastating.

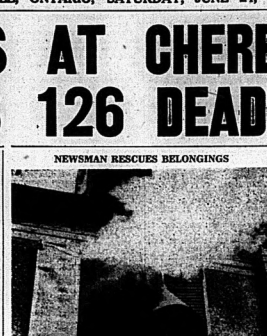
Encountering only negligible anti-aircraft fire, the big German planes at all, the entire force of bombers and escorting planes returned from the mission.

The daylight blow came after R.A.F. heavies smashed at Nazi rail bottlenecks some 250 miles south of the Normandy fighting zone, and after Mosquitos struck night rail yards in Rouen, Evreux, Venneuil, Meddon, downed 12 German planes over the beachhead.

Black Rail Yards

The British bombers blasted the yards at Saintes, north of Bordeaux and at Lisieux, scene of marshalling for 36 hours the Allied campaign aimed at cutting the Nazi armies' lines now choked with German reinforcements for the Normandy battlefront. Two heavy night bombers were missing from this operation.

Pilots raiding Saintes reported a big explosion 30 minutes after the end of the attack, and said it lasted at least four minutes.



Meanwhile speedy British Mosquitos dropped delayed action mines in enemy waters and heavy night bombers struck the Pas De Calais coastal region. Monday saturday said six planes were missing from the operation.

Rocket Bomb Attack.

Nine more rocket-armed bomb attack on Southern England continued through the night and until after daylight today, the Air Ministry said. Two of the nine were shot down. Its projectiles plopped down on the southeast coast, bringing to 1,847 than ever, although at less frequent intervals.

The R. A. F. night attacks came after a series of daylight blows by American planes yesterday against the Pas De Calais rocket coast and communications lines used by the Nazis. Three thousand sorties were flown, thousands of tons of bombs exploded, despite unfavorable weather conditions.

Eighteen bombers and fighters in the night cars were destroyed by United States 9th Air Force units.

NEWSMAN RESCUES BELONGINGS

A French chateau, formerly a German headquarters, was taken over by Canadian war correspondents during the bitter fighting on the Normandy front. The Nazis scored direct hits on the building. 28,000-TON JAP AIRCRAFT CARRIER BELIEVED SUNK

American Sub Rams Three Torpedoes Into Flat-Top Sunday

DESTROYER SUNK

Pearl Harbor, June 24. (AP)—A new 28,000-ton Japanese aircraft carrier was believed today to be at the bottom of the Philippines sea—latest reported addition to the disaster which beset Japan's navy when it hesitantly tried to stay the impending doom of Saipan's garrison.

An American submarine rammed three torpedoes into the vitals of the costly Shokaku class flat-top Sunday and the United States Navy, disclosing the action last night, stated "the Japanese carrier is regarded as probably sunk". Sunday was the day Japanese carriers lost 6 to 16 planes to Vice Admiral Marc Mitscher's fast carrier task force on the U.S. invasion fleet at Saipan.

The navy already had announced that American carrier planes, giving chase to the enemy fleet Monday, sank four enemy ships, including a 18,000-ton carrier, and damaged 10 other ships, including a battleship, two 10,000-ton carriers, a light carrier and a cruiser. Last night's communique added a fifth ship, a destroyer, to the carrier and three tankers previously listed as definitely sunk.

There was no official word Friday on the invasion of Saipan in the Marianas, where steadily-reinforced American units are striving to wipe out 20,000 Japanese. Howard Cosmell, Associated Press War Correspondent, wrote yesterday aboard a flagship off Saipan that the enemy was believed withholding his best troops for a climax battle at Tanapag Harbor, north of Garapan, a city now under American artillery fire, Cosmell reported.

Tokyo radio reported that 60 American carrier planes attacked Guam, southwest of Saipan, Friday and claimed 75 were shot down. It was wet of Guam that the carriers of Task Force 58 started Monday to launch planes against the fleeing Japanese fleet.

HOUSE SHAKEN BY BARRAGE

A town in Southern England, June 24—(CP)—The reverberation of terrific gunfire which started to come from a distance of 40 to 50 miles last night, was felt on the English coast for more than an hour after midnight. The ground and houses shook from the ferocity of the barrage.

COASTAL ROAD TO LIVORNO AND PISA BLOCKED

Fifth Army Tanks and Infantry Occupy Town of Roccastrada

8th HELD UP

By EDWARD KENNEDY
AP War Correspondent

Rome, June 24 —(AP)— Fifth Army tanks and infantry, advancing against strong resistance, today occupied Roccastrada on Highway 73 and cut a lateral road to the north, while another column closed in on Follonica, astride Highway 1 along the coastal route to Livorno and Pisa.

The Germans, who are making a firm stand against the British 8th Army in central Italy, are continuing to offer strong resistance east and west of Lake Trasimeno and in general the situation in Italy is little changed, an Allied headquarters communique said.

Today's communique made no mention of Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, which according to a CBS broadcast last night was recaptured by the Germans in a counter-attack.

Last reports from the Adriatic coast sector said 8th Army troops had crossed the Chienti river and had reached the vicinity of Morrovalle and Montecosaro, less than 25 miles from the port or Ancona, but today's communique did not mention activity in that area.

French Colonials Active.

French Colonials, fighting to the east of the American 5th Army, seized a point slightly north of the village of Castiglione D'Orcia, 17 miles west of Chiusi. Between Perugia and the Adriatic coast, 8th Army forces were driving toward Camerino and Macerata.

Poor weather caused cancellation of most medium bomber missions by the Mediterranean Allied Air Force yesterday, but in more than 1,000 sorties over the front the Allied planes downed 21 enemy aircraft, a loss of 12 heavy bombers and eight other planes.

Fighter bombers and light bombers struck at roads, rail lines and bridges in northwestern Italy and on the Adriatic coast. Medium forces of heavy bombers hit objectives in the vicinity of Ploesti in Rumania, and oil stores installations at Fiume, also in Rumania, as well as the rail centre at Nis in Yugoslavia.

RUSSIAN ARMY ROLLS FORWARD IN NEW OFFENSIVE

Reds Advancing in General Direction of Minsk and Are Outflanking Vitebsk

INFLICT HUGE LOSSES

Moscow, June 24 — (AP) — The Red Army, on a new central front offensive that was an integral part of Allied grand strategy, rolled westward in spectacular fashion today and reached points only 75 miles from the Latvian border.

The Russians battled swollen streams and considerable mud northwest of Vitebsk, where they pushed upon Polotsk in a drive from Reports from the Finnish front were dull in the face of continued bad weather, with the fighting at a standstill. Progress was reported in all the fighting areas, with the Finns apparently still unable to hold the height of Russian arms and infantry.

Southeast of Vitebsk on the central front where the Russians have been across the highway from Vitebsk to the Germans-held fortress of Orsha, the Red Army surged forward and cut the railway which parallels the highway. It moved in the general direction of Minsk.

Operations in this sector across the Nazi communications appeared to be outflanking Vitebsk badly—so badly that the big Nazi garrison has no railway line into the city.

"The enemy is suffering enormous losses," the communique said. German trenches and battlefields are littered with Hitlerite corpses, smashed equipment and materiel."

Military observers in Moscow point out this is probably the first phase of Russia's summer offensive, recalling that last winter Stalin drove swift blows on several directions, then struck home with his main thrust.

The Red Army has made major progress in the Vitebsk sector, it is believe. Numerous trips to frontal areas this spring and early summer have disclosed preparations which indicate Hitler will experience the weightiest offensive of all from the east.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY IN WASHINGTON

Vancouver, Wash., June 24 (AP) Surgical gowns and masks were worn by all principals in a bedside marriage ceremony in the ward of a Vancouver hospital. Helen Ruth Hagen, 22, a bride ill with an undisclosed ailment, and Riley Eigen, a shipyard worker, were married over the bride explained that she and Eigen chose Riley as a surname for the hospital before the best man, Howard Cunningham.

FLIERS RESCUED FROM LAKE

Press Reflects Great Britain's Anger Over Nazi Murder of Fliers

London, June 24 (C.P. Cable)— Grim determination to avenge the murder of fifty Allied Foreign Secretary Eden called the mass murder of Stalag Luft III prisoners Friday.

The Foreign Secretary told the House of Commons yesterday that he had rejected the Germans' pledge, in the words of The Daily Sketch, "to see that the responsible nation "will be swift and appropriate, which means it will be terrible."

It was against the people's anger over the indiscriminate use of the Nazi rocket bomb was nullified to that produced by the account of the prisoners' escape, torture and murder.

"Even by the standards the German mass have set for themselves, this latest method of mowing down defenceless prisoners of war after they have been recaptured is unparalleled," the Daily Express said.

The News Chronicle said: "It takes a great deal to make an Englishman hate, but there will be hate in the hearts of many Englishmen and women today . . . Here, then, under the microscope, is the active specimen of the cancer that has been rotting the soul of Germany and threatening the soul of humanity."

The Daily Mail said:

"We are not animated by hate. That would be a trivial, superficial, ignoble description of the motive which is inspiring us and our Allies which this example strengthens . . . We will remember that not the whole German people, but evil officials, were the 'murder' instigators, but that those responsible as their employers are no less than the German nation."

S.W. Pennsylvania And North Virginia Hit During Night

FEAR HIGHER TOLL

Pittsburgh, June 24—(AP)—A toll of 126 dead and hundreds injured was reported today in the wake of a tornado which left a twisted trail of devastation and horror through southwestern Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia.

Scores were reported missing from homes demolished by a sudden, swirling wind which on Friday night spread its fury in town, villages, and farm and coal country from the outskirts of Pittsburgh to more than 100 miles into West Virginia.

Authorities feared the list of dead would increase as rescuers battled their way through the wreckage and searched the hills and valleys of West Virginia.

At dawn, 10 hours after a funnel-shaped cloud descended first on Pennsylvania and then in its Pittsburgh, the storm struck near Waynesburg, Pittsburgh itself was not hit.

Hundreds Homeless.

Hundreds were made homeless as whole blocks in some communities were leveled. Hospitals were filled with the injured.

Worst hit apparently was the state town of Shinnston, a coal town of 2,800 a dozen miles from Clarksburg, W. Va. The Red Cross representative reported 58 bodies had been recovered from that city.

The representative, Mrs. Lola Hoover, said possibly 100 persons still were unaccounted for.

Hospitals all over West Virginia sent blood plasma to Shinnston and other communities, and a call went out from Charleston, the capital.

The Red Cross immediately started disaster relief crews into the stricken areas with blood plasma, medical supplies, food and shelter for the injured and homeless.

Civilian defense organizations and Military Police and Army Medical Corps units from Pennsylvania and other cities woked side by side with local police, fire and relief workers.

Strikes at Nightfall.

Striking at nightfall, the storm trapped many families in their homes. Rescuers, including coal miners dug by the light of flashlight and torch as the storm died to a whisper. Dead and injured from the ruins.

The storm was described by A. D. Johnson of McKeesport as "a mighty wind" which left a trail that came roaring across the city, then leaped the Youghiogheny river and

Great Damage Caused by Storm In West Ontario

London, Ont., June 24 —(CP)— A violent gale swept through central Middlesex county and other parts of Ontario late yesterday killing one man, injuring several, others and causing thousands of dollars damage.

Archie Paines of Strathroy, Ont., died in hospital here last night of injuries suffered when he was hit by a timbey when his barn was blown down.

Most seriously injured was Robert McGillicuddy of nearby Watford, Ont., who was admitted to hospital with a dislocated shoulder suffered when his by a barn door flying in the wind.

Scores of barns were destroyed or damaged, many houses were damaged and telephone communication was disrupted.

At Toronto, lightning hit a street car and the lineman, Wilfred McKay, was seared about the neck and arms. He was taken to hospital for treatment, but his condition was reported not serious.

Ron Nelson, flight commander at No. 4 Air Observer School, flew over the stricken region of Middlesex county after the gale had subsided.

"It was the worst mess I ever saw," he said. In one 25-acre woodlot "all the trees had been snapped like matchsticks or uprooted. At least 25 barns were flattened in the area, also a dozen or more farm homes.

The gale hit first some distance north of Strathroy, then cut southeasterly across the eastern outskirts of the city and turned further south.

Jack Dunn, Provincial Police constable, said that certain sections of the adjoining country were "just a mess of kindling. If the full force of the tornado struck the centre of Strathroy, hardly a building would have remained standing."

travelled south.

"I saw at least a dozen houses and barns off their foundations," Johnson said.

It was estimated at least 100 persons in the McKeesport area were demolished completely and hundreds more were wounded or damaged.

Mrs. Potter, Monongahela, W. Va., Power Company Manager, said:

"It was a regular Kansas twister, funnel-shaped with limbs and trees whirling around in its midst. It did it was a greasy green color and it hit Shinnston in the early 8:51 p.m. that was verified later Strathroy at 9 o'clocks stopped at that time."

Very Heavy Loss.

Panhandle Pennsylvania communities outside of the Pittsburgh area were hit hard, too, with Clarksville and Charliers in Greene County, reported among the dead south of here.

The storm was described by A. D. Johnson of McKeesport as "a mighty wind" which left a trail that came roaring across the city, then leaped the Youghiogheny river and

Royal Norwegian Submarine Sinks 42,000 Tons of German Shipping

By ERNEST AGNEW
(A. P. War Correspondent)

At a Northern British Naval Base, (No date.) (Delayed) (AP) — Forty two thousand tons of German shipping and 600-ton German naval vessel were sunk and damaged by the Royal Norwegian submarine Ula during a recent series of operations in Norwegian waters, her captain reported today.

The Ula headed into the base cockily flying from her bridge a Norwegian flag and broom lashed to the outer defense one in both ships, showing eight merchant vessels sunk; one red stripe for a naval vessel sunk, and three blue ones for special operations which Ula far are a secret.

The captain said the biggest of the vessels torpedoed was an ironore carrier of 12,000 tons. The Ula also scored hits on a 6,000-ton tanker and six freighters of from 3,000 and 4,000 tons. The naval vessel which was sunk was believed to be a trawler.

Berries Firm At 40c. Per Box

Price of strawberries firmed on the Belleville produce market on Saturday with vendors asking straight 40 cents the box for good sample berries. There was a brisk demand from all this price, however, and available stocks rapidly diminished as anxious customers sought supplies for the week-end needs.

Fresh garden produce in more varied quantity also appeared on the market with red beets being offered for the first time at 10 cents per bunch. Onions and rhubarb also brought a dime a bunch and the latter heads selling at the same figure. Cabbages were ten cents each or two for 15 cents, while potatoes sold generally at $1.50 per bag.

Egg prices held firm on the inside market with first bringing 32 cents and standard selling at 29 cents the dozen. The fowl offering was not heavy, but prices were offered up to 40 cents the pound with more than one vendor asking that price for the pound.

A few farmers had young pigs for sale at the market prices, ranging from $7 to $8 each.

Former Pt. Anne Man, Veteran of Italian War, Tours Buffalo Plants

A special "task force" of United States Army officers, wounded in Italy, recently toured a number of the important plants of Buffalo in the interests of the rehabilitation of the wounded men of the United Nations offensive on all fronts.

Among the men was Private Garnet Marsolo, son of Mrs. A. Marsolo, of Front Ave., and who is now in a convalesced American citizen.

Young Marsolo went to the U.S. in 1937 and secured a job as a carpenter with the John W. Cowper Company of Buffalo.

He joined the United States army when the outbreak of war, and served in Italy. He was with an amphibious outfit which supported the landings at Salerno and helped establish the Anzio beachhead. He was wounded by artillery fire in both arms, the shoulders and back during the Anzio landings.

He told the foundry workers that the "war is not over" by long won and that enemy fire is "plenty hot". The important lesson of the tour he said is indicated in the fact that "our artillery knocked out the enemy tanks with 105 Howitzers."

Marsolo has a brother, Leonard, serving in the Canadian Navy.

George Miller Given 18 Months In Reformatory

George Miller, Belleville, was sentenced to 18 months definite and a further indeterminate term of not over 18 months in the Ontario Reformatory in a special session of Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on Friday afternoon. Miller, who is under 21 years of age, pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking the wire store window some time ago, was convicted of breaking and entering Arthur Sills' warehouse on Coleman St. and theft therefrom. He admitted the offence after at first denying same and after further investigation, a verdict trial by a higher court.

Crown Attorney Donald Leitch conducted the case.

The Miller conviction came following extensive investigations conducted by Inspector J. C. Hayes and Provincial Constable E. Sorrell of the Belleville detachment of the force to Inspector Hayes earlier in the day, when, after questioning the sound, concrete evidence gained by the police during the latter investigation, Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan K. C., pointed out to the court that there was serious crime wave of robbery strike Belleville late this winter and spring, and that same had now been successfully solved by police.

Given Suspended Sentence

Otherwise in Friday's court Vira Sheerin, Belleville, pleaded guilty to the theft of three dresses taken from an apartment in the Bell Block. The 16-year-old girl was given a year's suspended sentence and was ordered to report to Chief Probert at regular intervals. The girl's father was in court and intimated that she is incorrigible. "She stays out late nights and we can't do much with her," the girl's father stated as he said his daughter was now employed and he believed that motioned the girl against her indifferent attitude. Remanded a Week

Alfred Fahey, who has no fixed address, appeared on a charge of vagrancy and was further remanded for a week. "I've already been in jail nine days, what's the matter with my case?" enquired the defendant. Crown Attorney Donnan will check with the Provincial Police in Toronto, if any, on Fahey's record.

Two juveniles were to have appeared in a second court charged with theft, but owing to the lengthy docket they were further remanded for a week. A.C.A. charge concluded the court.

Storm Disrupts Hydro Service At Trenton

A severe electrical storm, accompanied by heavy rain swept the city and district Friday night, causing slight damage to trees and temporary disruption of Hydro services in the Trenton area.

Branches and twigs were blown from trees in various parts of the city, littering lawns and pavements, no serious damage was reported.

Hydro officials stated that the brunt of the storm was felt between Oshawa and Trenton, a lightning bolt struck a pole outside the Hydro station north of Trenton disrupting service in Trenton and the adjacent air station. Service was restored at 4 a.m., four hours after the bolt struck. Power went out here momentarily but alert work ranges "closed in" the wires as soon as they went.

The rain, however, proved beneficial to farmers. It will accelerate the growth of already rapidly growing plant crops, while grain and late crops will also profit. The rain was general throughout the area.

PREHISTORIC OCCUPATION

Even in the earliest historic periods wheat growing was known as an old industry.

FARMER LOSES EIGHT HEAD OF CATTLE IN STORM

MARMORA, June 19 — On Saturday morning, George Davidson, well known farmer of Marmora Township, made the discovery that he had lost eight head of cattle in the electric storm the previous evening. It was presumed that lightning struck them about 10.30 p.m. The cattle were all-bred Holsteins—five yearlings and three cows. Mr. Davidson said he would not have accepted cash offers for one of the cows. It is understood that there was some insurance on the stock.

MR. FARMER — would you be properly protected if this loss happened to you? We sell higher limits on stock. Our office leads in providing broadcast cover at lowest rates on livestock. The lightning season is here—phone us COLLECT without delay for immediate protection.

Stores to Close Next Saturday For Holiday

UNANIMOUS DECISION

Reconsidering their decision of one week ago, the Belleville Retail Merchants Association, July 3rd., as Dominion Day, this year, falls on Monday, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce at a special meeting held on Friday evening, by vote unanimously in favor of closing their stores on Saturday, in accordance with the decree from Ottawa.

With upwards of forty members present, the meeting was unanimously attended in many years, evidencing the interest merchants in the question at hand. All members were given ample opportunity to voice their opinion as to whether Saturday or Monday should be observed as the holiday and almost without exception the preference was that shoppers be closed on the 1st. of July.

Prior to the opening of the meeting Mayor Rollins addressed the assembled merchants urging their reconsider their decision, and stressing the fact that in view of the present war time effort, as few stores as possible should be open on working hours as possible should be open on working hours as possible on the holiday. In his talk to the merchants the Mayor made clear that his appeal for Saturday to be observed was not motivated through pressure brought to bear from local manufacturers. Retailers, he said, should themselves be guided through a personal conviction that Saturday should be observed and be the cause of its patriotic meaning.

ARRESTED FOR ARSON

Toronto, June 24—(CP)—Edward Robert Baker, 16-year-old member of the Church of Christ, early last night was arrested by city police on a charge of arson in connection with a $50,000 fire which virtually destroyed the Avenue Road Church of Christ, Disciples, on March 18. Police said Baker had helped other members of the congregation two nights before the fire at a cleaning bee preparing the church for a reopening.

Memories of Boer War Recalled By Death of Veteran George Tilley

Memories of blazing African sunn bleaching veldts and kopjes, running battles with the elusive Boer and the hardships of the first South African campaign, were revived by veterans of the campaign with the passing of the late George Tilley here on Wednesday.

The siege of Paardeburg, and Bloemfontein were vividly recalled as grey-haired veterans of that war, with their comrades of the First Great War paid final tribute to a fellow veteran.

It was forty-five years ago when twenty-one members of this city heard the call of Queen and Country and volunteered their aid with the Royal Canadian Regiment in South Africa. Among them were Sergt. George Tilley, W. Mills, C. Huime, George Phillips, A. Wills, C. Gibson, — Pryce, — Pryce, Bob McCoy, Fred Croft and others.

Enlisting for a period of twelve months, the volunteers were presented with a pocket testament and Bible and left by the city. Later when they entrained for overseas, they were met at Napanee by the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who presented each with five pounds of gold.

Reaching South Africa, the Canadians were brigaded with such famous British regiments as the 2nd Battalion, Gordon Highlanders. The 2nd Battalion, Royal Scots and the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

A. S. Large, of this city who saw service in the campaign recalled the gallant action of the Canadians at Paardeburg, when the Royal Engineers in the capture of Paardeburg, blew up the bridge, thus cutting off Boer leader surrendered.

Enteric fever and dysentery were also in the ranks of the army, he said, especially after Kronje had surrendered, when concentration preventing the delivery of medical and other supplies.

Artillery played an important part in the campaign, he said with the Boers using their famous six-inch gun the "Long Tom" and the British Howitzers, a 5 inch 4.7 calibre.

The Canadian contingent sallied from Quebec on the troopship "Sardinian" and disembarked thirty days later at Belmont, South Africa. Their main diet was hardtack with an occasional meal of meat. Bread was never seen during the campaign, Mr. Large said. They slept in pup tents made out of their blankets. On marches in the warm season reached 130 degrees. Nights were very cold and the men huddled under blankets to keep warm.

Hail, soldier, huddled in the rain
Hail soldier, squelching through the mud,
Hail soldier, sick of dirt and pain
The sight of death, the smell of blood.

Now men, new weapons, bear the brunt
New slogans gild the ancient game;
The Infantry are still in front,
And mud and dust are still the same.

Hail, humble footmen, poised to fly,
Across the West, or any wall.
Proud, Plodding Peerless, Pride of All,
The foulest, finest job of all.

BELLEVILLE'S FIGHTING FAMILIES.

Under sunny Italian skies, crouched over his radio telephone set you will find him. He is the battery commander of a field artillery unit and is either headquarters or the command post. His is the job to relay vital messages taking the grunge forward observation post or to brigade headquarters. He is Signaller Douglas Sword, one of a fighting family whose members have remained loyal to the "grunge" for many years.

Son of Captain Steve A. Sword, officer commanding the 34th (B) Field Battery, R.C.A., here, Doug. has been overseas for 3½ years. He joined the gunner when he was 19 and went overseas with the 34th Field Battery. He is now with a medium battery in Italy which is blasting the Boche out of enemy battery positions, strongpoints, communications and troop formations.

Doug's, Uncle, the late Major Jim Sword, saw service with the guns in the last war. Major Sword's son is an R.C.A.F. warrant officer in the east Mediterranean area. Another cousin, son of Dave Sword, was lost at Hong Kong. Yet another uncle, Andrew Sword, is a staff sergeant in an Army Trades School at Hamilton, and he had a son who was killed in the 1940 hills in Britain. Doug's youngest brother, Bruce, is wrestling himself for the Navy.

The young veteran was born and educated here. He excelled in sports and was a standout on Belleville Collegiate Institute football squads.

HEARTACHE (A True Short Story).

When Corporal Wright sat slumped in her chair, Tears glistened in her once bright eyes. Periodically her hand stretched toward the yellow cablegram that lay a few inches away on the table. And as periodically she drew her hand back. She could not call her husband. There was no telephone in the house. She gazed longingly, for the last time, at the picture of a handsome, soldier dressed in the uniform of the Canadian Army. A prayer came from her lips.

Time went by. She remained seated in her chair, as if afraid to move. The door opened. Her husband entered. He paused at her, startled at the change in her appearance. Silently she picked up the yellow envelope on the table. Blood drained from his face. He reached for the cablegram, hesitated, then drew back his hand. For five minutes they remained silent. Then the man moved to the woman's side and caressed her. "I may as well open it, mother." It must be done sometime." The woman wiped her eyes, and nodded silent acquiescence.

The man slowly reached for the cablegram, picked it up and slowly tore it open. The woman's eyes were glued on his face. He stared at the cable's contents. A light broke over his features and slowly expanded in a broad smile. "Look, mother," he said, excitement in his voice, "Look, read it."

Slowly the woman accepted the yellow paper. She read the few words. A sigh came from her lips and tears ran down her cheeks as she buried her head in her arms.

The cablegram read, "Dear Mom, just been made sergeant. Having a lovely time. Jack."

JUNIOR OFFICERS of the 34th Battery and the Argyll Light Infantry are strutting around the town in three warm summer days with a justifiable pride in their effective initiative yes, And well they might, for didn't they make a clean sweep in their practical examinations for promotion held in the armoury last week-end. And pretty soon, the "one-pippers" will be sporting the second one, an extra one as the case may be. Incidentally, officers who are now fully qualified as lieutenants are: Lieuts. H. J. Andrews, H. B. Keller, and R. A. Liddle, Captain J. E. Hines of the Argylls qualified for major; Lieut. J. E. Dickens as captain, and as lieutenants, C. E. Franklin, H. R. Gibson, W. G. Jacobs, J. Arvell, O. G. Nicholson, C. J. Riddell, I. E. Shapiro, L. A. Wells, and O. A. Pinkston.

Two shiny pips they soon will wear,
And they'll be proud to get 'em,
But the senior blokes are puzzled as
To how they're going to wet 'em.

Going overseas in 1941, the Cannuck bluejacket was attached to a crew of the M.T.B.'s (motor torpedo boats) the stinging wasps of the English Channel. In a speeding fight with enemy craft, Cleeter's boat was sunk, but not before he was wounded in both knees. Flung into the water he was blinded by blazing oil that covered the immediate surface of the sea. He was finally picked up and spent the next five months in hospital. Now he's on his way back, to get square with Jerry's navy, if he can find it. Oh well, you can't keep a good man down, and least of all, a sailor.

SAFETY lay within the stone-buttressed walls of the ancient castle, and due to the castle's unbounded dependability . villagers clustered their homes in the shadow of the protecting walls.

Leave your cause to our examination. Careful consideration of individual needs and details is one of the qualities that has merited our reputation for dependability.

SERIAL STORY (From Khaki).

THE ACE EYES HAVE IT

Behold, it came to pass that in the place known as Pet-A-Wawa, which lieth to the northeast, there came dlyers sergeants, corporals and privates, yea, even unto the lowest of these last, each seeking that he be set above all others.

And lo, they were gathered, each with his bed and cover and his rifle and full pack, whereupon they cometh unto them and bearing a crown wreathed in laurel and verily, he hath the voice of Thor.

And he descendeth into their midst like unto a ravening wolf and cried in a loud voice, "What the hell goeth on? Who the so-and-so art thou?"

And they made answer unto him: "We are they that have come up on the line for the Ark-Sky course."

Whereupon he screameth in great agony of spirit and calleth unto his god, to witness what had befallen him. For is given unto him, as one of authority, to hand them the works.

So he smote upon his hands and cried unto them and forth and giveth them the good old run-around—and no foolin'. Until at last they are worn with hard speeching, with terror and gather themselves into their tent and the night was far spent.

But, ere they can slumber even for a short space there cometh on who is their master, bearing on his epaulets one pip, he being a physical jerks instructor and in the fulness of youth having waxed it not in riotous living nor in the fleshpots of Belleville.

ACCORDING TO THE SLAPEVINE.

Word was received by his wife here this week that Flying Officer Fred Thorburnson has been seriously wounded in Italy. He is the husband of the former Dorothy Rutledge, one of the better C.D.S. saleslades, here a year or so ago. Mrs. Thorvaldson, who has been taking the course at C.D.S., has gone to her home in Bancroft where she is anxiously awaiting further news of her hero husband . . . Flight Lieut. George Graham will go to a New Brunswick air station where his wife is now stationed with the Mosquitos, and probably from there go "across the pond. . . . Lieut. Bill Wright, former fourth estimator with Canada Steel Relations in Ottawa, helloed a lot of friends here last week . . . Corporal Jack Ogilvy, Wellington, who for the past year or so has been nursemaid, valet, caretaker and chief fixer-upper to a flock of Canadian tanks in England, arrived on furlough . . . R.S.M. A. E. Traynor, (N.N.) formerly with the 44th Field Regiment, R.C.A., has now doffed the khaki and is back in the clothing trade here . . . Brigade Major Bill Ponton, who with the jungles of Gananoque, was once nearly mistaken for a polar bear while attempting manoeuvres on the snow-covered reaches of the St. Lawrence River. . . . A Coocy 22 in the hands of a gunner corporal, one of the Lieut. Wrights in the family, was at hand grenade in the paw of a polar bear was an empty Labatts container . . . Lieut. Hamilton hand of R.N. . . . Mrs. Ken Wright, 5 Starling Street, has received word that her husband, L/Cpl. Wright has been promoted to corporal. . . . Lieut. "Jake" Williamson, R.C.A., is instructing somewhere in the not so wet but wooly west. . . . Ross Hart, R.C.A.F., Pingal, is spending a furlough with his folks here. . . . Flying Officer Bill Cliff-Thomas, Office of the Argylls, was a member of the Examination Board at the Officers' Technical Exams in Brighton over the pond. . . . Gunner "Bucky" Fry, former 34th batteryman, was in town last week. Fry was a member of the 34th (B) Battery, and refuses to use regulations to come through on time. . . . Although a number of Albert College members of the battery here are home on vacation, the majority of them have left for summer camps with the unit. . . . Jerry Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, 24 Grove street, who is a Lewis gunner with the assault craft which assisted in the landing of invasion troops, tells a graphic story of the landing on Sicily. Doran relates how they swarmed up the bloody beaches of Normandy. He saw one young officer, his face streaming blood, a large hole blasted out of his steel helmet, leading his platoon up to the beachhead and shouting to his men to "Come on." Jerry's brother, Teddy, is a leading stoker aboard the mother ship of Jerry's landing craft, the H.M.C.S. Prince David. . . . Incidentally, the assault craft has been lovingly dubbed by the crew as "The Dirty Min." . . . Hero of Guadalcanal and other South Pacific engagements, United States Marine Corporal Pte. Wilfred (Bud) Walters, dropped into the office yesterday with his Belleville and Brighton bride, the former Miss Marjorie MacDonald. Mrs. Walters is a member of the staff of Cameron and Sprague. Her Marine hubby is at present stationed at Camp Penalton, California. . . . Chief Petty Officer William (Bill) Hirst, has been posted to a special course in draftsmanship and pattern making at a naval school in Halifax. Recently he was suddenly transferred to others of the class back to navy barracks, which may mean another seagoing berth. . . . .

SPORT . . .

These diligent gals of the C.W.S.F. just don't believe in sitting around twiddling their fingers. Not while there is a group of husky sack-sack gunners in their adopted city. Latest scheme sees Goering's pigeons out of the blue. So while the lads are busy knocking down the foes of the Luftwaffe, or are busy in the khaki-clad sponsors this side of the big pond are packing boxes of comforts, sporting equipment and whatnots, so the lads can enjoy themselves during time not on the line. It takes time to do and ship these boxes. So the gals turned a speculative eye to the realm of sport, and got quick results. On the local diamond (Saturday) will see two crack girls' softball teams, Reliance and the Belleville Sargent, cross war clubs in an exhibition tilt on the Armouries lawn. Girls softball games are proving very popular with the fair sex, and should attract a goodly crowd of cheering spectators lining the Pinnacle and Bridge Street railing bleachers. Tonight's game should be a dilly as the two teams are going all out for figurative blood, even in this non-contact competition affair. So turn out, you softball lovers, see a real game and contribute generously to the "hat." You might well bring comforts to a bunch of hard-hitting gunners who are doing their dangdest in order to score the long-looked for, best homerun of them all. The game starts at 7.30 sharp.

FRANKFORD

Guild and W.A. Are Entertained

Frankford.— On Thursday Mrs. Albert Caskey, and Mrs. Gerald Chapman, were hostesses to Trinity Church Guild and Zion Church W.A. at the home of Mrs. Caskey. Over sixty ladies were present.

The meeting was in charge of Trinity Ladies' Guild and with the President, Mrs. Ernest Hall, in the chair. The rector, Rev. C. O. Brazill conducted the opening exercises and Mrs. Hardie, vice president, read the Scripture lesson. A short business period followed, after which a miscellaneous program was presented by members of both societies.

The program included piano solo by Miss Marjory Green, vocal solo by Miss Mary Green, reading by Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson, vocal solo by Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones, duet by Miss Margaret Zufelt, reading by Mrs. Ab. Perry, vocal duet by Mrs. Ellis Green and Mrs. Gerald Johnson, recitation by Miss Ann Weston. A very interesting paper on Bible College Study was presented by Miss Alva Locklin. A quiz contest was enjoyed, the winners being Mrs. W. Milne and Miss Chapman.

At the close of the program, Mr. Brazill spoke on the benefits of the unity of the churches and thanked the hostesses for the delightful afternoon.

Mrs. Asselstine, in the absence of the president of the Zion W.A., presented greetings from that society.

After singing "For they are jolly good fellows", a lunch was enjoyed by all. An exceedingly pleasant afternoon closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Personals.

Mrs. Jack Smith, Grand Mere, Gerald Johnson were hostesses to the Rev. C. O. Brazill, together with the Confirmation Class of Trinity Church, Frankford, to breakfast on Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. Johnson.

2ND THURLOW

Neighbors' Aid Assist Work Of Red Shield

2nd Thurlow.—About 65 members and visitor of the Neighbors' Aid enjoyed a 1 o'clock dinner at the home of Mrs. A. Mitchell on Wednesday. Everyone did justice to the good things provided by the hostess and conveners. Among those present were Mrs. Wm. and Dr. Mrs. Marsh of the Salvation Army. The dinner collection amounted to $11.85 of which $10 was voted to the Red Shield. The President called the meeting to order.

Major Marsh gave a very instructive and helpful talk of the work they had done and said "the greatest help to give those who needed help was through kindness and shelter which so often we neglect to do to those who have fallen by the wayside."

He also told of the many thousands of articles of sewing, knitting and etc., sent by the Red Shield up to date, stating that money was a very helpful, but that they needed help to sew and knit. He thanked the Aid for all the work done by it and the cash received in the past and wished them every success. Mrs. Marsh favored with a solo, "The Old Rugged Cross" Miss Lillian Dent also sang a solo. A quilt, which was donated to the Aid by Mrs. A. Mitchell was quilted during the afternoon, and given to Mr. and Mrs. Marsh. Red Shield.

A motion was made to send $2 to the Mary Webb fire fund at CHEK, Peterborough.

Cold-Blooded Butchery by Gestapo

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the Commons on Friday said the German Gestapo had killed in cold blood fifty Allied air officers, six of whom were Canadians, all being prisoners of war in Germany. It was the revelation of one of the most dastardly and brutal crimes ever reported to a world that knows how low can man contempt of law and of the sense of common humanity will go. This war has long since shown that barbarism or savagery linked with the art of torture to bring pain on the helpless is a part of the Nazi nature. The world has heard charges of many atrocities made against the Germans, some known but such deeds of foulest murder are the very spirit of German aggression or Naxism.

Repatriated men from the same camp as that from which a number of Canadian officers escaped some weeks recaptured helped the British Government to get at the truth about the crime.

The German Government explanation is the same reported to the Swiss representative in April, it being said that the men were shot while offering resistance on being found after their escape or while attempting a renewed escape after capture.

Mr. Eden said that the German explanation is in fact a confession of an odious crime against the laws of humanity and of war, the fact that the men were picked out from among the recaptured and taken away in small groups by the Gestapo armed with Tommy guns. "It was abundantly clear that none of these officers met their death in the course of their escape from Stalag Luft III or while resisting capture again," he said.

"Those shot included all officers of European Allied nationality who were recaptured. These were taken away on different days in small parties with one large party of about twenty."

The fact that no one was reported wounded but all killed in the German explanation and that the ashes of 28 of the killed prisoners of war were sent back to the camp are powerful facts condemning the German authorities.

The statement of Mr. Eden was given in the name of the British Government, "From these facts it is only one possible conclusion: these prisoners of war were murdered—at some indefinite place or places in their removal from the Gestapo prison at Gorlitz on same date or dates between.

"His Majesty's Government must therefore record their solemn protest against these cold blooded acts of butchery.

"Those responsible for their efforts to identify all those responsible. They are firmly resolved that these foul criminals shall be tracked down to the last man wherever they may have taken refuge.

"When this war is over they will be brought to exemplary justice."

Mr. Eden assured the House that the Government has not reports of any mass killings except this of the fifty prisoners of war who escaped from the prison camp.

Russia has laid a heavy account against Germany of atrocities done by Germans against Russians. The populations of Nazi-occupied Europe and the other United Nations have been collecting information against the German perpetrators of crimes against citizens and charging mass murders by the Nazis.

These accounts of terrible atrocities by the Germans show to what Hitlerism would have led the world but for the courage and fortitude of the United Nations. German aggression has taken the form of every crime, every cruelty that has been known.

This Canadian Earth

Middle-aged and bearing a child in his arms, a refugee from Europe who arrived with others at Montreal recently, said, "I could kiss this Canadian earth." A little child refugee spoke to his mother in Spanish, "Where are we? What is Canada? Are these good people?" and he was told, "Yes, they are good, kind uncles." Another said, "You cannot know what it is to be among free men again. For years we have been under the Nazis. Death was inches from us constantly."

Such words of men and women who have felt the cruelty and oppression of Hitler convey something of the joy of those who have got out of continental Europe to a free land. Instinctively these refugees have felt the atmosphere of freedom and protection in Canada and the United States.

It is well for Canadians to know what emotions sweep through the souls of such refugees for by their expressions those born in and living in Canada may learn a deeper appreciation of the things in Canada which appeal to such newcomers.

Among the things this war will have achieved besides the crushing of tyranny and the relighting of the lamps of freedom across the world will be the greater love that Canadians now feel for their own dear land. Their sons, brothers and parents fighting in the forces overseas have told them in letters how they abroad have treasured the thoughts of home in Canada. With these expressions of the spirit of love and admiration for the Dominion and the sacrifices in life and limb and health and in monetary treasure which war has inflicted, this country cannot but be a richer, dearer land in which to dwell for through the affliction of war Canadians will have come to know their land and their fellow citizens better and to treasure them. Likewise they will treasure the associations which the war has brought with peoples of other countries in the wide circle of the Allied Nations.

The years of conflict have shown with what devotion and loyalty the men, women and children of this country have served her in the hour of need. The sacrifices they have made ennoble their heritage.

Netherlanders Confident

Hitler could never have dreamed in 1940 when he threw his blitzkrieg against Holland and Germans wantonly caused the deaths of thousands of citizens of Rotterdam that four years afterwards, the people of Holland would still be virile and would be eagerly looking towards the day when Germany, Hitler and everything he had laid in the dust, when Germany will be forced to surrender unconditionally and the day of liberation will be achieved.

There is today high spirit among the oppressed peoples. For instance, the people of the Netherlands have learned with joy that a new set of nine stamps designed for use in their country after the war has been issued or is being issued by the Netherlands Government. The issues are designed by Professor J. Romein and the five higher bear the representations of a soldier, sailor, pilot, the M.S.S. de Ruyter, Queen Majesty Queen Wilhelmina. The stamps are valid for use aboard Dutch warships the moment of issue.

All the nations of Europe within the confines of the United Nations look for the day of restored freedom. And in the Far East China awaits the time too for it will send the full might of the Allied Powers to defeat Japan.

Through the sufferings and tribulations of the four years in which the modern barbarian Germans have occupied Holland the Dutch have been the stalwart patriots, not with inaction but with the powerful underground working to keep up the morale of the people while the Nazi taskmasters occupy their cities, towns and countryside. The noble Hollanders have never failed to show their scorn of Hitler's "supermen." The brave and loyal Dutch will soon, it is hoped, have the reward of seeing the foul gangsters of Hitlerism driven back into Germany and crushed, and the peaceful ways of their brave land restored to function in an undisturbed era of peace.

Among the other excellencies of man, this is one, that he can form the image of perfection much beyond what he has experience of in himself and not limited in his conception of wisdom and virtue.—Hume.

The sufficiency of my merit is to know that my merit is not sufficient.—St. Augustine.

BETTER THAN WORDS

"Yes," said the soldier, "speech is fine. Your prose is perfect, line by line, But soldiers all would rather hear The guns they need are on the pier.

"'Tis nice to get high-sounding praise, But save such stuff for peaceful days. Right now we'd rather hear it said The tanks we need have gone ahead.

"Up to his knees in mud and wire, Of words, a soldier's apt to tire. He only asks, from week to week, More cannon mouths for him to speak.

Faced with the deadliest of foes, He scorns both poetry and prose. Words cannot save the boy who dies Because his company lacks supplies."

Pyle in Normandy: Columnist's First Night in France Was Not Like Home Sweet Home

(By ERNIE PYLE

Somewhere in France—(by wireless)—When you be interested in hearing how we spent our first night in France? Well, even if you wouldn't, I'll tell you.

Just after supper we got an order to unload our vehicle from the ship. Most of those big self-propelled barrelike things, made of steel pontoons, bolted together, came up in front of our ship and the vehicles were driven off onto it.

These boats are called chinoi's. They move very slowly, and it took us an hour to get to shore. Then the beachmaster signalled us not to land, for the tide was going out, and we had to joar around out there on the water for another hour.

They were planting mines on the beach, and some of our big naval guns were still answering away at the Germans. The evening was calm and miserable, and it began to rain as we waited. We were all cold.

At last the beachmaster let us in. The barge grounded about fifty yards from shore, and we always were let down.

Every one of our vehicles had been waterproofed, so that the engines wouldn't drown when going through the surf.

I came ashore in a jeep with Pvt. William Bates Wescott, of (4090 W. Boulevard) Culver City, Cal. Wescott is a tall, rangy, intelligent man of 26 who used to be a salesman for the Edgemont Farms Dairy at Venice, Cal. He is at war for the first time, and all the shooting and stuff are completely new to him, but he is doing all right.

Wescott's wife works in downtown Los Angeles and he says that if you want to take her some flowers for being the wife of such a fine guy, she's the girl who makes Pullman reservations for the Southern Pacific Railroad at Sixth and Main.

Wescott and I were the first ones off the barge. I had water-proofed my typewriter by taping it up in a gas cape. But the water came only to the floor of the jeep. We didn't even get our feet wet, but the waves did slosh in and get the seats of our pants wet.

It was several miles to our bivouac area. On the way we passed many men lying outside the road, both German and American but mostly German. Some of the French people along the roads waved and cheered, while others kept their heads down and wouldn't look up.

It was dark when we got to our bivouac, a grape and apple orchard on a hillside. We pulled in and parked under a tree. First we pooled our rations, and those fellows got into his big ration box in the jeep and got out some expedition salmon, crackers and sardines.

After we finished eating, the first German planes of the night came over. One dropped its bombs on the beach, trying to get to give us our first touch of nerves. There was considerable flak and tracer, and they made an awful racket, whistling and screaming, but not ominous and spooky aspect. We felt lonely. Everything was so unfamiliar, and shell holes everywhere, and we could hear machine guns firing.

It was midnight by the time we had finished eating and had camouflage net over the jeep in preparation for the first light next morning. We decided to get what sleep we could. We didn't have our bedrolls yet, but we did have two blankets apiece. We just lay down on the ground.

Another jeep had pulled under the tree with us. Altogether our little bivouac group in the orchard consisted of two colonels, three enlisted men and myself. We all slept under our clothes.

German planes kept coming over the top, and our guns kept up their booming and crackling all night long, in fits and jerks.

After an hour or so one of our colonels said we'd better move our blankets so our heads would be under the jeep, because fruit and shrapnel were falling all over the orchard.

He said the flak wouldn't kill you unless it hit you in the head. I said I didn't know how it would hit you in the stomach. He said it wouldn't. I said I didn't think it would.

Anyhow, I moved my head under and left my stomach out in the open. My head was right behind the front wheel, under the fender. It was a good place, but the headroom was so scant that every time I moved over, I would get a mouthful of mud from the fender. Then we got cold. Our two blankets might as well have been handkerchiefs, for all the warmth there was in them. We lit cigarettes and smoked under our blankets. We couldn't sleep much anyhow, for the noise of the guns.

Sometimes planes would come in low, and you would lie there scrunched up in that knotty tenseness you get when waiting to be hit.

Finally daylight came. At dawn our planes always come over and the Germans don't. It was nice and safe and secure as far as the air is concerned.

We all got up at dawn, weboarded a German kitchen and got warm. Private Wescott opened some K rations and we ate a hearty breakfast off the hood of the jeep. Then a colonel made a reconnaissance of our area and came back he said that our little orchard, which looked so rural and pretty in the dawn, was full of dead Germans. So after we had eaten we moved to help bury them pretty soon.

That was our first night in France.

Capital Closeups

By JAMES McCOOK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 24. (CP)—Housing is a top ranking problem for many Members of Parliament, if not for Pouliot (L-Temiscouata) thinks that members of the Commons and Senate are being discriminated against because they are not living in the luxurious quarters of the government's housing plan.

The Independence of Parliament Act, which prevents members of Parliament from having financial contracts with the government, is the stumbling block. Some of them have received passing reference in the House the other day. Finance Minister Ilsley expressed doubt whether the government would be justified in making an exception for the purpose Mr. Poulliot suggested.

All other Canadians can take advantage of the housing schemes which Ottawa has put through because of Parliament Act should not be amended to permit members of Parliament to have his own little home under a government housing scheme the same as any other Canadian citizen but they cannot," Mr. Ilsley replied.

Politics: Scene in the Commons June 15, while Saskatchewan electors were casting their votes in provincial elections Minister Howe, pointing across the floor at Gordon Graydon, Conservative opposition leader, said in an Irish whisper: "You go and get him."

Mr. Graydon: "You only got one or two. How's that, Joe?"

Production: The bachelor Prime Minister Mackenzie King was illustrating how needs for production differ when he said: "I do not have to be elected before I go to bed, but I am fortunate enough to have been elected before I have a wife, she will have half a dozen children to look after before I have thought of".

Dr. H. A. Kelly (PC-Portneuf-Parkhill): "You are optimistic".

FURTHER REFLECTIONS ON GROWING GRAY

If you are growing gray, have grown that way or suffering your hair is in such plight before long, I hope you cut out and saved the item growing gray published here the other day. If you didn't you had better address me personally for yourself, affix a three-cent postage stamp to the upper right corner and inclose it in another envelope addressed to me, with a request for the pamphlet "Care of the Hair and Control of Dandruff." The pamphlet includes the head advice I can offer any poor geek whose hair is turning, has turned or may all too soon turn gray.

The three anti-gray hair factors mentioned in the notes on growing gray are (1) Iodine, (2) Para-aminobenzoic acid and (3) Calcium pantothenate. Remember, they are primarily essential to maintain good nutrition, good health, vital energy, efficiency, and only incidentally to prevent or delay turning of the hair or, in some instances, to restore natural color to the hair after it has turned gray.

In what instances do Your genes so act as to turn you gray? We know enough about it as yet to explain why these anti-gray factors often seem more effective in some cases than in others. Part of the explanation probably depends on how great the lack of one or more of the factors may be in the individual's diet and for how long the deficiency has existed.

We know that the satisfactory results are obtained when the whole natural substance is employed (which includes both para-aminobenzoic acid and calcium pantothenate) is taken, to supplement the diet, than when the isolated anti-gray-hair factor alone is taken, for preventing premature graying of the hair. The latter is merely natural color to hair that has turned gray.

The pantothenic factor is present, for example, in both whole wheat from refined white flour. There is a loss of from 50 to 90 per cent during cooking.

It is my conviction that the best anti-gray hair remedy is a combination of calcium pantothenate with other essential B complex entities

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Dad Needs Sound-Proof Vault. Mother is unable to sleep nights because of father's snoring. They sleep in double bed. If she awakens him to make him stop snoring he gets cross.

(Mrs. R. V.)

Answer—I wouldn't say strangling is justified, except for a snorer in a room waiting on a sibling. Both partners will get better rest in separate beds. The sneezer should avoid more nightclothes or bedclothes than necessary for comfort—the lighter, the covers the better. Sometimes the cause can occur if he sleeps on one side than when he sleeps on his back. Rubber earplugs or a pliable wax material, such as a modeling wax, to exclude nocturne.

Habit Breaker.

Answer—Deprive some successful practitioner of the "constipation and "autointoxication" hokum and the "cold" delusion and they'd scarcely know how to string along their "chronics". Try some of the Colon Hydration Habit and Colon Hygiene" send ten cents and stamped envelope stating your address.

Skimmed Milk

Niece thinks her children get the necessary benefit from skimmed milk and I think they need whole milk, on account of the butter fat and vitamin A. Would appreciate your advice. (J. J. L.)

Answer — The children derive considerable benefit from skim milk, (aside from cream which has been removed), but you are right, the cream or butter fat contains most of the vitamin A. all of the D in milk.

WEDDINGS

McDOWELL—YORK

Picton, June 24.—With summer flowers decorating the altar, Black River church was the scene of the pretty wedding of a lovely wedding, Monday afternoon, when Eleanor Isabelle York, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart York, Black River, was married to Alfred D. McDowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McDowell, Atwood, Ont. The double ring rite was officiated and Mrs. James Clarke played wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long gown of white satin made on princess lines with fitted bodice. Her long veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms which had been worn by her mother on her wedding day. She carried American Beauty roses.

Miss Ruth Smith, of New Toronto, as matron of honor, was in pale blue organdie made with floor-length and short veil. She carried Talisman roses. Miss Jack Clark, Black River, was groomsman.

The reception was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents, with beds of peonies, irises, roses and other flowers forming a colorful background. The bride's mother wore a navy blue flower with blue glazed straw picture hat and corsage of white carnations over the bride's sisters, Mrs. Edward Mallen of Picton, and Mrs. Thomas Deane, Toronto, Mrs. August Kaiser of Toronto and the bride's sister, Miss M. York and Mrs. H. Boyce. For traveling to Toronto and Algonquin Park, the bride donned a pastel suit with white accessories. They will reside in London.

SLATER—SMITH

Picton, June 24. —With peonies and iris banking an arch of evergreens and ferns before the pulpit during the home, the Standard Church parsonage, Bloomfield was the scene of a wedding of wide interest Wednesday afternoon, when Mary Blanche, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. James Smith, became the bride of Rev. Arthur James Slater of Brockville, son of Mrs. Henry Slater, Northampton, England. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, assisted by Rev. T. Mack of Brockville, and Rev. R. Bewley, of Trenton. Miss Evelyn Smith, sister of the bride, played wedding music and Miss Zonice Conley of Bloomfield sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length bridal navy with corsage of Sweetheart roses. She was attended by Miss Ethel Clarke of Toronto, who was gowned in pink with corsage of bridal roses. They will reside in Brockville, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Following the reception following the bride's mother was in navy sheer with white accessories, and corsage of Pink and white flowers and streamers decorated the dining room. Assistants were Mrs. Roy Carson, Miss Phyllis Hawley, daughter of Mrs. Jen, Virtue Carson and Hazel Canson and Mrs. Edward Finch.

For travelling to Toronto and Hamilton, the bride donned a grey dress with navy and white accessories. They will reside in Brockville. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Lloyd Mack, Wesley and Sharon Mack, Rev. R. S. Ward, Mrs. Webster, Misses Jessie Naismith, Sarah and Edith Brown, all of Brockville; Rev. and Mrs. Albert Smith of Athens; Rev. and Mrs. R. Hawley and Marilyn, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Reid and Walton, Miss Norma Hobbs, all of Trenton; Mr. John Irwin and Miss Grace Irwin of Meaford; Charles Craven of North Gower.

GUNTER—DELYEA

Bancroft.—A wedding of interest took place on St. Peter's United Church, Bancroft, Wednesday afternoon, at four p.m., June 21st, when Roberta Madeline Delyea, daughter of Sergeant and Mrs. F. E. Delyea, of Bancroft, became the bride of LAC. Blake Wyman Gunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gunter of Coe Hill.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. R. F. Delyea, the bride wore an ensemble of blue faille with white accessories. The full length veil and carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bride was attended by Miss Shirley Gunter, sister of the groom, who wore a dress of rose silk jersey and carried a bouquet of roses and gladioli. Mr. Roy Turner, of Coe Hill, was groomsman. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Ray Watson, was pianist for the service. The church was very attractively decorated with white and pink streamers and baskets of Peonies and roses. They will later visit Ottawa and Quebec, taking up residence in

Rev. W.G. Clarke Closes Ministry Of Sixty Years

On Sunday night next, June 30, in the United Church, at Brighton, at 7.30 the Rev. Wilmot G. Clarke, B.A., closes a vigorous ministry of sixty years. He is from them, and the people are commemorating, as his last in the active ministry, supply preacher, since the removal of the Rev. Wm. Parker in January. Mr. Clarke served in the ministry without a break for sixty years, and since, except for two terms in Toronto, at Dawes Road, and at Bellamy, and one term in Ottawa, at Bell St. he began at Little Britain, returning later for a second pastorate. He was also pastor at Yarker, Wellington, Picton, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Belleville Tabernacle, and King St., Trenton. His pastorate at Brighton together with those of Rev. H. B. Kenny, A. E. McCutcheon and Rev. Wm. Parker, has been their most memorable of recent years. At Brighton, Mr. Clarke had a major share in erecting the new parsonage, and in introducing Local Option. At the Dawes Road, he built a handsome residence in 1918, when the Church Union took place. It was a commodious renovation of 1918, when the Wesley Buildings, the first Methodist Church were replaced by a rotunda, no finer church is to be found anywhere by the writer of this note. Every facility for more effective work was added, and the debt liquidated. Wherever he was, things moved, he was blessed with them, and he moved them.

Having your photographer taken to send to the boy friend who is in Timbuctoo? He wants to see if Best Girl looks the same as when he kissed her last night? Or just reminded again of a few good-looking friends for your photography.

More than one girl has donned her war paint and trotted in a state of pleasant excitement to the studio, only to be told that she must wash her face. The photographer's camera can't see the subtle tints that crudely, but it does down to the last flaking. What the camera catches in a wink is clearness, dark shadows and what becomes of a casual glance.

Don't be afraid to get the same day; get the grand hair-do the day before, so that the stiff look will have relaxed. Curled locks will appear clean, shining and soft. Don't, on the other hand, shows groomed, stray hairs tweezed away.

Use powder lightly and omit applications with the rouge pad. Rouge casts a shadow; your portrait will not then carry the normal glow. Apply powder, then the lipstick deftly, forming a clear-cut pattern. Use a pencil gently, moisten the lips so they will look soft and full. A touch of mascara on the eyelashes and a bit of mineral oil on the eyebrows will help along the good work.

Your eyebrows are thin and shrunken—due to your being overweight? Get a tweezers. It may be a good idea to broaden them slightly with the crayon. There won't be any danger of the severe forehead between eyes and pompadour look the lids will receive grease paint to bring out the natural color and tenderness of the eyes.

Don't wear a hat. Hats are unbecoming and, anyway, it is to you that the boy friend wants to see not your latest chapeau. Also he may treasure that picture for years after the war is over and you are married to Joe Blow and he'll have something cute to say, no doubt, about your headgear.

Wear the kind of clothes in which you feel comfortable. Avoid no "all-dressed-up" sartorial glory. Don't wear anything that is the style, wear them. Jewelry and other decorations do not add to the ensemble; they detract from appearance, as a rule.

Be natural, be comfortable pose. If you feel stiff and rigid, you'll get a photograph that will be a graven image of yourself; even your best friend won't know it.

Most important of all, have a good night's sleep before the big day. If you're rested you will be relaxed and radiant.

Problems of a Soldier's Girl Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Do you think it is proper for a girl to call on the parents of the boy she is going with, even though he is in the service? Or would they think this a "too forward" think for her to do? In this case this is the situation: the young man's parents are very nice people whom she has met several times, and since he is in the service she girl would like to keep in contact with them, but hesitates, thinking they might think she is "over-doing" it.

E. L.

No outsider could answer this letter intelligently. It depends on the circumstances, for example, the status of the boy's family and the circumstances of the meetings with the parents, and (3) the thoughts and opinions of the "suitability" of the parents. If the girl is simply trying to get in so they are enthusiastic about the engagement, it would be unwise for them to get in touch with such a girl. Only you can be the judge of such and are just good friends and by your words "whom she has met several times" and "since he is in the service" I would hesitate to keep in contact with them, but hesitate, thinking they might think she is "over-doing" it.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

In planning our summer vacation we are sending for booklets of various resorts, and we are uncertain about their terms . . .

Will you please tell me what is the difference between "American plan" and "European plan."

R. W.

"American plan" means so much per day, including three meals, d'hote, meals. The majority of resorts nowadays have switched on the American plan.) In the booklets you send for you have listed are the prices of the rooms . . . that is, they include no food. Sometimes in a European plan hotel the restaurant bill of fare is separate. In the hotel service (that is, a certain price for each item ordered), but customarily there is also a table d'hote service at a fixed price (and price) with a choice of entrees that includes the other courses, the varying prices listed after the entrees).

4TH OF SIDNEY

4th Sidney — Mrs. Omar Chilhohm opened her home for the regular meeting of the W.M.S. and the W.A. on the afternoon of June 3rd. Mrs. L. W. Scott, presided over the W.M.S. meeting and conducted a worship service led by Mrs. G. Evans, Mrs. R. Meiss and Mrs. G. Tucker, reading Scripture, Mrs. G. Evans offered the meditation and prayer and a poem by Mrs. Mrs. Gray. During the business period Mrs. Scott, who is leaving the community, asked the first vice president to take the duty meeting with Mrs. A. Wood, Temperance convener, in charge of the program. The treasurer's report was given and showed more than half the allocation raised. Mrs. C. Vermilyea assisted by Mrs. J. Deller and Mrs. G. Evans, Mrs. Gray, Durling the study Book. Mrs. A. Wood, W.A. president, conducted a short worship period and business period after which she asked Mrs. L. W. Scott to take the chair in the centre of the group. Mrs. C. Vermilyea read a farewell address to Mrs. Scott on behalf of the Women's Association by Theda Woods, Women's Missionary Society; Ruth H. Read, Red Cross Society; Gladys C. Vermilyea, and Verna M. Phillips.

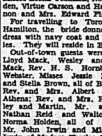
Mrs. A. Woods presented Mrs. Scott with a beautiful blanket as a gift from the community. Mrs. Scott replied thanking them all in a few personality, but his ability and his religion disposes of him as a fine type of citizen and Christian ed.. Nobody seemed to realize how important it is that we live more cooperatively in love, and it was the kind of love that is self-sacrificing. n't give up just because somebody does something.

Finally, Ned begged me to marry him secretly as a proof that I really loved him. He said that it would mean everything to him and would prove my devotion. I was sure to know that I was here steadfastly waiting for him. How could I refuse? So, one day I met him in the city, and we went and got it was legally all right. But it was hard to realise what had happened. I went back to my happy home, but I wear a ring in a bag life.

Fashion Flashes

THAT ONE EXTRA coat that seems indispensable for summer is the subject of one of the newest in a series of tied from shortie, a plot coat in gleaming white satin, fitted and very pretty.

FRANKLY FEMININE hats, ideal for weddings and other important occasions are a big success this season. The big hat style category is a fairly large shallow bretzel in pearl gray baltu, the brim of which is banded satin ribbon and a large rose in front.



HALF A HAT is much better than none at all. Most of the smart young things, one of whom blithely wears a brief hat of black velvet and white gingham with a shoulder length shower of white daisies on the back of her head, is all black and white matching gingham.

AN EASY MANNER in which to dress up a simple cotton or rayon color frock is by adding a paraso and matching gloves in print fabric. Dalsies in white in various on turquoise is used for one such frock another is in yellow or purple paisley.

IT'S FUN to play wearing fancy-pantied girdles. Perfect pants as suspender shorts in white and Tahiti checked cotton over a knit rayon basque shirt in navy, black or coral.

COOL BEAUTY in a navy, black or white sheer with matching fluted grosgrain making collar and sleeves that end in a appliqued big bow at the base of the V neckline. Grosgrain bands too the cartridge pleats at shoulders and on the skirt.

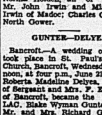
The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Red Hair And The "Sulphur-Type" Girl.

It is not surprising that there are so many red-headed girls among the popular actresses of Hollywood, nor that most of them are hard-headed as well. Brains and red hair usually go together.

Well, not very.



Red-headed is said to be the sulphur-type, which is temperamental, artistic, sometimes explosive and always full of fire and spirit. That makes for good acting and bad living.

In the matter of woman's hair, there have been only seven colors, between pearl gray baltu, the brim which are natural: black, brunette, red for his favorite color he was merely appealing to the average male taste for the color of his own fetish moments.

The theory behind the theme from Cleopatra down past Gubbins to Lorelei Lee, is that red hair is just a few hanks of red hair, . . .

But the red-head is said to be born with a gold spoon in your mouth, the wand of Circe in one hand and the box of Pandora in the other. That is probably why so many famous beauties have died red-handed, no matter how innocently they may have started.

When a red-haired girl isn't in the spotlight and luminary of the stage, she is usually stirring up a scene somewhere else. Activity is at least once in her life!

Soldier's Bride Asks If She Should Tell Conf'ne Secret Marriage

"We had a secret, hasty marriage," a girl writes me. "Secret and hasty. And though I am sorry to know that I belong to my beloved, still I've never told his name,—or rather, my name as it now is.

I expect to me that I cannot go on like this. It is true that my family thinks "it's just as well they knew what I have done. But it is not and if he comes back I shall have to live. And when he comes back I ought to be free to be together. Isn't my present comme a cowardly one? I beg you to tell me frankly, for I am determined my marriage, whatever follows, and as far as possible to be kept secret? I already have a job."

First of all, I think the trusted bride should write to her husband and tell him what she has done. If he does, and if she still has the courage, I think she might "as well tell everybody. Secrets have a way of will have to, sooner or later. Parents seldom do understand as they threaten to be, and the bridegroom has the right to an open acknowledged wife.

Possibly the emotional strain of her present situation is too much for her nerves. She will be glad to know that she is relieved, and hope that she and her soldier husband may have a long and happy life together.

Gift is Presented Mrs. L. W. Scott

4TH OF SIDNEY

4th Sidney — Mrs. Omar Chilhohm opened her home for the regular meeting of the W.M.S. and the W.A. on the afternoon of June 3rd. Mrs. L. W. Scott, presided over the W.M.S. meeting and conducted a worship service led by Mrs. G. Evans, Mrs. R. Meiss and Mrs. G. Tucker, reading Scripture, Mrs. G. Evans offered the meditation and prayer and a poem by Mrs. Mrs. Gray. During the business period Mrs. Scott, who is leaving the community, asked the first vice president to take the duty meeting with Mrs. A. Wood, Temperance convener, in charge of the program. The treasurer's report was given and showed more than half the allocation raised. Mrs. C. Vermilyea assisted by Mrs. J. Deller and Mrs. G. Evans, Mrs. Gray, Durling the study Book. Mrs. A. Wood, W.A. president, conducted a short worship period and business period after which she asked Mrs. L. W. Scott to take the chair in the centre of the group. Mrs. C. Vermilyea read a farewell address to Mrs. Scott on behalf of the Women's Association by Theda Woods, Women's Missionary Society; Ruth H. Read, Red Cross Society; Gladys C. Vermilyea, and Verna M. Phillips.

Mrs. A. Woods presented Mrs. Scott with a beautiful blanket as a gift from the community. Mrs. Scott replied thanking them all in a few personality, but his ability and his religion disposes of him as a fine type of citizen and Christian ed.. Nobody seemed to realize how important it is that we live more cooperatively in love, and it was the kind of love that is self-sacrificing. n't give up just because somebody does something.

Finally, Ned begged me to marry him secretly as a proof that I really loved him. He said that it would mean everything to him and would prove my devotion. I was sure to know that I was here steadfastly waiting for him. How could I refuse? So, one day I met him in the city, and we went and got it was legally all right. But it was hard to realise what had happened. I went back to my happy home, but I wear a ring in a bag life.

Fashion Flashes

THAT ONE EXTRA coat that seems indispensable for summer is the subject of one of the newest in a series of tied from shortie, a plot coat in gleaming white satin, fitted and very pretty.

FRANKLY FEMININE hats, ideal for weddings and other important occasions are a big success this season. The big hat style category is a fairly large shallow bretzel in pearl gray baltu, the brim of which is banded satin ribbon and a large rose in front.

HALF A HAT is much better than none at all. Most of the smart young things, one of whom blithely wears a brief hat of black velvet and white gingham with a shoulder length shower of white daisies on the back of her head, is all black and white matching gingham.

AN EASY MANNER in which to dress up a simple cotton or rayon color frock is by adding a paraso and matching gloves in print fabric. Dalsies in white in various on turquoise is used for one such frock another is in yellow or purple paisley.

IT'S FUN to play wearing fancy-pantied girdles. Perfect pants as suspender shorts in white and Tahiti checked cotton over a knit rayon basque shirt in navy, black or coral.

COOL BEAUTY in a navy, black or white sheer with matching fluted grosgrain making collar and sleeves that end in a appliqued big bow at the base of the V neckline. Grosgrain bands too the cartridge pleats at shoulders and on the skirt.

Red Hair And The "Sulphur-Type" Girl.

It is not surprising that there are so many red-headed girls among the popular actresses of Hollywood, nor that most of them are hard-headed as well. Brains and red hair usually go together.

Well, not very.

Red-headed is said to be the sulphur-type, which is temperamental, artistic, sometimes explosive and always full of fire and spirit. That makes for good acting and bad living.

In the matter of woman's hair, there have been only seven colors, between pearl gray baltu, the brim which are natural: black, brunette, red for his favorite color he was merely appealing to the average male taste for the color of his own fetish moments.

The theory behind the theme from Cleopatra down past Gubbins to Lorelei Lee, is that red hair is just a few hanks of red hair, . . .

But the red-head is said to be born with a gold spoon in your mouth, the wand of Circe in one hand and the box of Pandora in the other. That is probably why so many famous beauties have died red-handed, no matter how innocently they may have started.

When a red-haired girl isn't in the spotlight and luminary of the stage, she is usually stirring up a scene somewhere else. Activity is at least once in her life!

N.Y. Yankees Climb to Tie For Third Place

George Stirnweiss Responsible for Team's Showing in Past Month

HITTING WELL

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

George (Snyffy) Stirnweiss, second baseman of the New York Yankees, not only has filled the shoes of Joe Gordon to everybody's satisfaction, but is stealing everything in sight with them.

Yesterday he was responsible for all his team's runs, besides pilfering his 16th base in 18 attempts, as the Yankees defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 3-1. This victory enabled the world champions to climb into a tie for third place with the Chicago White Sox.

Stirnweiss made three hits, including a double, drove in three runs and scored the other two. One of his tallies resulted from his steal in the third inning, and it was the 14th time he had scored by a steal. Snuffy leads all the Yankees at bat with a .284 average.

Sigmund Jakucki hurled his second successive shutout against Detroit to give the league-leading St. Louis Browns a 5-0 victory.

Cleveland climbed into a three-way tie for sixth place with Philadelphia and Washington by defeating the Chicago White Sox, 5-1. Al Smith stymied the pale hose with four hits for his fourth triumph.

The Senators dropped the Boston Red Sox to three games from first place by scoring an easy 7-1 triumph. Gilbert Torress and Stan Spence led the Nats' attack with three hits apiece, and each drove in a pair of runs.

Ed Head, sore-arm Dodger hurler, pitched his fourth victory of the season without a defeat when he held the Philadelphia Phillies to two hits in blanking them 2-0.

St. Louis and Pittsburgh battled 14 innings to a 5-5 tie in a game called by curfew. Each team used five pitchers.

The Chicago Cubs handed the Reds their fourth straight defeat, scoring twice in the opening stanza, to win 3-1.

STEVENS' KNOCK OF COMING THRU HELPS MONTREAL

Smashes Home Run in 11th Frame to Defeat Newark Bears

SIXTH OF SEASON

By The Associated Press

Ed Stevens, Montreal first baseman, is one of the big reasons why the Royals are in the thick of the fight for the International League pennant.

Stevens' knack of coming through in the pinches has won many a game for the Royals. In yesterday's game, the only one played in the league, big Ed smashed a home run in the last half of the 11th inning to give the Canadian team a 4-3 triumph over the Newark Bears.

The round-tripper was his sixth of the season and gave him a total of 37 runs batted in. Only teammate Morris Aderholt has more, with 40.

Montreal collected but five hits, two less than Johnny Travis allowed the Bears. But Travis fanned seven to gain his second triumph of the campaign.

WINS 3,000- METRE STEEPLECHASE

Here is the finish of the 3,000-metre steeplechase race at the American track and field championship meet at Randall's Island stadium, New York, showing Forest Efaw, crossing the line to win the event. Efaw, now with the U.S.N.T.C., at San Diego, Calif., made the run in 9 minutes and 6 seconds.

Now the Ladies Come to Bat With an All-Star Selection

When it comes to selecting all-time, all-star softball teams now the fair sex has entered into the picture to discount any previous selections made by the mere males. Today we have Mrs. Johnny Ronsky, a softball player in her own right with the SWACO girls' team, making her selections along with "Red" Townsend, Harold Bawden, "Sonny" Green and Mike Whalen. Incidentally, Mrs. Ronsky's husband, Johnny, who played softball in Belleville for several years, is now overseas with the Canadian army.

Here are Mrs. Ronsky's all-time, all-star softball teams selected from players who have played in the Belleville and District Men's Softball League:

First Team	Position	Second Team
Johnny Bawden	Pitcher	Connie Harris
Lorne Bateman	Pitcher	Bill Carson
Alf Rowbotham	Catcher	Murney Green
Frank O'Neill	1st Base	Gene LaBonne
Jack Moon	2nd Base	Herbie Henn
Johnny Ronsky	3rd Base	Art Whitehead
Nicky Sero	Shortstop	Cy Barriage
Stan Amo	Left Field	Harold Reid
Art Genereau	Centre Field	Bill Whalen
Everett Dickey	Right Field	"Ki" Kiser
Chuck Barriage	Utility	Rene St. Denis
Frank Sedore	Manager	"Red" Townsend
Harold Bawden	Coach	"Sonny" Green

There you are fellows, if a young lady can make as good selections as the above, how about making a better one? That is, if you can.

Ontario Rugby Football Union Will Likely Have Five Clubs

By The Canadian Press

Football came to life last night when the organization meeting of the Ontario Rugby Football Union was held with delegates present from five clubs which, according to Secretary Harold Bailey, will probably constitute the 1944 circuit. A subsequent meeting is to be called to consider any further team possibilities, however. The five known starters comprise Hamilton Flying Wildcats, who won the Dominion title last fall, Ottawa Combines, Toronto Balmy Beach, Toronto Indians and H.M.C.S. York, also of Toronto.

William Ziegler's Bounding Home, winner of the Belmont Stakes, is among the favorites in a field of 10 three-year-olds for the $50,000 Dwyer Stakes today at Aqueduct Park. Other contenders include By Jimminy, winner of the Shevlin last week; Stir Up, which finished third in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and Lucky Draw.

Babe Didriksen Zaharias vanquished 18-year-old Betty Jane Haermerle of St. Louis, 2 and 1, in the semi-final yesterday of the Women's Western Open golf tournament at Chicago and will meet Dorothy Germain of Philadelphia for the title today. Miss Haermerle had distinguished herself in the first round by eliminating Patty Berg, former champion.

The American Hockey Association, which suspended operations for the duration, held its annual meeting yesterday at St. Louis when Paul W. Loudon of Minneapolis was elected president. The members will meet in September to decide if scheduled games will be resumed next winter.

The Philadelphia Nationals yesterday released catcher Andy Eeminick to Buffalo Bisons of the International League, subject to 24-hour recall.

A recent arrival in Toronto from Vancouver, Eddie Smith captured the junior 36-hole medal competition of the Ontario Golf Association yesterday at Rosedale Golf Club but only after playing an extra hole with Bob Dilworth of Orillia with whom he had tied at 161.

Dunlop, Baxter In Main Bout

Twice in successive weeks Al Dunlop and Vern Baxter, the Oregon lumberjack, have wrestled at the Hume Arena and without a decision. Of course these grappling pachyderms need longer than 30 minutes to warm up and taking all of this into consideration Promoter Frank Tunney rematched the pair for the full hour as main attraction for his next local muscle-bending show next Wednesday night. Last week Baxter became so infuriated he chased Dunlop to the confines of his dressing room when the "Bunny" promptly bolted the door for security reasons.

Both are unscrupulous wrestlers with the elongated Baxter featuring the flying head scissors as his principal means of attack. On the other hand Dunlop resorts to unorthodox measures and will stoop to the lowest means in order to gain victory.

Adding color to the show Marse Tunney is bringing "Irish Jerry" Monahan, the former masked marvel, in to battle Toar Morgan, the popular former United States Marine grappler. A new-comer to local wrestling sees Cheri Vallina, the Southern champion from Miami, Fla., will battle Bob Wagner, the Pacific Coast champion, in the opener.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 24 — Nel Tarleton, a rather amazing fellow who at 37 still wears the British and Empire featherweight boxing crowns, stepped from a ring at Manchester almost in tears. He had just been disqualified for the first time in his long career of 500 professional fights.

It wasn't a deliberate low blow that caused the disqualification in the second round of Nel's non-title fight wth Britain's bantam champion, Johnny King. Old Nel is much too much of a sportsman for that.

The end came when both were sparring for an opening after an action-packed first round. King was about to jump in with a left when ring-wise Tarleton, anticipating the punch, drove a blow to the body. King hit the canvas, the referee took one look then waved Nel to his corner. That meant the bout was over because under British rules a low blow automatically brings disqualification.

Tarleton first won the feather titles 13 years ago—and has lost and regained them since then. Like all British titles, his are frozen for the duration, although he can defend them if he wishes.

Tarleton, fighting against age lack of training due to service exigencies, hasn't maintained his brilliant form of pre-war years when few opponents could lay a glove on him. Even now, elimination contests are in progress to determine a challenger for his championships and the best form has been shown by Al Phillips, Jewish tailor's cutter from London. Ring followers predict Phillips will take Liverpool Nel's titles without too much difficulty if they meet.

Lieut. Harry Goslin, who led a soccer team on to the beaches of Dunkerque and swapped football reminiscences with them as they awaited embarkation orders under a rain of fire, died of wounds while serving with the Royal Artillery in the Mediterranean.

Together with all the Bolton Wanderers first team, Halfback Goslin joined the Territorials before the war and the majority participated in the battle of France. Nine reached Dunkerque.

Goslin gained three international wartime caps as member of England teams. In his nine years with Bolton he played 3,337 league and cup matches.

John Thomas Hearne, on of history's greatest bowlers, died at 77 after a long illness. Star cricketer with Middlesex County from 1888 to 1923, he made 12 appearances for England against Australia—six in each country.

Perhaps Hearne's greatest performance was when, with Bobby Peel, he dismissed Australia at the Oval in 1896 for 44 runs, to win an historic Test.

It is probable that the name of Marion Davies will loom large in post-war international figure skating. Just 15, Marion is being groomed as Britain's skating hope and experts say she is "a wonder for her age." The youngster comes from London's Bayswater district.

Elmer Durrett Batting Leader Of Int. League

New York, June 24—(AP)—Elmer (Red) Durrett, Montreal's outfielder, is today the No. 1 batter in the International League.

The ex-marine, who spent 10 months in a hospital recovering from wounds suffered in fighting at Guadalcanal, fought his way to the top this week with a sensational spree of 11 hits in 19 times at bat.

Five doubles, a triple and a home run marked the surge as Durrett hoisted his season's average to .349 to displace Chico Rodriguez at the peak. Durrett has 65 hits in 186 miles at bat. Rodriguez collected only five hits in 27 trips and skidded to fourth place as his average fell from .343 to .322.

Bob Law Oaloore was the only newcomer to this week's big 10. He replaced Dewey Williams of Toronto, going into a ninth-place tie with teammate Howard Moss at .314. Others in the big 10 are John Castano, Toronto, .333; Stan Benjamin, Baltimore, .332; Bobby Maier, Buffalo, .321; Jack Sturdy, Rochester, .317; Mayo Smith, another Bison, .316; and Blas Monaco, the fourth Oriole, with .315.

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

Nothing Doing

"Doctor," said the patient, "I'm afraid my wife is going crazy."

"What seems wrong?" asked the doctor.

"She wants to buy a goat."

"Let her buy a goat."

"But she wants to keep it in the house."

"Well, let her keep it in the house."

"But a goat stinks."

"Open the windows."

"What! And let all my pigeons out!"

This and That.

Just to show how foolish things can be: The Chicago Cubs now have no less than 16 scouts, who, if they accomplish anything, probably will use up as much transportation as it would have taken to get the team in shape in Florida or California next spring . . . Catcher Tom Turner of the Chicago White Sox, who enjoys no world-wide reputation as a baseball strategist, is the best chess player on the club . . . The moves must be different . . . Ned Mathews, veteran halfback of the Detroit Lions, was all set for a part in Warner Brothers' forthcoming production "Objective Burma" but the Army couldn't wait . . . Chalky Wright, Negro boxer who was once recognized as the featherweight champion by the New York boxing commission, was born in Mexico . . . Ben Chapman, who wound up his major league career as a member of the Chicago White Sox after a whirl with the Yankees and several other American League teams, is now manager and pitcher for the Richmond, Va., team . . . Chapman, who used to be an outfielder and one of the fastest men in baseball, can't understand why some major league team hasn't made an offer for his services . . . He still thinks he's a better player than a good many of the veterans who have been given a "second life."

Young Man's Game.

"Despite many of the changes in the various lineups, this still is a young man's game," observed Manager Luke Sewell of the Browns, after taking batting practice with his team during an off-day in Sportsman's Park last week. Freddy Hofmann, the Brown coach, was pitching to the batters, and Luke hit a few weak dribblers to the infield.

"I probably still could catch if I had to," said the 43-year-old Luke, who caught over 100 games in a season for nine years, "and my arm has some power left. But I would be a total washout at bat. When I swing, I expect the ball to be in one place, only to discover it is somewhere else. My eyesight still seems to be as good as ever, but when one gets older you lose a certain co-ordination, and once you lose it, you don't regain it."

While on the subject of baseball and along with the youth question, don't forget tomorrow's baseball game at the Alemite Field when Bob Blaind's Foster Ward kids meet Trenton.

Ladies at Bat.

These weekly selections of all-time, all-star softball teams, originated by Red Townsend, reached a zenith today when a lady, Mrs. Johnny Ronsky, stepped to the plate and laced out a base knock in the form of her all-time, all-star selections. However, looking over Mrs. Ronsky's selection the No. 1 team named seemed to resemble considerably a junior team Red Townsend mustered five or six years ago, the majority of which went over to the old Shell nine after becoming of age.

Of the five all-time, all-star teams selected to date we noticed that three players, Johnnie Bawden, Nicky Sero and Art Genereaux have been selected on the No. 1 team by all selectors. However, when Mr. Townsend started this selections business he made it clear he was including all players ever to appear in a league game. Under these circumstances how any of the selectors passed up Jack Parry, former Windsor lad who played, one season with No. 5 I. T. S., is hard to figure.

Remember When.

J. C. Parke, British tennis star, defeated Big Bill Tilden of the United States in straight sets at Wimbledon 24 years ago today. No, it wasn't an upset—because Big Bill hadn't reached his peak at that time. In later years he swept all before him in the tennis world.

All Washed Out.

It was a blank in softball circles last night as old Jupiter Pluvius dampened the hopes of a ladies game and two men's tussles. Oddly enough it was the first rain postponement this year in the men's circuit. However, the lassies will loop and the third in the ladies try it Monday again.

Toronto, June 24 — (CP) — The one sure way to defeat the weather's vagaries — and there have been plenty of them this year — apparently was discovered by two female golfers out in Edmonton. They got tired waiting for the rains to stop, so donned bathing suits and hied forth to the fairways, splashing merrily across the soggy greens.

We didn't hear how they made out or what their scores were, but imagine they had a heap of fun. They stole a march on the other golfers anyway, since they were practically the only people who played golf all week in the Edmonton area, opined George Mackintosh in the Edmonton Journal.

The thing opens up great possibilities, though. Who knows but what those hardy she-westerners may come up with a brand new game of water-golf or suchlike that will revolutionize the ancient pastime.

Home Ties!

Regimental Sergeant Major Bill Hogarth, one-time prominent hockeyist and athlete around Fort William, is overseas but still is thinking of sport.

He has offered to donate a cup to the athlete, male or female, doing the most for the lakehead city in the sport world. The cup would be dedicated to the 4th Field Ambulance unit.

By the Way:

There wasn't much to choose between the top riders at Montreal's King's Park race meet, just concluded. Jockey Leslie Backett was top rider, but only 10 points separated the first four boys. Backett's placings and showings gave him the edge . . . The Rothesay (N.B.) Yacht Club has decided to install a nickelodeon in the clubhouse this summer. We hope the yachtsmen aren't going soft. There was a time when your true sailor thought of other things besides listening to jive when he sailed past the clubhouse marker and hit what corresponded to your golfer's 19th hole... Night soccer is being inaugurated in Montreal next month.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 413

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You can be right—and know you are right—and still be laughed at. Horse Sense rules have been laughed at by experts. But only by those whose sole brilliant argument was "Oh, yeah."

With tricks enough to take a crack at a game, start with an opening bid of two in a suit. To be more specific, start with an opening two-bid if you have nine tricks or more.

Such an opening is a forcing-to-game signal. In reply thereto, the first response from partner must tell whether he has help for a slam.

If he has not help for a slam, he shows it with a signal. That signal is a bid of two no-trump. Thus, a two no-trump response is but another way of saying: "Sorry, partner. No help for a slam."

If your partner starts with an opening two-in-a-suit bid, when would you say you have not help for a slam. When you have not a sure trick. And a sure trick is an Ace or K Q.

Therefore, if your immediate response is two no-trump, it is your signal for saying: "Partner, I have no ace in my hand. Nor have I any combination of K Q in any one suit."

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two hearts and you have this hand:

♠ 2 10 9 7 5
♣ 8 7 3

Remember that you dare not pass. Because an opening bid of two in a suit is forcing to game. You must bid something. There is no getting around that. You must bid something. But what?

It is true you have a biddable spade suit. It is also true that you have adequate trump support for an assist of your partner's heart suit. But you have no sure trick. And you must announce that first.

So, your first response is two no-trump to signal you have no sure trick. If you have anything else to show, say it later.

Not even an expert can laugh that off.

"Someone To Remember"

(First Belleville Showing)

"Someone to Remember," the Republic picture which will be seen at the Capitol Theatre Sunday Midnight and Monday only in the heart warming, but thoroughly absorbing is one.

It is a wonderfully produced adaptation of a story by that prince of story tellers, Ben Ames Williams, whose every book seller, "Strange Woman" is sweeping the country, and the artistic direction of Robert Siodmak brings out every phase of a thoroughly delightful story.

The large cast is of stellar proportions, including such names as Mabel Paige, who plays the title role, John Craven, Dorothy Morris, Harry Shannon and Charles Dingle, and the story deals with a mother's fight for the love of a boy absent son, or whose return she is trying for a whole lifetime.

She obstinately refuses to leave her old home, thinking that her son will like to return to the scenes of his boyhood, although, after a time, transforming the rest of the big apartment house into a boys' dormitory, she finds herself surrounded by exuberant college youths.

How the boys come to idolize her, and how she comes to love to her son's memory form the essence of a deeply moving story, and it is safe to say that those who miss seeing "Someone to Remember" will forego a treat in store.

"Slightly Dangerous"

Lana Turner and Bob Young make a new comedy team in "Slightly Dangerous," the latest Republic film coming to the added bill to the Capitol on Tuesday, Midnight. There are any number of situations to keep you in stitches. Lana starts out as a mischievous brat which up as the long lost daughter of a multi-millionaire. When Young starts chasing glamorous Lana from a penthouse to the cross-roads of New York to save his good name, there is more fun packed into the hunt for clues and chase scenes than a dozen ordinary films. The mixture of comedy and romance are such prominent players as Walter Brennan, Rudy Vallee, May Whitty, Eugene Pallette, Alan Mowbray and a host of others and "Slightly Dangerous" is not too dangerous for a couple of good laughs, and there is a liberal coating of entertainment plus. It's sure to be laugh bomb at the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Tender Comrade"

A romance of "The Girl Next Door" is the sympathetic theme of Ginger Rogers' newest vehicle, "Tender Comrade".

With newcomer Robert Ryan as her leading man, Miss Rogers plays Jo Flanagan, a Los Angles girl who becomes one of the thousands of America's war wives.

Growing up with Chris Jones, Jo fails in love and married him. They plan their future with little thought for the war clouds gathering in Europe. But Chris's at last dons khaki and Jo, after seeing him goes overseas and goes to work in a defense plant. Housing and transportation troubles compel her to join other service wives. They rent a home big enough for them all—and for Chris, Jr. The absorbing series of events in this setting, with the romantic situation of Jo and Chris' return develop a highly sympathetic plot.

"Eve of Invasion"

The Belle Theatre management is especially grateful to the war department for the opportunity of presenting to you these films on the allied invasion of Fortress Europe "Eve of Invasion". These films just released show all tremendous United Nations preparations for the second front.

Donald Duck is appearing on the same program in a highly amusing colorfun cartoon "Trombone Trouble". Continuous shows will be presented today.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Folks who have long complained about the domination of boxing by New York (and Mike Jacobs) may do some real howling about the new four-state fistic "bloc." . . . Officially there's nothing more than working agreements linking New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New Jersey, calling for reciprocal suspensions and the like, but chairman Julius Helfand of the New York Commission hints that he has some fresh ammunition to fire in his old feud with Abe Greene, and the National Boxing Association. . . . Maybe it may be right. . . . Champions Ora Lemercier and Red Cochrane live in New Jersey while Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Beau Jack, Bob Montgomery, Willie Pep and a few others have found they can make the most dough in those four states . . . California and Illinois are the only outsiders that count for much. Phelan points out . . . But he also admits those agreements are always being made—and broken to suit someone's convenience.

Sheets and Shelter

Red Trautman's High - School post war committees has accepted an invitation from the State High School associations to provide summer tutoring for baseball coaches in August. Lew Fonseca will be the American League's representative on the faculty and Phil Traynor the National's. . . . While Clay Shaun was training with Ike Williams in the Garden last night, his kid brother, Jay D., was doing a little scrapping with the navy along the French coast, and J. D. likely felt the concussion from a couple of Williams' wallops.

CASTILLOUX SCORES K.O.

Montreal, June 24 — (CP)—Dave Castilloux, Canadian lightweight and welterweight champion, who recently was discharged from the R.C.A.F., returned to the boxing ring last night and scored a third-round knockout over Robert Lepine, pierre of Montreal in a non-title bout Castilloux weighed 136 1/4 and Lepierriere 146.

"Bat-Busters" Close to Title

The "Bat-Busters" moved closer to annexing the Bantam softball championship of the Eli-Y League by trouncing the All-Stars 17 to 7 at Queen Mary School grounds.

The winners scored runs in every frame except the fourth after scoring four runs in the first inning from which point they were never headed.

The line-ups: All-Stars — Miller 1b, Lally, 2, Green c, Kemp lb, Kilchen 2b, Meagher ss, Burke lf, Spencer cf and Dobbs 2b. Bat-Busters—Long p, Batchelor c, Ghenron 1b, Palmer ss, Davis 2b, Kane lf, Allen 3b, G. Batchelor cf and Schreider rf.

MARMORA

REV. H. J. FARRELL IS HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

Refers at Meeting of C.W. League Members of His Ordination 30 Years Ago in Ireland

MARMORA—The June meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held on Wednesday evening, at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McCaffrey, at Crows Lake, with a large attendance. The Holy Name Society as guests of the League, was represented by a good number, who enjoyed themselves with games on the lawn, while the business portion of the meeting was in progress.

The meeting opened in the usual way with the President, Mrs. D. J. O'Connor in the chair. A letter was read from the diocesan convener, regarding lay retreats to be held at Notre Dame Convent, Kingston in August.

The Treasurer's report was given by Mrs. N. Macdonald, arrangements were made for the different groups to join this summer in holding bake sales and bingos.

Wednesday being the 30th anniversary of Rev. Father H. J. Farrell's ordination to the priesthood, the League presented him with a gift of money, the presentation being made by the President, Mrs. E. D. O'Connor.

The Holy Name also presented him with a gift of money, the presentation being made by the President, Eugene Brady and William Shannon.

League Fins

Mrs. Black then presented League pins to the members of the group, who had made the largest amount of money, during the past twelve months last summer. This group was from Nelson, Mrs. John Doyle, convener.

The President then made a presentation to Mrs. J. Black, past president of a beautiful Sacred Heart statue, for which Mrs. Black expressed her thanks and appreciation.

Rev. Father Farrell then addressed the ladies, thanking them for their gift. He spoke of his ordination thirty years ago in Ireland, and of his return trips to his native land. He wished all a happy vacation during the summer months.

Mrs. Crawford then presented Mrs. McNally with a gift, in appreciation of her kindness in lending her summer home each year for the June meeting, and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. McNally.

Mrs. Rose Johnston gave a reading entitled "Mrs. Parker Steps Out," followed by a piano read by Mrs. Black, entitled "My Reason," after which the meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem. The members of the Holy Name Society then joined the League members, and a few games of Bingo were enjoyed. Harold Auger was the winner in a draw for $500 sponsored by the Holy Name Society for the cigarette fund. Miss Mary Hughes gave out sewing for embroidering to take home. An hour was spent and a delicious lunch was served.

TO HOLD GAMES

The June meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. P. E. Stevenson. There was a splendid attendance and the President, Miss Margaret Brown, presided for the opening and business periods.

As a result of the afternoon tea held at the parsonage on the 13th the proceeds were turned in to apply on the allocation for the year. Mrs. H. R. Hoskin and Mrs. Cadigan were appointed to plan for work with our young people, which will prove helpful. Mite box will be packed at Miss Brown's next Monday evening. Any discarded clothing will be gratefully received.

The Worship period was in charge of Mrs. Hoskin with Mrs. Cadigan, Mrs. Sproule, Mrs. Burwash, Mrs. Sweet, and Mrs. D. Sanderson assisting. After the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

I.O.D.E. Chapter.

The regular meeting of the Marmora Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the form of a supper party on Tuesday evening, at Mr. Bleecker's summer home, at Crows Lake, with Miss Miriam Savage, the hostess. The Regent, Mrs. Jim Marsh, presided the meeting with prayer. The general business was discussed. Several letters from I.O.D.E. headquarters were read in which the need for Service Women's Personal Comfort bags was strongly stressed. It was decided that each member would do her bit during the summer. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 35

"They looked for the safe and couldn't find it."

"And made so much noise Mr. Bruce came down and caught 'em?"

"Yes. He started to fight them in the dark without seeing who they were. That's how Sheldrake was killed—by Bruce. And then Curt called out, and Bruce recognized his voice, and they—they—planned what to do. That Bruce should leave Curt and me hurt and Curt should say he knew nothing—would plead to be found locked in."

"Pins pack of lies! Come Mrs. Burton's story is more like the truth." The Inspector commented.

"But you believed Avery all right, didn't you, Miss Forrestall?"

"I believed him all along. Even when he said Gale had killed Bruce in revenge for—her accident." Amy told him in a very small voice.

"Sure you did. That's why you told him all you could warm out of your father. How Mr. Bruce was at his ease, and how he'd be coming to town soon, and tell the police who he thought had killed dear dad."

"I know. I shouldn't have done it." Amy admitted miserably.

"But he said he had to know. So that he could get Gale."

"So he could get there before Miss Burton and Miss Kay and shoot him!" The Inspector slammed his hand down on the desk angrily. "If he didn't think of everything, the dirty skunk! That red herring of yours, the Jordan boy; guess he was his idea too?"

"Oh, darling, Mr. Bruce didn't understand, and wanted to silence Stella," Amy told him.

"Hmm—well—can't hang her for having no brains," the unstirred under his breath, and then, after a pause, veered to me. "Guess it doesn't draw you a map, now, of why I asked you to keep things from Mr. Forrestall?"

"No, not of that. But of something else," I said guardedly.

"You—er—acted as surprised as can be, when you read the radium letter? Did you count on my lying to Forrestall about the directions that were in it?"

The Inspector actually looked flustered for a moment. Flustered I'd read it. First thing when I found it was pocket it, and—the thought at some people," he confessed with a sheepish glance at Forrestall—"and looking forward to a swell time. You scatter blood, watching you read it. You scatter blood, and you didn't admire your new dress — if you know what I mean. Wouldn't call of my plan a-tall if you'd blurted out the truth."

"Your plan? Very yes tying Kay for a plant?" Amy's smile asked indignantly.

"I was aiming to catch a murderer, not have Miss Forrestall justified-himself. "Couldn't babbled Forrestall, bewildered. "Darling, Miss Kay was busy to the Burton house, alone, and had the evidence. Was he surprised when we closed in on him in the back alley—saying in his car for his girl—and what she'd bring him. All packed and ready to skip—and did his run? Had to clap him before he stopped."

The Perfect still smile broke out in full force, for the first time that day, in the wake of the Inspector's.

"But, good Lord—you were risking Kay's life!", Allan said from the corner of his mouth, angrily.

"I wasn't either," the Inspector assured him. "Knew I'd scare her a scare, but she was in no danger. Knew I'd come in, right across the hall. With a gun."

"Roberta—? Roberta was protecting her?"

All the wild suspicions I'd had about the case crowded my brain for a split second as I turned and stared at him. "But—I thought you didn't like me, Roberta? The way you acted before and—"

"Ay, that was when I didn't know better, when I kinder thought you was a grasping, plotting lit." Roberts explained, with much twiddling of his cap in his well-scrubbed hands. "Things is diff'rent now. I been a heap mad all my life, same like my father and his father. I won't let his harm come to no Burton, born or married. Not if I can help it."

The way he said it—solemnly and with conviction—made me remember a version of a medieval retainer's oath of fealty. And somehow it brought a lump into my throat.

I began: "Thank you, Roberta," and was going to add a few embellishments, when Aunt Millie cut me short.

:But how did this lovely plan—your plotting, Kay's life—help you and how did you know Avery would be in the alley, and meant to leave you?" She asked with some sharpness.

"Is that why you called Stella here for questioning? Because you suspected her husband?" I wondered.

"Sure I was playing my fool to catch a murderer," the Inspector nodded. "She knew what I was driving at."

"But she couldn't have. She thought I was trying to help her," objected.

"Was only her way of saying: 'Look, you're a murderer and I know it. But I won't tell on you, if you'll let me live.' If he had murdered her. It would have been a case of carefully tilted the cat."

"So that was why she moaned and cried when you hinted her out. She was afraid of him!" I thought out loud.

"Yes, yes—but when did she discover her husband was the murderer?" Gale, who had been quiet all this time, was getting impatient, it seemed.

"She didn't, at any given time," Mrs Libby interjected with smug satisfaction. "I figured on her gradually, she said. She knew he'd been in the Burton house on the afternoon of the first murder—even if she gulled him, and Gale formed a corpse instead of him, and Curt's corpse instead of hers. Knew even, then, when you heard the scream, Ray Burton. And when she found out he'd been gone from the house for a good part of the night Bruce Burton was killed—probably seeched in his room you might as well woke up—came the dawn! And with the second murder—the one you'd give you played that mean trick on her, Josiah Pettengil. Shame on you, mentioning a woman's life by telling a murderer see she ought to suspect him!"

"Should some to me with her suspicions," the Inspector defended himself.

"Suspicions! Ever heard of a woman giving away a man she's in love with?" The astute dowager's glance flicked Amy. "Wild horses couldn't have dragged it out of Stella, up to her smoking cupboard last night. That seems to have been the drop too much. But she certainly did get an artful, when she crawled after her dear Curt through the dark corridor back of your garden. Amy, you told her."

"Oh! said Amy. Just "Oh!"

"Sure it was. I'm convinced. "And I'm glad she got scared enough to tell on him. Though in a way it was a funny way of her being as afraid of Stella as she was of him. It seems realizing she knew had given him awfully cold feet. Anything with a channel all his plans. Where he'd expected: to stay and play up to Kay, he now wanted to run, with Amy. And in his excitement he was incautious and let the cat out of the bag. Let her see he'd done the two murders and was ready for a few more—and kill Kay or the stone and the much talked of Stella. Even what he much talked wife for—well you might say, the pleasure of it." she suddenly beamed on Amy, her hard's off to you, child. From what Stella said, you did exactly what I would have done in your place: kept your head and held him off, even when he threatened to add you to his victims, in case you'd the notion of running to the police. Good for you to him and told him you'd not allow any more murders, whether you or no more Kay."

There was a dead silence, in the room when Mrs. Libby paused—to let her disclosure sink in. No one said a word. Least of all Amy. And after awhile Mrs. Libby went on:

"I must say I was flabbergasted. The idea! Stella coming to me with her story instead of calling the police! Well I gave her a piece of my mind and rang you up. The rest you know."

"Yes the rest we all know," the Inspector nodded. "Except one thing. Tell me, Miss Amy what did you think would happen to you —afterwards?"

"You'd put me in prison," Amy said simply. "I—didn't like the idea; I tried to—to double-cross Curt and call you up last night. But I couldn't. I—just couldn't. So you'd better arrest me, I guess."

"Stop talking nonsense, I told you some time you might helpful bringing the murderer to justice and maybe saving Miss Kay's life," the Inspector told her with assumed grimness. "There's nothing more to say. This case is closed. Thank heaven the grand jury's in session, and it'll all be over soon. Be seeing you, on the witness stand, I hope."

And that is the end of my story about the murder in the empty house next door.

It is fall now. The garden is a riot of late flowers, the trees a blazing glory of gold and crimson and flame.

The summer has been short and very quiet, because of my official "mourning." And I've had so much idle time on my hands I decided to write this account of my terrible first weeks here in Cliffport.

All the people who played a part in the murder scattered.

Aunt Millie has gone back to New York and her own life. Amy is being "punished" for her lapse from moral grace by taking an extended South American trip with her parents. Stella, Amy's ex-fiancé, is learning not to scream. Even Mrs. Libby thought it politic able to turn her back on her beloved Cliffport for awhile.

And Curtis Avery, of course, has been taken to the state prison, for life.

Only Dad, Allan and I are left—and Gale.

My beautiful stepmother-to-be is very busy these days, designing my trousseau and hers. We are getting married in a few weeks. She and Dad, Allan and I.

The ceremonies will be in the large drawing room of the house that so important role in the murder investigation, and one of the local guests will be Inspector Josiah Pettengill.

First Dad will give me away to Allan, then Allan and I will witness the marriage of Gale. And later we'll go on separate honeymoons and come back to live in this lovely old house. Allan and I for keeps, in this ground-floor apartment. And Dad and Gale alternately. Temporarily, and as our guests.

If the house belongs to me now, all of it. Gale made my taking it over one of her conditions when she accepted a share of the Burton inheritance. Because, after all, her home will be where Dad and I spend most of our time, and when the government sends Dad, while Allan and I will live here for years—as long as he remains the head of the shipyard.

There was one other matter on which we agreed, in our division of the estate. The large Burton house.

We didn't want it. Neither Gale nor I had the desire to be reminded of our past mistakes and two horrible murders each time we looked at the ugly bulk.

And as it is coming down the moment the estate is settled, in time for spring planting, when, I hope, so that the space it took up can be made into a part of the garden.

It will be a wonderful view when it is gone, far over the bay and the shipyard. Please God we'll enjoy it through many, many years.

Notice to Tax Payers

The last day for the payment of the Second Instalment of 1941 Taxes without penalty being imposed will be Monday, July 2nd, 1941. As the 1st falls on Dominion Day (Tuesday) July 1st., 1941, and with Sunday following it will mean that the time for payment will be curtailed by those two days. Under these circumstances it would be beneficial to the Public and much appreciated by us if all payments could be made between now and Saturday, July 26th. and not later than Monday, July 3rd., 1941. By following the above suggestion much trouble be avoided on the part of those making payments at the last minute.

City, District Wounded Men Arrive Home

Many of the Men Are Survivors of the Italian Campaign

GIVEN FURLOUGHS

Soldiers returning from overseas, who arrived Friday morning, told stories of Hospital Ship being black with planes as the invasion of Europe got under way.
Among the men, veterans of the Italian campaign, who were returning to Canada due to lowered medical categories, arrived in England from Italy just in time to catch a glimpse of some of the operations of the biggest invasion in history.
Immediately upon their arrival here the men were transported to No. 3A District Depot at Fort Frontenac, where documents were checked, and they were given furloughs to proceed to their homes. Those from this district with the big group was Capt. James Bird, of Picton.

Cpl. C. F. Potts, of Trenton, Ont., landed in Kingston proudly wearing a decoration for bravery, which he won in fighting around Pachino in Italy. "Naturally I'm glad to be back," he commented, "but I'd like to spend a minute of my being over there. There were some good times, and there were some swell fellows."

Pte. V. Lefebvre, of Hull, Que., enlisted in June, 1940, before leaving on the invasion aircraft flying between Egypt and "It was an eyesight. There were troop-carrying planes as far as the eye could see."

The soldiers who saw action at the Mero River in Italy were Lieut. H. J. Pullaw, of Gananoque, Ont., and Pte. Joseph Spann, of Bancroft, who stated "it was plenty tough."

THIS WAR'S AMPS TO BENEFIT FROM PAST EXPERIENCE

Task of Re-establishment Made Easier Through Help From Vets of First Great War

By VIRGINIA FOX

Rehabilitation of members of Canada's fighting forces who have suffered amputation or complete blindness is one of the great problems of the Second Great War. But the task of their re-establishment is being made easier by the study of the question by the government, medical services and the War Amputations of Canada.

Amps now returning to the Dominion from the battlefronts of Europe will benefit by the experience and advice of some 2,500 men similarly incapacitated in the First Great War. These men present to the new battle casualties an example of physical handicaps overcome in a large degree and of successful rehabilitation.

Already many men disabled in the present war by the loss of limbs are working in war industries.

Generally new Amps are satisfied with their artificial limbs—latest products of specialized workmanship and ingenuity and tenacity learn to handle them with a minimum of discomfort. Great strides made in modern surgery give men who wouldn't have had a chance in the last war an opportunity to survive and become useful citizens. Thirty-two of nearly 500 Amps of this war up to June 15, are still in the service, working where their disabilities do not interfere with the efficient performance of their duties.

Some of the First Great War are personally interested in the economic welfare and rehabilitation of each new Amp. And they back this interest with a nationwide organization, the War Amputations of Canada, with Dominion headquarters located at Toronto and branches at principal centres in each province. Large centres, like Vancouver, Winnipeg and Toronto have club house facilities, and the Toronto branch is considering extension to provide recreation facilities for new members.

Amps Stick Together.

The Amps are a compact family, Lt.-Col. G. E. Lambert, veteran Canadian, has been appointed by the Dominion council of the association since its inception—a record unique in the British Empire. Most members of the council have been retioned as such for several years. The association carries on an active and aggressive campaign in the interests of disabled servicemen and women.

The organization is now working to have the phrase "War Disability Compensation" substituted for the word "pension." They feel the word conveys an idea of charity and has a bad psychological effect on the rehabilitation of today's casualties.

Every branch has an employment and rehabilitation committee which works in conjunction with a Dominion-wide placement bureau and the department of pensions and national health. Each job is analyzed to determine the ability, education and specific skills it requires and the satisfaction it offers.

Arrangements are being made for vocational training in connection with the new Amps' permanent rehabilitation in suitable occupations. University training, including a maintenance grant and fees together with appropriate allowances to dependents, is given to any man who has the aptitude and who either resumes his course or starts his university training within 15 months after his discharge. Both vocational and university training is governed by the length of service.

$ Union Workers Will Go to Camp To See Equipment Work

Oshawa, June 24. (CP)— Eight Union officials employed in war plants in Windsor, Ont., and Oshawa, Ont., will go to Camp Borden, Ont., Saturday to spend two days there watching equipment they have produced go through its paces it was announced here Friday.

The invitation was extended by Lt.-Col. G. S. Currie, deputy defence minister, and was issued by George Burt, Canadian director of U.A.W.

As guests of the army, the workers will be quartered in army forces and will take their meals in camp. Five of them have served in this war and another is a First Great War veteran.

ENEMY CONVOY INTERCEPTED

London, June 24—(CP)—A small enemy convoy escorted by an armed trawler was intercepted by British Light Naval forces south of the island of Jersey yesterday. One enemy escort was sunk and one merchant ship was left burning. Some superficial damage was sustained by Allied forces.

INSTRUMENTS RECOVERED

Toronto, June 24 —(CP)— Five saxophones, five clarinets and a trumpet stolen from Duke Ellington's dance band at a ballroom here Tuesday night have been recovered police said last night. A person employed by the manager and advised him the instruments, valued at $2,000 were placed outside the ballroom door.

Washington Spotlight

By C. H. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, June 24—(CP)—American politicians have never before had to fight so hard for the spotlight as in this presidential election year.

World-shaking events on the war and diplomatic fronts have political antics into the shadows as matters of little interest.

But the functions of democratic government must go on and the republicans are meeting in Chicago next Monday to hold their National Convention and pick a candidate for President of the United States. They will adopt also a platform designed to carry their candidates to victory in the battle at the polls next Nov. 7.

It is still the assumption that Gov. Thomas L. Dewey of New York will be the republican selection, with only strong evidence that he is doomed to failure likely to mafk him refuse, according to the general opinion here.

TOO MANY COOKS: A preview of the difficulties to be overcome in deciding upon world policies when some 40 odd nations have equal voice is provided by the efforts for more than a year of the Interim food committee, headed by Canada's L. B. Pearson, to reach agreement on a program by which it is hoped to maintain equitable production and distribution of food for the world's peoples. An agreed program is now expected within a matter of weeks.

TRIVIA: Because the republican and democratic conventions both in Chicago, are three weeks apart, some 1,200 news correspondents will make the round trip twice a month . . . President Roosevelt is being blamed for the late holding of the democratic convention today 19) and his accusers say he plans to be in France when the democratic candidate (PZB) is chosen . . . Wendell Willkie, who dropped out of the presidential race, had 10 columns in the congressional record the other day—speeches and published articles—and most of it put on the record by democrats.

Apple Blossom Land

Normandy, region of the invasion's beachheads, has a long and romantic history which began when a Norse viking chieftain named Rolf the Ganger, later called Rollo, led a swarm of Scandinavian warriors to its shores. A.D. 900, says a Chicago Tribune column. The conquest was immediate, and a few years later King Charles the Simple of France gave Rollo feudal rights to nearly, all west of the mouth of the Seine these Norse settlements were largely Norwegian, and experts on Normandy say that these racial beginnings are still apparent today in farmhouse arrangements.

Within 100 years these interlopers, who found their wives on the land, were completely Frenchified, and had developed a vigorous, expanding culture, characteristic of the land. They conquered England as French-speaking medievalists, contemptuous of the lower culture of the Saxons, bringing their own architecture (Norman Romanesque), legal system, and table manners. Nevertheless, the Normans of France today, retain certain characteristics of a northern, non-Celtic race. They are likely to be taller, burlier, and blonder than the descendants of Celts and Celts, and they are also known for their stubborness and litigiousness.

The land itself, back of the coast which is famous for its seaside resorts, is green with meadows, tree clumps, and wooded hill; the French call it "la verte Normandie". Orchards are numerous, and the popular American song of 20 or 30 years ago, "Apple Blossom Time in Normandy", spoke truly about this countryside in the spring of the year. Cider is a general beverage, and Calvados, the harvest apple drink in the world, is available for sturdy topers.

The regional eating of Normandy, in the cafes of Rouen and elsewhere runs to excellent cuts of beef, duck, and sole with local sauces, and the native cheeses, which are Camembert and Pont-L'Eveque. Caen has a specialty which is known where ever there is a French chef and is highly esteemed by gourmets who are not afraid of a name: Tripe à la mode de Caen. Squeamish American tripe-lovers are missing a good thing here.

The early French colonists in Canada were largely of Norman stock, according to Sacha Guitry, the Noel Coward of Paris, the French that is spoken in the Province of Quebec still has traces of the Norman accent.

Jap Battleship Blasted in Sea Battle

Among the four Jap ships sunk or damaged when the United States 5th Fleet delivered a smashing defeat to a major force of the Imperial Japanese fleet in an epic battle between the Mariana Islands and the Philippines, was a battleship of the Kongo class. Above is the Jap battleship Kongo.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — Members of Endeavors' Class were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Elliott on Tuesday evening with Mrs. Frank Hammond presiding over the program. Mr. Melville Donnan gave a fine explanation of the Scripture lesson. A duet by Mrs. W. J. Pilchett and Mr. Kenneth Stewart was much enjoyed. Mr. Philip Carr gave a report of the Bay of Quinte conference held recently at Interboro. Mr. Clifford Elliott gave an inspiring address of a religious nature.

At the conclusion of the program a lunch was served by Mrs. Elliott.

Geo. Post received a serious injury to his leg on Monday while engaged in a game of softball.

Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Wicks of Belleville were Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Greer.

REMNANTS OF NAZI TROOPS FLEE CHERBOURG
RED ARMIES DRIVE THROUGH BREACHED LINE

Retreat To Narrow Cap De La Hague Northwest of Port

20,000 Nazi Prisoners Captured in 20 Days of Invasion Fighting

CLEANUP PRIZE PORT

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26—(AP)—Supreme headquarters announced at 3 p.m. tonight that American troops held one-third of Cherbourg completely and that armored and infantry units had reached the docks.

All attackings American divisions now have elements in Cherbourg.

The supreme command announced more than 20,000 prisoners have been taken since the landings in France.

British troops drove four miles southeast of Tilly-Sur Seulles and captured Brettvillette it was announced. They also captured Tessel-Bretteville, 2½ miles southeast of Tilly.

Behind the American lines at Cherbourg several pockets and villages are still in the hands of the Germans who are holding out fiercely.

An airport near Cherbourg still was the scene of German resistance.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 26—(AP)—United States troops have broken the backbone of enemy opposition at Cherbourg and are cleaning out knots of resistance in the centre of the fort city, a front dispatch declared today, while British forces smashed out powerfully on the opposite end of the Normandy front.

Remnants of Nazi troops were fleeing from Cherbourg to the Narrow Cap De La Hague, last jutting land finger northwest of the prize port. Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead said in a dispatch from the city.

In 24 hours, the Americans took 3,340 prisoners and hundreds more were being rounded up. Included in least 20,000 Nazis have been captured in the 20 days of invasion fighting, Cleanup Prize Port.

The clearing of the prize port became as strong British forces on the Eastern Normandy front smashed into Nazi defences between Caen and Tilly Sur Seulles. They seized Le Poirier, Le Pesnel, two miles south of Tilly, and threatened the village of Tessel-Bretteville, one mile to the south.

British and Canadian artillery, one unit to every eight yards, supported this sweeping assault by British tanks and troops.

In this sector on the east wing of the beachhead, opposing British armored and mobile strength was being held up by British and Canadian local attacks and threats to break through.

Particularly Bitter.

The struggle was particularly bitter east of Tilly Sur Seulles, where British troops fought a seesaw infantry attack, blocking out at least half dozen German tanks and advancing two miles south of Fontenay.

Field Marshal Rommel, tried to re-take Ste. Honorine, four miles northwest of Caen, in a series of strong armored attacks, but was beaten off.

Four German armored divisions and three infantry divisions now are known to be defending the Baueux-Caen region.

Supreme headquarters in this morning's communique said "fighting for everywhere" in the port of Cherbourg was "extremely severe", but that the city liberation "cannot be long delayed."

"The German radio gave conflicting reports of the fall of Cherbourg. A French language broadcast Monday said the French people of occupied Europe the city fell at nine o'clock last night (3 p.m. E.D.T.) shortly thereafter, however, a German DNB agency broadcast informed the people of Germany fighting still was going on in the city.)

It was said here that last night's German premature reports that the port had fallen indicated the German high command was out of touch with the hard-pressed garrison.

Three Towns By-Passed

In the drive on the peninsula St. Vaast la Hogue, Quettehou and Barfleur on the east coast, were left behind American lines.

Isolated pockets of resistance still were holding out in the northeastern tip of the peninsula but the American advance had overrun all the entire sector and it was just a question of time before the German units were entrenched deeply underground in strong fortifications and had to be blown out.

Remnants of some four Nazi divisions were making a stand also in Cap de la Hague on the farthest northwest point of the peninsula. In this area the American advance line ran from Vauville on the west coast to Siquer-Dreville near Cherbourg itself.

The supreme command said the American advance had been made by "infiltrating" Cherbourg's strong points. Some forts and pillbox nests have been by-passed to a depth of a mile and are encircled and attacked from the rear.

A DNB broadcast from Berlin said American tanks have penetrated the Cherbourg arsenal and a field dispatch from American lines outside the city said an ultimatum has been addressed to the German commander of the remnants of enemy forces still holding out there, calling upon the enemy to surrender.

Near Harbor Waiers.

(A Reuters News Agency correspondent said United Nations troops have driven through the city to the harbor waters, severing the town.)

Rain held up Allied air activity yesterday, but also was falling along the beaches, with the wind blowing six to eight miles an hour from the sea.

In the shelling were the American battleship Nevada and the American cruisers Thuscaloosa and Quincy with the British cruisers Glasgow and Enterprise. These were under the command of Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo of the U. S. Navy.

In support were the American battleships Arkansas and Texas. It was powerful naval support Supreme Headquarters that a series of Cherbourg's outer defence-attacks northeast of Caen have been driven by the Nazis from the Allied line. British formations have driven to the region of the Tessel-Bretteville woods, three miles southeast of Tilly.

Forces Move on To Surveto and Within 38 Miles of Port Of Leghorn

SIENA OBJECTIVE

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 26 —(AP)—American troops of the Allied 5th Army seized the port of Pimobino without opposition Sunday, thereby gaining a valuable new supply base for continued thrust up Italy's west coast, while both American and French troops converged on the inland town of Siena, Allied headquarters announced today.

Pressing after the enemy, who was compelled to evacuate Pimobino in avoid encirclement, infantrymen and tank soldiers within five miles of Suvereto and within 38 miles of the important port of Leghorn.

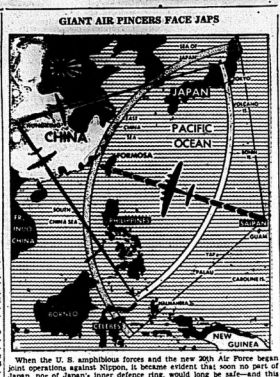
Further inland the Germans were said to be upon the approaches to Siena from three directions. One 5th Army force cracked through the villages of Torniella and Scalvata and threatened the town of Monticiano, a point further north and less than 15 miles southwest of Siena.

French troops, meanwhile, advanced on the coast and captured Ombrone, 20 miles due south of Siena. At the same time troops of other forces approaching from the southwest took the town of Castiglione, Dorcia, and the village of Roccatederighi, 25 miles from Siena.



Between these points and the Tyrrhenian coast the reinforced enemy was encountering considerable resistance at big Mark VI Tiger tanks, which were defeated in a midnight battle in the area of Massa Marittima. The enemy delaying forces pulled out after two by-passed or wiped out.

Enemy Still 88-Mm. Guns

A 5th Army force stabbing toward Montieri still was locked in a bitter fight and small groups still were desperate Nazi defenders south of Montieri and eight miles north of Massa. The village of Boccheggiano was taken in this area.

Farther into the entire 5th Army front Field Marshal Kesselring was directing the fighting of his best Tiger tanks as mobile artillery, Allied officers said. These were the 90th Tank Battalion, rushed from France three weeks ago.

U. S. TROOPS—Page 2

When the U. S. amphibious forces and the new 30th Air Force began joint operations against Nippon, it became evident that soon no part of Japan, nor of Japan's inner defence ring, would long be safe—and this map shows why. For once Saipan has been taken entirely by the determined invaders, it will be the springboard for giant aerial pincers and, doubtless, Guam will be a big sister base in the Marianas. From China or from the islands—or from both—can be carried on devastating aerial campaign against Tokyo's industries and military bases. From Saipan, Tokyo is less than 1,500 miles. New amphibious and air attacks on the Bonins could be readily launched. Hence the Saipan invasion may well be the beginning of the end in the Pacific.

Paratroopers Stand at Le Mesnil Highlight of Normandy Invasion

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian Paratroops Near Caen, June 26—(CP Cable)—For 11 wild days and nights the Canadian paratroops and the British 6th Airborn Division fought Germany's finest infantry and snipers on this incredible battleground east of the river Orne and northeast of Caen.

It was a series of desperate fighting in closely wooded country which the Canadians call "bocage territory." After dropping by parachute before midnight on D-Day, they took up positions outside of the perimeter of the beachhead gained by the airborne troops across the river and there stood and battled the city.

They were shelled and mortared mercilessly and German infantry attacked them but they didn't yield a yard for 11 days and they were relieved about as the aircraft weaved over selected dropping zones. It was 1 a.m. on the 6th Day and one Canadian company had dropped in the Varaville area between the mouth of Caboura.

The colonel and the men in his battalion jumped from the same other aircraft, airborne troops dived to the ground. They came down in woods, on roads, in towns and in muddy bogs dotted with ponds.

The colonel himself came down in a bog and plunged into 3½ feet of water. Then he met his intelligence officer and they hustled off to the rendervous point near Varaville.

GERMANS HANG 100 FRENCHMEN IN USSEL SQUARE

French Underground Blasts Bridges and Highways Leading to City

MAQUIS ACTIVE

Port Bou, Spain, June 26 (AP)—German troops who blasted their way into the partisan-held French village of Ussel Tuesday by night climaxed their victory by hanging 100 Frenchmen in the town square, a Paris dispatch reported today.

A Spanish correspondent of the Barcona newspaper Vanguardia, writing under German censorship, said that after "liquidation of 100 responsible Partisans", calm was "again imposed" in the town, located in the Correze department at the foot of the plateau De Millevache, a stronghold of the French Maquis.

Frenchmen reaching the Spanish frontier previously had reported the hangings. They said Ussel first was taken by the Maquis without much resistance. The Maquis then withdrew, the looter report said, but returned when Vichy authorities and the Germans failed to bring civilian supplies to Ussel.

The Maquis "executed their and other food and distributed it in the town, the frontier reports said, and about this time the Germans ordered collaborationist militia to conduct Frenchmen who received food from "Terrorists" as Terrorists themselves.

The fugitive French men said the Maquis had blasted bridges and highways leading to Ussel but did not resist once the Germans had reached the outskirts of the town, choosing rather to retire into the Plateau Millevaches where guerrillas are said to number in the thousands.

Frenchmen expressed belief those hanged probably were chosen at random from Ussel's civilian population.

LIBERAL LEADER IN ONTARIO MAY BECOME SENATOR

Arthur Slaght, Member for Parry Sound at Ottawa, May Succeed

YOUNG LIBERALS MEET

Toronto, June 26 (CP)—The position of the Liberal party in Ontario and its future formed the basis of pre-convention talk as delegates to the two-day meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association gathered today for their first meeting since the party met defeat in the provincial election last August.

Pre-convention gossip suggested that a new leader might be appointed to succeed Harry Nixon, named to that position April 30, 1942, but there was no definite indication that any action would be taken Tuesday. There was a suggestion that Mr. Nixon might be named to the Senate and that his successor as Ontario leader would be Arthur Slaght, Toronto lawyer who is a past member of the House of Commons for Parry Sound.

Guest speaker this morning with registration of delegates, a meeting of the managers' committee and a meeting of the newly-organized Ontario association of Young Liberals, three district groups also held meetings preparatory to this afternoon's main gathering.

Mr. Nixon and the association President, Lt.-Col. Harry S Hamilton of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., will report at the afternoon meeting while Mr. Nixon and Labor Minister Mitchell will speak at a banquet this evening. Officers will be elected and Major C. G. Cockshutt, secretary, said it was possible routine business would carry the convention over until tomorrow.

Federal cabinet ministers in attendance are Mr. Mitchell, Munitions Minister Howe, Revenue Minister Gibson and State Secretary McLarty.

5 AIR ARMADAS USED TO POUND FRANCE, GERMANY

Bombers From Italy Hit Budapest While Others Knock Out Rail Centres

SUPPLY DUMPS FIRED

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 26 —(AP)— R.A.F. Mosquitoes flying from British mainland aiding Allied air pressure on the enemy both in Normandy and Italy, delivered a hard overnight while medium and heavy bombers from Italy hit Budapest, Hungary's capital.

Continuing the Allied sky operations that kept the air armadas four from Britain and one from Italy—simultaneously hammering targets in France virtually all day Sunday, the R.A.F. struck at railroad attacked German troop concentrations, railroads and supply dumps near the French battlefront and industrial objectives in the German city of Hamburg, northwest of Duisberg.

Unfavorable weather this morning threatened to limit today's operations over the beachhead sectors.

Beyond the Normandy front lines, the Mosquitoes left German supply dumps hidden in the forest of Brotonne on the Seine in sheets of flames. Fliers said the fires stretched two miles and were advancing in a series of semi-circles when they left.

The Mosquitoes bombed German force concentrations southwest of Caen. Railroads north of Laigle and at Argentan were also bombarded.

Supreme headquarters announced that although none of Sunday's tactical assaults were directed against enemy rail dumps and railroads, some American divebombers struck German gun emplacements in Cherbourg.

Some 3,500 planes participated in the Sunday assaults, ranging from Pas de Calais to the southern coast of France.

Two of the mighty fleets, one British and one American, battered the Nazi winged bomb emplacements at Pas de Calais. Absent from English skies during daylight yesterday, the robots began coming over again last night, but how many were blasted before they got across the Channel.

Medium, and fighter-bombers and fighters swarmed over and beyond the Normandy battle front yesterday in the air war's heavy support of ground forces.

Allied losses for the day were placed at 43 planes, including 20 Mosquitoes. Thirty-seven German planes were downed.

Some 1,000 bombers escorted by 500 fighters, thrust to within 60 miles of the Spanish coast in the Bay of Biscay in a blow from Britain. They blasted a fuel depot northern Germany and attacked four other airfields in the Bourges area, southwest of Paris.

British four-engined craft, also flying in 1,000-plus strength, hit at Siracourt in a first blows at the Pas de Calais rocket nests.

Hard on the heels of the British armada, American heavies, rumbled into the same area, concentrating their explosives on at least 12 power stations which supplied electricity for launching the flying bombs.

'Up the Glen', Glengarry Battle Cry, Rings Through Woods Invasion Day

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With The Canadian Forces in France, June 26 — (CP Cable)—The battle cry of the Glengarry Highlanders have a battle-cry, "Up the Glen!," which rang through the woods around the town of Les Buissons during the stormy Sunday action the battalion fought there after their landing.

The cry originated in an English pub before the unit sailed for "Hunky Dorey" Glen—having a beer one evening with Maj. Fred Lander of Kingston, Ont., when the barmaid remarked "There are a lot of you Glens around here."

The unit has always been known as the Glengarrians, but here was the battle-cry, "Up the Glen!"

The colonel sang the major bled it and drank a toast, "Up the Glen!" It caught on through the battalion, and in "Hell's Corners" of Les Buissons the Highlanders shouted it when the battle was hottest.

"My men would pop their heads out of their fox-holes and shout "Hunky Dorey Glen!" and "Up the Glen!" said the colonel. "The enemy is going to hear that cry again."

45,000 Germans Being Annihilated In Vitebsk Area

Russian Objective Appears to Be Break-Through To German E. Prussia

ADVANCES IN FINLAND

Moscow, June 26 —(AP)— Red army men, fighting their way through the streets of Vitebsk, where five divisions are encircled, were reported today by Moscow dispatches across the Western Dvina river to the central part of the city.

The Red flag was flying over that part of Vitebsk on the east bank of the river, Soviet dispatches said, and one of the two bridges across it the city had been taken.

London, June 26 (CP)—Attacking with shattering force on a 250-mile front in one of history's greatest land offensives, four powerful Russian armies drove westward through the broken German "Fatherland Line" in White Russia and Lithuania today and an island of 45,000 trapped enemy troops. These were being cut to pieces in the battle-torn streets of encircled Vitebsk.

But Russia's vital role in the allied Teheran master plan to crush Germany this year unfolded elsewhere by front. German broadcasts noted that less than a fifth Red army had struck in the Ostrov sector, 90 miles southwest of doomed Vitebsk. That would make a 220-mile front in the east, exclusive of the two Russian armies now battering Finland.

Fear Armies Poised.

At least four other great Soviet armies are poised on the Polish and Romanian fronts—waiting for the signal for a concerted push toward Berlin and conjunction with allied armies in the west and south.

Rolling over roads strewn with dead Germans and wrecked equipment, the Russians had thrown a broad belt of men and machines around Lithuanian City of Vilenka and were threatening the strongholds of Grodno, Mogilev and Borbruisk to the south.

Moscow said more than 16,000 Germans had been killed—8,000 of them in the area around Vitebsk. Also destroyed of big guns, trucks and other equipment also had been taken. Meanwhile, the Nazi "stand or die" order were announced by the German high command, ordering a "retreat in panic". One entire corps, the 53rd, of the 9th Infantry division "came over to the Red Army side", said the Soviet Bulletin.

1,550 Places Liberated.

There was no advance of more than 25 miles, the Russians had taken 1,550 towns and villages, the ultimate objective appeared to be a break-through to East Prussia and German East Prussia.

The Russian Supreme 1st Baltic army has forced the Dvina River west of Vitebsk to cut the German railway line to Lepel at a point 20 miles southwest of the city. The northern wing, the 3rd army group wings, united, trapping five German divisions and the city of Vitebsk. Red Army shock troops were fighting in the streets of Vitebsk, where a flaming street fight ensued. Three hundred Nazi dead were taken in the sector.

Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad army now is battering its way through the Karelian Peninsula captured Viipuri, Gen. K. A. Meretskov's Karelian front forces are making headway further north in a companion drive between Lake Ladoga and Onega.

Petrozavodsk, capital of the Soviet Karelian Republic, appeared to be on the verge of falling to Meretskov's army, who had outflanked the Svir on a broad front, further to the north, across Lake Onega. Also, the Russians had freed another section of the Leningrad-Murmansk railway.

U.S. Lend-Lease With Soviet Union Undergoes Change

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, June 26—(AP)—American lend-lease officials are already launching the problem of how to help Russia rebuild and expand billions of dollars worth of shattered industrial properties, with the result that lend-lease to that country is undergoing a profound change in preparation for peacetime commercial trade.

The change is reported part of a broad plan for assisting Russian reconstruction and simultaneously helping maintain a high level of employment in the United States during the transition from war to peace production here. Soviet officials are understood to have the plan under consideration.

Its central provision is that lend-lease shipment must stop promptly with the end of the war but that materials useful in peacetime pursuits—electric generators, for instance—will be included as far as lend-lease were continuing, except they will go on credit.

Going Gut on Credit.

Meanwhile the principle is being applied to lend-lease shipments in advance of any general agreement and before the war ends. As a result long-life equipment like electrical generators, which will be before the war ends but will be mainly useful afterward, is going out on credit.

Economic authorities here contend that any permit of this sought would be to prevent a war-end production slump in a great variety of lend-lease equipment.

One estimate here is that in the early years after the war Russia will be able to take in close to $4,000,000,000 worth of imports for reconstruction of their plants, powerhouses, transportation service and the like. Most of this would come from the United States.

Eric Johnston, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said in Russia a few days ago that Soviet purchases from the United States would run into billions and that Russia was going to the Soviet Union is to get some idea of what Russia wants to buy.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

PROPERTY DAMAGE HEAVY IN CRASH

In a headon collision between two motor cars at the intersection of North Front and East Moira Streets some time after midnight Saturday considerable property damage resulted to both vehicles. Douglas Alger, Carrying Place, was driving westerly on East Moira Street while the other automobile was being driven north on the upper bridge by Clark James, 227 John Street. Damage estimated at $150 resulted to the front portion of the vehicle driven by James and over $100 resulted to the front of Mr. Alger's car. Police investigated but did not comment on the accident.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT POLICE CIRCLES QUIET

Activities in and around local and district police circles proved quiet and routine over the weekend. A disturbance on Station St. was smartly settled by police, while other local authorities returned a man from Toronto charged with non-support. His case will be heard Tuesday.

Peterboro police reported the theft of a 1941 model Plymouth sedan bearing Ontario license plate number 952-K-1 yesterday.

DOUGLAS FRINK PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Recently having completed special gunnery course Lieut. Douglas Frink, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Frink, Deseronto, has been promoted to the rank of captain on the staff of the Canadian School of Artillery, gunnery. His parents have been informed. Commencing with his elevation in rank, Captain Frink has been appointed as Instructor of Gunnery at the base post. A former clerk at Bell Parsley's Drug Store, Captain Frink was active about Belleville and has been overseas for approximately two years.

BED CLOTHES FIRED, BY SMOULDERING BUTT

Falling asleep while smoking in bed an occupant of a bedroom at 36 St. Paul Street works late Saturday evening to discover that the bedclothes and mattress he was sleeping on had caught fire with the resultant discomfort to his person. The fire department was called to the scene as a precaution but upon their arrival the blaze was practically under control. Only the bedclothes and mattress suffered damage, it was learned.

YOUTH PUSH PARK BENCHES INTO RIVER

Destructive juveniles were apprehended in a new type of pastime at Victoria Park on Friday afternoon when it was reported they were pushing park benches into the harbor. Police hastened to the scene and found a number of older boys loitering about the park. The names and addresses were taken and instructions given to report to Chief Probert this afternoon. The park benches were ordered to be restored to their original positions on the park.

"ADOPTED" TROOP TO GET COMFORTS

Thanks to the voluntary services of the Belleville and District Resident Ladies' softball squads, "H" troop of the 8th light anti-aircraft battery somewhere in Italy will receive additional comforts to those already being received by Major Marion Harden's hard-working C. W. A. C. detachment.

Over $15 was received in a silver collection during softball fun when the two teams played an exhibition game on the Armouries lawn Saturday night.

The funds collected will augment those being raised at the men's canteen in the Armouries, and will be utilized, it was before mentioned for comforts for the troop, which has been officially "adopted" by the C.W.E.F. here.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT COUNTRY CLUB

First tennis tournament of the season was held Sunday afternoon at the Bay of Quinte Country Club with both mixed and ladies doubles being played, keen competition was seen in all the events with the finals in each instance being well contested. Tennis balls were given as prizes.

In the mixed doubles Isabel Morton and Don Paterson decisioned Grace Rider and Leonard Willing 6-4; 6-3 and 6-4, while in the ladies' doubles Muriel Andrews and Faye Gay defeated Dorothy Fox and Isabel Young in straight sets by scores of 6-3 and 6-3.

RODE IN TRUCK WHICH HIT MINE

John Hansey, Cannifton, is Recovering from Injury—Brother and Two Sisters Also in Services

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansey, Cannifton, recently received a telegram from Ottawa, saying that son Gnr. Ross Hansey, with the 2nd Anti-Tank Regiment, Italy, had been injured in action. A letter has now been received from him, saying he, with some others, was riding in a truck when it hit a mine. John and three others were blown off.

He writes that he has not to worry, as he is nearly as fit as ever, except for cuts and bruises, and does not think it will soon be all right again. He is in hospital in Italy and expects to leave soon for a convalescent camp, but is longing to get back with his pals again of the support Company. He feels things are getting warmer for the Germans and for him after being in action so long, but we're fine with the company which went to France in 1940 at Dunkirk and returned to battle the Germans. He fought in the Sicilian campaign and is now in Italy.

All the members of the Hansey family are in the forces: John is with the R.C.A.S.C. One daughter is with the Wrens, Halifax and the other with the C. W.A.C., Ottawa.

Obituary

MRS. MARGARET ELLEN KILLS (Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Margaret Ellen Kills, widow of George E. Kills, formerly of Belleville, died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Scott, 187 Jane Street, Toronto, on Sunday, June 25th.

The late Mrs. Kills spent the greater part of her life in Belleville, and a few years ago went to live with her daughter in Toronto. Old friends here will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving are one son, Mr. Harry E. Kills, Toledo, Ohio; one daughter, Mrs. Fred Scott (Ida), and Mrs. Art. Keeler (Bertha), both of Toronto. Also surviving are one married Mrs. Ella and Henry Kills, both of Toledo, Ohio, and W. H. Keeler, Toronto.

Resting at the Corrigan & O'Brien Funeral Home, 20 Moira Street west; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

PTE. CLAYTON JACKSON

Deseronto, June 26 — Deseronto mourns the loss of another of its sons this week, official word to that effect having received by his wife, the former Viola Arthart of Deseronto and now living in Belleville, of the death on Sunday, June 18th, of Pte. Clayton Jackson killed in action.

The late Clayton Jackson was born in Deseronto on November 11th, 1917 and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Jackson, Mechanic Street. He was employed by Canadian Steel at the local school and with his brother, Jim, played with the Deseronto Napanee and Belleville and was one of the champions of the Junior O.H.A. and the Ont. and Dist. Intermediate Basketball championships.

In Belleville he was a member of St. Mark's Anglican Church, where he was also a choir boy.

On June 29, 1940 he and his brother, Arthur, enlisted in the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders and after receiving training in Canada, went overseas in 1941.

Besides his parents he is survived by his wife and two small children, Harvey and Shirley of Napanee, three sisters, Mrs. Hazel Hough of Toronto, Misses Laura and Alice Jackson and Mrs. Ernest Wilson of Whitby, Thomas, William, George, Gordon, all of Deseronto and Arthur, overseas.

The sympathy of the community is extended to the families in their bereavement.

MRS. ANNIE (HOUGH) GRAHAM (Formerly of Stirling)

Mrs. Annie Graham, widow of William J. Graham, formerly of Stirling, died after an illness of one week at her home, 21 Wellington East General Hospital on Sunday, June 25th.

The late Mrs. Graham was born in Stirling and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John V. Hough. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. A. L. Wilson, Wellington, Toronto; two nieces, Mrs. W. J. Whitty and Mrs. Harry Hough, both of Stirling; one nephew, Mr. J. Hough, Deseronto.

Interment will take place at Stirling; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE SIDNEY SIMPKINS

The funeral of Sidney Simpkins, formerly of Melrose, who died at Eastview, Ontario, on June 21st, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Saturday afternoon, June 24th, the service in the chapel and at Melrose Cemetery was conducted by Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

Masonic Lodges Of City Attend Divine Service

In his address to the Masonic Lodges on the occasion of their annual church parade held in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church on Sunday morning, Rev. H. O. Eakman stated that Free Masonry had taken many practical steps in connection with building and given them such meaning as to have built up what was before it to be an adequate moral system.

The Bible had much to say about building, stated the preacher, and there was also in the Bible of special interest, which come to mind when thinking of Free Masonry, the story of the great story of the building of Solomon's temple as recorded in Kings and Chronicles. David had envisioned the temple and it stands to his credit, that he wanted to build his kingdom around the Temple of God.

It is recorded by Josephus, that David and Solomon spared neither expense nor pains in assembling materials for the temple. Thousands of workmen worked carefully and skilfully in forest and quarry so that when the parts were all to-gether they fitted harmoniously, in accordance with the plans of the Master Builder.

Foundation Laid Deep

The foundation of the temple was laid very deep in the ground and the materials were very strong, stones such as would resist the force of time and become a basis and sure foundation for that superstructure which was to be erected over it.

There are two stipulations for any foundation," pointed out the minister, "it must be adequate and it must be permanent. There is a vital difference between the foundation required for a skyscraper and that required for a chicken coop. If a house would have skyscraper characters we need to be careful about the kind of foundation and the kind of materials we use to build our lives.

"In our scriptures Jesus Christ is pictured as the only adequate foundation upon which any such superstructure may be built. If we build into our lives the sure strength of Jesus Christ then our bodies will be temples of the living God that will stand the test of this or any day. God is the great architect. He has the master plan of life. Jesus has made us scale drawings, the meaning of which we may not know till we see the whole. It is for you and me to see that there are no flaws in our lives. If your order is built upon Jesus Christ and His stirring assurance it will endure; if not it will crumble. If your life is founded in Him it will be permanent. I leave you to apply the thoughts I have suggested to either the personal building of your own character, or to the Christian church or perchance your home or your order."

D.D.G.M. Assists

Assisting in the service were Rt. Wor. Bro. W. Coulby, D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District No. 13, who read the New Testament lesson from I Cor. 3:9-11 and Wor. Bro. R. L. Orr, who led in the responsive reading of Psalm 46. The anthem "Praise Ye The Lord" was pleasingly rendered by the choir and a splendid duet "Watchman, What Of a The Night" was sung by Miss Phyllis May and Mr. Fred Johnson. Organ music was supplied by the organist, Mr. Dorland Houston.

The lodges paraded in a body from the Masonic Temple with Moira Lodge No. 11, Wor. Bro. G. C. Bamgar, Master, The Belleville Lodge No. 128, Wor. Bro. G. S. Stanton, Master, and Eureka Lodge No. 283, Wor. Bro. R. L. Orr, Master, all being represented.

Motor-Car Turns Completely Over, No One Injured

Losing control of his automobile in the loose gravel along the Shannonville Road east of Dundas Bay afternoon, a motor car driven by Rose Tomasino, Toronto, overturned in the ditch without serious injury to the occupants.

The driver, Miss Tomasino, 21, cycle, Henry Austin of Thomasburg, and Miss Ruth Austin, also of Thomasburg, escaped with bruises and shock. The vehicle skidded on the loose gravel forcing the driver to slide sideways into the ditch, where it rolled completely over. Mr. Austin hastened to the assistance of the occupants parties and helped to release them. Fortunately none of the passengers, Mrs. George Donald and her three children of Crookston, suffered any serious injury. Dr. J. H. Foster attended.

Provincial Constables Sipple and Mackey investigated and estimated damage of upwards to $250, had been caused to fenders, running boards and windshield of the damaged vehicle.

Fags Received By Canadian Prisoner of War

From the German war prison camp Stalag Luft 3, where it is charged 50 Allied air officers are interned recently, arrived a post card acknowledgement of Canadian cigarettes sent by Mrs. Lillian Kinmond, Pay Fund. The card was written by P/Off. Jack Kinmond, of the city with no other indication except that the cigarettes had been received. Over 305 cigarettes received. Under international law this is the maximum quantity that can be sent out from a war prison camp to acknowledge receipt of gifts. Remember, it was that Canadian cigarettes, sent by Mrs. Kinmond, Pay Fund Secretary for Kinsmen Club, are actually getting through to Germany. Kinsmen not only goes to encourage the continuance of the flow of Belleville boys serving overseas in this globular war. Scores of Belleville boys are now in the service in all theatres of war are being remembered weekly by Chairman Buster LaBarr.

Fund Interest

Interest of their Pay Fund and Milk for Britain Fund, the Belleville Kinsmen are planning a mammoth street carnival commencing on Wednesday night. The carnival will be held on the streets during a parade and band concert on Wednesday night and each succeeding presented by the C.W.A.C. and will be featured at the Kinsmen Summer Carnival touring Canada on a recruiting campaign. All of the conventional carnival attractions will be featured at the Kinsmen Summer Carnival including all kinds of skill, bingo and lucky draws for prizes. Slogan for the carnival is "enjoy fun and frivolity at the Kinsmen Carnival."

The list of Belleville boys sent 300 cigarettes each through the Pay Fund this week included:—

Youth Loses Leg In Accident

When his foot became caught in the machine he was operating, a grain-at his home in Read, 16-year-old Thomas Handley, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Handley, suffered a badly twisted ankle. The injury was of such a nature, however, that the leg had to be amputated at the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday.

Young Handley was operating a grain-grinding machine when, in some unexplainable manner his foot became caught in the carrier belt. Before he could be rescued the ankle had been badly twisted necessitating a subsequent amputation. He was attended at the hospital by Dr. G. H. Stobie.

Fewer Potato Bugs Seen This Year

Lessening to a considerable degree the work of district potato growers, an almost complete absence of potato bugs has been noted by farmers in the Belleville district this year, it is reported. Farmers to the north of the city over the weekend were heard to remark that in the many years have potato bugs been as few in number as this year.

Officials at the Dominion Parasite Laboratory in Belleville were unable to say as to why there should be fewer bugs this year, offering as a suggestion that intensive spraying and thawing during the winter and spring month may have killed a greater number than usual.

Favored by ideal growing weather prospects for a good crop of early potatoes this year are bright, it is stated by farmers.

Pte. Ralph Stapley Died of Wounds Parents Informed

Member of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, Canadian Highland Regiment, Eastern Ontario which is blasting a path through Italy, Private Ralph Stapley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stapley, Holloway, has died of wounds according to an official telegram received by his parents today.

The twenty-three year old "Scotty" private was critically wounded on the second day of the invasion and succumbed to his injuries a few days ago.

Born in Holloway he received his education in the public schools of his district, leaving them to assist his father on the farm. He enlisted in May, 1942, with the Lennox and Renfrew Highlanders going overseas in April of 1943 and being posted to a Canadian reinforcement unit. From there he was attached to the "Glens" as the S. D. and G. Highlanders are called.

Leaving on the June 6th date (D-Day) for life beaches of Normandy, he with his regiment stormed the bloody coastline and were linked to assist in establishing the beachhead. The second day June 7, he was critically wounded.

He leaves two brothers besides his parents; Kenneth J., a schoolteacher at Canning Valley, Prince Edward County, and Ford S. at home.

ville from where they went, four miles down the highway in a southeast direction to Le Mesnil.

This point, however, held to hold at all costs and there they dug in and got a good position in a brick factory. This was the main point for the whole unit but there were three other jobs done by other companies. We had to hold out here as also took the offensive and sent out strong patrols to little towns and villages to the east of the area and gave Jerry a bloody nose a couple of times.

"The Germans were methodical as the devil in their attacks but with our mortars and Vickers we waited for them and really and knocked hell out of our infantry. Between 300 and 350 Hun troops piled up on the field in front of us and for days we couldn't even get out to bury them because of the incessant sniping from those monkeys hiding in trees."

The Canadian position was under shell fire and German artillery fire between attacks, but the unit's entire invasion task was carried out as was the whole task of the 6th airborne division in this highly successful airlanding operation.

Canadian casualties were not given, the colonel stated, but a number or troops still are missing. One letter from a camp Saturday from the enemy lines in an exhausted state and others probably will show up.

But they held every inch of ground they were ordered to hold and had a longer time on the nerve-shattering front than most units east of the Orne River.

Battle of Buildup Continues With More Favorable Weather

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Forces in France, June 26 — Improved weather has wedged deeper the battle of buildup last week but now it is leaping forward again under favorable skies. The sea is calmer than it has been for days.

Unseasonable weather at mid-week hampered the work of stocking the bridgehead with new guns, ammunition and heavy equipment, but lowered its pace only one hundredth of ships put their loads on the beaches. Others trucked inland over roads that filled up rapidly after crushing the light traffic for two or three days.

Though it is early in the new week since the second-front landings were made, there has been no major offensive against the defence line which the Germans have pieced together with most of their best divisions in France around the eastern sector of the bridgehead, occupied by the British and Canadian forces.

Some of the German positions west of the Normandy city of Caen are known to be strong. Local battles for advantage of position have been fought on various parts of the front but none on a heavy scale.

Vast Germans 25 Tanks.

The biggest tank battle west in the British area occurred east of the Orne and there that the Germans some 25 tanks. There were other battles around Tilly Sur Seulles, which is literally shelled, but they were mostly on a battalion scale and included the bombing parties of British Tommies armed with Pists.

Everywhere along the front, an area of irregular hedgerows, small hatfields and pastures with little villages here and there, that has been heavy patrolling by both sides.

The Allies have held the upper hand in the air and except for racing reconnaissance planes which there was cloud cover, enemy aircraft have not been seen over the bridgehead in daylight. Lately their night bombing has been negligible.

Capture just 2 week ago of the fortified position in which the Germans had held out for days after the initial overrun by the early British and Canadian advance brought an end to enemy resistance behind our lines. Shifting except at the front now is practically non-existent.

Norman peasants in the bridgehead have become part of the second-front scenery and for them the phenomenon of suddenly having thousands of troops and vehicles in their midst has gradually taken a more every-day place.

The Canadian front has been quiet for more than a week though the Germans have maintained a fairly steady bombardment of forward positions with mortars and shellfire. The troops have become accustomed to these shellings and know by the trenches while they last. Many of the Canadian trenches have been made elaborate and comfortable.

Dress Rehearsal

The bombardments have served as a sort of dress rehearsal in front-line living for the Canadians, who have come in to reinforce battalions that suffered casualties in the battle for the bridgehead.

They have learned to identify the various battle sounds, to distinguish between the sound of enemy and our own fire, and to get the feel of the battleground. Chats with soldiers who have been through the fighting from the time of the landings have given them many tips for the fighting ahead.

The lull has had its advantages for the Germans also. They have had precious days to strengthen themselves for defence and undoubtedly have mined and booby-trapped much of the ground over which the next second-front attacks will be made.

The Canadians have turned back the first German attempts to beat them. "Jerry has been testing out enemy soldiers," as General Montgomery put it, and have welcomed their little breathing spell.

They feel they now are ready for the next Allied attack.

Eight Fatalities In East Canada During Weekend

By The Canadian Press

There were eight fatalities in Eastern Canada over the weekend, all of them in Ontario. Four persons died in traffic accidents, two drowned, one died of a heart attack while driving a car and another died from bullet wounds.

Eugene Bastien, 63, died in hospital in Cornwall on Saturday from injuries received in a traffic accident. It was the first traffic fatality in the city this year compared to 29 for the corresponding period of 1943.

Near Cornwall, the body of 57-year-old Oscar Fisher of Cornwall was recovered from a creek east of the town. He had been missing since Friday. At Wiarton's Corners near Perth in the Ottawa district, the body of Charles Bourque, Jr., was found near his home Saturday with a bullet wound in his head. A rifle was lying nearby.

Drowned in Spanish R.

At Sudbury, 13-year-old Lois Boyce was drowned in Spanish River while Stanley Baxter, 43, instructor in electricity at the Sudbury Technical and Vocational school, died in hospital Sunday four days after his car had collided with an automobile which, police stated, failed to stop.

At Kingsville, Ont., six-year-old Donald Newman suffered fatal injuries when he was struck Saturday by an automobile as he crossed a road.

Alexander Grear Pullen of Penetanguishene Saturday night from injuries suffered Saturday when his motorcycle skidded, riding collided with a car.

At Toronto, Cpl. G. Carter, 18, member of the Veterans Guard of Canada, died of a heart attack Sunday while driving an army truck in West Toronto.

Aid to Russia Fund Assisted By Band Concert

With the weather man contributing perfect atmospheric conditions, and a little on the warm side; the large crowd contributing the fine sum of $55.11 via the silver collection method, and the Belleville Municipal Band turning in another of its gala performances, the Armouries lawn band concert Sunday night proved highly successful.

The concert was given under the auspices of the Canadian "Aid to Russia" Fund and the proceeds will be devoted to the purchase of linen for war stricken civilian populations of the gallant Russian ally.

Hundreds of people lined the pavilion railing "bleachers" as the band started the concert with a lively march. Playing on a raised dais on the east side of the lawn, the city's smart musical aggregation, under the baton of Lieut. Fred Johson earned rounds of applause with its skilful rendition a program, that was as tuneful as it was variable.

Featuring the program, and one that called for encores, was the clever manipulation of his instrument by Bandman Billy Grant, who offered a melodic solo on the xylophone. Mr. Grant was called back and offered "Over the Rainbow" and "Do These" while the large crowd stood in reverent silence.

Previous to the concert, Harry Rollins briefly addressed the crowd, pointing out the urgent need for funds with which to purchase much-needed linen supplies for Russia and also paying tribute to the personnel of the band for contributing their services to such a worthy cause.

Mrs. Emily Neale, Mrs. Backus, Misses. "Bouncer" Holway, Tommy Mascaro and the Mayor with others assisted with the collection.

Senator Bouchard Reaffirms Stand On Statement

Montreal, June 26—(CP)— Senator T. D. Bouchard said in a prepared statement here today that "whatever the leaders of the Liberal Party themselves think of the resolutions of my speech sounding the alarm, I will remind all true patriots that when a fire is discovered the alarm is sounded at the start of the fire and not when the building is in ruins."

Senator Bouchard in his maiden senate speech last week said the secret order of Jacques Cartier in Quebec province was harmful to relations between English and French and that it was founded "with the blessings of the Catholic and French clergy." His speech was termed "absolutely unjustified and very damaging" by Premier Adelard Godbout who on Friday relieved Senator Bouchard as chairman of the newly-created Quebec hydro at $18,000 a year.

Senator Bouchard in his statement said that his first intention to the word that he had been dismissed had been one "of sympathy for my former chieftain, Mr. Godbout, who must have been more affected than I by the state of affairs into which, the happenings of political life had so rudely hurled him."

Says Godbout Driven Into Corner

Senator Bouchard said that Mr. Godbout "to whose success I devoted very loyally the little talent I have, all the force of my intellectual faculties and a goodly part of my health, has been driven into a corner as few of his political predecessors ever found themselves."

". . . He has believed it his duty to bow before the propaganda made against myself and, in order to placate the fury of a group . . . he has sacrificed his former colleague."

Senator Bouchard's statement added:

"I regret that Mr. Godbout should have thought it necessary to become the tool of those who dominate our province by exploiting popular prejudice. I bear him no grudge at all, and I ask all those in the province who still have confidence in me to continue to give him their strongest support in the struggle which will soon begin.

"His government has not been perfect, but it has been in matters of social and economic reforms the most progressive and by far, that we have had since Confederation. It would be national suicide to replace it by the former Duplessis administration or by a reactionary government such as the Bloc Populaire.

"Before making my speech to the Senate, I was well aware that I was running into plenty of trouble, I dominating the Bloc Populaire and the Union Nationale two political groups which are out to undetermine the Godbout government and the King government, the administrations which have in the past admirably way led the province and the Dominion through the gravest situations we have known in our whole history.

"... Freed now from my onerous duties and the long hours of toil imposed upon me by virtue of my office as chairman of the Quebec Hydro. I am going to take up my profession again once more and to continue the fight began more than a quarter of a century ago for the intellectual, economic and social advancement of the descendants of those two races which participate our country to its wide and so promising destinies."

RACING HANDICAPPER DIES

Chicago, June 26 (AP)—Emil Thiry, 72, racing handicapper under the name of "Railbird" for the Chicago Herald American and former boxing referee and fight manager, died at his home Saturday of a heart attack. He was a member of the American sports staff for 20 years.

Memorial Service For Sgt. J. Pepper At Christ Church

Tribute to the memory of a Belleville boy, Sgt. James. R. Pepper, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pepper, Chatham Street, who paid the supreme sacrifice, was a member of the Royal Air Force during a raid over enemy targets, was paid at Christ Church Sunday evening when a memorial service was held in his honor.

Choosing as the basis of his sermon that the measure of service is gauged by the amount of service rendered to mankind, Rev. O. G. Wright indicated, that the late Sgt. J. Pepper had given the fullest service in laying down his life. The minister spoke of airman's boyhood years in Belleville and of his regular attendance at Sunday School. Mr. Wright also prepared him for confirmation. In keeping with the solemnity of the occasion the choir rendered that much-loved anthem, "The Souls of the Righteous in the Hands of God," and the congregation was that used in a memorial service held in England for Sgt. Pepper.

A lover of sports, Sgt. Pepper had followed his older brother, the late Flying Officer George Pepper, D. F. C. and Bar, into the Service prior to the outbreak of war. With the outbreak of hostilities he had enlisted in the R. A. F. and had been serving in Russia. He was married overseas.

Estimate Nazi Strength In Italy Cut in Half By Alexander's Advance

New York, June 26 (AP)—Adele, American broadcasting station in Europe, estimated Saturday night that German strength in Italy, originally comprised of 24 divisions, already has been "cut in half by Gen. Alexander's smashing advance." The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said Marshal Kesselring now has "the equivalent of 12½ divisions left to fight with.

155,000 PERSONS N CROWD DELAYED BY BURNING CABLE

Boston, June 26 (AP)—Three hundred persons were driven from a subway station here last night by a series of explosions that hailed service at a rush hour, causing a tie-up affecting about 150,000 for more than an hour. No one was injured by the explosions started by burning cable which caused a short circuit in a feed box.

Hints Portions Of Jap Army May Be Opium Victims

Washington, June 26 — (AP) — Hints come out of Tokyo that portions of the Japanese army may have fallen victim to the opium curse the Japs themselves spread for profit in China and other countries invaded by Nippon.

"Competent reports have long indicated," says a U. S. Army unit's newspaper, received from the Pacific, "that the Jap soldier, weary of the hardships of war, has often fallen prey to the drug in an effort to get the thrill it supposedly gives at first.

"Jap interest in a cure for the habit, strange in view of fact that they have helped to spread it more successfully than any other agency in the modern world, indicates that the dope problem may have grown serious in their army."

The best measure of tire value is still the maker's name!

● In the happy days when you bought tires without restriction, you had one infallible measure of true tire worth . . . the maker's name. If you were like the majority, you confined your tire buying to it.

Today, a few unthinking folks say "Synthetic rubber will make all tires the same." That is far from the truth! To believe it is to ignore the fact that in prewar days, tires varied greatly in quality . . . yet all makers used the same kind of rubber.

You'll understand why this happened when you remember that TIRES ARE NOT "MADE OF RUBBER." There's rubber in them, of course, but it's usually impossible to identify it. Now, as always, "More people ride on Goodyear tires than on any other kind"—because motorists know that the best measure of tire value . . . is still the maker's name.

Season's Pea Crop Now Being Canned

Canning factories throughout the Bay of Quinte district began canning peas this week with officials reporting splendid present prospects for a good crop. The factory at Belleville started canning peas on Monday.

Factory officials reported a large acreage of peas is having been sown this year, although no greater than was planned during the winter. The acreage is considerably greater than last year, however, as then many peas did not get sown owing to flooded fields.

No labor difficulties were expected during the pea harvest at the canning factory in Belleville as this crop requires but few comparatively few workers. The demand for workers would come with the harvesting of the tomato canning season.

Man's Trousers Torn by Dog

Attacked by a dog while proceeding to work through the Queen Alexandra School grounds early Monday morning Ismald Osborne, 139 Ann St., had his trousers torn when the dog attempted to bite him. Constable Thos. Thorne, of the city dog pound, was informed of the attack and later learned the dog was owned by a party on Dufferin Ave. Restitution in the matter of the trousers was suggested.

German Losses

The Soviet Information Bureau has announced that the German losses in their three years of war on the eastern front have totalled 7,800,000 in killed and captured and Russian losses of 5,300,000 in killed, missing or captured. This does not record the numbers of wounded on either side.

This is a tremendous total and gives some suggestion of the titanic character of the fighting which has taken place in Hitler's war of aggression against Russia. These are but the manpower losses. To these must be added the destruction of German equipment, the loss of 70,000 tanks, 60,000 planes, more than 90,000 pieces of artillery. Russia says her losses were 49,000 tanks, 30,128 planes and 48,000 guns.

What the Russians have also done in the recovery of territory is a striking statement, 579,200 square miles of territory, which had been occupied by the enemy, has been redeemed to Russia. The Russians have advanced 1,247 miles to the west. Millions have been liberated from Fascist captivity. Germany has been deprived by Russian successes of raw materials and food supplies. In the statement of the Bureau the German "Lebensraum" (living space) in the east, about which Hitler had dreamed, has become a graveyard for millions of German soldiers, a gigantic cemetery of German war equipment.

With this record of German losses up to now, it is no wonder that Hitlerism dreads the new offensive which the Russians are throwing against the Germans in the east and the leveling blows which are being driven against Finland, ally of Germany. It is no wonder that Germany dreads this addition in the east to the blows raining upon Hitlerite Germany in Italy and Normandy and in the air.

Russia has given credit to the British and Americans for their help in strategic raw materials and arms and to the Allied air assaults upon Germany.

Russians see success in the fact that in the last eighteen months since Stalingrad the Germans have not been able to recover. They have lost all North Africa, Sicily. A great share of Italy, they have failed to prevent invasion of their "Atlantic Wall" to which Russia gives great praise as the brilliantly achieved invasion of northern France by British and American troops and the successful offensive of Allied troops in Italy" which shows that henceforth Germany will have to fight on European territory against the Red Army and the troops of our Allies, Britain and the U.S.A."

An Expression of Unity

(Montreal Herald)

In Jersey City, N.J., a new note in Allied relationships was struck on Invasion Day.

Among the many congregations which assembled for prayer on that solemn day one in Jersey City added a verse of "God Save The King" to their rendition of "America."

It was the pastor's idea. It seems to us an idea that is worth widespread adoption.

What demonstration of unity could better illustrate the ties of common interest which would link Canadians and Americans these days than this courteous gesture?

In days of outstanding significance in our common war Canadians could scarcely give better expression to the national sentiment than by singing a verse of "America" or the "Star-Spangled Banner" after "God Save The King."

The Way the Germans Do

Germany in the rocket bomb, buzz bomb, winged bomb, robot plane or whatever it is called, has developed an instrument that peculiarly suits the German attitude towards humanity. It is the type of weapon that so unprincipled an enemy would develop, not because it does destruction to what might be called war targets but more likely to civilians and to their homes.

Germany's ways are the ways of the outlaw, the gangster who feels himself against the world, as he indeed is for his disregard of every convention and every pact that mankind can make for good. On all great issues Germany takes the side of evil.

She aims to cause destruction particularly of human life.

Germany has demonstrated before all the world that only the evil are attracted to her, such men as Quislings and Laval understand the German ways and have the thoughts of gangsters just as Hitler has.

What best sums up Germany's spirit and the spirit of the Germans is that she and they have recourse to every crime, every evil that mankind has ever known. It is the delight in faithlessness, the love of cruelty and of causing wanton destruction as is being done by the Germans in Italy and in Normandy where they in their loathsome liberated nations rebuild their demoratic institutions. They will have to keep the peace while a new World Authority is being constituted and established. The world will have to ensure that no heirs or imitators of Fascism contrive to grasp power in any country during the period of exhaustion and confusion that will follow the peace, and that the arrangements are everywhere appointed in accordance with the will of the people freely expressed. Exhaustion and confusion will indeed be widespread; but Britain, Soviet Russia and the United States must not allow themselves to be infected by it. They must conduct their policies with cool heads and unflagging energy if the rewards of victory are to be made secure.

Trucks On Ice

A York refrigerator large enough to put an entire fuel servicing truck "on ice" is now being used by Equipment Laboratory of the Engineering Division research engineers to test resistance of Air Force equipment to Arctic weather, says The New York Times. The eighty-foot long cold chamber is capable of operating at temperatures lower than 70 degrees Fahrenheit below zero to study the problems of starting and running of ground and aircraft heaters and power plants, and the rubbero climate. Separate tests can be carried on simultaneously at different temperatures in two compartments. Windows with eight inches of glass separate the chamber which would obscure vision. At 70 degrees Fahrenheit below zero, workmen in the room must wear helmets to prevent sudden freezing of the nasal and throat passages as well as lung tissues.

Cause of Luftwaffe Failure

(U. K. Information Office)

The complete failure of the recent German raids, which attempted to destroy invasion preparations is no mystery. The Air Ministry foresaw long ago that invasion dumps and troop concentrations would make tempting targets, and so set about their preparations accordingly. The cause of the Luftwaffe's failure is the development of the RAF night fighter technique.

QUESTION

When it's over and done
And the last spire is down,
When the last battle's won
At some beachhead of town,
As at ruins we stare
Of the best works of men,
Must we set out from there
To make warfare again?

When the victory's gained
And we sum up the cost
Of the goal we've attained,
The loved ones we've lost,
And the griefs we must bear
Till life's journey is o'er,
Must for war we prepare,
Say, in twenty years more?

When the last thing is burned
And the last shell has burst,
Will the lesson be learned
Of man's follies—the worst?
As at horrors we stare—
Much too fearful to pen—
Must we set out from there
To plan warfare again?

Pyle in Normandy:
Humorous Incidents Help to Ease Some of the Monotony at the Front

By Ernie Pyle

Somewhere in France—(by wireless)—The war is constantly producing funny things as well as tragic things, so I guess it is well tell you some of our lighter incidents.

For example, the first night we spent in France one of the colonels who slept with us under an apple tree was an Army observer from Washington. Usually we don't care for observers from Washington, but this colonel was a very nice guy and a good field soldier too, and everybody liked him.

While we were eating our K rations next morning he said he had slept fine for an hour, before we had moved in under our jerry cans for protection from the flak. He said that before we moved he had found a nice little mound of earth to put his head on for a pillow. He said that all his life he had had to have a pillow of some kind. After moving under the jeep he couldn't find anything to put his head on.

With that he walked over a few feet to show us the nice mound of earth. When he looked down he started laughing. His excellent pillow of the night before had turned out in the light of day to be a pile of horse manure.

Another story concerns a masterful piece of wartime under-statement by one of our truck drivers, Pfc. Carl Vonhorn, of RFD No. 2, Cooperstown, N. Y. His bed pulled into an apple orchard adjoining ours the night before, parked his truck in the German manner, rolled his blankets on the ground in front of the truck, and gone to sleep.

When he woke up at daylight Vonhorn looked about him hurriedly. And there on the ground right beside him, within arm's reach, lay a dead German soldier. And when he looked on the other side, there, equally close, were two potato-masher (hand grenades). Private Vonhorn got up very quietly.

Later he was telling his officers about his startling experience, and he ended his description with this philosophical remark:

"It was very distasteful."

Everybody thought that was so funny it spread around the camp like fire, and now the phrase "It's very distasteful" has become practically a by-word.

After breakfast that first morning we had to round up about 30 dead Germans and Americans in the little orchards where we were camping, and carry them to a central spot for burial. I helped with them.

I helped carry one corpse across a couple of fields. I did it partly because the group needed an extra man, and partly because I was forcing myself to get used to it, for I can't hide from death when you're in a war.

This German was just a kid, surely not over 18. His face had already turned gray, and there was a sense his youth through the death-distorted figure.

The boys spread a blanket on the ground beside him. Then we lifted him onto it. One soldier at the head each took hold of a foot, and two others took the middle. One of the two soldiers in front was hesitant about picking up the head, so I stepped up on the other soldier to help him:

"Go on, take hold of his head, dammit. You might as well get used to it now, for you'll be carrying plenty of dead ones in the days to come."

So we carried him across two fields and on the bidding a prayer of the blanket. Our burden got pretty heavy, and we rested a couple of times. Then they made wisecracks along the way to cover up their distaste for the job.

When we got to the field we picked out a spot where the lieutenant wanted the cemetery started. So we put our man down on the ground and went back for instructions. And as we walked away the burying ground in the dark, fell headlong into a deep slit trench.

It was funny, even to the general, but there was nothing humorous about it to the dead soldier. He suspected monkey business. He rushed up to the trench, pointed his gun at the general, and in a tone that was a mixture of terror and intent to kill he yelled:

"Get out of there and get recognized, you!"

NUTRITIONAL DEFICIENCY AND THE NAILS

Frequent application of harid nail polish injures the nails just as application of the same solvent (nail polish remover) would injure the skin or hair by dissolving out some of the natural oil and perhaps some of the vital material, cystine, a sulfur-compound which enters into the formation of the nails.

But it is not so much this abuse of the nails as it is a nutritional deficiency that causes the nails to become brittle, ridged, pitted or cracked. The deficiency may of course be insufficient intake of cystine to assimilate or utilize a single element or item such as cystine.

Cystine is an amino-acid present in nearly all natural food products of animal or vegetable source. Wheat, barley, oats, beef, fish, eggs, milk, cheese and most vegetables contain plenty of cystine and other amino-acids necessary for the body for good nutrition. Probably it is a question rather than a fault in the assimilation of cystine that explains this trouble with the nails. Amino-acids likewise present in most protein nitrogenous foods both animal and vegetable enter into the formation of keratin which composes the large part of the structure of nails, hair wool, feathers, etc. There is some reason to believe that the same nutritional deficiency in the formation of the nails may be a factor of gastric ulcer or of duodenal arthritis in some cases.

In hypothyroidism or latent myxedema, the nails become dry and hair and nails is slowed and the nails become brittle and thick. Next time you feel like it suggest for this is the Iodin Ration, a suitable daily or weekly amount of iodine or iodide in one form or another — a drop of mild tincture of iodine or less is ample.

In chronic tetany or hypoparathyroidism (functional insufficiency of parathyroid gland) the nails become coarse in texture, lost in patches or almost completely in some cases, the skin becomes roughened and thickened, the nails brittle, ridged and sometimes shed. This is due to fault in the metabolism (assimilation and utilization and retention) of calcium, and as we know now an adequate daily ration of vitamin D is essential to maintain good calcium metabolism—vitamin D or else ample exposure of the skin to sunlight, which produces vitamin D in the body.

One or more of the entities in the vitamin B complex, notably vitamin G (B2, riboflavin), may be essential for the nutrition and growth of the nails in the opinion of physicians who have given the question some study.

So there you have it. If your nails are brittle, ridged, pitted, slow-growing, see to it that your intake of iodine, calcium, vitamin D complex, and vitamin D is adequate.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Boy Please Write

If the boy who wrote me a pathetic letter dated June 3 but unsigned will write again and repeat his question and inclose a stamped envelope addressed to himself I'll gladly give him the instructions and advice he want my son to have in the circumstances. I wish every reader would understand that whether I can be of any real help or not, at least I can be sacredly secret. Whether a correspondent tells me about himself or herself or is asking for information, instruction or advice. I try to do the best I can for him or her to do no harm. I'm just a plodding sort of doctor-scientist-confidence, not a high-brow diagnostician or specialist. If it is some harassing problem you cannot or will not submit to your family doctor or any good doctor by preference I'm happy to give my best advice or instruction by letter, provided you state the question clearly, and it does not require diagnosis. Of course I can't answer unless you inclose a stamped envelope bearing your address. Dr. William Brady.

Answer—In the pamphlet on Tinnitus (Head Noises) and Deafness (for copy send stamped envelope bearing your address) I say "Hypothetically manufacturers furnish such instruments on trial .. any one would be an easy mark to make a payment before one is convinced (by trial) that the instrument will be a help to hearing." A reasonable rental charge for the time the instrument is used on trial would be fair. But no contract to buy until the patient is certain the aid will really aid.

WHEN IN ROME—

The saying, "When in Rome do as the Romans do," is an old proverb in many languages.

It means that one should adapt himself to the customs and conform with the customs of those among whom he lives.

The proverb has never been traced definitely to a specific source, but it probably originated in the days when Rome was the miracles of the world and three continents looked to her for their fashions and manners.

Some authorities, however, suppose that it was suggested by an observation made by St. Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, in connection with certain differences of practice in the Western churches, as of Italy.

At Rome Saturday was observed as a fast day in the spirit of the Jewish Sabbath, while at Milan the day was kept as a festival.

St. Ambrose himself wrote in the fourth century that even during Lent "one fasts on Saturday, but observes Sabbath, except the great Sabbath before Easter, were observed as festivals and days of relaxation" in the Milan churches.

St. Monica, the mother of St. Augustine of Hippo (354-430), paid her son a visit at Milan while he was a teacher of rhetoric there. She was very much concerned about him and she was greatly perplexed as to whether she should fast on Saturday as the Romans did or follow the Milanese custom of feasting.

St. Augustine says in one of his letters that he submitted the problem to St. Ambrose on behalf of his mother.

St. Bishop, who never permitted non-essentials to stand in the way of important matters, replied that he could give them no better advice than to follow his own practice in reference to the point raised.

"When I am at Rome," said St. Ambrose, "I fast as the Romans do; when I am at Milan, I do not fast. So likewise you, whatever church you come to, observe the custom of the place, if you would neither give offense to others, nor take offense from them."

WEDDINGS

TRIPP—OSTRANDER

The marriage of Wilma Carrol, daughter of Mrs. Ostrander and the late Mr. Clayton Ostrander, South Bay, to Pte. Sgt. Belden Tripp, of Fingal, Ontario, son of Mr. Thomas Tripp, Picton, took place Sunday, June 25, at two o'clock in Picton United Church. Rev. J. C. Rose officiated.

Miss Joyce Ostrander was her sister's bridesmaid and Mr. Everett Lavender acted as groomsman.

Mrs. J. Donald Baxter was soloist for the occasion.

McCULLOUGH—McWILLIAMS

St. Charles' Church, Read, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 21st, at nine o'clock, when Rita Veronica McWilliams, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McWilliams, became the bride of Leo. Daniel McCullough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McCullough, of Marmora. Rev. Father R. J. Coyle performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white marquisette over satin. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was worn with a beaded coronet and her bouquet was of American Beauty roses and maiden-hair fern.

Mrs. Clarence Whalen was her sister's bridesmaid and wore a floor length dress of pink sheer over taffeta and carried a bouquet of carnations and maiden-hair fern.

Mr. Frank Mackey acted as his brother as groomsman.

Mr. William Bracey played the wedding music, assisted by Mr. William Powers, of Marysville, as soloist.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville, to the immediate friends.

Later, the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Montreal, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, and other Western points. For the trip travelling in a gown of dusky rose with navy accessories.

Honor Couple On Silver Wedding Anniversary

Many years of happily married life were recalled to Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson, 147 Dundas Street, on Saturday night, when friends and neighbors assembled at their home to congratulate them on the milestone with them the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

It was just twenty-five years ago on Sunday in Port Hope that the Rev. Dr. Shorey united in marriage Mrs. Wilson, the former Pearl Palmer, to Mr. Alonzo Wilson, who both spent the most part of their lives in that town. Fifteen years ago this Fall, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson moved to Belleville to take up residence, where the former has been employed as a member of the city fire department. They have one son, Dean Wilson, who resides at home with his parents.

The party on Saturday came as a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, but this fact did not lessen in any way the good time had by both them and their guests. The evening was passed in playing cards, after which the presentation of a silver tea service, was made by Mrs. D. F. Cameron and Mrs. A. Fulton, thus expressing in a tangible manner the high esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are held by those who know them. The address was read by Mr. George Johnson. A delicious lunch, served on attractively arranged tables, completed the very pretty event. There was even a wedding cake which was the centre attraction on the bridal table.

Previous to the party, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson also received a silver tea service and dozen of Talisman roses from their son, Dean.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The man I married was supposed to be very well off. He never suggested any economies, domestic or otherwise. He urged me to open charge accounts at all our better shops.

The day of reckoning came when my husband was forced to go through bankruptcy proceedings. I knew nothing of this looming tragedy until it came crashing upon us. Then I was told that my husband had written to the head of the firm who needed a housekeeper, also that I could bring our two children!

This arrangement, without consulting me, struck me as a highhanded procedure. I'd never liked this uncle, and knew while he might take me in from a sense of duty, that my children would be dreadfully repressed. Uncle John's house is kept exactly the way his late wife (my father's sister) left it. Even the toilet articles and her gloves are still on the dressing table in her bedroom. The atmosphere of the place is morbid and I could not think of bringing up my children there.

My husband has never liked my mother because she disapproved of his extravagance and used to talk to him about saving. His idea was to be splurged and spent, prosperity would overtake him but the "rainy day" of poverty came and we hadn't even a cotton umbrella.

"My plans are to find the maids my children will go to mother in Montreal and I will try to get a job. The trouble is I haven't been trained for anything. Have you any suggestions what an untrained woman of 28 can do to support herself and two children? I'm supposed to be good looking and wear my clothes well.

S. O. D.

Go to your nearest Employment Office. If you can pass a Civil Service examination, your choice of employment will be pretty good. Or you might capitalize on your ability to wear clothes well and take a job in a department store as a saleswoman or model.

Tea-rooms and restaurants are constantly in need of good salad-makers, people who know enough to dry the lettuce, etc., before serving. Rare as hen's teeth are good salad-mixers. The average cook drowns the salad in vinegar.

Can you sew? Women who go out to sew are always in demand. They command excellent prices per day. If you have the natural strength you can go into a defence plant and be well paid as a welder or riveter.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Speech is Not Necessary.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—I am to be married soon, and expect to have several showers given for me. Is it absolutely necessary for me to make a thank-you speech? If so, what would be considered the best way?

2.—At the wedding reception, who proposes the toasts to whom, and in what order are the toasts proposed?

1.—No. It isn't absolutely necessary for you to make a speech of appreciation. As each open each gift, your words of thanks for the giver's goodness to you, and your gracious and enthusiastic comments on the gift and on specific features of the gift, will show you're a charmingly appreciative girl. And toward the end of the party you or the hostess will be delighted if you say a few words of thanks to her for her thoughtfulness in planning such a happy party for you. Then, remember that you should, a day or two after the party, write your hostess a note of thanks, and also write your thanks to each donor. Such goodness and generosity require gracious bows to thanks!

2.—It is really the duty of the bestman to propose a toast to the bride and bridegroom. To this the bridegroom replies with thanks for his bride and himself.—This is the most important toast, but other toasts may be proposed by anyone who wishes to propose them.

When to Wear Gloves.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—Should a bride wear gloves into church? If so, when should she remove them (or remove only the left glove)?

2.—Is it necessary to have someone to give the bride in marriage at an informal wedding. If so, should the bride walk in on the arm of the one who is to give her in marriage?

3.—When one's fiance is presented with a gift from his firm, should the bride-to-be write a note of thanks to the firm? And please tell me how such a note should be worded.

4.—When a toast is proposed to the bride, should he or she remain seated while the others are standing? Congratulations!

Doris R.

1.—If the wedding is formal and the sleeves of the bridal gown are long, the bride should wear long gloves. With long sleeves, she usually doesn't wear gloves . . . and it is her privilege to do so, if she wishes. However, if for some special reason she does wear gloves (and she usually has the stitches of the third finger of the left hand glove (the ring finger) ripped so that it may be slipped into the hand of the glove during the ceremony.

2.—Usually, either the bride is given in marriage doesn't depend on the formality or informality of the wedding. It depends on her own preference, or sometimes on the regulations of the church. If, at either a formal or informal wedding, she is to be given in marriage by her father, which is customary, he escorts her up the aisle; if her father is not living, she may walk with, and be given in marriage by, her uncle, brother or other male relative. Or if she has neither father nor any near male relative, she may walk up the aisle alone, and be given in marriage by her mother. Another alternative: he may walk up the aisle with an uncle, brother or cousin, and be given in marriage by her mother.

3.—Yes. It is the bride-to-be who writes the note of thanks to the groom's firm, since the wedding presents belong to her. In her note she thanks them first for their kindness and generosity to her and Bill; then thanks for the gift (mentioning it specifically "which has made us both so happy and which we will use in our new home with such special pleasure"), and then comments enthusiastically on special features of the gift.

4.—Yes, all except the person to whom the toast is proposed, rise, raise their glasses, and drink the toast.

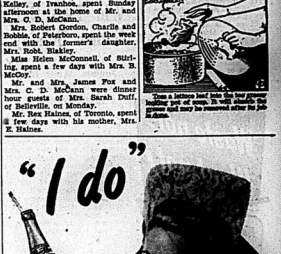
Treating Angina Pectoris.

"Angina pectoris is a sudden attack of breast pain that comes on without warning, and is very severe indeed. The patient is seized with an attack of pain that is located beneath the breast bone usually towards lower end. The pain comes on suddenly and passes as its full development almost immediately. The patient has no time to do anything but stop where he is and assume the erect attitude for support. The pain usually extends to left shoulder and down the left arm. Together with the pain there is a vise-like feeling as if ribs are being pressed into the chest and a sensation that every breath may be the last.

The above is a description of angina pectoris as described by Dr. G. K. Penn, Associate Professor of Medicine, Northwestern University Medical School, in the Chicago



Number of Medical Clinics of North America.

When heart disease, organic or functional, is present, the pain comes on with exercise and builds up slowly, not suddenly, as in ordinary angina pectoris, but gradually increases as he continues his efforts such as walking when he may stop and rest for a time and the pain gradually disappears. The patient with heart disease is subject to attacks of angina pectoris.

In regard to the management or treatment of angina pectoris, Dr. Penn points out that the physicians must recognize what sort of anginal pain is present—physical effort or emotional or other factors.

The treatment is to have the patient "go easy" avoiding alternating his hours of work, short vacations with rest, avoidance of controversial subjects or emotional stress whenever possible. "In other words, the patient may play golf or bridge if he does not take the game too seriously or attend games if they do not excite him".

An angina attack occur more frequently following meals, it has been shown that distension of the stomach and bowel either by food or gas causes the supply of blood to the muscular walls of the heart.

● "I do like its catchy flavour—I do like that tall twelve-ounce bottle that gives you more to pour—I do promise to keep plenty of 'Pepsi-Cola' in our icebox every day." Smart girl! 1 2 3 and in the middle of the morning or afternoon you'll find, as so many others have, that a tall glass of "Pepsi-Cola" will help to revive your spirits, banish fatigue and renew your energy quickly and pleasantly.

Premium Table-Ready Meats

Tasty, tempting, and so easy to prepare! Save time and work by serving Swift's Premium Table-Ready Meats frequently this summer.

Summer calls for planning meals that take little time and fuss in preparation. With work in your Victory Gardens, children soon coming home from school and all the ordinary wartime activities, meals should be streamlined . . . but, of course, still nutritious and satisfying. That's where Swift's Premium 'Table-Ready' meats come into their own! Here are some tips for making the most of these appetizing loaves and sausages:—when buying, select a variety for appetite appeal and to suit each member of the family. Get several slices of three or four different kinds, with contrast in flavour, texture, colour and shape.

Leftover slices are excellent in sandwiches for next day's lunch.

See your family get their vitamins by serving a mixed green salad (see recipe for dressing) with the meats. And start the meal with a bowl of soup.

HUNT FOR LARGE SNAKE

Akron, O., June 26 (AP) — "Bring your kids and the neighbors' kids," called for a snake hunt in the near-by village of Peninsula. The hunt will be held Sunday and it was called after Mrs. Ray Vaughn said she saw a reptile 12 feet long devour a full-grown chicken. Assistant Police Chief Dan Hall said he saw a snake track "made by a reptile six or seven inches in diameter."

Belleville Kids Win Two Ball Games Sunday

BOTH SCORES 5-4

Baseball moved into prominent sport limelight in Belleville on Sunday when two exhibition games of interest, that once more the name of Belleville across the Dominion, were played. At the Alemite Field the Foster Ward juniors bested the Trenton baseball nine 5 to 4 before a goodly number of interested spectators, while at the Exhibition Park on the same afternoon the St. Mikes kids rallied to beat the Tweed nine by an identical score of 5 to 4 giving the two loyal fans, for nines a dual win.

At the Alemite Field Bob Bunton, on the mound for the Foster Ward nine, hooked up in a pitching duel with Gord Muffett, fanning Coe Hill strikeouts, now pitching for Trenton with Bunton getting the nod by a single run advantage. Bunton whiffed 13 Trenton batters while Muffett sent 12 local batters down via the strike out route. However, when it came to handing out base hits Bunton's crud the better sting as the Foster War nine collected nine safeties to Trenton's eight. Ranee Bunn clouted a triple for the homesters, while Jacks Phillips drove out the game's only double, both extra base hits accounting for local runs.

Trenton	001	011	010—4	8	2
Foster Ward .	002	001	11x—5	9	3

Batteries—Belleville: Bunton and Stirling; Trenton: Muffett and Milne; Umpires, Art Black, Trenton, and Jim Bennett, Belleville.

Triple Broke Up Game.

At the Exhibition Park Jerry Moher's triple followed by Al Kelleher's single broke up the ball game in the ninth inning getting Belleville St. Mikes a 5 to 4 win over "Doc" Empson and kids. Sonny Donovan put the Irish one up with a first inning home run but Boyle and Moher scored in the second and Donovan again in the third getting St. Mikes only 3 to 1 before Tweed rallied in the fifth to score three runs, Doyle, Hall and Moher scoring for the visitors. That was the limit of scoring and the locals in the half of the eighth, when Jerry Moher tripled with two out and "Curley" Kelleher came through with a base knock to drive home, what proved the winning run. With two out in the ninth Tweed got the tying and winning runs aboard when Donovan and Hall hit to successive. However, Bailey skied out to end the game.

Bill Rimmer started on the hilltop for the Irish, Dick Fitzpatrick taking over the locals' pitching chores in the sixth. Lefty Hall went the route for Tweed.

The line scores:	r.	h.	e.
Tweed	001	030	000—4	6	4
St. Mikes	120	100	01x—5	9	3

Batteries—St. Mikes, Hunter, Fitzpatrick (6) and Moher; Tweed, Hall and Empson and Bailey. Umpire Bernard Meagher.

38 Runs Scored on Forty Hits In Game Played at Stratford

By The Canadian Press

No less than 38 runs were scored on 40 hits during a senior inter-county fixture at Stratford Saturday when the Nationals came out on top 24-14 against the London nine. The encounter was also marked by the errors of which six were charged to the losers while a procession of pitchers distributed 13 passes to the first sack.

In contrast to the loose display at Stratford was the smartly-played inter county tilt at Galt in which the Terriers turned back Hamilton 3-1.

Alfred Parker's By Jiminy scored an easy five-length win in the $50,000 Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct Park Saturday with Tommy Ted Atkinson handling the reins, the result further complicating the three-cornered situation. Back of the winner were Silk Up, Lucky Draw, Bounding Home, Stymie, Shut Upround.

Toronto, June 26 — (CP)—It's nothing unusual for baseball coaches to toss players on their ears when they aren't producing, or give the mighty heave-ho to a manager when the team hits the skids, but the higher-ups of the baseball world are usually are a little more secure in their seats at Sunday, Bob Quinn at the lakehead.

The lakehead Senior Baseball League has changed its presidents twice already this season, and it's in a fair way to become known as the "parade of the presidents." Dick Hilliard orginee in the Fort William News Chronicle. Ray Smith, after several years as proxy, handed over the reins to James and now Bob is heading for St. Paul, Minn., and the league is looking around for a successor.

Sing, Singh:

The wrestling fans in Toronto got their money's worth at a bout between Nanjo Singh and Frank Sexton, Thursday at Maple Leaf Gardens, a few daring souls at the ringside nailed Singh for the count and dragged him from the ring to give him a going over.

Singh had been roughing-up Sexton a bit too vigorously, and the boys apparently didn't like his villain act, so decided to make him cry uncle for a change. Just as we were saying the other day, wrestling crowds have more fun than anyone else.

Here and There:

Western-bred horses evidently improve with age. Herb (Winnipeg Try-Me) Manning says Tweerwin, one of the week's best, wasn't much as a juvenile or three year old, but came into his own since he passed his four-year mark. Noble King became a good stayer after five, Palace didn't produce until he got past three, and Corinthian was a rare comeback at the age of eight to become a good handicapper. Herb thinks the answer lies in the fact the western nags aren't overworked. Not a bad theory anyhow, but real all winter. That may make them better horses, but chances are they won't do so well against horses that are kept in condition all winter in sunny southern climates. Harry Hatch's victories with his winter-trained horses proved it's quite a benefit.

"SEA MULE" NOW IN USE

A British Port, June 24. (CP)—Invasion forces have another odd weapon-one "Sea Mule"—craft is used for pushing and towing. It takes the places of a tug but is more manoeuvrable, and cheap to build. SYRACUSE CHIEFS WIN TWIN BILL FROM THE LEAFS

Tyler Leads the Winners With Three Doubles and a Homer

By The Associated Press

Andy (Swede) Hansen should prove a big help to New York Giants, to whom he was sold by Jersey City Giants, yesterday.

The 19-year-old righthander won his eighth game in the opener of yesterday's twin bill as he hurled the Jersey Giants to an 8-4 decision over Rochester Red Wings. The Jaycees also won the second game, 3-2.

Hansen failed to last the game, however, leaving for a pinch-hitter as the Jerseys rallied for six runs in the ninth to win.

By winning both games, the Junior Giants moved into a tie with Buffalo for fifth place.

The Bisons split with the league-leading Baltimore Orioles, the Orioles winning the first 13-10 and the Bisons taking the second, 9-4. Nine pitchers worked in the opener, while three of them repeated in the nightcap.

Montreal and Newark divided a twin-bill. The Royals won a ten-to-all opener, 8-4, scoring the winning run in the ninth after the Bears had rallied for eight runs in the tie score, and the Bears taking the nightcap on behind the five-hit pitching of Dutch Hiller.

Syracuse won its second doubleheader of the season, taking both games from Toronto, 7-5 and 6-5 in 10 innings. John Tyler led the Chiefs' attack with three doubles and a homer.

'Y' PREPS HOLD FIELD DAY

Some forty participants took part in the "Y" Preps indoor field day held at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday with three events run off. John Batchelor emerged the day's champion amassing the maximum number of 15 points by placing first in every event contested. Keith Cox, Universal; Wednesday, Deacons vs. Reliance; Friday, Mountain View vs. Comboes.

Keith Cox was runner-up with 11 points.

The results of the meet were as follows:

Broad Jump: 1 John Batchelor; 2 Keith Cameron; 3 Ken Allen and Lorne Palmer.

High Jump: 1 John Batchelor and Keith Cameron (tied); 2 Ken Allen; 3 Marcel Angers.

Mike Byrne and Myron Stephens, Browns—Byrner doubled in winning run in 10th inning of opener; Stephens drove in two runs and scored another in 5-3 victory in finale.

George Munger, Cards and Spud Davis, Pirates—Munger hurled five-hitter to win his 10th game against one loss, 2-1, in opener; Davis hit three-run home in ninth drive to gain Pirates a 5-3 tie.

Larry Rosenthal Cards, Reds and Claude Passeau, Cubs — Carter relieved Passeau in ninth of opener and forced Bill Nicholson to roll out with tying and winning runs on bases; Passeau blanked Reds in nightcap to gain even split.

A Near Thing

Smith was in his den with a few of his friends talking about his wife and her peculiarities.

"I have thought for some time," he said, "that my wife is utterly lacking in taste, but the other day she put on a new dress which was atrocious beyond words. I daren't, of course, say a word about it, and dared hardly look at it, but as she went out I went to the window to have another look at her and . . ."

At this juncture his wife entered suddenly.

"And the funniest part of the whole affair," continued Smith, without showing the least embarrassment, "was that they fastened the cat eleven days later on the top of the Hotel Tweed!"

And Mr. Smith still does not understand why his wife was in that ridiculous statement to make them all laugh so uproariously.

Softball Round-up.

Winning two games last week Max Peoples' Stephens Adamson Marines ran their winning streak to six consecutive games and are well in front in the Men's City Softball League. Actually the Marines have met and defeated every team in the loop and today Peoples' gang is the crowd to beat for the McCarthy Theatre Trophy. Starting Tuesday the men's loop have 12 more games scheduled for three consecutive nights Tuesday's Marine-Alemite and Thursday's Point Anne-Marine tilts being the tit bits of the week.

Over in the Ladies League Reliance and SWACO remain undefeated, but Tommy Colden's "Easterners" face tough opposition tonight when SWACOs clash with Bill Davies' Universals. Incidentally Reliance beat Bell Sargents in an exhibition game on Saturday night when over $16.00 was raised for the C. W. B. P. overseas fund to provided necessities for the army girls' adopted "R" Troop now stationed in Italy. Maj Marion Harden of the C. W. B. announced today that further exhibition games wouldlaugh be played for the same cause with the odd outside team being brought in. Next Saturday Universals may play for the fund.

Misses Free Ticket.

Did you ever hear of a batter receiving a base on balls, but never leaving home plate and never even starting for first base? Well, it happened in Boston during a game with the Yankees. With two out in the opening inning and Rud Mathemy on second base, Nick Etten drew a base on balls from Pinky Woods. As Pinky wound up for the pitch which became the fourth ball, Mathemy took off for a steal of third, but the throw from Roy Partee to third was grabbed but Etten never even got away from the plate on receiving the walk and, as the retirement of Mathemy made the third out, the only reason Nick strolled down to first was to play the bag in the last half of the inning.

Two Ball Games.

No less than two baseball games were played in Belleville over the week-end, one at the Alemite Field and the other at the Fair Grounds. The Sunday afternoon exhibition baseball matches are becoming popular, especially in the east end of the city where a goodly crowd quietly looked on as Bob Bland's Foster Ward kids beat Harry Moore's Trenton lads 5 to 4. At the Fair Grounds Don Rack, Peoples, brought in a team of kids from the Tweed district only to lose 5 to 4 to St. Mikes. At the Alemite field a goodly crowd was on hand and no boisterous disturbances were heard as the game was played quietly and without annoyances to the residents of the district. No doubt the greater number present attended church in the morning. Harry Moore, publisher of the Trenton Courier-Advocate and mentor of the Trenton nine, was down to enjoy the afternoon's outing and recreation, as the latter travelled by regular bus schedule. Bob Bunton was on the hilltop for Foster Ward's kids, while Gord Muffett, former Coe Hill pitcher, was on the firing line for Trenton.

Breeding Will Tell

Seabiscuit comes of a noble strain—and was raised in the famous Bluegrass Country near Winchester, Kentucky. Fine tobaccos also are pedigreed and the country of racing champions is famous also for its tobacco. Winchester Cigarettes are blended from three famous strains of world-champion tobaccos — Virginia, Turkish, Burley — each contributing its special quality. For a champion smoke, try Winchesters. They'll be your lifetime favourites.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 414

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The life, liberty and pursuit of bridge happiness is spiced by opening bids of two in a suit. Such an opening adds zest to many a deal that comes up in the course of a game.

An opening bid of two in a suit covers a multitude of hands. There seems to be no limit to what it tells and asks a partner.

It starts by saying: "Partner, I expect to make a game with what I have in my own hand. If I miss a game, it will be only by the skin of my teeth."

In more specific terms it says: "My hand contains nine tricks or more. If I need any more at all, or you probably have some semblance of a trick that will answer my purpose."

It goes on to suggest: "Since I promise to produce a game, you raise me to the bidding till such a game is reached. No matter what else we may say or do, keep the bidding open to game."

It announces: "This bid-book suit may not be of only suit I can show. May do I yet know which is my best final trump suit. You must help me decide that before the bidding ends."

Its advisee: "What I want to know first, however, is whether or not you have help for a slam. Help for a slam is a sure trick in your hand; that is, and ace or K Q in any suit."

It orders: "If you have no sure trick, signal not at once to that effect. The signal for that purpose is an immediate response of two no-trump."

The order continues: "But if you have a sure trick, don't respond with two no-trump. Respond with anything but two no-trump. And choose your bid from the order in A-K-Q, takeout, assist, no-trump."

It explains: "With a sure trick, takeout if you have a biddable suit. With no takeout, assist if you have support. With neither a takeout nor an assist, bid three no-trump."

There are two advices that go with an opening bid of two in a suit. But these high spots will give you a good idea of its gabby qualities.

Suppose you have a hand like this:

♠ A K Q 4
♥ A 6
♦ K J
♣ K Q 9 5

Your opening bid with that hand is two clubs. Revise in your mind all the stuff you tell and ask your partner by such a bid. And don't chalk them on the ice.

Ontario Liberals To Elect Officers

Toronto, June 26 (CP)—Ontario Liberals met here today to further reorganization of the provincial party, which was disrupted and quietly inaugurated following the Liberal defeat at the polls last Aug. 4.

The gathering—a regularly called meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association—was to hear reports from the provincial leader, Harry Nixon, and the association President, LL-Col. Harry Hamilton of Bault Ste. Marie. Mr. Nixon and Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Federal Labor Minister, will address tonight's banquet meeting.

Association officers will be elected and it was reported unofficially that the management committee would make a so far unrevealed recommendation to the general meeting relative to the party leadership.

The association's new secretary, Maj. A. G. Hale, former Sarnia newspaperman, said the meeting probably would extend into Tuesday morning. He added that the Ontario Association had not expected he would hold a meeting prior to the opening of its general meeting this afternoon.

Maj. Hale succeeded Harry Johnson, long-time secretary who recently retired from the position.

D-Day Rations

(United Kingdom Information Report)

Here is a brief description of the different types of ration packs which will figure as main dietary personae in the story of the supply arrangements for the Invading Forces:

First comes the 24-hour ration pack. This is designed specially for the day of the assault, and is tailored specially to each man together with a Tommy cooker and its pellets. It has a total calorific value (4,000 calories), the its gross weight, in a waxed cardboard container, is less than 2½ pounds. It comprises pressed blocks of pre-cooked dehydrated meat and rolled oats with sugar and fats, together with a compressed bloc of tea, sugar and milk powder. (The meat and oatmeal blocks are also packed individually and fruit, jam and margarine, sweets and chocolate, biscuits and cheese, tea-tiny gar-mile powder, salt, cigarettes, matches and soap. Having a grass weight of about 6½ lbs., it provides one day's ration for 14 men with a calorific value of 2,500 calories per man per day. Somewhat similar in composition, but made up in three or five men packs according to the size of tank crews is the ration pack carried by tanks and armored vehicles for emergencies.

Next, there is a self-heating soup and cocoa, brought rapidly to boiling point by igniting chemicals in a tube-shaped cylinder within the tin; and, finally, the "iron" rations, which consist of sweet biscuits, chocolate and chewing gum—the first two commodities to be consumed by troops while waiting for embarkation, the last, designed as a remedy for sea-sickness.

The Expeditionary Force will rely on the Compo pack until utilization of bulk supplies can be organized — it may be for weeks.

Bucky Walters May Become First Pitcher in Ten Years To Win 30 Games in Season

BOROWY WINS 10

By JOE RICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

It looks as though there may be at least eight 20-game-winning pitchers in the Major Leagues this year. It is even possible that one, Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati Reds, may become the first hurler in 10 years to win 30 victories in one season.

According to the ratio of their games won and the number games played by their respective teams, Walters should just hit the 30 mark and Orville Tuck of the St. Louis Cardinals, Bill Voiselle of New York Giants, Rip Sewell of Pittsburgh Pirates, Hank Borowy of New York Yankees, Max Lanier of St. Louis Red Box, Hal Newhouser of Detroit Tigers and Bill Dietrich of Chicago White Sox should gain at least 20 triumphs.

Walters gained his 12th triumph yesterday, as the Reds won the first game of a double-header from Chicago 4-3. Claude Passeau of the Cubs, blanked the Reds in the nightcap, 4-0.

Munger won his 10th game against only one defeat, as the Cards won the opener from the Pirates, 5-1. Sewell failed to win his 10th bowing to Max Lanier (11-4), two-run homer by Spud Davis in the ninth gave the Cubs a 5-3 win in the final, halted by curfew at 6:56 P.M.

Gains Even Split.

Voiselle gained an even split for the Giants, 4-1, limiting Boston to three hits in the second game, after the Braves had grabbed the first contest, 5-1.

Borowy eased out a close 4-3 decision for his 10th win as the Yanks swept a twin bill from Philadelphia. Ernie Bonham, after four weeks of idleness because of a shoulder ailment, chalked up a victory in the second game.

Newhouser was stymied in an attempt to gain his 11th success as the league-leading St. Louis Browns swept two games from the Tigers, 5-4 in 11 innings, and 8-2.

Dietrich hurled a seven-hit shutout to earn his ninth victory as the White Sox won two from Cleveland, 11-0 and 6-3. Thurman Tucker homered with one on to decide the second contest.

After losing the first game 5-4, the Red Sox, with Tex Hughson gaining his 10th triumph against three defeats, came back to shut out Detroit, 4-0, in the nightcap. Hughson yielded only three hits.

Boston sweeps a four-game series from the Philadelphia Phillies, by taking both games of a twin-bill, 4-1 and 2-1 in 10 innings.

Manie Larry Scarpelli, Notre Dame's nominee for "All America" center in the Big Ten, hit .358 in 21 games and is said to be terrifically fast in the outfield . . . Lieut. Charley Fills, who was taken away from baseball by the Army then discharged because of asthma, will be the 1944 formation quarterback at Virginia next fall.

Pretty Corny:

When Ray Meyer, De Paul U. basketball coach, went down on the farm to visit big George Mikan, he was given a demonstration of the workings of a corn planter after observing how the kernels were deposited in the ground, Ray asked: "And now, how do you plant the cobs that I've been feeding in the middle of an ear of corn?"

ADDRESSES CONVICTS BY MISTAKE

Paso, Wash., June 24 — (AP) — Al McCoy of Yakima, candidate for the Democratic nomination for representative in Congress, thought he saw an opportunity to talk to a group of voters. He interviewed workers harvesting peas on the farm of State Senator Henry Cleveland. Ninety per cent of them were willing to do all they could for him, he said. Back at the House, he learned the harvest hands were convict laborers without the right to vote.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Someone To Remember"
(First Belleville Showing)

In answer to the widespread public protest, and after a long-delayed war picture, Republic has filmed a pleasantly sentimental and whimsical romance of distinctly pre-war vintage in "Someone To Remember," which seemed to thoroughly delight Sunday midnight preview audience at the Capitol Theatre.

Mothers of sons in the army may see this picture without having to view real after real the sanguine battle scenes, death and harrowing destruction. That in itself is a subject that will draw hundreds of people into the theatre, and in the case of "Someone To Remember" they will come away relaxed and refreshed by a story that is "different," pleasing, and handled with the highest degree of imagination and skill.

Based on a Ben Ames Williams magazine story, "Someone To Remember" is all about a sweet little old lady who refuses to move out of her apartment her only home — when the building is sold to a large university and converted into a men's dormitory. An investigation reveals that her life-time lease on the apartment she occupies is forthright, and the college authorities are, powerless to evict her. All they can do is permit her to stay on, which she does, with rare vigor and zest, becoming a second mother to every boy in the building and upholding their warm devotion.

Mabel Paige delivers an unforgettable performance in the leading role of little old Mrs. Freeman. Without overplaying one fraction she makes her characterization completely believable and proves herself one of the screen's foremost character actresses.

"Slightly Dangerous"

Lana Turner gives another blind folded and figures in adventures ranging from an amnesia masquerade to a bedroom hassle with Robert Young in M-G-M's "Slightly Dangerous," now at the Capitol Theatre as the added hit. The picture, made for laughs will keep you well entertained for there is never a dull moment.

Miss Turner plays the part of a soda clerk in a department store. She tires of her humdrum existence, leaves a suicide note, poses as an amnesia victim and long lost daughter of a millionaire. Young the new store manager, is blamed for the "suicide." He sets out to find her and save his job. Complications follow upon complications until the climax finds the two principals madly in love.

To complete this grand program we are priviledged to present the official pictures of the prelude to Invasion.

AT THE McCARTHY

Springtime in the Rockies

That Spring is the time and the Rockies the place for everything melodious, romantic and gay is the theme message of Springtime in the Rockies, the lively 20th Century-Fox musical in enchanting Technicolor which on Tuesday brings Betty Grable, John Payne, Carmen Miranda and a bountiful musical comedy cast to the screen of the McCarthy Theatre.

Blazing as a mountain breeze, it's the type of cinema divertisement that wraps itself around your heart and then won't let go. There is mile-high fun, when Betty Grable, Payne, combustible Carmen and Cesar Romero get their romantic signals mixed. And there is rhythm calculated to rock the Rockies themselves, when Harry James and His Music Makers get to mellow melody the exhilarating splendor of Canada's Lake Louise which serves, for the most part, as the film's locale. The idol of dance-conscious young America, James' trumpet virtuosity together pleasantly on the more mature ear as well.

The James and his celebrated aggregation offer intriguing arrangements of four rich tunes by the composing team that never seems to miss, Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. The tunes are "I had The Craziest Dream", "Pan Americana Holiday", "Time Alone Will Tell" and "A Poem Set To Music." Altogether ingratiating too, is the chanting of the band's popular vocalist, Helen Forrest.

On hand to augment the stars are Charlotte Greenwood, the hinge-legged comedienne; Edward Everett Horton, Frank Orth, and Jackie Gleason. Romance is rife when Miss Greenwood, admittedly dazzled's, draws a bead on hilarious Horton.

Betty Grable rarely has danced or cavorted with more aplomb and, with Technicolor revealing the rose in her cheek and a sparkle in her eyes, she is a dreamy vision, indeed.

AT THE BELLE

"Tender Comrade"

"Timely, moving, charming and dramatic, "Tender Comrade" which is now on the Belle Theatre's screen stars Ginger Rogers in the saga of a woman war worker, her problems, her pains, her joys and while her husband is in the American Expeditionary.

It is the story of Jo and Chris, Hollywood sweethearts who get together in Los Angeles, get married and then find their plans for the future changed. When the war comes, Chris has to don a uniform and go overseas. Accordingly girl gets a job in an aircraft factory and joins a group of three others who are in a similar situation to carry on in one household.

The adventures of Chris Jr. and Jo's dreams of the day when the boy's father will come back, together to build the story to a poignant climax, inspiring in its example of wonderful courage and resignation.

As the indomitable Jo, Miss Rogers is a magnificent figure, popular newcomer, Robert Ryan, who turns in a memorable portrayal as Chris' pals in the film, his first romantic part. Ruth Hussey, Patricia Collings and Mary Hunter as Ginger companions, and Mady Christians as their "landlady-in-law" all deliver sharply etched performances, as do Jane Darwell and Richard Martin.

The Belle Theatre management is presented today by the war Department for the opportunity of presenting to you these films on the actual invasion of Fortress Europe —"Eve of Invasion". These films just released show the tremendous United Nations preparations for the second front.

Donald Duck is appearing on the same program in a highly amusing cartoon entitled "Commando Duck". Continuous shows will be presented today.

U.S. TROOPS

An official spokesman said there was little evidence the Germans were attempting to "bring reinforcements to the front as relieved battered units."

It also was disclosed LL-Gen. Clark's troops had taken an additional 1,000 prisoners in the last few days, bringing the total captured since the start of the present offensive to 24,000, exclusive of many thousands seized by the 8th Army.

Young Prisoners Taken

The British 8th Army continued its slugging progress against stubborn enemy forces in the vicinity of both Perugia and Lake Trasimeno. Monte Grose and the village of Pianello were taken in the vicinity of Perugia, and the town of Valabrica was occupied in the foothills east of the Tiber.

The town of Chiusi — scene of recent bloody fighting when attacking South African force was overrun by Nazi tanks — remained in enemy hands, but the British grip there was threatening when other 8th Army units drove up the west shores of Lake Trasimeno to within two miles of Castiglione, nine miles northwest of Chiusi.

An Allied spokesman said the German gunners had been recently included 17-year-old youths who "nevertheless have been in the German army long enough to become disillusioned about Nazi doctrines."

Cited as evidence of the deteriorating quality of German junior officers was a captured order by Kesselring declaring that "in the case of retreat units they must never go into battle with a company strength of more than 80 or 90 men."

"CUPID RIDES A BUS"

by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER 1

Ginger Drake was black-haired, "creamy," and talented. She was exceedingly lovely; fluted melody conveyed her lively, unaccented speech, rhythm dwelt in her tiny feet. Yet she was definitely unromantic.

"You could be Greta Moore and Eleanor Powell and Greta Garbo thrown into one—and you, Gypsy Rose Lee," said Mr. Benjamin O'Riley, moon written on both his stomachs and all four chins of him, "But Ronnie Rockaby has passed around the town not to give you a job even as a hat-check girl. That's the real low-down."

"Ronnie Rockaby is a crooner and a cad!" Disillusionment was in Ginger, and indignation. "Just because I won't marry him—he's going to smash my career, is he."

'Going to' ain't the word for it," observed the O'Riley. "The word is did."

Her almond-shaped eyes above the turned nose flamed emerald fire.

"And you mean to tell me that a —a crooner—can get away with an outrage like that?"

"Ronnie Rockaby ain't only a crooner her agent reminded, her practically. He's Got's gift to women, and Crown Prince of the Air. His fan mail comes in tons and his salary in telephone numbers. But you know yourself—"

"I ought to—He's done nothing but tell me about it for six months," said Ginger so what?"

"Boo hoo! Suppose to know where several bodies are buried," he added dryly. So people like to do him favors. Put it all together, and it spells 'Ginger Drake' don't eat!"

"I can hardly believe it of him," Ginger, who thought she knew men, was annoyed.

"All's fair in love and war," said Mr. O'Riley, "You—Ronny ain't used to being turned down. And he knows you're ambitious."

Ginger seethed — wouldn't speak to him again if he could put my name in all the electric lights on Broadway!"

Mr. O'Riley thought sadly of his vanished commissions.

"Look here—you're not in love with softie enough to work ham or pico-lo-player, are you?"

"In love ?" Ginger's voice dripped sail. "I hate men. Loathe them. Despise, detest, and abominate them!" And added vindictively: "Tropical fish have the right idea—the females eat the rat their males. If Ronnie were only a fish—he'd be off." "Surely Mr O'Riley you're not going to let an entertainer interfere with my future—"

"I just told you, your future is past—unless you make up with Ronny"

Her indignation mounted.

"And you'd be a girl starve, just because you're afraid of the influence of an egotistic, conceited—"

"I've got other clients to think of. To defend," himself. "You've got what it takes, Ginger—and you know it! help you if I could. But what can I do?"

"I've got to get a job," she told him earnestly. "Not only because I need the money—but because I've got to succeed, now more than ever I've got to!" She gave him an appealing look. "If New York's out

"Ronny Rockaby has passed around word not to give you a job even as a hat-check girl."

—send me somewhere else. But not on Broadway!"

"Out of town?" He looked slightly pleased, then his lips, and blinked. "Say—could you go to Miami?"

"Miami!" Ginger was startled. "Florida?"

"Yeh, Miami." The agent picked up a telegram from his cluttered desk, and glanced at it.as if for confirmation. "There's a spot open for a girl like you at the Club Caribbean. Not much salary, but it's a good break—most of the Broadway and Hollywood crowd will be down sometime during the winter, and catch you. If you give 'em all you've got, I wouldn't be surprised to see you back here with a real contract next year."

It sounded marvelous. Ginger brightened. "When can I go?"

"If ain't when can you go—it's when you got to go," he told her. "The jobs open only until Monday noon. If you're not there to take it, by-then, they're signing an act from Havana. Max Baxter's a funny semi-personal guy—thinks he's another Ziegfeld or Napoleon, or somebody. If you're five minutes late—he'd be just as apt to turn you down, even if you came all the way from the North Pole."

"Don't worry. I'll be there, if I have to walk!"

"I don't care how you get there, as long as you do," said O'Riley. And added hastily: "You'll have to borrow your fare, though. Collections haven't been so good with me this week."

"I'll manage it, thanks," she smiled. And rose. "Max Baxter—Club Caribbean—Miami Monday by noon. Correct?"

"That's right," he nodded. I'll send him a wire you're on your way. Good luck, Ginger."

Ginger left the office walking on air, her facile imagination working on all eight cylinders.

Florida. Sunshine on the beach. Afternoons at the races. Palms and swimming-pools—millionaires and movie producers. A 'spot' at a smart club, that was to be the stepping-stone to fame and fortune. Perhaps her knight might come riding across Biscayne Bay on a white yacht. Ginger was incurably romantic, despite the Ronny Rockaby affair. It did not occur to her until she was out on the sidewalk of Forty-second Street that Miami was a long way off, and it cost money to get there. Ginger opened her purse and counted her worldly wealth. Eighty-odd, she found, totalled exactly three dollars and forty seven cents.

There was a tourist ticket office nearby. Also a pawnshop. In twenty minutes she had visited them both, and was back out upon Forty-second, her high dreams deflated like a pricked balloon.

It did take money to go to Miami—fat, plain, rich money. More money than she could beg, borrow or steal. The only two men from whom she might have borrowed were Ronny Rockaby and Mr. O'Riley. The latter had made it plain, as agents will, that she could not count on him. And Ronny—under the circumstances, was out of the question.

Abysmally depressed, Ginger gravitated toward Bryant Park, where at length she found a bench. Oblivious to the admiring impact of circulating masculine stares, she tried to think a way out of her predicament, but with little success. It looked as if O'Riley was right about her career. If she could not get to Miami She would have to take any kind of a job at all, soon, simply to be able to eat. Her spirits sank perceptibly lower at the thought.

A man sitting on the other end of the bench, who had hitherto been absorbed in the evening paper, put it down on the seat between them, and walked off. Ginger picked it up. She might just as well be finding that job now or later.

She glanced idly at page one first, more out of habit rather than interest. Kings might abdicate, floods in China kill millions, tragedy stalk the air lanes even movie stars shoot their husbands: those abstractions were little moment beside the reality of a setback in her career and the persecution of a crooner scorned.

The headline screamed blackly across the front page:

"Bankbeer Diamond Stolen in Broad Daylight"

Ginger scanned the sub-headlines breathlessly, because she was particularly interested, at the moment, in anything Bankbeer, she did not want to miss anything.

The famous Bankbeer Diamond, one of the largest uncut diamonds in the world, which, recently discovered, had been brought to New York in the hope of selling it to some multi-millionaire, had been stolen that afternoon from the case in which it was on exhibition in the Fifth avenue Shop of one of the metropolis's most prominent jewelers. It was pure white stone, Ginger gathered, and worth a quarter of a million dollars. Her skimming eyes caught phrases; "Internationall ring of jewel thieves suspected." "police dragnet out." "Great brazen jewel theft of the Century."

Ginger shrugged her shoulders. The impulsively began to turn the pages, looking for the classified advertisements section. She would give all the diamonds in the world, at the moment for the price of a bus fare to Miami. She reached the section she sought and began intently to peruse the columns.

Her questing glance fell on that under the caption of Personals. Fate held if there.

"Party motoring to Florida will take passengers willing to share expenses and help drive. Fourteen dollars each Tel.Taylor-Wick 5-2345."

Ginger caught her breath. Trembling, she read the item once again, and recounted her tiny fortune.She still lacked about eleven dollars to join this share-expense expedition to the immediate land of the sun. Ginger expelled her breath in a long sigh she caught it again as she clutched at her wristwatch. Less than half an hour before the pawnbroker had offered her ten dollars for it. Perhaps she could talk him into adding another dollar; in any event, she could always scrape that much together. Food and lodging on the road would have to take care of itself—transportation to Miami was all that mattered.

Hurrying to the nearest telephone booth she rang the number given in the advertisement,her heart in her mouth. Supposing she were too late?

The ringing stopped, and a masculine voice answered.

"Hello?"

Hello, May I speak to Mr. Taylor "This is Tony Taylor," said the voice amiably.

She swallowed hard.

"I just saw your advertisement in the paper, Mr. Taylor. About a passenger to share expenses to Florida." She hesitated. "Are you going—alone?"

"So said Mr Taylor. "There's room for a lady and a gentleman that signed up this morning."

And some time ago called me up a few minutes ago—a man and his wife."

"Oh," said Ginger. The thought of a chaperone, or chaperones, had not occurred to her until that moment. "How far are you going?"

"Just south Miami," said the voice. "Were you interested in joining up?"

"Very much, but I suppose you haven't got any more room?"

"Plenty more," he answered. "There's no worry on that score. But the hitch is, we're leaving tomorrow morning—early."

Ginger sighed an audible sigh of relief.

"That's wonderful. I have to be in Miami by Monday."

"That's easy." He hesitated. "By the way, I hope you're not too particular about my—er—vehicle."

"I don't care what it looks like," she informed quite truthfully, "just so I get to Miami in time."

"You're practically there," he assured her. "What's your address, Miss—" he hesitated questioningly.

"This is Ginger Drake — Miss Drake." She gave him her address in the West Seventies. "Where shall I meet you all?"

"I'll pick you up," said Tony Taylor. "Will seven o'clock be too early? We want to avoid the traffic."

"Seven o'clock will be fine."

"Oke," said the voice. "We sail with the tide then. Auf wiedersehen, Miss Drake."

"Goodbye . . ."

Ginger hung up, and stared for a long moment at the telephone. It was done. For the first time it occurred to her that she was a stranger — the other share-expense guests, strangers. But there would be women along. Leaving the booth, she found herself wondering whether or not she would have gone, anyway, if there had been men. Then she shrugged. In her heart, she knew she would not have. But she told herself that she would. All that counted in life at the moment, was that she reached the Club Caribbean in Miami, by Monday noon.

The other end of the telephone line Ginger had just disconnected was in a bar in West 52nd. Street, that was popular with certain Park Avenue blonde and brunette patrons. It was not a very original bar.

Notice to Tax Payers

The last day for the payment of the Second Instalment of 1946 Taxes without penalty will be Monday, July 3rd, 1946. At the Civic Offices will observe (Dominion Day) Saturday, July 1st, 1946, and with Sunday following it will mean that the time for payment will be curtailed to three days. Under these circumstances it would be beneficial to the Public and much appreciated by the staff if payments could be made between now and Saturday 29th July 1st, and not left until Monday July 3rd, 1946. By following the above suggestion delays could be avoided on the part of those making payments at the office.

Co-operation on the part of the Citizens in this respect would be greatly appreciated.

Goering Undertakes Defence of Germany
Proper, Says Algiers

London, June 26 —(CP) Radio France at Algiers said today Reichsmarshal Goering had been charged with the defence of Germany proper by Hitler and that he already had set up headquarters in Berlin. Goering will direct the Todt organization—which built Germany's West and Atlantic walls —in the building of a new inner line of fortifications, the broadcast added.

Fights Bare-Handed Against Tiger Shark, Fails to Save Pal

Aboard a Coast-Guard Vessel in Caribbean, June 26. (AP)—A U.S. coast-guard officer, Lieut. S. S. Kurtz of Brooklyn, N.Y., waged a bare-handed battle against a monster tiger shark in a vain attempt to save a shipmate, washed overboard from this anti-submarine patrol ship.

Blood from the wounds of the doomed man drifted in the water to him at dusk. Kurtz grabbed the tail of the shark and kicked and pounded until the thrashing maneater released its victim.

The wounded man, was still alive, although frightfully hurt, and grabbed for Kurtz's shoulders.

An American's Close-Up Of a Great Statesman

Winston Churchill, seen in the United States in a panoply of crowds and cheers, is a world figure. Churchill, seen in the House of Commons, is something more—an expert parliamentarian in environment he loves; as inseparable from his instrument as an engineer from his locomotive.

A debate has proceeded for four hours and it is time for the Prime Minister to reply. There he sits on the famous "front bench." The dowdy, mellow old building, coarsely decorated, makes an oblong hall. Rows of red-leather "benches" face each other across a green carpet.

Under the press gallery, as we look down, is a table at which speakers stand, with ceremonial despatch boxes on either side. Every appurtenance has a meaning linked with tradition, like the sacredotal adjuncts of a cathedral. A great gold mace rests in front.

This is Churchill's home. Here he has made his greatest speeches. Now he awaits his turn. He slumps far down on the red leather and puts his short feet upon a table edge before him. Now four other pairs of feet are on the table edge—the feet of some of the most famous politicians in England.

Only here does an American emotionally realize that Churchill is a member of the government team comprising a sort of executive committee of the House of Commons. He is not the executive team himself, as Roosevelt is under the presidential system.

Churchill's shoes are black, gleaming, and apparently fastened by zippers. He is a stocky, rotund figure neatly clothed. His trousers are dark stripes, his coat and vest are black. He wears a black bow tie. There is a touch of Etonschoolboy in his figure and costume. A heavy gold chain crosses his middle. He wears a gold signet ring on his third finger, right hand. He makes notes with a big gold fountain pen. His linen is fresh and gleaming white. Three corners of a folded handkerchief protrude from his coat.

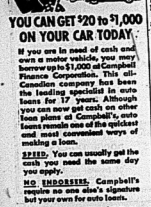
These are details. There is a hush as he rises now and stands quietly beside the table.

His face has an odd contrast. It has a chubby hairlessness. It is a half Kewpie-doll, half bulldog Englishness. He stands with a slight stoop. His head sits tight on his shoulders. There is a fluff of hair at the back and side of his head. Foreshortened from the gallery there is an instant's disappointment because he looks small and portly. Then he speaks, and suddenly dominates the Chamber.



He is talking about the forthcoming conference of Dominion Prime Ministers. His notes are in front of him. They are written in indented paragraphs — like poetry in irregular stanzas. He is dealing with a mighty subject — Empire relations. Few things are closer to his heart. It is one of his great speeches.

He stands with his hands on a despatch box, leaning forward, looking over the tops of his horn-rims. Now he stands with his hands grasping his coat lapels with a firm grip, like a man going up a rope ladder. His voice has its characteristic thickness. There is a half-affected hesitation, a sort of studied prattler. He alternates humor with eloquence.

Eloquence is a strange thing. It is only half the words a man utters. The other half is the man himself.

In Churchill it is his character and a sort of ferocity of faith that lies in him. The Chamber follows him breathless till he is through. The members cry approval. Churchill has made another speech.

UNARMED ABORIGINE SEIZES JAP AIRMAN

Darwin, Australia, June 26 — The first Japanese airman to be captured in northern Australia was brought in by an aborigine.

The pilot had baled out and landed some distance from Darwin when the 18-year-old aborigine stalked him and then finally challenged him. Though fully armed, the Japanese was unaware that the lad was defenceless, threw up his hands and surrendered revolver and ammunition.

The aborigine then kept watch over his prisoner until he delivered him to military authorities.

PORT OF CHERBOURG NOW IN AMERICAN HANDS
GERMANY'S WHITE RUSSIAN WALL COLLAPSING

Thousands of War Prisoners Stream Into Prison Cages

British Open Major Attack on 7-Mile Front Between Tilly And Caen

USE GREAT BARRAGE

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27.—(CP)—The strategic port of Cherbourg now is in Allied hands after "a final day of fierce fighting" by American infantry units, while to the East British, army and infantry have driven ahead several miles towards the Villers Bocage-Caen road, today's communique No. 43 disclosed.

Headquarters described the British armored and infantry assault in the sector of Normandy between Tilly and Caen as a "major attack" on a six to seven mile wide front.

Headquarters said the Germans have lost "not less than 70,000" men in killed, wounded and captured since D-Day.

25,000 Prisoners Since D-Day.

It was estimated 25,000 Germans have been captured since the invasion began.

S. H. A. L. P. described the fighting in the Tilly-Caen sector yesterday as "very fierce in a torrential rain."

The attack came in the wake of a carpet barrage laid down by British and Canadian guns, massed along the front, only eight miles apart. Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent in the field—who has witnessed any fighting in North Africa, Sicily and Italy—said he is a front dispatch last night: "I have never seen or heard such a barrage."

In a later dispatch Munro said tank battles were raging as the German armies ground six or seven miles from Caen.

Despite weather which robbed the British arm of Allied aerial cover, the advance was continuing, according to latest front dispatches.

Huge Amount of Stores

Thousands of German prisoners are streaming into prison cages and a huge amount of enemy equipment has fallen into American hands — with no one yet having time to assess the exact stock of ammunition and supplies captured in Cherbourg.

American forces went in today to clear out the last of the defenders in the arsenal area on the western side of the city, and to mop up isolated resistance around Hardtmast, four miles south of the city.

One of the most stubborn knots of resistance finally broke this morning when a German army colonel radioed that he wished to surrender and was taken prisoner along with 300 others.

About 9,000 prisoners surrendered yesterday. These included Lt.-Gen. Carl Wilhelm Von Schlieben, German commander of Cherbourg, and Rear Admiral Walter Hennecke. These two came out of an underground fortress and gave themselves and 800 of their men up to the American infantrymen who directed the drive seizing the port.

Still other Germans were surrendering today in the final confused collapse of resistance.

Field Hospital Captured

The last dichard defenders—except for groups in the arsenal area —gave up after Von Schlieben and Hennecke had held up the white flag. Von Schlieben had refused a demand on June 21 for surrender, and even after the defences were broken up into isolated groups decided to ask his men to yield.

The American ships captured a German field hospital containing 1,000 wounded.

The final commanders surrendered after American guns had pounded the fortress in which they were directing the defence of the city.

First a lieutenant emerged from a tunnel 30 feet underground, carrying a white flag. He carried a message, that his commanding officer wished to give himself up.

A few minutes later Von Schlieben and Hennecke emerged from the tunnel, with some 800 men and officers following them.

AERIAL ACTIVITY HELD TO MINIMUM OVER NORMANDY

Undisclosed Targets in City of Gottingen Near Kassel Pounded

E-BOATS HIT

By AUSTIN HEALMEAR
Associated Press War Correspondent

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 27—(AP)—Flying through normal and dense clouds which continued through the night after holding air activity to a minimum over Normandy yesterday, R. A. F. Mosquitos attacked German troops south of Caen for the second consecutive night.

Other Mosquitos attacked undisclosed objectives in the German city of Gottingen, about 25 miles northeast of Kassel. One plane was missing from the night forays.

Unfavorable weather over the battle zone again threatened to limit today's operations.

The only other activity reported overnight for British-based Allied air units was that of a half-dozen R. A. F. medium bombers which administered a heavy pounding to a formation of E-boats near the hook of Holland without loss.

The Germans flew fewer than 30 sorties over the Normandy battlefront yesterday and last night. Supreme headquarters announced the Nazis' winged bombs dropped in numerous sectors of Southern England throughout the night, causing heavy damage and casualties. They continued to whir across the channel today.

In spite of the thick weather between 150 and 200 Allied fighters, last night operating from Normandy bases, patrolled the area between Caen and Le Mans, France. They shot down four of the few German planes they encountered. Other fighters patrolling the front area saw not a single enemy plane.

The Allied expeditionary air force announced meanwhile that Mosquitos of one bombing group have destroyed more than 20 German planes—all at night—over the Normandy battle area since the invasion began.

Budget Dates For Changes

Ottawa, June 27—(CP)—Following are effective dates of changes recommended in the budget speech tabled last April:

June 28 — Imported agricultural implements and machinery exempt from 2 per cent war exchange tax.

June 27 — Customs tariff changes effective.

July 1 — Suspension of compulsory savings.

Aug. 1 — Import prohibitions for conservation of foreign exchange to be removed.

Users of Pop, Tobacco, Liquor And Candy Find Taxes Unchanged

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)—The man-on-the-street, the little fellow who chips into the nation's war chest with taxes on tobacco and drink, chewing gum and other miscellaneous luxuries, found that his lot remained unchanged by last night's budget announcements.

With none of the smaller items changed in the budget, he can get his bottle of beer, cigarettes, cigars, candies and other minor "luxuries" without any additional cost. Movie levies and other entertainment taxes also were left unchanged.

If he likes the occasional "nip," the average man will find his liquor prices without increase or decrease.

For beer drinkers, the tax on malt and other ingredients remain the same.

Along with the day-to-day items, taxes also stand as before for luxury goods.

An average tax increase in the transportation from the income-tax schedules of compulsory savings remains unchanged and new exemptions for in-laws.—But, as Finance Minister Ilsley warned in his budget speech, he is expected to increase the additional money in Victory Bonds and other voluntary Savings.

RUINS OF CHIUSI RECAPTURED BY BRITISH TROOPS

5th Army Advancing Along West Coast Reaches Point Ten Miles From Piombino

DRIVE FOR PISA

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 27 (AP)—British 8th Army troops have again driven the enemy from the bitterly-contested ruins of Chiusi, the Allied 5th Army, advancing along Italy's west coast, has reached a point 10 miles beyond Piombino in a slab between Livorno and Pisa, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The 8th Army, after retaking Chiusi, nine miles southwest of Lake Trasimeno, the area where Hannibal once battled up their most vigorous delaying action, shaped on several miles to the northwest.

Chiusi, where a company of South Africans who entered it a number of days ago, was later overrun by German tanks, was retaken and held despite an immediate enemy counter-attack. Fifteen South Africans hiding in the town were rescued.

Seven miles to the northeast the 8th Army drove into the outskirts of Castiglione de Lago, on the west shore of Lake Trasimeno, occupying the village of Vitellino, taking 2,000 prisoners, and inflicting heavy casualties.

Fight on Highway.

Limited advances have been made in the vicinity of Perugia, east of the lake.

Fierce fighting is in progress astride Highway 71, which leads to Siena, about 30 airline miles south of Florence, the communique said. Last night R.A.F. heavies and French troops battling up that road, hit 15 miles north of Trinci, causing fires and explosions which left much of the plant in ruins.

Weather Forecast

Kenora and Rainy River—Strong winds with rain and occasional thunderstorms today and part of Wednesday.

Lake Superior—Strong winds with local thunderstorms and some fog, chiefly in western and northern districts today and part of Wednesday.

Lake Ontario—Strong winds with rain today and part of Wednesday, then clearing.

Budget Free of Tax Increases, Compulsory Savings Off

Excess Profit Taxation Revised; All Duties On Farm Machinery Removed

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 27 (CP) — Elimination of compulsory savings on personal incomes, revision of excess profit taxation to encourage postwar development, and removal of all duties on farm machinery are before parliament as highlights of the 1944-45 budget.

Finance Minister Ilsley in his budget address Monday night outlined a policy which he said was intended to speed Canada's war effort and at the same time pave the way for workable post-war economic conditions.

Giving the country its first war budget that has been free of tax increases, the tall, fair-haired Finance minister, speaking before a crowded Commons chamber, estimated cash requirements for the present fiscal year would reach a record high of $4,000,000,000—an increase of $200,000,000 from the previous year.

Added to this increase was the loss of some $70,000,000 from compulsory savings; but he expressed confidence that voluntary savings through the purchase of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates would make up the difference.

Replaced borrowing requirements for the year were $12,000,000 less than last year—but he warned that the speeded activity of the war would tend to swell the amount anticipated expenses and this estimate is not reflected.

Custom tariff changes and removal of the 10 per cent war exchange tax from farm implements were effective immediately. The suspension of compulsory savings becomes effective July 1 and the removal of import prohibitions under the War Exchange Conservation Act becomes effective August 1.

Main point of the income tax changes was the removal of the compulsory savings provision which has yielded the government the sum of about $110,000,000 a year since it was introduced in 1941.

Deductions Smaller

The abolition of compulsory savings imposed on individuals himself dependent on insurance they carry and similar deductible items, but for unestimated thousands of Canadians the change is going to mean that after July 1 income tax deductions from their pay cheques will be smaller.

In his discussion of income taxes Mr. Ilsley said the rates of tax deduction had been advanced as a reason for absenteeism and unwillingness to work overtime at a time when production was vitally needed. It was recognized that voluntary savings were more flexible and more easily adjusted to individual circumstances than compulsory savings. On this ground the compulsory savings plan was being eliminated.

Need For Saving Greater.

"I must repeat and emphasize that this proposal does not imply that the need for saving is less," he said. "On the other hand the need is greater than ever before."

He outlined other changes intended to remove cases of special hardship.

Relatives who are in-laws now are qualified as dependents relatives; the allowances for children are extended to cover all children de-

COMPULSORY—Page 7

Highlights of Budget

Compulsory savings portion of income tax discontinued from July 1, 1944.

All tariffs from farm machinery as well as 10 per cent war exchange tax are removed.

The Budget has no tax increases.

Borrowing requirements in 1944-45 will be $3,200,000,000 or $200,000,000 more than last year.

Government's cash requirements for 1944-45 are estimated at $4,000,000,000, or $200,000,000 more than last year.

Revenues for the present year are estimated at $2,617,000,000, compared with $2,701,000,000 last year, not including refundable taxes.

Expenditures estimates already before Parliament total $3,152,000,000, or $208,000,000 less than actual expenditures last year.

Estimated decrease in budgetary deficit is $2,535,000,000, about $100,000,000 less than last year.

Large unanticipated expenses in most active phase of the war will increase sum requirements to $5,000,000,000 and make estimated budgetary deficit unimportant.

Tax allowances for children will cover all children dependent on taxpayer, including illegitimate children

In-laws will qualify as dependent relatives for income tax purposes.

Need for voluntary savings is greater than ever before, due to increased requirements and cessation of compulsory savings.

Period for income tax appeals from members of armed forces extended from 30 days to a year.

Losses in any year may be charged back one year or forward three years for corporation or excess profits taxes.

Business concerns granted double depreciation on new capital investment after certain date.

Provision made for rapid depreciation on new assets for tax purposes.

Business firms may borrow on the security of the refundable portions of the excess profits and corporation tax.

One-half expenditure for maintenance and repairs in period to be fixed may be allowed against income of previous fiscal periods in computing corporation and excess profits taxes.

Other details of Federal Budget are found on Pages 3, 5, and 9.

SALVAGE EXPERTS READY TO TACKLE JOB AT CHERBOURG

Expect Enemy Left High Explosives Carefully Hidden in Fallen Port

CHERBOURG'S VALUE

By ALEX SINGLETON
Canadian War Correspondent

On the English Channel, June 24 —delayed—(AP)—Demolition and salvage experts are poised in the channel with a convoy of dynamite ready to clear the dangerous initial phase of turning Cherbourg into a sheltered supply base for Allied forces once the French port falls.

Hundreds upon hundreds of high explosives—mines, booby-traps and under water explosives—undoubtedly have been sown in Cherbourg's harbor and secreted in waterfront facilities by the Germans in an effort to delay the harbor's use for as long as possible.

The importance of swift acquisition of these facilities is obvious. Once the harbor is clear the port will have a dio pour in supplies and troops aboard deep-water vessels without regard to wind and tide —the twin factors which have been the principal bottleneck to delivery.

Allies long have been preparing for that moment. Aboard this invasion armada are specialists for the job—both Britons and Americans. They are men who risked their lives in similar tasks at Naples, savage the Italian port before retreating. Operation at Pearl Harbor, demolition experts who learned the hard way to do their grim time bombs dropped on England.

'German Situation Serious,' Decision Reached Rapidly

Stockholm, June 27 (CP-Reuters) — A German Foreign Office official man, in a frank statement was quoted today by the Berlin correspondent of the "Svenaka Dagbladet" as saying the situation confronting Germany is "very serious".

"Germany must fight in the east, the south and the west and the world powers have massed enormous concentrations of troops and weapons against her", the spokesman was quoted.

"The decision will be reached rapidly.

"The hour has come when it will be seen if this is the last hour for Germany or for her big chance. Now it is all or nothing".

NETHERLANDS MONEY MINTED

London, June 27 —(CP) Allied military forces and Dutch civil officials who will take part in the liberation of Holland will be supplied with Netherlands currency recently minted in the United States, the Dutch official news agency, Aneta, said last night.

Entire Salient Of More Than 100 Miles in Danger

German Army Reels Under One of the Most Terrific Air Assaults of the War

CONVERGE ON MINSK

Moscow, June 27 (AP)—Under one of the most terrific air assaults of the war, Germany's White Russian forward wall formed by the Orsha, Mogilev - Podolskiak - Bobruisk budge appeared to be collapsing today, with the entire salient of more than 100 miles in immediate danger.

Red air fleets from four fronts were ceaselessly attacking enemy reserves, tank formations and forward positions and hitting at bridges and communications behind the fast-faltering lines.

On the ground, four powerful Red armies advancing along a 350-mile front began converging on the White Russian key city of Minsk and its Reich.

The Germans were fighting savagely to hold the great bulge but it appeared a hopeless task.

Closing In Rapidly

Despite this stubborn resistance, the Red army was closing in rapidly on the three bulge cities. Units were driving to the outskirts and entering sectors of both Orsha and Mogilev, the latter at a deep system of trenches and concrete fortifications.

(A CBS broadcast from Moscow said Orsha, next most important city south of fallen Vitebsk, was already surrounded with all means of escape cut off to the Germans).

The great air role is being directed by Col.-Gen. Vershinin, whose planes figured prominently in the capture of Sevastopol. Col.-Gen. Timofey Krukbin, British, 23-year-old commander, Col.-Gen. Ivan Yefimovich, Col.-Gen. N. P. Pashin.

Stormovik planes were blasting the enemy's armored divisions increasingly, attacking the branches and blockhouses in continuous sweeps over Orsha and Mogilev.

Viewed General In Lead.

Constituting the northern arm of the great converging ground forces is Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic front, which with 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Chernikhovsky's 3rd White Russian front, left Vitebsk behind, pahed rapidly at the heels of the beaten Germans between the lakes, swamps and forests of eastern Latvia and western White Russia. Gen. Chernikhovsky was promoted from Colonel General to General, becoming the youngest General in the Soviet Union.

The 1st front is immediately east wes Gen. G P. Zakyarov's 2nd Wn"- Russian front, which is taking in w "nonisiak ry on Mogilev, and Gen Kostantin Kokosovsky's 1st front driving through the valley lands of Gen. Ivan Konev's 1st front upon Bobruisk, one-third of the way between Vitebsk and Minsk.

Red Star Correspondent Pavel Yevelenko, the first newspaperman to enter liberated Vitebsk, reported the roads were thronged with retreating enemies. The correspondent said the Germans had evacuated the city's southward, westward and northwestward, but the Soviet blows of recent days terrorized their plans and they abandoned thousands of women, children and old people.

73,122 KILLED, Wounded, Missing in Italian Drive

Canadian Casualties Were Given as 11,340 Killed, Wounded or Missing

FIGURES BY CHURCHILL

London, June 27—(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill said in the House of Commons today that British, Dominion and Indian army casualties in Italy from the first days of the first landings until the fall of Rome June 4 totalled 73,122 killed, wounded and missing.

The figure represents a total of about 10 months of fighting ended June 4 during which time British units participated in many major engagements, including the battles of Cassino and Anzio beachhead.

Mr. Churchill said his figures included 14,331 killed, 47,966 wounded and 10,825 missing.

Casualties for Air Force and Naval casualties for this period were not available.

Mr. Churchill said it was found impossible to give the figures for the other fighting services exclusively relating to operations in Italy as distinct from other operations of the Navy in the Mediterranean and the other theatres of the Mediterranean, Germany, Eastern Europe and the Balkans.

Mr. Churchill said on Feb. 16 last he gave the House a statement on casualties in Italy up to Feb. 12. At that time the Prime Minister said, British, Dominion and Indian forces had suffered a total of 26,628 casualties, made up of 7,823 killed, 22,382 wounded and 5,708 missing.

NO WARNING GIVEN ERRING CYCLISTS

Cyclists, who persist in riding their bicycles on city sidewalks are finding themselves face to face with Chief Probert and the police station. More especially of a problem are those, who ride bicycles at a fast pace, approaches to and on the footpriges proper, where the sidewalks are narrower, making such practices dangerous for pedestrians. Yesterday a young girl was stopped riding her bike on the footbridge approach and her name was promptly recorded. No further warnings will be issued regarding the riding of bicycles on city sidewalks, violators will immediately be taken into court, Chief Probert promised today.

POLICE WARN YOUTHS TO LEAVE CITY

Something of a recent date of-city was recorded in Belleville Monday evening when two French Canadian lads were apprehended passing from door to door on Great St. James St, seeking food and generally pan-handling. Police were notified with the result Duncan A. Gaillon and Jacques Cougion, both of Ottawa, were apprehended, and placed in the police cell block. After spending the night in the local bastille the two French Canadians were released at which time police suggested they would be well advised to return to their native haunts.

Charges Dismissed Against Sandford

Two charges of breaking entering and theft were dismissed against Gordon Sanford, Belleville, when he appeared before Magistrate J. B. Garvin in city police court today. Sanford had been charged with theft from the National Groceries and also from an Arthur street warehouse on Coleman St. He pleaded not guilty to both charges.

Police investigations revealed Sanford had no part or connections with these crimes, remarked Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan K. C. and immediately R. C. Donnan K. C. asked that the charges be dismissed 'against Sanford, his client. His request was readily granted on the suggestion. Sanford had denied the charges from the time of the apprehension some weeks ago.

New Regulations On Deductions For U.I. Announced

Under recent changes in regulations respecting deductions for unemployment insurance, compensation paid by the employer to the worker in payment in lieu of notice in the case of discharge, or in addition to the sum of voluntary separation, will not in the future be regarded as wages paid by him in respect of which unemployment insurance contributions shall be made. It has been announced to field officers by the commission.

Previously deductions for unemployment insurance purposes had been made on wages paid to the employee following his separation from his employer. Under the new regulations the Unemployment Insurance Act requires that contributions be paid only in regard to the earnings paid in relation to the period of time when a person is actually in employment.

The changes in the regulations does not effect employees who are given remuneration while on leave, either as a bonus or on account of sickness, where leave is given in pursuance of the contract of employment between employer and employee.

Monster Parade To Open Carnival Of Kinsmen Club

Last minute plans for the staging of their annual carnival on Front Street on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of this week were discussed in detail and last minute instructions to personnel were handed out at local Kinsmen meet for their weekly luncheon meeting held in the Hotel Quinte Monday evening. It was the Kinsmen's last meeting until the beginning of the autumn season next September.

From the extensive plans laid down and from the amount of detail discussed, the Kinsmen's carnival is definitely shaping up as one of the outdoor events of the season and one which is certain to be popular with the Belleville and district public. There will be games galore, bingo for everybody and a host of other features for special entertainment.

The parade on Wednesday evening, featuring the C. W. A. C. brass and pipe bands, now on a recruiting drive tour, will start the carnival off with a bang. With the members of C. W. A. C. personnel from Kingston, and augmented by the local contingent, the parade will march down Bridge, the 34th Battery, R. C. A., the C. W. A. C. and the Belleville Collegiate Cadets. The parade will move off from the Belleville Armouries at 7:30 p.m. and proceed to Front Street to Victoria, then down Victoria to Front and east on Front to Dundas St. and return to the Armouries. Following the parade the two C. W. A. C. bands will give a band concert on the Armouries Lawn.

The street carnival will get underway immediately after the conclusion of the parade and there will be 14 concessions for the pleasure of Belleville's visiting public. Some of the concessions will be fortune telling booths, while will be a number of bingo booths and the same number of bingos. Proceeds from bingos go to the employer in lieu of men's Milk for Britain Fund and the Kinsmen Charities.

Up-to-to-date report on donations received through the tag day held a week ago and other contributions thus far to be $1,230.87, with donations still being received. The committee in charge "Buster" Lalbary indicated that the list of donations to cigarettes are being shipped is constantly growing and urged that the good work be kept up.

Obituary

MRS. BESSIE MAUD (STERRITT) TIPPETT AND INFANT SON JOHN WILLIAM

Mrs. Bessie Maud (Sterritt) Tippett, and infant son, John William, formerly residing at 301 MacDonald Avenue, died suddenly in Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, June 26, 1944. The late Mrs. Tippett was 29 years of age.

Wife of Flying Officer J. Raymond Tippett, at present stationed at Moncton View Air Station, the deceased was born in Grey's Mills, King's County, New Brunswick, a daughter of Mrs. Nerion Sterritt, and the late Mr. Sterritt. She had resided here for the past two years, coming here with her husband and family from Moncton, N. B. Her mother, Mrs. Sterritt, resided here with the Tippett family.

The late Mrs. Tippett was a member of St. John's United Church, Moncton, N.B. and during her stay here attended Tabernacle United Church.

Surviving besides her husband and mother are one daughter, Jo-Ann; three sisters, Mrs. Elsie Rand, Alma, N.Y.; Mrs. Lilian Patterson, West St. John, N. B., and Mrs. John Howard, St. John, N.B., and one brother, William Sterritt, Manitou, N.Y.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

WILLIAM JOHN SMITH (Halloway)

The funeral of William John Smith took place from his home at Halloway on Monday afternoon, June 26th., to the Halloway Baptist Church where service was conducted by Mr. R. L. Whan.

Interment took place in Gunter Cemetery and the bearers were Messrs. Leonard Prest, Charles Prest, Blake McMullen, Kenneth McMullen, Fred Carter and Nathan Reid.

Price Ceiling on Strawberries Said Cause of Scarcity of Offerings

It may have been the fact that strawberry patches and paying farmers were not getting a fair price. A well-known Prince Edward county grower stated that he would not bring his fruit to market under the new prices quotations.

Supplies of strawberries hitherto brought in from the Niagara peninsula were cut off with the precision of a sharp knife cutting through butter. Growers in that area which formerly sold them to retailers here at 28c the box can now get this price at their farms.

So it looks as if Mrs. Housewife, unless she has a car and the necessary gas coupons, will not be overrun with strawberries this season, this year unless the proverbial miracle happens.

$2,659,000,000 DEFICIT REPORTED IN BUDGET

Current Revenue Meets More Than Half Expenditure

Cash Requirements For Year Amounted To $5,841,000,000 Ilsley Tells House

PUBLIC PRAISED

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)—For the fourth full fiscal year of War Finance Minister Ilsley Monday night could report on pre-tell budgetary deficit $2,659,000,000.

In his budget speech reporting on the year 1943-44 which ended March 31 last, Mr. Ilsley disclosed Canadian industrial payling and receiving had touched another new high in dollar figures, continuing the climb begun with the outbreak of war.

Total revenues were $2,855,901,000 against $2,319,496,000 the previous year and the total expenditures, $5,560,122,000 against $4,387,194,000.

The figures are not final as books have not been closed, but they represent a close estimate of the actual year's financing. The cruelle disclosed Mr. Ilsley was fairly close to the mark in his forecast for the year in his budget speech of March, 1943. Actually things turned out a little better than he predicted for slightly more than half the total expenditure was met from current revenue and he did not expect as much.

The Dominion's total cash requirements for the year amounted to $5,841,000,000 rather than the total expenditures, because of advances on war purchases, payments of indebtedness abroad, purchase of securities, foreign exchange and other assets.

Cash Deficiency.

Mr. Ilsley said the total increase includes $156,000,000 in the refundable portions of the income and excess profits taxes which go to add to the debt. After taking account of these he arrives at the year's cash deficiency of $2,815,000,000.

"It is this cash deficiency, not the budgetary deficiency, which measures the amount or our borrowing requirements and it is often much the larger amount," said Mr. Ilsley.

"In the past year the cash deficiency was only 70 per cent higher than the budgetary deficit, but in face of five of the war years when we were greatly extending our war effort, repatriating securities and accumulating sterling it was more than double the budgetary deficit."

The cash deficiency was met by reducing cash balances to the extent of $47,000,000 and by borrowing $2,962,000,000. The borrowing proceeds also provided $1,000,000,000 of new maturities in cash and $9,000,000 to reduce the floating debt.

Public Responded.

The Minister commented with satisfaction on the way public responded to appeals to buy Victory and War Savings Certificates, but he warned against a tendency to sell bonds and cash in certificates before they became due. He said this meant selling sometimes before the service of the nation and advised that practice be curtailed until after the war.

Have to Be Exceeded.

The sales of securities to the public totalling $,947,300,000 in two Victory Loans and the continuous War Savings Certificate and Stamp selling were the largest in volume for any year yet.

"But probably it will have to be exceeded in the year ahead," he said.

In his last speech in 1943 the Minister complained there had been too much borrowing from banks in 1942-43. He said that was not healthy and there should be checked by the sale of securities.

This speech Monday night indicated his policy was definitely altered though he made no specific reference to bank borrowing. In 1942-43 borrowing from the public at $1,070,000,000 was less than half the peak attained this year. To obtain the necessary funds the Minister had to borrow from the Bank of Canada and from chartered banks to the extent of $982,000,000.

Canada's gross unmatured funded debt stood at $13,899,000,000 on March 31, against $8,842,000,000 a year earlier. Of the increase 57 per cent was held in Canada and the annual interest charge, now $347,000,000 or an average rate of 2.57 per cent.

Wholely Domestic.

The size of the debt should be placed in perspective. While it had increased national income had also increased, doubled since war started.

It was also wholely domestic. Payments in interest went into the pockets of taxpayers. It was well distributed among the wholly not less than 60 per cent of the income-earners.

"These are reasons why I have confidence in the ability of the country to carry this debt and in the soundness and stability of these bonds as an investment," he said.

Income tax receipts contributed heavily to the higher revenue shown during a 52 per cent gain over the preceding year to $612,000,000.

The national income estimate was up roughly 12 per cent over the previous year, Mr. Ilsley said and apart from pay to the farmer the largest increase was in farm income.

Sales of Bonds, War Certificates At High Volume

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley said in his Budget address Monday night that sales of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates reached their highest volume in the fiscal year 1943-44 "but probably it will have to be exceeded in the present year".

Sales of securities and stamps, including compulsory savings, totalled $3,947,200,000 in 1943-44.

This is estimated that there are at least 2,500,000 persons holding War and Victory Bonds and perhaps more than 3,500,000 individuals holding War Savings Certificates.

Costs of public borrowing operations in the fiscal year 1943-44 are each $100 of securities sold. This was "a good record of accomplishment", by the National War Finance Organization Volunteer Executive Committee and Secretary Loans by Canadian organizations and individuals.

Mr. Ilsley said he wished to record that investors have sold their Bonds or had their Certificates redeemed less than the withdrawing help they had given in providing materials and supplies for the home-front battle against inflation.

"Emergency needs for cash are not the only reasons.

"Unnecessary spending, financed by the turning of Certificates into cash, is quite another. Unnecessary spending at this time is a betrayal of our obligation to the men and women who are fighting and dying in the great battle for world freedom."

A reserve of savings would be of great value after the war when materials and productive facilities could again be devoted to civilian use, and the needs of better-quality goods would be on sale.

Proportion of Debt Held Outside Canada Reduced

Finance Minister Reports Increase in Net Debt of $2,659,421,000

INTEREST RATES CUT

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)— Finance Minister Ilsley, reporting an increase of $2,659,421,000 in the net debt of Canada in his budget speech Monday night, expressed confidence in the ability of the Dominion to carry her debt burden in this case.

"During the war period the funded debt has increased slightly more than three times compared with an increase of seven times under less favorable conditions in the First Great War",

Interest rates had been cut and the proportion of the debt held outside Canada sharply reduced.

Gross unmatured funded debt at the close of the 1934-44 fiscal year was estimated at $10,899,421,000, Mr. Ilsley said.

Other liabilities amounting to $1,760,000,000 against the war expenditures of the country to $12,330,588,000 at March 31. Against these were assets of $3,688,318, leaving a net debt of $8,642,270,000. This was an increase of $2,659,421,000 for the year, the amount of the estimated budgetary deficit.

Mr. Ilsley said he was aware that considerable criticism had been expressed over the growing size of the national debt. The amount of the increase was determined chiefly by war expenditures and there were other factors which had an important bearing.

"In the five years from 1914 to 1919, the debt of that day has increased nearly seven times, but because the average rate had risen from 3.570 to four per cent and the annual interest charges had risen more than nine times", he said.

In addition about one-third of the debt was held against Canada and commodity prices which had more than doubled were about to fall.

"In the present war period the funded debt has increased slightly more than three times and the average rate of interest has declined from 4.33 to 2.57 per cent and the annual interest charges have risen 2 1-4 times", he said.

SPACE-SAVING SCIENCE

Hundreds of thousands of tons of war shipping space have been saved by scientific methods of loading and packing supplies.

Highlights of Budget

Ottawa, June 27 —(CP)— Highlights of the fiscal portion of Finance Minister Ilsley's Budget Speech to the House of Commons on Monday night:

Estimated expenditures for 1943-44 are $5,560,000,000 and estimated revenues $2,701,000,000, indicating a deficit of $2,659,000,000.

Revenues met slightly more than 50 per cent of expenditures.

Gross unmatured funded debt at March 31, 1944, estimated at $10,689,000,000 of which 97 per cent was held in Canada.

While the funded debt has increased slightly more than three times in the past five years the annual interest charges have risen 2¼ times.

National income increased approximately 12 per cent in 1943-44 with the largest relative increase going to farmers.

Successful maintenance of the price control policy through the period of fighting and the subsequent readjustment period will be even more important than in the past and will be at least equally difficult.

Income tax receipts for the year were $612,000,000, an increase of 52 per cent from 1942-43.

It is estimated that at least 2,500,000 persons held War and Victory Bonds and perhaps more than 3,500,000 individuals have War Savings Certificates.

New records in sale of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates may be necessary in the present fiscal year.

Interest on the public debt for the year was $343,000,000, accounting for $54,000,000 of the total $60,000,000 increase in ordinary expenditures.

WOULD CONDEMN OFFICIALS

Mexico City, June 26 —(AP)— Public officials who did not enforce price control measures should be put to death, the Confederation of Civil Organization declared at its annual convention. In a resolution asking for a similar penalty the convention said yesterday that those officials were traitors and should be shot.

500 ALLIED WAR PRISONERS TO CROSS TO PORTUGAL, SAYS REPORT

Irun, Spain, June 26 —(AP)— Spanish border officials said today arrangements had been made for some 900 Allied war prisoners to cross the border at Irun July 20 en route to Portugal, where they will be exchanged in a similar number of Germans. The Allied prisoners will travel to Portugal on seven trains, the officials said.

June's Inspirations

June, the month of many events, the beginning of summer, the beginning of the decline of the sun to reach its lowest point just four days before Christmas, the time of graduation in schools and the opening of the flood gates of happiness and joy for myriads of Canadian boys and girls, June rears its close. It seals the first half of the year and leaves a growing harvest on the hands of the husbandman.

The close of the school year is of course in young lives the outstanding characteristic of June. Strangely enough the school for the young and those growing into their early teens is from that time on their elder brothers and sisters in college. But the youngsters get so much out of July and August that they can scarcely miss the few more days in June which they spend in school more than those a few years older than they.

This month has already sent out of the colleges a goodly company of young people, most of whom are at work or are offering to labor in the harvest fields of this nation at war to lighten the tasks of the farmers whose hands are virtually tied with the many undertakings which fall to them by reason of maintenance or increase of production of every phase of the farm life of rural Canada.

On being sent out from their schools this year and leaving have a parting inspiration in the national task of the war effort. The word duty to these youngsters means more than it did to those of earlier generations. It means practical work in the case of patriotism whether it takes one into the field or the factory.

To those somewhat older and yet in their teens there have come the graduations where merit is awarded a symbol of achievement. In all such ceremonies there are given words of advice from those whose experience in the time of war enrich their knowledge of the real values of life. Students and scholars have been told of life's lessons in discipline and their high calling has been held out for those who realize that character is the paramount achievement of education. As was expressed by the Rev. William McLean, manager and chaplain of the National Sailors' Institute the other day, "In a sense the diplomas received today and any letters of introduction that in future may be given you are passports to life. And a passport, you must not written into any document, which you carry everywhere is what you are yourself." Character he said is the most enduring thing and in the making and keeping of it there is a great reward.

Mr. McLean also pointed out the value of a name which will go with one everywhere and will be profitable to one if we cherish it and let nothing tarnish it."

Those who leave school will find as Mr. McLean said that a man will also be valued for what he knows and pointed to the desire of young boys to know something in which he can excel. He gave a fit example of a merchant navy man who was able to save 31 lives by his handling of a lifeboat after his ship had been sunk because he had learned seamanship with fishermen during his holidays from school and he added that sometimes what a man has learned is sometimes a matter of life and death for himself and perhaps others as it was in this case.

It is such inspirations as these which inspire boyhood and youth in this stirring time of world history when champions of truth and freedom are battling the demons of aggression and selfishness.

Large Harvest in Time of Need

Nature is never the same in her myriad of moods. No two spring seasons or summers are the same, nature has so much variety. But in many parts of the Dominion whatever the aspects of nature, they have generally combined this year for the assurance of a good harvest, better than usual. In some parts there has been lack of rain but hereabouts and elsewhere the rainfall has been adequate.

So the fields are developing the harvests on which much depends in this climactic year of the war which may see the elimination of the German nation from the struggle.

A bumper harvest is what the nation needs for her own, for her soldiers and sailors, seamen and airmen and her great factory by populations who need plenty of food in order that production may be kept up. In this part of Canada the prospects of crops are generally very satisfactory. For this the people are duly grateful and those who have time to aid the farmers are offering their help to gather the crops.

This is the year when it is possible the great problem of feeding Europe may rest upon the American and Canadian nations with the liberation of millions of peoples from the servitude of four and more years under the Hun's armed might. All facts point to the happy ending in throwing off of the yoke of the enemy. In Italy and France important steps have been taken. On the Russian front the Germans cannot impend which will surely free many millions of souls, to enjoy the first taste of freedom in years. Canada wants to be ready for this with a large harvest. She wants no food left ungathered for the demands for food will be great.

The North American Continent has a beneficient climate and it has had security from the ravages of the modern enemies of world society, namely the Jap and the Hun. The countries of this continent therefore feel the call of duty to be ready when the opportunity to help the liberated comes.

Canadian farms with Canadian farmers and with the aid of help from the towns and countryside will be able to join in the rehabilitation and feeding of the countries of Europe.

With the approach of July the high summer season comes with its tasks and its harvests. For this all must be ready. Nature has been benign and kindly as if gladly responding to man's urging and prayers.

Sites Discovered

What are suggested as possible sites from which the Germans may have intended to launch robot bombs against Britain have been captured in the advance upon Cherbourg by United States troops. The plans are described by AP correspondent W. W. Hercher. One was of gigantic proportions and the other about one sixth in size as compared with the first. The larger was that of a concrete ramp 750 feet long and elevated only three feet from one end to the other, the width was 70 feet and the thickness 50 feet. Signs were found that the ramp had been bombed. At the elevated end of the ramp there was a concrete structure about 300 feet long, 120 feet wide and 38 feet high with a tunnel in one end. There was also signs of a control house having walls six feet thick and roof of ten feet in thickness. The AP correspondent says that the smaller installation was a "sort of modified ski type platform" like those attacked in the Pas de Calais area by aircraft. It was cleverly hidden by camouflage so that one could walk over it without noticing it. The ramp was built slightly in the ground and covered with sod. There was also a solid circular platform with square holes sunk into it. It appeared ready for the installation of firing mechanism.

The enemy had spent vast labor on these installations, there being evidence that there was no smaller a staff than 2,000 men at work on the undertaking. The larger installation was far from complete. It had been set in an elevated valley with the trees cleared so that the missiles could be sent in any direction.

Allied engineers are giving these platforms the closest scrutiny.

TABLE TALK

"Sit down and eat!" The dinner's good!" said she.
"Ah, but the better was the winning of it.
The spring-time ploughing of the field," said he,
"The crop too thick, and more than the thinning of it."

"How strange a thought for you to speak tonight!
You've always loved the way I've set the table."
"Yes, but I'm tired, and things aren't going right.
I should have done much more, but wasn't able.

"You see it's this way: dinner is the end,
The close of day, tasks done, with more tomorrow,
But being fences you're too tired to mend
Proves strength is something none of us can borrow.

"Pride's in the doing; in the task complete,
The ploughing and the planting and the growing.
Oh yes, it's good at dinner time to eat,
But still I wish I'd finished with the hoeing."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JUNE 27TH, 1924.

Belleville is to be the home of the Canadian Branch of one of the largest milk by-product manufacturers of the United States, the Mead Johnson & Company of Evansville, Indiana. This is the most important industrial announcement made in the city for some years. A site for the plant has been secured and building operations will be commenced shortly.

At a meeting of the finance committee of the County Council Committee in connection with the United Empire Loyalist Celebration, a statement of receipts and expenditures was submitted and showed that there remains a surplus of $3,133.06. The receipts from all sources were $17,836.45 and the expenditures were $14,-703.39. The grant of $2,000.11 made by the city will be returned.

The Government of Sir Oliver Mowat was sustained yesterday by the electors of the Province of Ontario. Following is a compilation of the latest returns showing the majority of Sir Oliver to be 9 over all the varied elements of the Opposition in a full house: Liberals 51; Conservatives 27; Patrons 15; P.P.A.I. making government majority over all 8. Of the 15 Patrons elected 13 are Liberals and 2 Conservatives and the P.P.A. member is a Liberal. Mr. Meredith, the Conservative leader was elected in London.

The Provincial election here yesterday was very quiet and the vote polled was small. W. H. Biggar, Independent Liberal defeated R. J. Graham Prohibition candidate in West Hastings by 67 votes. In East Hastings McLaren, the Patrons candidate, defeated Mr. Vermilyea, the Liberal candidate by 104 votes. In North Hastings A. F. Wood, Conservative was defeated by Haggerty, Independent-Conservative by 100 votes.

Pyle in Normandy:
German Doctor Taken Prisoner Says Day of Capture 'Best in Army

By ERNIE PYLE

On the Cherbourg Peninsula—(by wireless)—The day after troops of our Ninth Infantry pushed through and cut off this peninsula I went touring in a jeep over the country they had just taken.

This Normandy country is truly lovely in many places. Here in the western part of the peninsula the ground becomes hilly and rolling. Everything is a vivid green, there are trees everywhere, and the view across the fields from a rise looks exactly like the rich, gentle land of eastern Pennsylvania. It is too wonderfully beautiful to be the scene of war, yet it was here parts of Tunisia and Sicily and Italy. Some day I would like to cover a war in a country that is as ugly as war itself.

Our ride was a sort of spooky one. The American troops had started north and were driving on Cherbourg. This was possible because the Germans in that section were thoroughly disorganized, and by now capable of nothing more than trying to escape.

There was no traffic whatever on the roads. You could drive for miles without seeing a soul. We had been told that the country was still full of snipers, and we knew there were batches of Germans in the woods waiting to surrender. And yet we saw nothing. The beautiful tree-bordered lanes were empty. Cattle grazed contentedly in the fields. It was as though life had taken a holiday and death was in itself.

Finally we came to a stone schoolhouse which was being used as a prisoner-of-war collection point, so we stopped for a look. There were 1,300 prisoners, constantly being brought in. And here individual American soldiers who had been cut off behind the lines for days came wandering in to take a whiff in the courtyard before going on back to hunt up their outfits.

Most of the prisoners coming in at the time were from a captured German hospital. Certain Germans had set up shop in a shed adjoining the school and were treating their prisoners, who had slight wounds. At the moment I was there, one soldier had his pants down and a doctor was probing for a fragment in his hip.

Two or three of the German officers spoke very good English. They were in very good humor. One of them, a doctor, said:

"I've been in the army four years, and today is the best day I have spent in the army."

In this courtyard I ran onto two boys who had not slept back of the line for days and being surrounded by Germans.

They were Pfc. Arthur MacDonald, of Yarmouth, N.H., and Pvt. T. C. McFarland, of Southern Pines, N.C., both infantry observers for the Ninth Division's artillery.

They had bunked down the night before in the basement, and woke up they could hear voices all around, and they weren't Americans, either. They looked out and saw a German at a latrine not 30 feet away.

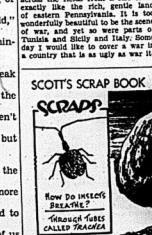
So they started crawling. They crawled for 200 yards before they got out of the danger zone, and they crawled through a field of dead French farmer along the road, and took him in tow.

They figured that French-man," they said, "He was so scared he'd be good for us." They had high-school French and a dictionary between them, and by the time they had that all we wanted was muscle stretching. So we took him to his house. He fried eggs and pork and made coffee for us.

The Frenchman's name was Joe this morning, but that Frenchman we shall remember.

The boys pulled out a couple of hours later, but Frenchman said they were so grateful that I imagine they'd be safe enough from the rest of their lives.

At this time the French in that vicinity had been "liberated" less than 12 hours, and they could scarcely comprehend it. Many of them were relieved, but they hardly knew how to act yet.



As we left the prison enclosure and drove down the road we passed four or five French country people—young farmers in their best clothes—standing in the open-leaning against a nearby house.

As we left the jeep getting our gear adjusted, one of the farmers came forward and spoke hesitantly and timidly. But finally he came up and smilingly handed me a rose.

I couldn't go around the rest of the day hand full afternoon, so I threw it away. Around the next bend, but little things like that do sort of make you feel good about the human race.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HOW ARE YOU BREATHING?

I don't know why it is necessary to call attention to the matter of breathing (writes a public school music supervisor) but it is. Apparently children acquire the artificial chest breathing habit before the fourth grade. Therefore I don't think their music teachers or physical education instructors are responsible, particularly as I know many in my profession who do teach correct breathing. Maybe the primary room teachers, with the best of intentions, start the children off wrong. I don't know. It puzzles me. I guess "natural" breathing does not come naturally to a child but must be taught.

(Signed .... Music Supervisor, Schools)

Some primary teachers probably have the common notion of the laity that chest expansion is the chief feature of correct breathing. This has been emphasized in nearly all so-called physical training, athletics, military training and even in the physical education of yesterday. It is encouraging to note that it is pretty well ignored or eliminated from the elementary training of the present day.

Even this music supervisor who thinks she knows what he is talking about boggled when it came to belly breathing. Diaphragm breathing he calls it. The diaphragm is so practically as important as chest breathing as it is in belly breathing. The diaphragm is the muscle attached to the floor of the body cavity, dividing it into the thorax or chest as it is commonly called and the abdomen. The diaphragm is neither in the thorax nor in the abdomen, but between them.

When the diaphragm, the main breathing muscle, contracts it pushes down the abdominal contents of men — stomach, liver, spleen, intestines, and pushes the belly forward. It draws air into the lungs. When the diaphragm relaxes, its pressure on the abdominal contents is removed, the expanded belly which has helped contain them, the rebound of diaphragm, and this natural, easy expiration results. By voluntary effort still more air may be forced out after the lungs have emptied naturally, but this brings into play numerous other secondary muscles of respiration as well as the diaphragm.

On request, accompanied with stamped envelope bearing your address, I'll send a copy of the pamphlet (signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No drugs can be made to cure by correspondence or by instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

HOW ARE YOU BREATHING?

Answer—"Belly Breathing" which can do no one any harm. Say do many invalids or semi-invalids much good.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Type of Mattress

Which type of mattress would be best for infants 18 months and 6 months old, cotton filled or inner spring?

(R. R. T.)

Answer—No difference from viewpoint of health or hygiene. Generally a mattress reasonably firm and unyielding is better for any one.

Bed sag in the middle it is advisable to insert a cross-board under mattress and springs to prevent the sagging.

Ringworm

Our daughter had an obstinate ringworm infection of the hands from handling papers. After she had tried prescriptions by several physicians without success I got one of the Whitfield ointment, described in your pamphlet put up. Her friends were hoping I would send her "Oil Doc Brady". But in a little over a week her ringworm was better and the hands rapidly became smooth and normal and the trouble has not been back at it since.

(Mrs. C. H. A.)

Answer — Thank you, Mrs. Ann. Pamphlet on Ringworm—Foot Itch mailed on request and other questions answered without hearing your address.

Iodine

I have been taking iodine as you recommend, but I'd like to know if it is safe to take it with high blood pressure. Would it harm one who has rheumatism or heart trouble?

(M. H.)

Answer — One with rheumatism, heart trouble or with high blood pressure should leave such a question to the family physician. On request I am glad to send any reader who provides himself with self-addressed envelope Instructions for Taking the Iodin Bath. This is recommended for men, women and children, especially in areas where soil, food and water are low in iodine.

Baby Book Blank

Your Baby Book is a most satisfactory guide—I have raised three fine specimens with it. Babies are silent—can a breasted baby contract any disease via the mother's milk?

(Mrs. M. D.)

Answer—Few diseases can be transmitted thru the milk to the nursing infant. Mothers having syphilis, tuberculosis, syphilis may nurse the child and the child may contract tuberculosis but the necessary antitoxin in the milk.

Fanatical Nazi Resistance Seen In Cherbourg

By DON WHITEHEAD

(AP War Correspondent)

Cherbourg, 11:31 a.m., June 26—(AP)—Cherbourg is a shell-shattered, smoking battleground over which rolls the thunder of retaliating enemy artillery shells and the sharp rattle of machine-guns as American soldiers dig in to consolidate their hold on the city.

At 11:30 a.m. today we cannot say with certainty that the battle is over.

The American troops who stormed up the peninsula and fought their way into the city late yesterday have virtual control, but there is the smoking ember of fanaticism who have not surrendered.

They are holed up in caves and in concrete pillboxes on the beach, fighting to the last, while the bulk of the German army's artillery now is throwing heavy shells into the city's outskirts apparently in hopes of hitting the wooden box on which I am writing in the hope that it will reach from the English Channel.

During the last 24 hours American troops have taken 2,240 prisoners, and hundreds of others were streaming into the prisoners' cage today.

Rumor Nazis Order Berlin Evacuated

Lisbon, June 27 — (AP)—Twenty Hungarian newspapermen arrived here last night on a German airliner said Nazi authorities had ordered the evacuation of Berlin.

Hitler's Reichschancellery was among many important buildings smashed or damaged "during the most terrific bombardment air attack Berlin has ever had, made last Wednesday by American, Liberator and Fortress," the BBC reported Sunday in a broadcast recorded in New York by CBS.

"Pictures taken during the attack show more than 20 explosions or bombs in the heart of Berlin," the BBC said.

"They damaged more than 30 separate industrial plants, four railway stations, five marshalling yards and many important government buildings, including the Reich Chancellery, the Gestapo headquarters, the war office and propaganda headquarters."

National Income 12 P.C. Higher Than in 1943-44

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)—Following is a partial text of Finance Minister Ilsley's Budget speech to the House of Commons in session tonight:

In laying before the House the Government's proposals for meeting the financial requirements of the present fiscal year, it is proper that I should give some account of the economic conditions and the financial results of the fiscal year which closed on March 31st.

The whole of the fiscal years was marked by the highest levels of war of production and employment. The employment index on April 1, 1944, was almost exactly the same level as on April 1, 1943, despite the withdrawal to the armed forces. While there were marked changes in individual industries, the over-all variation was only in the amount of the inevitable demand for labor and in the incidence or shortages. This is a condition which is very expedient to persist as the European military operations gain in scope and speed. . . The total demand for labor, as registered at the National Selective Service Offices, has already mounted far above the levels reached in Spring.

Farm Incomes Up.

Roughly estimated, national income in 1943-44 was something like 12 per cent higher than in the preceding fiscal year. Aside from the pay and allowances of the armed forces, much the largest increase relatively was in farm incomes. Salaries and wages, too, are more moderately while investors' and other enterprisers' income experienced still smaller increases. In contrast, rising costs were bringing about a decrease in corporate profits.

Consumer spending also increased through the year, and was in part reflected in an increase in retail sales which remained marked in country stores. It was reflected also in increased sales in the main zone of our luxury and quasi-luxury taxes.

Prices rose, and the cost of living index moved up 1 1-2 points during the year though on April 1 it had fallen somewhat from the then higher levels established last fall. There are other occasions for discussing at length the government's policy of controlling prices, wages and salaries. . . However, I believe that that policy in its broad principles has the support of all parties. . . . The successful maintenance of that policy, through the period of active military operations in Europe and in the readjustment which will follow, will be even more important to this country than it has been in the past and that it will be at least as difficult. . . .

Big Jump In Revenue.

Total revenues for the year, including $156,000,000 of refundable taxes, were $2,856,000,000, an increase of $637,000,000, or 29 per cent over the revenues of 1942-43. Of this increase, total tax revenue at $2,562,000,000 supplied $455,000,000.

The receipts from the personal income tax were $1,170,000,000, $370,000,000 or 52 per cent, above those for the preceding year. Of these receipts, an estimated $115,000,000 was refundable. The large increase arose from the application of the higher rates of the 1942 amendments to the full fiscal year 1943-44, and the substantial increase in taxable incomes thereafter.

Revenue from the corporation tax amounted to $317,000,000, about 10 per cent less than in the previous year. In which year, yield had been shockingly large because the first year of 3 had been moved forward. The excess profits tax yielded $480,000,000 slightly more than in 1942-43, reflected the application of the higher rates of the 1943 budget for a full fiscal year. Succession duties at $15,000,000 were also slightly higher.

Revenues from indirect taxes, with the exception of those levied in the yield of which there was little change, were substantially higher. Customs duties produced $168,000,000, an increase of $49,000,000. The net tax receipts from sales tax were $305,000,000, $72,000,000 more than the previous year. The war exchange tax yielded $119,000,000 or $20,000,000 increase. These are substantial increases. It should be remembered, that the government itself, as a payer of taxes on its war and ordinary purchases, contributed a considerable part of the increases.

Excise taxes, other than the sales tax and war exchange tax, yielded $315,000,000, an increase of $54,000,000. Taxes on cigars, cigarets and tobacco provided more than half of this increase, while those on beverages, candy and chewing gum, transportation and communication and the proceeds of sales of excise stamps which replace the retail taxes, contributed substantially toward it.

C.N.R. Income Surplus up.

Among ordinary non-tax revenues, which totalled $140,000,000, the Post Office, as a result of last year's increase in rates, produced a revenue of $61,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000. The return of investments was $23,000,000, $11,000,000 more than in the previous year. Among special receipts, the income surplus of the Canadian National Railways, amounted to nearly $36,000,000, or almost $12,000,000 over the figure for the previous year.

Ordinary expenditures were $630,000,000. The interest on the public debt was $342,000,000, and, of the total increase in ordinary expenditure of $5,000,000, it accounted for $54,000,000. To the remaining increase or $15,000,000, the cost of loan dislations and amortization contributed $5,000,000; compensation to the provinces in respect of the guarantee of revenues from gasoline taxes, $4,000,000; unemployment insurance $1,000,000 increased expenses of the Department of National Revenue $3,000,000.

Capital expenditures, at $3,000,000, were slightly reduced. Special expenditures amounted to $37,000,000, and were $6,000,000 higher than in 1942-43. Expenditures in connection with the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and the wheat acreage reduction bonus accounted for $24,000,000 of the increase. Government-owned enterprises required somewhat more than $1,500,000, about the same as in the previous year. Other charges came to $64,000,000 and were slightly higher than in the previous year.

Under the War Appropriation Acts, including special expenditures were $4,625,000,000, an increase of $901,000,000 over war expenditures for 1942-43.

$3,189,000,000 Expenditures.

Total expenditures for the year thus were $3,360,000,000, an increase of $973,000,000 over those of the previous year, but slightly less than the amount originally set in the budget of last year. Total revenues for the year, exclusive of net realizable taxes were $2,701,000,000. Deducting these, we arrive at the amount of all budgetary deficit of $3,858,000,000 —the amount by which the net debt was increased during the year.

The proportion of expenditures met out of current revenues was slightly more than 50 per cent, is somewhat higher, it will be found, than I predicted last year.

The budgetary deficit is the amount by which the net debt increased during the year. It is not the deficiency, that is the amount which we had to borrow to meet our cash requirements. As contrasted with total expenditures of $3,360,000,000, our total requirements for cash in Canada were $5,441,000,000. The difference between this sum and the amount of our expenditures, is made up of the amounts required to make recoverable advances in connection with war purchases, to pay off indebtedness abroad, and to purchase securities, foreign exchange and other active assets.

Revenue $2,562,000,000.

Our first source of cash to meet these requirements was our revenues which produced $2,562,000,000 in cash. The refundable portion of the income and excess profits taxes provided $156,000,000, net receipts in the trust, insurance and superannuation accounts contributed $50,000,000 and miscellaneous receipts and credits resulting from the working of various accounts, $230,000,000, the remainder, $2,936,000,000, is the amount of the cash deficiency.

It is this cash deficiency, not the budgetary deficit, which measures the amount of our borrowing requirements, and it is often much the larger amount. In the last year, the cash deficiency was only 10 per cent higher than the budgetary deficit, but in three of five of the war years, when we were greatly extending our war program, repatriating securities and accumulating sterling, it was more than double the budgetary deficit.

Over the five years as a whole, it was nearly 50 per cent greater than the budgetary deficit. I lay some emphasis on this distinction because not only has it been of great importance in the past, but it is likely to be very significant in the future.

To a small extent, the cash deficiency was met by drawing down our cash balances by $43,000,000. The total cash borrowing of the year, $2,962,000,000, met the remainder, and in addition provided $80,000,000 to meet bond maturities in cash and $96,000,000 to reduce the floating debt. In addition, securities to the value of $996,000,000 were renewed or converted, not including the annual renewal or $33,000,000 of school lands debentures.

Of the cash obtained by the issue of new securities, $20,000,000 came from the increase in the Treasury bill issues, $190,000,000 resulted from the sale of $200,000,000 two-year notes to the chartered banks less a reduction of $30,000,000 in the deposit certificates outstanding; the remainder, $2,732,000,000, was the proceeds or borrowing from the public.

War Savings Certificates

Yield $47,000,000

War Savings Certificates, together with the accrued interest thereon, yielded $47,000,000 net, non-interest-bearing certificates $1,000,000 and sales of Victory Bonds $1,684,000,000. . . .

Sales of Securities and Stamps, including conversion sales, by the National War Finance organization amounted to about $3,947,000,000. Of this total, sales to individuals, excluding those in the special names canvass, amounted to $1,239,000,000 and the number of applications on the occasion of the Fifth Victory Loan rose to $3,000,000.

2,500,000 Bond Buyers.

This is the largest volume of securities which has even been sold to the Canadian public in any year, but probably it will have to be exceeded in the present year. Further, bonds and certificates now are held by more people than ever before. It is estimated that there are at least 2,500,000 persons holding war and victory bonds, and perhaps over 3,000,000 individuals holding War Savings Certificates.

The costs of our public borrowing operations are very low considering the magnitude of the loans, and the number of individual transactions. In the year ended March 31, 1944, costs incurred by the National War Finance Committee, with respect to the sale of Victory Bonds, and War Savings Certificates and Stamps, amounted to only about $7 cents for each $100 of securities sold, that is, seven-eighths of one per cent of total sales.

Record Accomplishment.

To achieve such outstanding results at this cost, is, in my opinion, a record of accomplishment indeed. It is a record which is made possible only by the voluntary services of the tens of thousands of people who form the voluntary staff of the National War Finance Organization, by the tremendous energy and enthusiasm they bring to the discharge of the wartime responsibility which has been entrusted to them by their fellow-Canadians, and by the unremitting and whole-hearted support given to our Victory Loans by business firms, by the press, the radio, by labor, by financial men and by labor, agricultural, and other organizations, societies and groups throughout the country.

Without the aid which the record of our war financing is not only a record of which we can be proud, but a record which we can all share. I have referred to the fact that subscriptions to the Fifth Victory Bonds they bought during the campaign, and that many people are presenting War Savings Certificates for redemption. I should like to say here a further word of thanks to the organizations who now own Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. . . .

Buying Bonds On Credit.

Emergency needs for cash are one thing. Unnecessary spending, financed by the sale of bonds or certificates into cash, is quite another. Unnecessary spending at this time is a betrayal of our obligation to the men who are risking their lives and dying in the great battle for world freedom.

Buying bonds or certificates should always remember that every dollar invested is a great value to the individual and to the nation after the war. When the time comes, these facilities can again be devoted to civilian use, and the goods and services will be on sale than are available today.

At March 31, 1944, the gross unmatured debts on which interest had to have been $10,689,000,000, of which 67 per cent was held by individuals. The net debt at the same date was $8,942,000,000. The annual interest charge on the funded debt was $274,000,000 or an average rate of 2.57 per cent. on March 31, 1939, the average rate of interest on the funded debt was 3.43 per cent. in addition to the funded debt, there are outstanding bonds and debentures, guaranteed by the government of Canada, in the amount of $695,000,000, the equivalent of $17,000,000 during the year.

Size of Debt Not Alarming.

From time to time, concern is expressed over the growing size of the national debt. The increase in our national debt as a result of war should be viewed in perspective. There are other considerations than the amount in which is determined chiefly by the necessity of war expenditures.

In the five years from 1914 to 1919, the debt of that day had increased nearly seven times, but because the average rate had risen from 3.979 to 5.022 per cent the annual interest charge had risen more than nine times. Further, about one-third of the debt was payable outside the country and a substantial portion of the debt was in tax-exempt securities. Liquidity prices had more than doubled, and were about to fall.

In the past five years, while the funded debt has increased slightly more than three times, the average rate of interest has declined from 3.53 to 2.57 per cent., so that the annual interest charges have risen 2 1-4 times. . . .

No Tax Exempt Bonds.

If we take into account the revenues received by the government from the increased interest charges have increased only a much smaller amount. Much of the debt now payable outside the country has fallen due or will be scarcely more than three per cent; there are no tax-exempt bonds, and we have every expectation of a post-war price level not seriously lower than the present.

I do not wish to push historical comparisons too far; they do give some perspective and draw attention to significant facts. I would emphasize rather that, while the national debt has increased, our national income, and with it our capacity to carry the debt, has fully maintained at the beginning of the war.

I would point out that the debt is almost wholly domestic. What is paid in debt charges goes into the pockets of taxpayers whose taxpaying capacity is thereby increased. We have, through the great efforts of War Finance Committee and as a matter of deliberate policy, succeeded in distributing our new borrowing very widely so that the interest on the public debt will be paid, not to a few institutions and men of wealth, but to probably not less than 60 per cent of the income earners of this country. These are reasons why I have confidence in the ability of the country to carry this debt and in the soundness and stability of these bonds as an investment.

Protest Canadian Ruling Over Pilots

Ogdensburg, N.Y., June 26—(AP) The Ogdensburg Pilots' Association appealed today to U.S. Senator Edward R. Mead (Dem.-N.Y.) for assistance in protesting a Canadian ruling that all ships, both Canadian and American, must employ Canadian-licenced pilots between Prescott, Ont., and Montreal.

The Association, through F. Hugh Burns, President of the Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce, wrote to Mead that the "incompetence of the State Department" in the matter had placed the livelihood of its members in jeopardy and requested his help in seeking modification of the regulation.

Capt. William Dessert, Association member, asserted that the Canadian ruling prevented an American pilot from flying his trade on vessels of the St. Lawrence "even though it is an international waterway."

CANADIANS PAID IN DIRECT TAXES 56.7 P.C. REVENUE

115 Millions Taken in Last Year Will be Refunded After War

SYSTEM PRAISED

Ottawa, June 27. (CP)—Canadians in the fiscal year 1943-44 paid in direct taxes on incomes and profits 56.7 per cent of the total Dominion revenue compared with 38.2 per cent in the last pre-war year 1938-39, Finance Minister Ilsley said in his Budget address, Monday night.

Total revenue for 1943-44 was estimated at $2,856,701,000, an increase of $536,200,000 or 23 per cent over the previous year or 460 per cent over 1938-39.

Mr. Ilsley said that of the total revenue in 1943-44, it was estimated that $155,000,000—of which $115,-000,000 is in personal income tax—will be refunded after the war under provisions of the Income War Act and the Excess Profits Tax Act.

This is in addition to the $70,-000,000 refundable out taxes collected in the previous fiscal year, making a total to the end of 1943-44 of $225,000,000 repayable after the war.

A prominent feature of the overall picture for the year was again the large part played by direct taxation," said Mr. Ilsley.

"This form of tax is generally recognized as being most equitable, since it is possible in levying it to take account of family responsibilities in the case of the individual and impose a burden in proportion to the taxpayer's ability to meet it.

"When levied on corporation income at high rates under both the excess profits tax and the corporation income tax it assures that no abnormal or unreasonable profits should be derived from production for the war effort".

War Expenditures $4,665,192,113

Ottawa, June 27. (CP) — A White Paper tabled in the House of Commons Monday night by Finance Minister Ilsley when he delivered his Budget speech showed that of $4,800,000,000 appropriated for war expenditures and mutual aid in the fiscal years 1943-44, $4,665,192,113 was disbursed.

Of this sum, $40,586,500 was for loans, advances and investments treated as active assets and the remainder, $4,624,586,613, was classed as war expenditure.

The 1943-44 total of $4,665,192,113 compared with $3,782,480,512 in 1942-43; $1,382,480,828 in 1941-42; $778,424,302 in 1940-41 and $197,393,-794 in 1939-40.

Major 1943-44 expenditures were by the armed services—Army $1,-235,445,000; Navy $369,827,000 and Air $622,000,000. Munitions Department outlays were $725,000,000.

Counted among active assets were more than $20,000,000 for purchase of railway equipment; +$5,372,000 for the acquisition of capital stock in the Eldorado Mining and Refining, Ltd., and $13,779,000 for the Canadian Wool Board, Ltd., which purchased supplies for Canadian needs.

Air Expenditure.

The Air department expenditure for the overseas war establishment was increased from $23,666,000 in 1942-43 to an estimated $384,726,000 in 1943-44. This was largely explained by an increase in the number of squadrons for which the Dominion has assumed responsibility, involving an increased expenditure of about $308,000,000, and by the assumption of a greater proportion of about $50,000,000.

Charges under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan dropped from $366,987,000 in 1942-43 to $295,550,000 in 1943-44.

"This apparent decrease merely reflects the transfer of certain of these costs as between Canada and the United Kingdom, the gross expenditure for the plan for 1943-44 totals approximately $670,950,000 has been dedicated and treated as a recoverable advance to the government of the United Kingdom in accordance with the responsibilities assumed by the two governments under the terms of the agreement," said the White Paper.

Total outlays of $270,850,000 is an adjustment for the United Kingdom's share of the expenditures made by Canada between April 1, 1942 and March 31, 1944; offsetting this there was a mutual aid total of $62,000,000 in credits to the United Kingdom for the same period for adjustments during the same period under the mutual aid agreement".

Taking expenditures by other than the War departments, the White Paper said it was not possible to fight on without war workers out involving nearly every government department.

Of the $1,000,000,000 appropriated for mutual aid, $315,000,000 was spent by March 31, 1944. Of this amount $723,154,000 was for Australia, $169,000,000 with Australia, Russia, China, the British West Indies and India also benefiting.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Private and Mrs. E. R. Wheeler wish to announce the engagement of their older daughter, Joy Elaine, to Harold James, son of Mrs. J. R. Rowley and the late Mr. Rowley, of England, the marriage to take place July 10th., at four p.m. in the Emmanuel Church, Belleville.

Miss Phyllis Turney left yesterday to visit friends in Chicago, Ill., and Rochester, N.Y.

Mr. Percy Fisher, of Detroit, Michigan, is visiting in Belleville, for a few days.

A charmingly arranged afternoon bridge and tea was held at the Belleville Golf Club on Saturday, with Mrs. Len Fozard as convener. Eighteen tables of bridge were in progress, prizes being won by Miss Margaret Kelly and Mrs. W. H. Patterson, consolation. Many people came for tea other than those playing bridge.

The regular luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at La Salle Hotel, Kingston, on Monday, was addressed by Group Captain Bell-Irving, R.C.A.F., officer commanding Trenton Air Station.

Among those attending the Parks-Adams wedding in Wellington on Saturday were, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bovay, Mrs. Charles Adams, all from Belleville.

Mrs. Mac Hawley, Smiths Falls, is a guest at the Quinte Hotel, this week.

Mrs. K. H. Burgis, who has been associated with the Canadian Bank of Commerce staff here, left this week to join her husband, LAC. K. H. Burgis, at Toronto.

WEDDINGS

SPARKS—CORBY

Mohawk Reserve.—A quiet wedding took place in Christ Church, Tyendinaga, at 2.30 p.m., Thursday, June 22, when Dora Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Corby was united in marriage to Gerald Garnet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Percy Sparks, North Fredericksburg.

The bride wore a gown of turquoise sheer, with white accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of pink and white peonies.

She was attended by Miss Laurine Doreen, who chose a frock of pink sheer, with white accessories, and carried a bouquet similar to the bride's. Francis Leween was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, where covers were laid for fifty guests.

TRUMAN—HANNA
PARKER—HANNA

Tabernacle United Church was the scene of an impressive ceremony on Saturday afternoon, June 24, at two-thirty o'clock, when the Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Myers performed a double wedding in the presence of seventy guests. The twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hanna were the brides, Dorothy Catherine being united in marriage to WO2 Douglas Parker, Moncton, N.B., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Parker, Toronto, and Doris Luella, to PO. Lawrence R. Truman, Mountain View, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Truman, Brandon, Manitoba.

Gracing the altar and chancel and forming a lovely floral setting were the red and white peonies and orange blossoms in a colorful array of Summer bloom. White satin ribbon marked the guests' pews.

Mrs. M. P. Duff presided at the console of the organ and played softly throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register. Soloist for the occasion was Miss Phyllis May.

Given in marrige by their father, the brides were lovely pictures in similar gowns of white sheer and French lace, fashioned with sweetheart necklines, long form fitting bodices, full skirts and tight fitting sleeves ending in points over their wrists. Finger tip veils of bridal tulle illusion fell in graceful folds to their waists from Mary Queen of Scots headdresses adorned with orange blossoms which had been worn by their mother and their aunt, Mrs. J. Cooke, at their double wedding twenty-one years ago this June. They carried arm bouquets of Bettertime roses and baby breath.

Attending Dorothy Hanna were Miss Vera Keegan, as maid of honor, and Barbara Hanna, as bridesmaid. The former was attired in a rose taffeta and net model and the latter in turquoise blue. In their hair they wore floral bandeaus, misted with shoulder length veiling and of matching shade to their dresses. They carried Colonial bouquets.

Mrs. Leslie Truman, as matron of honor to Doris Hanna, and Miss Lois Sutherland, as bridesmaid, were both wearing pink, the former in a lace and net gown and the latter in taffeta and net. Both had similar headdresses to those of the other attendants and of matching hue to their dresses. They also carried Colonial bouquets. Marlene Cooke, cousin of the brides, was a winsome little flower girl in a floor length frock of heaven blue taffeta and carrying a nosegay of early Summer flowers in dainty pastel shades.

Groomsman for PO. Truman was his brother, FO. Leslie Truman of Fingal, and attending WO2 Parker was Robert Hanna, brother of the brides. Ushers were Armstrong and Donald Boyle, cousins of the brides.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the brides' parents, when a buffet luncheon was served. The brides' mother received the guests attired in an effective ensemble of lilac sheer accented with white accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the mother of WO2 Parker wearing turquoise blue with brown accessories and corsage of red roses. The mother of PO. Truman was not present for the occasion.

On the wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, both brides donned brown suits, Doris choosing yellow accessories and Dorothy having white.

On their return PO. and Mrs. Truman will reside at 4 W. Moira Street, in this city, while WO2 and Mrs. Parker will take up residence in Moncton, N.B.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. H. Belfry and daughter, Trooper and Mrs. Elliott, Mr. Geo. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Hoffman, of Port Colborne; Mrs. May Stewart, Mrs. B. Cooke, Mr. A. Stamp, Toronto; George Cooke, R.C.A.F., Montreal; Mrs. E. Blom, Montreal; FO. and Mrs. Truman, Fingal; Mr. and Mrs. J. Cooke, Peterborough.

PARKS—ADAMS

The home of the bride's parents in Wellington, was the scene of a lovely early Summer wedding on Saturday, June 24, at three o'clock in the afternoon, when the Rev. J. P. Lane united in marriage Reta Marie Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Adams, to Gordon Rae Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Parks, Bloomfield Road. The room in which the impressive ceremony was performed was a bower of beauty with its baskets of peonies in multi-colored hues.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was an attractive picture in a street length sky blue sheer model fashioned with a Chantilly lace yoke and shirred bodice. She wore a small white turban and matching accessories and carried a bouquet of pink Delight roses.

Miss Jean Foster, of Bloomfield, was bridesmaid, and was attired in a charming ensemble of pink silk jersey complemented with white accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. Ross Parks, brother of the groom, attended his brother.

The bride's table was decorated with low bowls of seasonable flowers and silver baskets of peonies and centred with a three tiered wedding cake. Serviteurs were Mrs. Rex Huff, Mrs. Beverly Beals, Mrs. Wm. Gibson, Mrs. Jack Ogilvey, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. Oscar Bovay, Mrs. Wm. Davern and the Misses Mae Greer, Nancy Davern and Eva Burley. The bride's mother chose for the occasion a heaven blue English imported lace gown, white accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother wore midnight blue crepe accented with white accessories and corsage of Bettertime roses.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride selected a flowered beige silk dress and beige accessories. On their return the bridal couple will reside on Bloomfield Road.

The groom's gift to the bride was a walnut veneer cedar chest; to the bridesmaid, silver candle holders, and to the groomsman carved bookends and ash tray.

Out-of-town guests were present from Consecon, Belleville, Kingston, Picton, Toronto, Aubrey and Dewittville, Quebec.

HISLOP—MURPHY

In St. Peter's rectory, Trenton, on June 22, the Rev. Father O'Neil officiated at the marriage of Margaret Josephine (Josie), only daughter of Mr. Thomas Murphy, and the late Mrs. Murphy, of Bancroft, and James Lawrence Hislop, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hislop, of Shaunavon, Sask.

The bride wore a street length dress of white silk jersey with white accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Lawrence Murphy attended the bride dressed in a Chinese laquer ensemble with white accessories and corsage of pink roses.

A luncheon was served to relatives and close friends at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Lawrence Murphy, of Trenton.

After a short trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Hislop will reside at Ajax, Ont.

KELLY—MULLEN

In St. Mary's Church, Ottawa, on Saturday morning, June 24, at ten o'clock, Christine Janet Mullen, became the bride of Flight Lieut. J. M. Kelly. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. J. Mullen and the bridegroom, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Kelly, of Campbellford. Rev. C. Braceland officiated. The organ was played by Mrs. E. Stapleton.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. James McKee, and was attended by Miss Phyllis Merrill. Pilot Officer Joseph J. Kelly was best man for his brother Flight Lieut. M. Gelfand and Flight Lieut. A. Tilley acted as ushers.

The bride wore an afternoon dress of Venice blue with a shoulder veil of matching hue. Her corsage was of red and white roses. The bridesmaid wore pale rose and hat to match with corsage of sweetheart roses.

Following the ceremony the reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 135 Sherwood Drive. The bride's mother received in a gown of sheer, her aunt, Mrs. Graydon Hughes in blue, and the groom's mother, in gold silk jersey.

The young couple left for Muskoka, the bride travelling in navy and white jersey and blue hat. They will take up residence at 214 Metcalfe Street.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Kelly, Campbellford; Miss Loretta Kelly, Goderich, Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick, Belleville; Miss E. M. Fenlon, Port Arthur; Mr. McLean Donald, Campbellford, and Flight Lieut. J. Snider of Gimley, Manitoba.

SMITH—CROSS

St. John's Anglican church, Tweed, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty Summer wedding on Friday, June 23, at 2.30 p.m., when Stella Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Mr. John Cross and the late Mrs. Cross, of Deloro, became the bride of Murney Clayton Smith, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Murney Smith, of Madoc, Rev. Mr. Robinson was the officiating clergymen.

Given in marriage by her father, the charming bride entered the church of the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin. She was lovely in a gown of heavenly blue chiffon fashioned on long torso lines. She wore a matching hat and veil, and white accessories. Her arm bouquet was of American Beauty roses, baby breath and fern.

Mrs. Murray Empey, sister of the bride, was matron of honor in blue crepe with beige accessories and carrying an arm bouquet of pink and white roses and fern.

Mr. Murray Empey was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents in Madoc, to about one hundred guests. Mrs. Smith, mother of the groom, received the guests with the bridal couple, in a blue figured crepe with white accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by Mrs. Tom Deline, of Sulphide, sister of the groom, who was wearing a gown of misty grey crepe with mauve accessories and corsage of mauve sweetpeas.

The bride's table with its lace cloth was centred by a three-tier wedding cake, flanked with silver vases of white rose buds and white candles in silver holders.

Following the reception, the happy couple left on a honeymoon to Belleville, Toronto, Niagara and points west, the bride travelling in a gown of rose crepe with beige accessories, beige sport coat and rose hat.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside on Marmora Street, Madoc Village.

The flowers in the bride's and matron of honor's bouquets were from the prize rose garden of Mr. Frank Smith, Madoc, uncle of the groom.

HANSEY—BROOMFIELD

The wedding took place on May 13th., in a London, England Anglican Church of Miss Kay Broomfield, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Broomfield, Earlscourt, London, England, to Ernest Hansey, R.C.A.S.C., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansey of Cannifton, Ont.

As the bride's father was absent with the R.A.F., she was given in marriage by her uncle. She was a lovely picture in her wedding gown of long floral satin designed in pale tints and fashioned with slight train. She wore an elegant headdress of pale pink flowers made from feathers and misted with veiling of the same hue which fell to her shoulders. She carried a sheath of pink roses.

Attending the bride as maid of honor, was her aunt, wearing a floor length dress of pale blue taffeta and a floral headdress of matching shade. She carried a sheath of irises.

Acting as junior bridesmaids were two nieces of the bride dressed prettily in pale pink crepe frocks trimmed with blue French knots and Peter Pan collars. Atop their heads they wore dainty Dutch caps and carried sweetpeas in pastel hues of pink, blue and mauve.

Groomsman for the occasion was Cpl. Cluyston, R.C.A.F., brother-in-law of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. A lovely wedding cake, beautifully decorated with a large heart, doves and initials of the bride and groom, was made possible in wartime England through the kindness of the bride's friends. Telegrams were read by the groomsman and toasts were proposed.

The bridal couple left on a short wedding trip, the groom having ten days' leave from his unit.

KEHOE—BENNETT

St. Charles' Borromeo Church, Read, was the scene of a pretty wedding at nine in the morning on Saturday, June tenth, when Margaret, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett, Yorkton, Sask., became the bride of Joseph Gerald, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Kehoe, of Read.

Rev. Father Coyle, P.P., of Read, performed the ceremony and said the Nuptial Mass, which was served by Terry and Kenny Kehoe, brothers of the groom.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Henry Bennett, looked lovely in a two-piece suit of navy blue and white silk crepe, with a picture hat of navy blue trimmed with lace and ribbon and with matching accessories. She carried a white prayer book with long streamers.

She was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Thos. McGrath, of Point Anne, dressed in a pale blue silk crepe dress with matching hat and accessories. She also carried a white prayer book with streamers.

Mr. James Kehoe, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Thos. McGrath and Francis Kehoe. Mr. Willie Hanley, organist, played the wedding music and sang appropriate hymns during Mass.

The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely gold necklace; to the bridesmaid, a pearl rosary; to the groomsman and organist, silk ties.

After the ceremony, the wedding party proceeded to the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Kehoe, where a wedding dinner was served to the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The couple left on the train for a trip to Ottawa, Gananoque and other eastern points. For travelling, the bride chose a pale blue dress of silk crepe with hat to match.

On their return they will reside at Read.

DULMAGE—McMILLAN
POSTE—McMILLAN

Trenton.—Two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McMillan, 248 Sidney Street, Trenton, spoke their marital vows before Rev. Ross C. MacLean, B.A., at St. Andrew's Presbyterian manse, on Monday afternoon, June 26.

Shunning the double wedding idea the ceremonies were conducted at half hour intervals.

At three p.m., Miss Geraldine McMillan, attractively attired in a street length white silk jersey frock, with white hat and matching accessories and corsage of red roses, was united in marriage to Adrian Leroy Dulmage, of Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dulmage, Picton, Ont. She was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth McMillan, wearing blue silk jersey, matching hat and accessories and carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses. The groom was supported by Rodney Dulmage, of Picton.

At 3.30 p.m. Miss Ethel Viola McMillan, Reg.N., was united in marriage to Kenneth Irwin Poste, of Prescott, son of Mr. Richard Poste and the late Mrs. Poste, of Belleville. She also wore white silk jersey with matching hat and accessories and corsage of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Ruth. A brother of the groom, Mr. Ray Poste, of Belleville, was groomsman.

Following a reception for the immediate families, at the home of the brides, the happy couples left for points east.

Mr. and Mrs. Dulmage will take up residence in Trenton, where Mr. Dulmage is manager of the Lipson Dry Goods firm, while Mr. and Mrs. Poste will reside in Prescott.

Oxygen Lessens Reactions From Electric Shock Treatments.

While deaths from the shock treatments of mental disease are rare, nevertheless there occur a number of reactions that make the patient greatly dislike or fear continuing shock treatment which may require many treatments to obtain results or learn definitely that the shock treatment will not help the patient. Some of these reactions are headaches, nausea and vomiting, and mental confusion. There may occur also sprains and broken bones.

Of the various forms of shock treatment—insulin, metrazol, and electric—the electric appears to give fewest reactions and is over in less time so that patients who have tried the various methods usually prefer the electric shock method.

In the Journal of Nervous and Mental Disease, Dr. Anne Holovachka reviews observations on 178 electro-shock treatments without use of oxygen and 125 cases in which oxygen was given. A mask was held over the nose the instant the current was sent into the electrodes. The oxygen was maintained at 8 liters (quarts) per minute until cyanoses—blueness of skin disappeared, which did not usually last longer than four minutes.

What was the difference in results where oxygen was and was not used during treatment with electric shock?

Dr. Holovachka states that even more cases should be studied before this question can be properly answered but that there was no doubt that the patients who were given oxygen with the electric shock withstood the shocks with fewer reactions and that the oxygen is especially helpful when there is a heart ailment present.

That the oxygen lessened the number and severity of the reactions occurring with shock treatment is shown by the following figures.

"One hundred and seventy-eight electric shock treatments without oxygen resulted in 54 complaints of headaches, 5 cases of persistent cyanosis, 75 confusional states which lasted for six hours after treatment, and 14 attacks of nausea and vomiting".

Of 125 treatments in which oxygen had been given there was just 15 complaints of headache, no cyanosis, 1 confusional state and 1 case of nausea and vomiting.

The fact that the electric shock treatment with oxygen lessens the number of reactions will make electric shock treatment even more popular with the patients and the patients' families.

Fashion Flashes

MAKE IT A POINT to look both pretty and cool as you work about the house on a summer day. To help along there's a swell red or brown and white striped seersucker pinafore that buttons down the back, has shoulder ruffles, big patch pockets, gently gathered skirt, and ricrac trim.

Good friend for town is a frock done in shantung or linen in black and dark colours. It has a deep square neckline, brief sleeves, side buttoning to the hipline and a belt that ties in a bow at the side. It's the sort of frock that is so easy to dress up with a big sparkling clip, big dark hat and long gloves.

Many versions of the long skirted dinner dress are evidence of the revival of this type of frock. Youthful and dashing is a long skirted dinner dress of heavy black and white striped crepe, the lines used in horizontal formation. Above the high waisted slim skirt the bodice has a triangular cutout midriff section, a cowled neckline and winglike shoulder width.

Good idea for smart evenings is the jaunty short boxy jacket in bright red wool with a scattered star design of black beads. The jacket, which is very full in back, is collarless with a high neckline.

Nice way to give a new look to a large hat of black straw, is to mist it with veiling with varicolored chenille dots.

Made with an eye to trousseau wear is a set of gown, slip and panties in white satin with embroidered cut-outs in a wedding bell design.

BUSINESS RULES EASED BY BUDGET SAYS J. L. ILSLEY

Industry, Business Able To Plan for Post-War Operations With More Certainty

CHANGES DETAILED

Ottawa, June 27 — (CP) — Industry and business will be enabled to plan for post-war operations with a greater degree of certainty in some of the tax changes announced in Monday night's budget have the effect anticipated by Finance Minister Ilsley.

While calling for an even greater mobilization of the nation's financial and productive resources for war this year than in any previous year, the Minister proposed changes in the excess profits and corporation tax law designed, in part, to overcome the handicap which war taxation places on the post-war planning of individual businesses.

It was not a time, the minister said, for the excessive — as distinct from the making — of post-war plans. There was other work for everyone in production.

"I am concerned only with clearing away some of the uncertainties of fiscal policy," he said, "opening the way for business firms, both large and small, to proceed on as definite as possible a basis, with the drawing up of plans for the post-war conversion and expansion of industry and trade on which employment after the war will depend."

To the basic industry of agriculture, the budget assures duty-free imports of machinery.

To firms that are heavily through the excess profits and corporation tax fund, which would otherwise go into reserves or post-war development, it offers an opportunity to spread possible losses in the period of conversion to peace over a period, one year back or three years forward and so reduce their tax payments.

Charge Against Profits.

To concerns which have been unable to keep their plants in repair and have paid tax on profits which would otherwise have been spent in maintenance, it provides an opportunity to charge half of such expenditure against the profits on which they are taxed at high profit and high taxes.

Business inventories also will be permitted to assign the refundable portion of their wartime taxes as security for loans to finance post-war plant expansion. Hitherto these repayable sums have not been assignable.

The granting of new businesses and the expansion of existing businesses are designed, in part, to the degree of uncertainty is expected to be encouraged by two other provisions.

One assures new businesses a tax-free rate on profits on first year operations at 40 per cent of profits.

Profits Adjusted.

Standard profits are to be adjusted upward by five per cent of the increase of capital employed under another amendment. Hitherto the only upward adjustment, possible was when share capital was increased.

More allowances against taxable income are to be granted include gifts for carrying on research to encourage development of new markets. Formerly research had to be directly related to the concern's business.

Business taxpayers making new investment in depreciable assets will be allowed, after a date to be fixed later, to write off the investment at an accelerated rate, thus depreciating more than they otherwise would during the period of high taxation and spreading the benefit from the investment over a longer period.

Pending a review of the impact of these and mining and prospecting at the Dominion-Provincial conference to be held soon Mr. Ilsley said it would be premature to make changes in that field.

2 MORE BODIES RECOVERED

St. Thomas, June 26 —(CP)— It was learned here last night that three more bodies have been recovered from Lake Erie, bringing to 10 the number found since the capsizing of the cabin cruiser Olga in Port Stanley June 4. Four still are missing.

Compulsory Savings Elimination Means More Money in the Pocket

Ottawa, June 27 (CP)—Elimination of the compulsory savings portion of personal income tax, estimated at $140,000,000 by Finance Minister Ilsley in his budget speech last night, means a saving, about $100,000,000 more a year in the pockets of Canadians.

With it they have a stern warning that voluntary savings will have to be stepped up to meet the country's financial requirements.

Removal of the compulsory savings plan, introduced in 1942 and the source of about $300,000,000 in available funds to the government since that time—was the particular feature of the income tax changes and ranked among the top features of the 1944-45 budget.

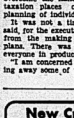
With it Mr. Ilsley announced intention to introduce other changes in income tax legislation designed to remove some inequalities and hardships which bear on taxpayers on which relief has been sought—such as income from life annuities and the overlapping of income and succession duties in certain cases—are to be made the subject of study by a Royal Commission.

Elimination of the compulsory savings will be felt, it is felt, by the amount by which payroll deductions will be increased is dependent largely on the amount of insurance or similar allowable expenses which the taxpayer has to offset the savings for which he is liable.

Examples Given.

Using as examples taxpayers with no insurance or deductible expenses, a married person with no dependents with an income of $1,000 has been liable for an annual tax, including compulsory savings, of $265. Now his annual tax will be $245.

A married man with no dependents, on the same basis and with an income of $2,000 has been subject to a total tax of $438 and this will be reduced to $373. A married man with two children and a $2,000 income has been subject to a $212 tax. This will be $178.



Proposals to increase income tax exemptions in the low-average brackets received attention, but no action from Mr. Ilsley. He drew comparisons between Canadian taxes and those levied in other countries and said that in the low income groups the position of Canadians was not unfavorable.

Removal of the compulsory savings plan, however, removed a source of deductions was hoped to combat the tendency toward absenteeism and hesitancy to work overtime which hampered war production.

Another amendment provides for persons over 65 years with incomes of not more than $5,000 to make immediate application for the refundable portion of their taxes. Compulsory savings did not apply to persons with incomes under $3,000 when they made returns.

Officials said there would not be additional withholding. Application would have to be made.

pendent on the taxpayer for support and include illegitimate children; persons employing a housekeeper in supporting a dependent child are given an additional tax credit of $108; and married persons separated but not divorced may claim $150 credit through supporting dependent relatives in a domestic establishment.

The regulations covering deductions for medical expenses have been broadened to include expenses incurred outside Canada and to allow the taxpayer to claim for any 12-month period ending in the calendar year.

Employees who receive a lump sum amount on the death of a service may spread this over five years as income rather than having to consider it as income in a single year; regulations affecting alimony payments are eased; and increased tax assistance is provided blind persons. Interest Reduced.

Interest on taxes not paid on the due date is reduced from five to four per cent and on contributions through Trade Union dues to an approved pension fund may be deducted from income. Persons more than 65 years of age who are not in receipt of income of more than $5,000 a year may make immediate claim for the refundable portion of their tax held by the government.

Mr. Ilsley announced also that the government proposes setting up a royal commission to make recommendations on the taxation of life annuities and similar types of income and in cases of hardship resulting from combined income tax and succession duty in the case of the death of the chief shareholder of a private company with a large earned surplus.

Effect of the changes proposed in the corporation income tax and excess profits tax are less immediate, but are mainly directed at providing means of stepping up employment when it is most needed at the period of conversion from war to peaceful industrial activity. Date to be Set by Order

Two of the important provisions in this category — allowing double depreciation on new capital investments and permitting the charging to a previous year of deferred maintenance and repair work — are to be effective at some future date to be set by order-in-council.

The ultimate rates and no idea of when this period would be.

He said the provision for allowing a basis-back of deferred maintenance would meet the need of many businesses which had, because of shortages of labor and materials or pressure of production, postponed repair work and whose profits had thereby been inflated, leading to increased taxes.

More generous treatment of firms which conduct research programs also was proposed by the minister. Current expenses will be allowed in the year in which they are incurred. This step, Mr. Ilsley said, is hoped to give firms increased confidence to tackle the problems of conversion. The provision enables a business to charge a loss back one year, or carry it forward three years.

"As a further post-war encouragement to expansion the minister outlined a proposal to allow firms in approved cases to use the refund-able portion of their excess profits tax as security in obtaining loans for expansion purposes.

New businesses which pass the past suffered from an uncertainty as to the corporation income and excess profits tax law they will have to meet received attention in a provision establishing a flat rate which, for corporations, will be 40 per cent.

The minister spoke of suggestions that "drastic changes" should be made in the tax structure as it affects mining and oil producing industries. While the government was well aware of the importance of a comprehensive and long-term program such a plan should be worked out in collaboration with the provinces and would be a topic of discussion at the forthcoming provincial-Dominion conference.

Oil Shortage Acute.

Oil shortage and shortage was acute and in an effort to find new supply source special aid was being offered under restricted conditions.

In introducing the tariff changes, in which interest is keen in the removal of duties and war exchange tax on farm implements, Mr. Ilsley outlined the general tariff policy of the government.

"There is general agreement among Canadian officials and representatives of other countries," he said, "that Canada's view of the need for a high tariff wall to be torn down and agreed unshackling of world trade" has been premature.

"The government continues to have the most lively appreciation of the importance to our economy, and, indeed, to all other trading countries, of entering a post-war world which has been freed, or is assuredly being freed, from within the extraordinary wartime restrictions we have made, for example, on high tariffs, quotas, import licensing and other restrictive and discriminatory trade practices which so paralyzed and dwarfed world trade in the inter-war years".

Indicates Direction of Govt.

The time had not yet come when Canada could present comprehensive tariff changes, the government wished to indicate the direction in which it was faced and to give agriculture some assurance on the condition it might experience in the post-war period.

"Canadian agriculture will be faced with important questions not in the post-war period and if it is to take full advantage of them, its costs of production should be at the lowest practicable level," he said.

The removal of customs duties and the 10-per-cent war exchange would affect a lengthy list of articles, most of them of the luxury and semi-luxury class; but officials said today it was not anticipated that repeal would mean any brisk movement of these articles from the United States to Canada.

FARMERS GIVEN HELP IN REMOVING IMPLEMENT TAX

Steps Being Taken to Remove Duty on Materials Used in Manufacture

70 TYPES AFFECTED

Ottawa, June 27 — (CP) — Removal of the 7½ per cent duty and the 10-percent war exchange tax on agricultural implements and cream separators was announced by Finance Minister Ilsley in his budget address Monday night.

Steps also are being taken, Mr. Ilsley said, to remove duties on materials used in the manufacture of agricultural implements.

Other tariff changes include three new items providing for duty—free importation of certain heating kinds, equipment for storing and transporting milk and dairy and certain chemical preparations.

Provision is made for duty-free entry of certain materials heating elements used in high temperature furnaces and the items covering machinists', engineers', surveyors' and draughtsmen's precision instruments are widened to include parts.

The nickel chromium content requirement for duty-free grid bars and rods for the manufacture of electric resistance wire is reduced from 60 to 50 per cent.

Imports From U.S.

Practically the only country from which agricultural implements are imported into Canada is the United States. The total reduction affects some 70 types of implements and equipment and spare parts on which Canada pays duties now ranging to 35 per cent.

A duty of five per cent on imports from the United States, or other most-favored-nation country, on articles which enter into the cost of manufacture of almost all agricultural implements and machinery in the list affected has been withheld pending hearings for manufacture of articles of steel.

A duty of $1 a ton on pig iron and $2.75 a ton on iron or steel rods or bars used in the manufacture of the customs duty paid on materials used in the manufacture of agricultural implements has been reduced to 99 per cent.

Twine Duty Free

Provision also has been made for duty free entry of articles which enter into the cost of manufacturing twine for bailing farm produce. This twine is used principally for hay and grain.

Items, previously subject to a five per cent intermediate tax which now will be free are: Chain for agricultural purposes; sprayers and dusting machines; bulb sterilizing machines; pruning saws; pruning shears; animal dehorning instruments; fruit and vegetable grading machines; fruit and vegetable grading machines; fruit and vegetable washing and wiping machines; fruit and vegetable packing and sizing machines; machines for topping vegetables; machines for bunching and tying vegetables; machines for bunching and tying nursery stock; machines for bunching and tying cut flowers.. machines for lidding boxes; egg-grading machines and feeders and complete parts of these articles.

Items Listed

Previously 7½ per cent and now free: harvesters; mowing machines; reapers; reaper-mowers; combines; rollers, farm, field, lawn or garden; soil packers; cultivators; harrows; orchard harrows; rakes; horse-hoes; scuffers; manure spreaders; windrowers; manure hay ledders; hay presses; potato diggers; potato planters; fodder or feed cutters; ensilage cutters; grain crushers.

Grain or hay grinders; post hole diggers; snathe; stumping machines; land packers; seed or reeping hooks; hay or straw knives; edging tools; grain hoes; ragged rakes; incubators for hatching egg; brooders for rearing young fowl; fanning mills; peaviners; corn husking machines; threshing machine separators; windmills; complete parts of these articles and agricultural implements and machinery, not otherwise specified.

Milking Machines Free

Previously 10 per cent, and now free: Milking machines; centrifugal machines for testing butterfat, milk or cream; certain equipment for farm lighting plants and complete parts of such machines.

Previously 12½ per cent and now free: Cream separators, steel bowls for cream separators, Complete parts of cream separators.

Previously 15 per cent and now free: Portable ovens with boilers for farm purposes; horse powers; aluminum for use in egg-graders. Complete parts such equipment.

Previously 25 per cent and now free: Grain loaders or elevators (capacity not more than 40 bushels per minute.) Complete parts.

BANCROFT

Mason Constructs Public Swimming Pool on York River

Bancroft, June 27—John Charles Albert Ciana, a native of Switzerland, born in the village of Vaud, high north of Geneva, came to Canada eight years ago accompanied by his daughter and son. He purchased a parcel of land in Monteagle township erecting a home for himself and family near Monetow.

Being a stone mason by trade, this is the type of home he erected the lower part showing the natural stone erection, while the upper half and gables are plastered. The main floor and upper floor are built entirely of concrete and the inner walls plastered and painted. Since the home was built Mr. Ciana has also completed a stone balcony on the one end of his home. The place is beside the banks of a huge fireplace which is large enough for Mrs. Ciana to stand in and by this means he is able to heat his home and the cooking of his cooking, although he has a small range for auxiliary work.

Mr. Ciana was born here parents in Vaud, Switzerland but was educated in the village in which he was but three years of age. He was reared by relatives and when somewhat older was taken by the government authorities into a trade, the latter giving him a thorough stone masonry but he recalls: "It wasn't hard for him for it seemed to be in his blood" as his father and seven uncles were all in the builder's trade as architects, builders, and stone masons each one. He speaks the French language fluently as he was schooled in the French district. He can also speak excellent Italian and is quite understandable in English having only learned the latter language after coming to Canada. Had the misfortune of losing his wife in the Old Country seventeen years ago and has been quite handicapped in establishing and maintaining a home for himself and family. His expert stone work was duly appreciated or known to the public in any large degree until last summer, when the skill of his son Antoinne and other workers to erect a public swimming pool on the York River, Bancroft. This work was so outstanding in this part of Hastings and district as to be kept busy in Bancroft on construction.

Bancroft — Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Flower of Renfrew, Ontario, spent the week-end in Bancroft as guests of friends made during their previous residence in Bancroft over a year ago when Mr. Flower was in charge of the United Church field at Bancroft and neighboring districts. Sunday June 26th marked the second anniversary of the opening of the newly erected church at Paudash Lake and Mr. Flower had the privilege of officiating at this service. The choir of St. Paul's United Church, Bancroft, came out to Paudash Sunday afternoon to assist in the service.

Members of Bancroft Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 468 held their Annual Church Parade from their Lodge room to St. Paul's United Church at 7.30 Sunday evening June 25th Rev. Robert McLaughlin, minister of the Church was assisted by Mr. N. R. Flower officiated at the service and delivered a very impressive address of keen interest to the craft especially. The choir rendered special music which was all made for a splendid service.

Mrs. Crocket and Miss M. Brooks of Morrisburg are visiting at the home of Mrs. W. A. Dillon of Bancroft.

Flying Officer Arthur M. Hewitt, Mrs. Hewitt and son Bill are visiting at the home of Mrs. Hewitt's mother, Mrs. W. A. Dillon of town.

Mr. W. R. Wiggins, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Blatherwick and Bobbie, and Mrs. R. G. Kellar were business visitors to Belleville on Thursday.

Mr. Thomas Woods of Toronto is renewing acquaintances in Bancroft and district. The latter is visiting his former residence for some years.

Miss Dorothy Fuller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fuller of town, is confined to the home suffering from a severe outbreak of poison ivy.

Sergeant Arthur Ray is home on leave in Bancroft with his wife and family.

Officers, N.C.O.'s and other rank of "A" Company of the Isle of Bin. Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment stationed at Bancroft under command of Captain Alec Rook left by bus for Coe Hill Sunday morning to carry out field manoeuvres and also attend church in Coe Hill Sunday morning.

Private Donald Spence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spence of Bancroft is reported missing, overseas Friday evening, having been invalided from the seat of action. He enlisted with the "Hasty Pees" in 1940 going overseas in 1942 having been in Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Dodgers Outscore Yankees, Giants

New York, June 27 — (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers outscored the New York Yankees and Giants, 5-1-0 in a three-cornered game which was the feature event of a war bond show staged by the three greater New York teams under the arc lights last night.

An estimated crowd of 50,000 people purchased over $56,500,000 in war bonds to watch the three local clubs meet in one game for the first time in baseball history.

The game was a regular nine inning affair with each team having six turns at bat and six appearances.

Score by innings:

Dodgers	0	0	0	0	0	2x	—5	6	0
Giants	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	4	0

Batteries—Dodgers: Branca (7) and Owen, Hayworth (4); Yankees: Page (7) and Hennegan; Garbark (4); Giants: Allen, Seward (8), Polli (9) and Mancuso. Winning pitcher-Gregg, losing pitchers-Lyons and Allen.

Toronto, June 27—(CP)— There isn't much similarity between baseball and lacrosse, but on the Vancouver they've found out that basketball strategy can be applied to lacrosse with seeming success.

Joe Hall, Intermediate basketball coach whose team took the B. C. title last winter, has been teaching to the boys in a few basketball plays, and they've been taking to them like a canoe takes to fish. As a matter of fact, they got so proficient, whether from the basketball or other reasons, that they handed the Dominion championship Westminster Salmonbellies their first defeat of the season.

It's reported his men hadn't been any too eager about the new system—but it produces a winning combination things will be looking up for all concerned.

And speaking of know, Joe? It may start a new fad in the lacrosse field that badly needs something to pep up the game and the customers.

New York, June. 27. (AP)—That $15,000 bonus the Red Sox paid the young Dick Callahan of New Orleans has stirred up fresh talk that such payments don't give independent league baseball clubs a chance to sign kids that develop right in their own backyards. . . It seems that the winter baseball major-league post-war committee discussed a proposal to eliminate bonus payments, giving the player a cut in the sale price when he moved up to the big time.

Since nothing has been done yet, why not substitute the old draft rule "territorial rights? . . . In that way each minor club would have a first chance to sign any prospect in a designated territory. . . Then some other club wanted him badly enough to pay a big bonus, okay, but it would also have to pay the Club whose territory was invaded —say, 50 per cent of the amount given the player. . . See any objections?

BROWNIES HEAD EAST WITH LEAD OF FOUR GAMES

Must Overcome "Yankee Jinx" if They Wish to Win Flag

AN OPEN DAY

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

It's the St. Louis Browns on the first ballot in the popularity contention but Luke Sewell's men still have to prove they can whip the "Yankee Jinx" if they're going to win their first American League pennant.

Four games out in front of second place Chicago and four and a half ahead of Joe McCarthy's New Yorkers and Boston, virtually tied for third, the Brownies head east for the second time with the shadow of the Yankee dictatorship over their horizon.

They open their eastern trip to-morrow against the World champions when they have been able to whip but three times in seven.

Three times since 1922 the St. Louis club has managed third place but never has it generated the coast-to-coast support it is getting this year. The cross roads and by-ways have awakened to the dramatic thrust of the only team in either major league that has never won a pennant.

Seventeen more games remain to be played between the Browns and Yankees and the St. Louis club must step up the pace against New York to hold its top rung.

Both leagues enjoyed a second straight open date today but resume action tomorrow with a full chart.

FREE-HITTING SOFTBALL GAME WON BY SWACOS

"East-Enders" Score Eight Runs in Second Frame to Practically Cinch the Game

SCORE IS 15-10

With one team or the other scoring runs in all but one frame the SWACO girls downed Universal Jasies 15 to 10 in a free-hitting Belleville Ladies' Softball League tilt played at the Armouries lawn Monday evening.

In winning Tommy Colden's "East-Enders" further cemented their lofty perch as the league leading team by chalking up their fourth consecutive win in as many starts.

After Universal gathered in five runs in the initial frame, the SWACOS bounced back with no less than eight counters in the third. The second was the only scoreless inning in the seven played. Helen Tuttle hit and scored both she and Rita Halfrett in the third to make the count 8-7 and Universal forged ahead again in the fourth when Irene Golden walked, Allison singled and Reeves doubled. From then on it was SWACO all the way as Ev Reid and Ken Underwood hit doubles to score two for Colden's gang in the fifth while Pete Haslip, L. Pinkett and Ev Reid hit one-base blows in the sixth and Dot Rowbotham came through with her second double, a Pinch-hitting in the top of the seventh Irene Golden doubled with two away as SWACOS added three more. Jean Cornea's home run was the only Universal counter after the fourth inning.

Pete Haslip hit an early round tripper for SWACOS, while M. Allison and J. Cornea poled out four-masters for the losers.

Rita Halfrett started on the mound for Universal with Marg Donaldson taking over in the sixth. Ev Reid went the route for the league-leading SWACOS.

Score by innings:

SWACO—Levere lf.: Allin ss.: Skene c.: Haslip 3b.: Pinkett 1b.: Cornea rf.: Halfrett cf.: Hickson 2b.: Tuttle cf.: Reid p. and Rowbotham p.
Universal	0	5	0	0	0	3	2	0	0
SWACO	0	8	0	0	1	4	2	0	x
Universal	502 201 0—10 runs 11 hits
SWACO	008 022 3—15 runs 12 hits

The Typographical Error

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly.
You can hunt till you are dizzy,
but it somehow will get by.
Till the formagare off the presses
it is simply never still it keeps;
It shrinks down into a corner and it never sits or peeps.
That typographical error, too, small for human eyes,
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.
The boss he stares with horror,
then he grabs his hair and groans;
The copy-reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing you can see.

What's the Holdup?

Sometime ago the Kiwanis Club issued a challenge, directed primarily at the Rotary and Kinsmen Clubs, suggesting a golf match be played to determine the service league championship of the community. There was a sinister silence in both the Rotary and Kinsmen camps until yesterday when Jim Matt Currie, president of the Kinsmen Club, called in to say the Kinsmen were talking through their collective hats.

The Kinsmen accepted that challenge well over a week ago, but there has been no word received from the Kiwanians Bruce Latimer, Jack McVeigh, Ted Rose or Jack Hagerman and it is my reply, that was loud enough to be heard, "certainly" from one end of the town to the Kinsmen Street Carnival.

Of course if the Kiwanians would accept the rebuttal and suggest the Kinsmen play somewhere this week they'd have the Harry Rollins golf course and company over the 9th and 18th holes and we couldn't conduct a carnival and play softball at the same time. Or could they?

Still Hoping

Out in Peterboro they are still pondering over the erection of a new stadium for the town. The latest on the subject comes from Peterboro Examiner sports writer Jack Ferrier, who, as in Peterboro they are fond of calling the erection of a hockey arena and civic auditorium, they have wanted for that a sum in the neighborhood of $250,000 will be needed to finance the proposition. The Kitchener Record's sport columnist has it all figured out how the deal could be put all that is necessary, he suggests, is to get the municipal council to the approval of the Municipal Board, to submit a bylaw to the ratepayers providing for the issuing of debentures to raise the required sum. "The city treasurer," remarks the optimistic scribe "would then be empowered to issue a $250,000 debenture at any three per cent. Several of the insurance companies in the district would take considerable of the debenture since it is a city-backed proposition. Now suppose Kitchener was to add one mill to the tax rate, an amount of approximately $40,000 a year would be realized. It would be possible then to take care of the interest and provide a $20,000 sinking fund each year. At the end of 12 years, the debenture could be retired." Sounds easy, the way he describes it all we pass it on for the attention of the local committee."

Softball Sayings.

Tommy Colden's SWACO's chalked up their fourth consecutive win in many starts in the gals' loop, by beating Universal Moulded 15 to 10 in a free-hitting contest Monday night and now are in the lead spot alone.

A rather unfortunate situation arose prior to the game when three teams were on the field ready to play—Universal, SWACO and the Belleville "Bombardettes", who were rained out last Friday night. Actually the Bombardettes have two rained-out games and therefore are entitled to be included in the number of games played. However, it took considerable explaining on the part of Secretary Eddie Schreider to convince the Mountain View management they weren't really being cuchred out of their turn in the league schedule.

As for last night's game it was loosely played with many errors and passed balls hobbling up the proceedings and assisting in the mounting of the score, that totalled 26 runs. Home runs were hit by Jean Cornea and M. Allison of Universal and Pete Haslip of SWACO.

A New-Comer

Cheri Vallina, who wrestles Bob Wagner in the curtain-raiser of Wednesday night's all-star wrestling show at the Hume Arena, comes to Canada's wrestling ring as "wrestling champion of the South". Of course the big drawing attraction are Vern Baxter tangling with Al Dunlop as featured in the bout reading that should see plenty of action.

Lives in Hope

Some time this week—or next—Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, hopes to sit down with Arthur Meeker, president of a long-term contract with the Chicago baseball club. The present contract expires this year. "I'd rather not wait until August to do it," remarks Jimmy. "They either want me, or don't want me, and in this kind of a race, whether the finishes first or last shouldn't make much difference. I think the matter should be decided before the season is half over. Should pastels lose favor for their owner this month, or at least immediately after cup-return in mid-July, I'd be a prospective manager of the White Sox in the late spring of 1945, provided Meeker hasn't already has managed the team longer than any other 1944 in the club's history.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE RETAILER

The retail merchants of Canada are doing a fine war job: Hit by the manpower situation by a shortage of merchandise; by the necessary complexities of rationing and price control; they continue to carry on a vital function of our economy. Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 415

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The splurge bid in bridge is an opening bid of two in a suit. It is a boisterous or extravagant display of wealth in one hand. It says it can make a game all by itself.

Such an opening is forcing to at least a game. And it asks partner to announce at once whether or not he has help for a slam. Help for a slam in that case is a sure trick; and ace of K Q.

Without such a sure trick, the immediate response is a bid of two no-trump. With a sure trick, therefore, the immediate response must be some bid other than two no-trump.

With a sure trick, what responding bid should partner make other than two no-trump? Follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. But tell the truth.

Respond at once with a takeout if you have a biddable suit. With no biddable suit, assist if you have adequate support. With no takeout or assist, bid no-trump. But not two no-trump. Three no-trump.

Even if you have a sure trick, notice that you must bid no-trump if you have no honest takeout or assist. But two no-trump would say you have no sure trick. So, with a sure trick you say three no-trump.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two hearts and you have a hand like this:

♠A 2
♥J 4 3
♦9 8 7 2
♣Q 9 6 3

You have a sure trick. So, your first response must not be two no-trump. You have no biddable suit for a takeout. Nor have you an assist for hearts. So, your only remaining bid is three no-trump.

That three no-trump response of yours tells your partner plenty. Not only does it tell him what you have. It also tells him what you have not.

It says you have no biddable suit in spades or diamonds or clubs. No support for hearts. But it admits having a sure trick. Chatterbox.

"Tender Comrade"

Acclaimed by critics and fans alike as Ginger Rogers' finest picture to date, "Tender Comrade" stars the noted actress as a young wife who, when her husband is called into service, gets a job in a defence plant to prove that she can support herself. Her romance from start to finish is the theme of the drama.

Robert Ryan, the sensational young newcomer, has the romantic lead opposite Miss Rogers in the RKO Radio offering, and Ruth Hussey, Kim Hunter and Patricia Colling head the supporting cast.

The Canadian Movietone World News, and Walt Disney's Donald Duck in a colorfun cartoon "Trombone Trouble" complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Someone to Remember"

When Ben Ames Williams wrote the magazine story "Someone To Remember," he was aiming at an immense cross section of Americans who appreciate homey, down-to-earth reality and pleasant, gentle sentimentality.

And when Republic made a picture of this story, the same objectives were ever in view — —good, clean, uplifting entertainment of the highest order.

That is why "Someone To Remember," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre, won such a high accolade from the first-night audiences. People leaving the theatre were again and again heard saying "Why doesn't Hollywood turn out more pictures like that?"

Mabel Paige, a character actress of unquestioned merit, has the title role, that of the sweetly sentimental old lady who refuses to move from her apartment when it is purchased by a university and converted into a men's dormitory.

She befriends all the students, helps them out of their various scrapes and in time endears herself to the entire college to such an extent that she is as much of an institution as the campanile and chapel.

"Slightly Dangerous"

"Slightly Dangerous," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, brings Lana Turner and Robert Young together "for laughing purposes only," although they also figure in a romantic love story. It provides the maddest, merriest farce either has ever been seen in.

To complete this grand program we are privileged to present the official pictures of the prelude to Invasion.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, June 27 — (CP) — What would you think of moving from one home to another — via Berlin? That's what happened to the men of one R.A.F. Bomber squadron in which several Canadians are serving.

The unit, formed during the First Great War and commanded by Wing Cmdr. Robert Annan, D.S.O., of Edinburgh, a pilot with nearly 70 operational flights to his credit, was due to move from one East Anglian airfield to another on a day when Bomber Command ordered a Berlin raid.

During the day the ground crews got the Lancasters ready for the attack. When the planes left for Berlin the ground crews left the Station, too, but they went in trucks, taking all the squadron's equipment and belongings with them and about the time the bombers were bombing, the ground crews were settling into their new station. And the bombers, after completing their mission, turned around and went to their new home where they found everything waiting and ready for them.

Group Capt. J. G. Bryans of Saskatoon and Victoria has been promoted to air commodore and to command one of the bases from which a number of R.C.A.F bomber squadrons operate in England. Before coming to Britain last year he commanded Rockcliffe Air Station at Ottawa. A new appointment to the Canadian Bomber Group is that of Air Commodore F. G. Wait who succeeds Air Commodore McBurney in command of the heavy conversion base. Wait was formerly at Overseas Headquarters, London.

Wing Cmdr. Charles A. Maton, who has been appointed commanding officer of an R.A.F. Coastal Command Halifax anti-U-boat squadron is the first air gunner to hold this position in the command. His squadron has played an important part in the U-boat battle of the Bay of Biscay and in recent months has had many attacks to its credit. A South African from Cape Town, Cmdr. Maton resigned his position as private secretary to Sir Abe Bailey in 1938 to join the R.A.F.

MARMORA

Rev. A. Caldwell Bids Farewell To Two Parishes

Goes to Parish of Elizabethtown After Seventeen and a Half Years at Marmora

Marmora—Farewell services were taken in the Anglican parishes of Marmora and Rawdon on Sunday by Rev. A. B. Caldwell, who has been rector of Marmora for seventeen and a half years. The services in the Rawdon parish consisted of Holy Communion at St. Thomas at 11 a.m. and evensong at St. Mark's in the afternoon. A large congregation assembled at St. Paul's for evensong at 7.30 p. m. with Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion also being represented. Before delivering his sermon, the rector referred to the large number who had been baptized, confirmed, married and who had passed away and been laid to rest during his rectorate as well as the many who had worshipped at St. Paul's, who were now on active service or had a military record. His text was taken from the 28th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, wherein St. Paul thanked God and took courage.

He referred to the blessings of God which merit man's thanks and the occasion we have to take fresh courage in the trials of life. During the offertory Mrs. Percy Gray sang "Hope for the Dawn." As the recessional hymn, choir and congregation joined feelingly in "God Be With You Till We Meet again."

Presentation from Legion

At the close of the service President T. E. Pritchard of the Legion stepped forward to present Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell with a beautiful table lamp as a token of appreciation of their practical interest in the welfare of the Legion. On behalf of Mrs. Caldwell and himself, the rector made fitting reply. Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell are leaving this week for the parish of Elizabethtown, with residence at Lyn near Brockville and take with them sincere wishes of parishioners and others for prosperity in their new field of labour.

Successful Dance

Under the auspices of St. Paul's Laymen's Association, a successful dance was held in the Agricultural Building on Marmora Fair Grounds on Friday evening with Doug and Myrt Jones and Harold Auger, supplying music. The refreshment stand was operated by members of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild. Prizes in connection with the drawing held by No. 2 Group of the Ladies' Guild went to the following:

1. Cream and Sugar set—George Duffin, Madoc.
2. Relish dish — Tom Hannah, Marmora.
3. Salad bowl — Wesley Vilneff, Marmora Township.

PICTON

Memorial Service At Salmon Point For Spr. H. Cowan

Picton, June 27—Salmon Point United Church was the scene of an impressive memorial service Sunday night when tribute was paid Sapper Harold N. Cowan, who was officially reported killed in action, June 6th. A member of the Royal Canadian Engineers, he was a member of the unit which first landed on the beaches of Normandy, clearing a way for other landing parties, and playing an important part in the success of the invasion.

The church was unable to accommodate all who came to pay tribute to this young man, who this month would have marked his 26th birthday. Chief mourners were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cowan; a sister, Miss Ethel; three brothers, Clarence with the R. C. A. S. C.; Herbert and Charles, both formerly members of the active army.

The front of the church was a mass of color with more than 25 beautiful floral tributes. On a flag-draped table was a photo of Harold, with a basket of cornations from the Salmon Point Sunday School, of which he was at one time superintendent, immediately behind. On either side were baskets of gladioli and peonies from the family and Reeve and Mrs. Earl Brummell. Banked around the altar rail and in the choir loft were baskets of roses, peonies, lilies and other flowers, including those from the Canadian Legion and Ladies' Auxiliary, Cherry Valley Friends, the N. McDonald Family, Dodds Family, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dulmage and Jean, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Riley McConnell and family, the Vader family, Mrs. L. Wannamaker, and many others.

Picton Post Canadian Legion deposited their Union Jack and colors on the altar, while other flags were used throughout the church.

The minister, Mr. E. V. C. Lewis opened the service by reading "The Lord is My Shepherd". The hymns were favorites of Harold and included "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow", "Abide With Me" and "Blest Be The Tie That Binds".

Mrs. Jack Beaumont sang "Face to Face" and the choir gave "Does Jesus Care", both also favorites of the deceased. Mrs. R. McConnell was pianist.

Mr. Lewis offered comforting prayer and read the passage of scripture, "God is Our Refuge" and "Let not your hearts be troubled." His address was based on the text, "Greater love hath no man than this, than a man lay down his life for his friends".

He paid tribute to Sapper Cowan "who was one of the bravest and best", one who could always be relied upon, and one who had loved the church and its teachings.

The Last Post was sounded by S. G. Lockyer. A minute of silence was broken by Reveille.

Members of the Legion then paraded in front of the pulpit, pausing in front of Harold's photo and depositing a poppy there.

The National Anthem followed benediction.

Inquest Opened

An inquest was opened here into the death of Mrs. Ann Browning Owens, who with her companion, Mrs. N. Green, met her death when fire gutted the second storey of Mrs. Owens' home. The jury returned a verdict that Mrs. Owens came to her death by suffocation caused by smoke from the fire, and stated that the cause of the fire is unknown.

Evidence was given by Dr. J. H. Cryan, E. A. Pearce, brother of Mrs. Owens, who indentified the bodies; Constable W. Boyer who told of efforts to enter the locked home; Walter Nicholas, caretaker, Hugh Nicholas, Morley Raynor and M. Cole, among the first on the scene; Bert Burns and George Jones who described the efforts of the firemen; Gordon Whattam, local undertaker.

No evidence was revealed that might lead to the origin of the fire which claimed the two lives in an early morning blaze. The ladies were trapped in their bedrooms.

60th Anniversary Of Entrance Into Ministry Honored

Rev. W. G. Clarke, Smithfield, Well Known in Belleville and District, Retires

SERVED MANY CIRCUITS

Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A., known to a multitude of friends in Belleville and the surrounding district, celebrated the 60th anniversary of his entrance into the Christian ministry in the presence of a large congregation in Smithfield United Church on Sunday night.

It was in the former church, erected upon this same site, that Mr. Clarke, preached his first sermon, away back in the summer of 1884. Mr. W. J. Potts, town clerk of Trenton, who was present upon that occasion was also an interested member of the congregation on Sunday night.

The old church was demolished in 1902 to be superseded by the present commodious and attractive church edifice.

Many old-time acquaintances and communicants came from Belleville, Trenton, Stirling, Brighton and elsewhere to swell the numbers of the usual congregation.

Messages Received.

A congratulatory message was read from Everett Mark, recording steward at Little Britain, where Mr. Clarke was first regularly stationed. Other messages were received from his former pastorate at Port Hope and from the board of Smithfield circuit.

Mr. Clarke's message to the assembley congregation was mainly of a reminiscent character and was at times humorous, at times dramatic but always most interesting.

He chose for his text the well known passage from the 90th Psalm: "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; but if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength, labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away."

He first described some of the experiences of his childhood. At four years of age he was toddling to Snday School at his mother's side and it was at Sunday School that he first learned to read. This was at what was known as the "Old White Church."

Revivals Feature.

The old-time revival was a feature of church life in those days. The greatest revival ever held at Smithfield was conducted by Rev. J. C. Ash. It was in this revival, when he was only nine years of age, that he made a start for the better life. Four years later he formally became a church member. 'Don't discourage the children when they express an interest in religious matters," said the speaker earnestly. "I knew what I was doing then just as well as I did in later life and I took a step that I have never regretted."

One of the ministers at that period was Rev. George W. Dewey. He was a talented evangelist and notable song leader. He conducted a singing school which the speaker attended but with only indifferent success in discovering any vocal ability as far as he was personally concerned.

Taught Public School.

In 1884, Mr. Clarke, then 18 years of age, began teaching public school. His first engagement was at the Old Red School House out several miles in the country from Smithfield. There were 140 children on the register but the larger ones came only in winter and the smaller children in summer. He never had more than 100 on any one day but that was enough he admitted.

It was at this period that he decided to offer himself as a probationer for the Methodist ministry. Two years later he was accepted in full connection.

Enrolled as Local Preacher.

He was at first enrolled as a local preacher. He spent a long time preparing his first sermon. He planned to spend five minutes on the introduction, fifteen minutes for the body of the sermon and five minutes more for the conclusion. But when he first glanced at his watch he found he had taken the whole twenty-five minutes for his introduction. He then became desperate and sought to abbreviate but when he finished he discovered that the delivery of the sermon had taken up an hour and ten minutes. "That was the longest sermon I ever delivered," Mr. Clarke commented.

Amusing Experiences.

He had some amusing experiences at weddings. At one of these ceremonies he asked the bride and groom to join their right hands, but the groom, determined that no one should precede him, began vigorously to kiss the bride. Then the minister reminded them: "As soon as you're through I will go on with the ceremony." At another wedding, where the groom was requested to salute the bride, he stood off and gravely gave the military salute.

Mr. Clarke's record of 52 years active and continuous service in the ministry was the longest ever achieved by any minister in the Methodist branch of the United Church.

World Growing Better.

"I wish to express my firm belief, after these 60 years, that the world is growing better. We are engaged in a great war but it is a war, as far as the Allies are concerned, to preserve justice and freedom. Out of this welter will come a greater brotherhood. The law of Christian living will eventually prevail among the nations." with these optimistic words Mr. Clarke closed his Memorable Diamond Jubilee message.

The church was decorated with a remarkable display of the season's finest blooms.

An augmented choir under the leadership of Mrs. A. Alexander gave effective expression to the musical part of the service. Miss Norma Smith rendered a beautiful soprano solo.

Served in Belleville.

Mr. Clarke has been in charge of the three appointments of Smithfield circuit for the past five months because of the serious illness of the regular pastor, Rev. m. Parker. Mr. Clarke will now retire to make way for Rev. W. E. Gunter who comes from Battersea. Mr. Clarke has purchased a house at Smithfield and will take up permanent residence there. Smithfield was the home of his boyhood. In the years 1911-1915, he was pastor of the Tabernacle Church at Belleville.

Thousands of Tern Being Reared On Gull Bar

Point Traverse, June 27 — Two miles off this peninsula lies a tiny gravel sea-holm, a mound of lake-washed gravel known as Gull Bar. Gull Bar is a rearing ground for thousands of terns and, just now, myriads of eggs are being hatched artificially by the rays from the sun.

The birds, returning from the south, rendezvous by thousands on the islet. The rookery is a sight indeed, and is visited annually by naturalists from near and far.

As an Ontario Intelligencer writer approached this miniature island, there was a whirring, a flapping of thousands of wings, a cacophony of raucous cries and screams; a deep protest as we invaded their domain, under a lifting cloud of silver and black, a beautiful formation.

So closely nested are the eggs, that it is extremely difficult to walk without breaking the eggs under foot.

Upon the hard, stony surface, in small indentions, lay thousands of eggs and newly hatched, fluffy bundles of life.

It was on this colony that the late Rev. C. J. Young, Toronto, found the egg of a Caspian tern on June 6, 1917.

Gull Bar is a naturalist's paradise, a place worth visiting, a trip long remembered.

73,122 KILLED,

He added the casualties between Feb. 12 and the entry into Rome totalled 35,496, including 6,696 killed, 24,683 wounded and 5,117 missing.

Last April Mr. Churchill informed the House of Commons that overall casualties for British Empire forces for the first four years of the war totalled 667,159—with 158,741 killed, 78,204 missing, 159,219 wounded and 270,995 prisoners.

Civilian casualties for the same period were 109,101 and merchant marine casualties 30,314.

Defence headquarters in Ottawa announced last April that casualties suffered by the three Canadian Armed Services from the outbreak of war until Feb. 29, 1944 totalled 30,538.

These casualties included 16,768 suffered by the Canadian Army, made up of 5,741 killed or died; 538 missing; 3,539 prisoners, and 6,949 wounded or injured. R. C. A. F. casualties totalled 12,457, including 8,137 killed or died; 2,309 missing; 1,255 prisoners, and 756 wounded or injured. Royal Canadian Navy casualties totalled 1,313, including 1,120 killed or died; nine prisoners and 184 wounded or injured. No naval personnel were listed as missing.

Latest reports on United States casualties on all fronts were 178,677 for the army through June 16, and 46,705 for the Navy up to June 22.

BANCROFT

13½-lb. Trout Taken in Bay Lake

Bancroft, June 27 — What started out as a business deal ended up a real day's fishing for two anglers at Bancroft. Mr. E. Nicholl of Baptiste had been dickering with Mr. Collie Stringer of Bancroft for an outboard motor so Thursday afternoon Mr. Nicholl was in town again and, of course, asking about the motor. Mr. Stringer said: "Well, the best way to see how it performs is to come fishing with me", so the two struck out for Bay Lake some three miles southwest of Bancroft Thursday afternoon. They were not fishing very long before Collie hooked on to something very heavy which for a moment put quite a strain on the fishing craft but in seconds later yielded enough to warn the angler that he had a more than ordinary fish on his line. After some fifteen minutes of hard battling and the use of an old gaff, which luckily happened to be in the boat, the fish was landed. It was a grey lake trout measuring some thirty-two inches in length and when weighed later tipped the scales at thirteen and a quarter pounds. This should be a good drawing card for other anglers as well as a strong point in the sale of the motor.

"CUPID RIDES A BUS" by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER 2

The lanky, broad shouldered young man with the unruly hair and the friendly grin, hung up the receiver picked up his drink, and made himself comfortable again at the bar. The glass was nearly empty, and he ordered a repeat.

"Don't spare the ponies, Jimmie —this is the last shot of poison I'll be letting you give me, for a long time."

"Going away, Mr. Taylor?"

"Tomorrow morning, at the crack of dawn." He waxed confidential. "I'm taking the road south, Jimmie —the road to romance and adventure. With an ex-lion tamer and a lady Thespian for company. The lion tamer is bringing a cat, and the lady a tropical fish. There's another couple going, too; lord knows what they'll bring, probably a whale. And a girl—the one I was just talking to on the phone."

"What is it—a road company?"

"No—a caravan to the Fountain of Youth," said Mr. Taylor, grandiloquently.

"But how come you're not going back to New Haven?" Jimmie wanted to know.

"Yale College and Anthony Taylor, Junior, have parted company, by mutual consent," said the latter.

"Thrown out again," eh?"

"Not again," said Mr. Taylor, late of New Haven, severely. "For the last time. The third and last, incidentally."

"Zat so?" said Jimmie. "What you gotta do to get thrown out of college like that, Mr. Taylor?"

"In my case," said Tony, "it was merely a question of conflicting principles."

"You don't say. . ." Jimmie was a good listener.

"Principles that are at this very moment changing the face of civilization, Jimmie. The right of the common man to earn his daily bread. The right of self-determination for the masses. The right of the proletariat against the money-grasping capitalist."

"Which side are you on, Mr. Taylor?"

"The side of freedom, of course, Jimmie. You ought to know that!"

"Which freedom, Mr. Taylor?"

"The poor man's of course." Tony set down his drink. "Do you realize, Jimmie—that only a hundred rich men practically own the wealth of the United States of America?"

Jimmie wiped a glass, and grinned.

"And isn't it your father, that's one of them, Mr. Taylor?"

"I wouldn't be surprised," said Tony sadly. "A fellow can pick his pals, Jimmie—but he can't pick his progenitor. You know that. Not that the old man isn't a great guy, when he wants to be. It's just that his thinking is wrong. He's been too busy making money all his life to think about his fellow man."

"Worked up from a motorman on a trolley-car to president of the street car company, didn't he?"

"Oh, he's filthy rich all right," said Tony. "He owns bus lines, taxi companies, and even a railroad. I hate to say it, but I'm ashamed of him."

"You're what?" demanded Jimmie, gaping.

"Don't misunderstand me," said Tony. "It's not Dad I don't approve of—it's what he represents. Now, if he'd only share his money with the masses—"

"Excuse me, Mr. Taylor—let me get this straight," Jimmie was definitely puzzled. "You want your dad to give away his millions?"

"Of course I do," declared Tony earnestly. "I believe the rich should share their wealth. I think everyone should share everything, for that matter."

Jimmie attempted a joke.

"Even their women, Mr. Taylor?"

"You can have my share of women," said Tony, wryly. "If it weren't for the women of America, Jimmie, this wouldn't be the first capitalistic country of the world. Women are parasites, Jimmie—just born parasites. But speaking of sharing the wealth—"

"So they threw you out of college, eh," said Jimmie, anticipating him. "You—a millionaire's son, wanting to be a communist." He scratched his head. "Maybe I'm right, Mr. Taylor."

"Nothing of the sort," declared Jimmie, with warmth. "Communism will never breed in America. My kind of radicalism, however, is common sense. We don't need—"

"Here's a customer needs a drink," interrupted Jimmie. "Excuse me, Mr Taylor .. highball, Mr. Nunnally?"

Tony Taylor sighed, and downed his drink. He decided to order another, his hand in his pocket, counted his material wealth, and changed his mind. There was the trip to Florida to think of, and his personal expenses.

He shrugged his shoulders: he was lucky to have gotten enough passengers so soon to help pay for the gas and oil.

Thinking of the passengers, reminded him of the girl on the phone. Despite his academic distaste for her sex in general he was not a little intrigued. Both her voice and her name — Ginger Drake—were provocative. She probably wore glasses and low heels, and talked too much. He devoutly hoped not. Miami after all, was thirteen hundred miles away.

"Did you read about the Bonkheer Diamond, Mr. Taylor?" Jimmie, disengaged, was back again. "Can you imagine the brass of them guys—swiping it on Fifth Avenue in broad daylight?"

"Some poverty stricken proletarian probably did it in desperation." said Tony, gloomily. "Maybe his children needed bread."

"There's a fifty grand reward out," said Jimmie, with the enthusiasm of a man who had just heard of a new sweepstake opportunity. "Boy—wouldn't I like to find that rock!"

"If I found it, I'd break it up into chips and divide it among the children of the East Side," said Mr. Taylor. "That's what I'd do!"

Jimmie grinned.

"Well, if you do, pal, just save a coupla chips for me. I was born on the East Side."

Ginger stood on the stoop of the brownstone house in the West Seventies, with her suitcase beside her, waiting for Mr. Tony Taylor and Adventure. It was a tangy, sunny morning, and she was well pleased with herself. Not only had her landlady, Mrs. Haggerty, been persuaded to wait for her back rent and let Ginger take some of her clothes with her, but that usually flint-hearted female had surprisingly broken down and pressed the loan of five dollars upon her— to be repaid, with the back-rent, when Ginger was working again.

Nor was that all, to add to Ginger's state of well-being. When she had returned home the day before, it had been to find a number of calls from Ronny Rockaby, he had called again several times during the evening, and even after midnight. Ginger had not answered one. The idea of slipping out of New York without his knowledge was definitely pleasing; the thought of a job in the very career which he was trying to bar her from, savagely thrilled her. She would show Mr. Rockaby, yet!

Thinking these warming thoughts, and looking very trim and chic while she thought them, she saw a double-decker bus painted green turn the corner, and come down the street toward her. A true New Yorker, she knew it was a Fifth Avenue bus because the sign on it said Washington Square; what it was doing over here in the West Seventies near the Park was a mystery.

As it came nearer, the mystery deepened when the bus, which she saw now held but one occupant— the driver slowed down abruptly and came to a stop at the curb directly before her door. She stared down at it, wondering, and saw the door open and a young man jump out upon the sidewalk and stare up at her, in turn. He grinned, suddenly, and approached the stoop.

"Miss Drake?" he asked.

Ginger nodded, suddenly smitten by a horrid premonition. His next words proved the premonition true.

"I'm Tony Taylor. Hope I haven't kept you waiting."

Her jaw dropped, as she looked beyond him, to the bus. It was an old bus, she saw, of the high, lumbering type, whose top deck, in warm weather, was open to the air; the kind of top deck that young lovers sat on in summer evenings holding hands as they shuttled back and forth from Washington Square to Grant's Tomb and back again.

"Is that—what we're going to Florida in?" she wanted to know.

"I'm afraid it is," said Tony. "It's the only thing on wheels I happen to have, you see. It's really more comfortable than it looks, though."

"Is it?" She gulped. Somehow, in her wildest dreams she had never anticipated this. "You're not—kiddin, are you?"

Tony looked pained.

"Certainly not, Miss Drake."

"But where did you get it?" she asked. "You didn't steal it—did you?"

His grin re-appeared.

"I won it in a crap game, the other day, down at the car-barns. It's been condemned, you see—but the motor's really in swell condition. They're putting on new streamlined jobs on the Avenue, I understand."

She looked at the empty bus, wondering whether he were sane and she could trust him.

"Where are the others?" she asked, helplessly.

"We're to pick them up on the way down to the Holland Tunnel." He saw her indecision. "Really, Miss Drake—this won't be so bad as you think. And if you want to get to Florida cheaply—"

But I do!" she exclaimed, thinking of Monday noon in Miami.

"Give us a try then," he grinned. "Satisfaction guaranteed, or money back."

Ginger hesitated then shrugged her shoulders. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Tony picked up her bag, replaced his battered collegiate hat on his head, and escorted her across the sidewalk, toward the bus.

As he was about to help her in, a flashy maroon - and - chromium limousine drew up behind his car with a Filipino chauffeur at the wheel. They stared, and a handsome dark-haired young man, still in rumpled evening clothes, jumped out of the Rolls, and hurried toward them, his eyes on the girl. It was Ronnie Rockaby.

"Hey—Ginger! Wait a minute!"

Ginger stiffened, and her face went hard. Tony sensed both the stiffening and hardening processes, and was at once humanly curious.

Ronny faced them, swaying slightly; he had evidently had a wearing night, professionally and otherwise. He looked first, rather owlishly, at the bus. Like any New Yorker, he was surprised and puzzled.

"Say—What's that bus doing here?"

"What do you want?" asked Ginger coldly.

"I've been trying to reach you on the phone since yesterday morning," said Ronny "I just left El Algeciras, and thought maybe you'd have breakfast with me, and tell me why you're mad at me."

"I'm not mad at you," said Ginger. I simply despise you."

"Why?" asked Ronny.

"Because you're so low," said Ginger distinctly, "that you could walk standing-up under a caterpillar with fallen arches, without tickling him." She turned to Tony. "Shall we go?"

"Sure!" said Tony intrigued. He had decided he did not like Ronny's face; he also considered it bad form to be drunk so early in the morning, as the crooner so obviously was.

"Just a minute—"cried Ronny, and caught her arm. "Where do you think you're going?"

"Where you're dirty blacklisting won't do you any good!" She tugged at her arm, but he would not release her. "Let go of me, Ronny!"

"You're not going anywhere— you're going to marry me!" cried Ronny and attempted to pull her down from the step. You've got to let me talk to you, anyway!"

"Ronny!"

Tony intervened, wordlessly. His fingers fell clamp-like, on Ronny's detaining arm, and Ronny's fingers opened spasmodically.

"Who is this guy, anywy?" demanded the crooner.

"This guy is someone who does not care much for your face," said Tony softly, and as Ronny, enraged, swung at him with his free fist, Tony side-stepped. The next moment his own right lashed out, and made audible contact with the crooner's jaw. The latter fell.

"Thanks so much," said Ginger, quickly, and hopped aboard the bus "Please—shall we go now?"

Tony grinned, rubbing his knuckles, then came aboard after her and got behind the wheel, as the Filipino came running from the gaudy Rolls-Royce to his recumbent master's aid. The bus left the curb with a lurch.

Ginger, who had sat down on the seat diagonally across from Tony, looked back. The Crown Prince of the Air, being helped somewhat unsteadily to his feet, was wildly shaking his fist after them, Ginger had a premonition, in that moment, that she was not seeing the last of Ronny Rockaby. She sighed an angry sigh.

"Lovely morning, isn't it?" said Mr. Taylor.

"A very, very, lovely morning," said Miss Drake. But she was beginning to have her doubts.

They were rounding the corner into Central park in the lumbering old green bus, headed east for the Avenue.

Tony said, "I don't mean to be curious — but your boy-friend seems awfully familiar -looking."

He's Ronny Rockaby," said Ginger shortly.

"The crooner?" Tony was pleasantly shocked. "I thought I recognized his ears!" He grinned. I've always wanted to sock a crooner, and now I've done it. My—my!"

Ginger said nothing. They stopped for a traffic light."

"If it's none of my business don't tell me," Tony went on, "but what was that about blacklisting you mentioned? It sounds intriguing."

Ginger told him; after all, he might as well know why she had to be in Miami before Monday noon.

"It's my fault, I suppose, letting Ronny see so much of me.But I was a little bit in love with him, perhaps at first—it was the glamour of his success, I guess. When I realized how conceited and unreal he was, however, I—well, I changed. It was then that he got after me to marry him. He just can't understand why I won't."

"Just say the word," Tony offered, "and I'll go back and sock some more of that glamour out of him!"

"I'd rather you got me to Miami on time," she smiled briefly. "That would annoy Ronny much more."

"Don't worry—we'll get you there. I give you my word on that."

"Thanks loads," said Ginger. The light went green. "By the way, who else is going along?"

"Four others," he told her. "An actress, named Desdemona Love, for one. The old girl says she played with Edwin Booth—I believe her." He grinned. "She's taking a tropical fish along with her. Believe it or. not its name is Gertrude, and she's taking it to Florida to find it a mate. It ate up its last one."

Ginger giggled, despite herself.

"She sounds sweet. Who else?"

"Mr. Daniel Smock. He's a retired lion-tamer, if you please. Going to Florid to take a job on a lion-farm. He's got a cat with him I think he said."

TO BE CONTINUED

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was walking around the living room pushing crooked things straigh and straight things crooked, saying to pop, Practically every screen in the house needs attention, William, I'm afraid we'll have to send for a carpenter, and carpenters are as scarce as hen's teeth these days.

Yes, and as expensive as hen's teeth with gold inlays, pop said. By gollies I wish I was a handy man, he said.

I wish you were for land sakes, ma said, and pop said, I wish I was for all our sakes. I'd drop the insurance business like a hot potato and I' go around putting new washers in people's facets and shaking new life into their old alarm clocks and winding their window shades and oiling the creak out of their bedsprings and tightaning 'their door nobs and soaping their bewro draws, and within a ear or 2 I'd be so rich I could retire for life with nothing to do but catch up with my magazine reading, and I'd send Benny to a good expensive trade school to learn how to handle a small chest of tools so he could carry on the good work, he said.

Well then G, pop, I've got good news for yo, I mean I've made a start already, I said. You know how the mirror of your shaving cabinet always makes you mad by swinging open so you cant see your face any more just when you're taking a good aim with your razor? Well I fixed the catch of it today so it'll stick tight and wont swing open any more, only the only trouble is, you cant open it now even if you want to. Only G, pop, you can keep your shaving things on the outside, so you wont even have to open it, I said, and pop said, And how the dooce am I going to get my shavoing things out so I can keep them out?

Oh well, when the carpenter comes to fix the screens maybe he'll fix that too, as long as he's here already, I said.

Being almost the end of the subject but not quite.

You can't go ALL-OUT If you feel ALL-IN

These days most people are working harder, worrying more, sleeping less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living lowers resistance—increases body and mental fatigue. Overwork; hasty meals; irregular hours; worry—any of these may upset proper kidney action.
When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and poisons remain in the system. Then backache, headache, rheumatic pain, disturbed rest or that "tired-all-the-time" feeling may soon follow. To help keep your kidneys in good order—to help guard against physical let-down—use Dodd's Kidney Pills, for over half a century a favourite remedy for faulty kidneys. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. Look for the blue box with the red band. 126

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 27 — (CP) — The gold share group was weak in the early Toronto session today, due to profit-taking on the recent advance and the sharp setback in silver stocks. Industrials posted an index gain of 0.1 point to 146.1 and base metals and western oils were up .30 and .38 respectively.

The Massey-Harris stocks weakened on the budget announcement reserving the import tariff on farm machinery. They dropped a point at opening and were off about 1/4 of a point at early afternoon. Cockshutt Plow was weakened slightly. Other groups were strong including the Utilities, Steels, papers and mining stocks.

Steep Rock pushed along 3s cents to $.75, Sudbury gained a point or more and Nickel added 1/4. Labrador Ore and Mining Corporation were a bit heavy.

Most of the golds were down. Oils were steady. Coal Beat were exceptions. The former firmed 35 cents to 1.50 and Bear added 5 cents. San Antonio lost 35 cents, Macassa 20, Aunor 15 and Kerr-Addison 5/8.

WALL STREET

New York, June 27 —(AP)— Stocks continued their climb in today's market as favorites touched new seven-year peaks with gains of fractions to a point or more on one of the largest turnovers of the year.

Spurring extension of the drive was official word of the fall of Cherbourg and mounting domestic political hopes connected with the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

The rising trend was accentuated at the start as Willys-Overland soared 2 points, running up 10,000 shares while large-scale deals elsewhere were numerous. Improvement in the early market sustained near the fourth hour.

Aside from Packard, White Motors, General Motors, International Harvester, U.S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, Case Wood, International Paper, American Radiator, Greyhound and Du Pont.

Canadian issues were fractionally higher.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 27 — (CP)—Cattle trade was very slow up to midafternoon on the livestock market here today with prices steady at the week's decline. Veal calves, hogs, sheep and lambs sold close to Monday's levels.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 50, calves 350, hogs 350, sheep and lambs 250. Receipts on Monday were 1,700 head of cattle.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $11.25-$12, butcher steers $9-$12, heifers $10-$11.50, cutters and canners $5-$6, canners downward to $5, bulls $7.50-$9, veal calves $8.50-$16.

Sheep: $3-$5.

Hogs: Grade A $17.60-$17.75, sows $13 $15.

BUDAPEST BOMBED

London, June 27 — (CP-Reuters) — The Hungarian agency in a broadcast heard here asserted that Budapest, capital of Hungary, was raided by airplanes today.

rounds of ammunition. Mr. Arnott added that William was a 1st mate in an Orillia war plant and asked for a suspended sentence Magistrate Garvin suspended sentence in both cases for one year upon the pay ment of costs amounting to $73.45 in all.

Four translents, who were apprehended and charged with vagrancy, Saturday night, by police, were released from custody and instructed to return to Montreal whence they had come.

Obituary

MRS. WM. WOODCOCK
(Mahawk Reserve)

A former well known and highly esteemed resident of the Reserve, Mrs. Wm. Woodcock, passed away at her home in Smithfield Wednesday, June 21st, after a illness. She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Richard Hill, Smithfield; Mrs. Benjamin Moses, Hamilton; and Mrs. Emily Hill, Tyendinaga. Her only brother, Albert Marsole, predeceased her a few years ago. The funeral was held from the Smithfield, and interment was made in Riverside Cemetery, Belleville.

ALTON WILSON
(Formerly of Belleville)

Alton Wilson, formerly of this city, died suddenly as the result of a heart seizure in Rochester, N.Y., on Wednesday, June 21st.

The late Mr. Wilson was a son of the late Mr. Fred S. Wilson, Belleville, and was born at Glenora. By profession he was a civil engineer and after living in the United States for some years he returned to Belleville where he engaged here with the Stephens-Adamson Company for a time. In 1941 he moved to Montreal and later to Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral was held on Friday, June 23rd, and interment took place in Chicago, Ill.

FRANK PHILIP CALBURY

After an illness of two weeks' duration Frank Philip Calbury, 44 St. Paul Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon, June 26th.

Born in Belleville forty years ago the late Mr. Calbury was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Calbury. He never married and all his life was employed here. For many years he was a plumber. To his friends his loss is keenly felt and regretted.

Surviving him are two brothers, Mr. William Calbury and Mr. John Calbury, both of Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Charles Hanna, Belleville, residing at the latter's home; and son Funeral Home, 35 Everett St. The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

POLICE COURT

"This man had a registration card that was not under his own name," remarked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. after Evan Reynolds, Northumberland County farmhand, pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication before Magistrate Garvin, in police court section, in local police court today. Previously a charge of vagrancy had been dismissed against Reynolds. "You could be further charged under the National Registration Act," explained His Worship in his address to the defendant in default of the payment of a drunk fine.

Nelson Perry, Toronto, paid $4.50, or suffered seven days, when convicted of failing to observe a stop-street. H. E. Wilkins, Orillia, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving a car without a driver's permit. A charge of selling a revolver and the other of carrying a weapon by R. D. Arnold K.C., appeared as counsel for the defendant, were withdrawn. Charges had never been in trouble before and was ignorant of the law. He admitted he had attempted to sell a gun. Provincial Constable E. Soulsbey told the court the accused had only a .25 calibre automatic 410 thereof.

Notice to Tax Payers

The last day for the payment of the Second Installment of 1944 Taxes without penalty will be imposed will be Monday, July 3rd, 1944. As the Civic Offices will observe (Dominion Day) Saturday, July 1st., 1944, and with Sunday following it will mean that the time for payment will be curtailed by these two days. Under these circumstances it would be beneficial to the Public and much appreciated by the staff if payments could be made sooner. Delays should also be avoided on the part of those making payments by Cheque.

C.W.A.C. Bands To Visit City On Wednesday

As an opening feature of the Kingmen's Street Fair, the famous Canadian Women's Army Corps' twenty-six piece Pipes and Drums and the C.W.A.C. military band made up of both brass and wood instruments, will visit Belleville on Wednesday, June 28th, to take part in a large parade of fine, Air and Girl Cadets, the 34th Field Battery, Boys' Canadian Artillery, a platoon from the Army Light Infantry and C.W.A.C. personnel from Kingston and Barriefield.

The C.W.A.C. bands, which are the only all-women military bands in the British Commonwealth outside of the United Kingdom, are at present on their second coast to coast tour in the interests of recruiting.

Leaving from the Armouries at 7.30 p.m. the parade will turn right at the corner of Bridge Street and proceed along Pinnacle Street to Victoria, then left along Front Street to Dundas, up to Pinnacle Street and left to the Armouries. Here Mayor H. Rolling will welcome the bands, and they will give a concert in the Bandstand on the Armouries lawn.

Guests at Dinner.

Earlier in the evening, the bands and their officer in charge, Capt. Grace Mottell, of Hamilton, will be the guests of honour in the Quinte Hotel, given by the City of Belleville.

Greatest ambition of auburn haired Pipe Major Jean Hutchison of Victoria, B.C., leader of the Pipes and Drums, is to lead the Pipes through London's Piccadilly on the day of victory. Playing with the pipes since the age of 12, she was director of the Highland Lassies of Victoria when she joined the ranks of the C.W.A.C. in September, 1942.

Bandmaster Jean Forbes, from Vegreville, Alberta, also has extensive musical experience before the ranks of two musical degrees, the A.T.C.M. and L.T.C.M., she studied conducting and bands organization at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, and taught for a number of years in Alberta.

Seen in the parade will be "Susie," the leopard skin worn by Drum-Major Joan Forbes, of Vancouver, B.C. A gift from the city of Lethbridge, Alberta, "Susie" has become such a favorite with the band that it was made official mascot.

The official march of the C.W.A.C. is the tune "Ahlene," written and composed for the Corps by E. Rex Hinchey of this city. The march will be heard as the band swings along city thoroughfares.

Rednersville Couple Observes Golden Wedding

Well-known Rednersville district farmers of the past thirty-one years, Mr. and Mrs. James Hitchings observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on June 23.

The occasion was observed quietly within the confines of their home near the Prince Edward County village. Friends and neighbors phoned or called and paid felicitative tribute to fifty years of married life well and truly lived.

Natives of Gloucestershire, England, one of the richest farming areas of Britain, the Hitchings were married in a small village called Cirencister. The ceremony was performed in Abbey Church.

Coming to Canada in 1913, they immediately took up farming in the Rednersville district of Prince Edward County. Mr. Hitchings has always shown an interest in stock, and grain of the better quality and for years has been associated with the Belleville Agricultural Society.

One son, William Reginald Hitchings was born to the union. He lives at present in Detroit, where he is serving with the English Horse Guards. A paratrooper, he is serving with the R.A.F. and is now stationed in a Canadian station in New Brunswick.

Kinsman Donates Silver Trophy For Club Competition

An imposing silver trophy donated by Orliff "Boller" Lloyd for annual competition among Kinsmen bowling clubs in Canada for increased membership during the year, graced the head table at Kinsmen clubs meeting on Monday evening. This is the first year the club has been up for competition, it being donated by "Boller" following the realization that no cup was awarded for the club showing the greatest increase in membership.

Last year at the Kinsmen convention in Windsor, representatives from the Belleville club were a bit disappointed with the discovery that there was no cup given for the club having the greatest increase in membership. Had this been the case the local club would have been eligible. No decision has yet been made as to the basis upon which the cup will be presented.

Orland Pinkston Installed Prexy Of Rotary Club

Orland E. Pinkston, secretary of the Belleville Rotary Club for the past few years, and recently elected president for the 1944-45 term, was officially installed in office at the Monday luncheon of the club.

Past President Howard Clarke acted in the capacity of installing officer, pinning the past-president's pin on the newly retiring president-elect John Deacon. He also installed the new secretary, Arthur Irvine, C.D.S. manager here, who succeeds President Pinkston in the secretarial chair.

Other officials for the incoming year include Reginald Clark Ferguson, treasurer, and the Rev. Bert Howard, Percy McKeown, as directors, and as vice president by virtue of his former office, Rotarian John Deacon.

There was no guest speaker at the luncheon, the major part of the meeting being confined chiefly to matters of the business nature, as reports from various chairmen, including Rotarian Charles Sparling, as well as that of the Crippled Children's Committee were laid over and will be read to the club early in July.

President Pinkston in a brief address to the clubmen warned of the difficult days ahead, but admitted the fact that he was following in the footsteps of 22 predecessors. He knew, he said, that he would get the full co-operation of the club members and expressed the hope that the coming year would be as successful as the past.

Tribute was paid by retiring president Deacon to splendid assistance rendered by Secretary-Manager Irvine, and to pianist duo of musicians Leo Riggs and "Sandy" Saunders, for their splendid efforts put forth by the chairmen of the various committees in the footsteps and camaraderie exercised by all Rotarians present.

Before closing the club voted an additional $100 to be used in the Salvation Army's campaign at the Rotary Boys' Camp at Moira Lake.

LIBERALS PLEDGE CONFIDENCE IN NIXON AS LEADER

Mitchell Warns Socialist Party Campaign Might Create Unfavorable Conditions

EDUCATION COSTS

Toronto, June 27 — (CP)— The annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association adjourned today after pledging confidence in the party leadership of former Premier Harry Nixon and hearing Federal Labor Minister Mitchell warn that a campaign being waged by the "Socialist Party" might create unfavorable conditions.

Mr. Mitchell told the wind-up banquet last night that the campaign "based largely on emotion, being pressed at this time by the Socialist party" might create conditions that would sweep beyond the control of their leaders "and frustrate the best endeavors of reconstruction."

Mr. Mitchell was one of five members of the Federal Cabinet at the banquet, the others being Munitions Minister Howe, Revenue Minister Gibson, State Secretary McLarty and Postmaster-General Mulock.

The Socialists, said Mr. Mitchell, were given control of Canada's output the nation "down the drain" for 25 years.

Under Liberal leadership Canada stood in the vanguard of social progress because intelligent direction and leadership by the state "have reached such a high order," said Mr. Mitchell.

"It must best fitted to lead this country into the paths of reconstruction and world peace is the greatest internationalists of your time—William Lyon Mackenzie King."

Hewes Elected President.

The gathering yesterday by resolution expressed confidence in Mr. Nixon's leadership and pledged united support. Mr. Nixon said the party was defeated in the Ontario election last August because those in authority got out of touch with the people. He said he was not offering any alibis for the defeat and that "temporary defeats at the polls have to be accepted philosophically."

A. J. Hahes of Jordan, Ont. was elected president of the association in succession to Lt.-Col. Harry Hamilton of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., who did not seek re-election. Dan W. Lang of Toronto was re-elected treasurer and 13 vice-presidents were chosen.

Those included: Dr. R. Keir Dewar, Fort William; James Cooper, Sudbury; W. G. Dewan, Kingsville; Anderson, Oshawa; J. Richard, Ottawa; Hugh Wilson, Perth; Mayor L. Goddard, Chatham; J. M. King, Stratford; Frank Dillon, Hamilton.

Refers to Socialization of Stockyards.

Mr. Nixon referred to what he termed "the socialization of the stockyards" by the Ontario Progressive Conservative government. He didn't know how the farmers would benefit but he knew some people would benefit by having a "white elephant" taken off their hands. As to the Ontario government's legislation implementing a 48-hour week, the Liberal leader said he didn't think the overtime was an appropriate time for such a move.

He criticized the government's appointment of "an individual" at $14,000 a year — to sell us 12 ounces of liquor a month. (Victor Joseph recently was appointed head of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario and later the monthly ration of spirits in the province was reduced to 13 ounces.)

Mr. Nixon's chief criticism, however, was directed against what he termed the government's failure to implement its pledge to pay 50 per cent of the cost of relief and in reducing the tax on real estate. He added, however, that such money appropriation under the provincial treasury would only have to come out of the tax-payers pockets.

The Drew government's record of performance compared to its promises was not very satisfactory, Mr. Nixon said.

He emphasized there was no opposition or undertaking of any kind between the Liberals in the legislature and the government.

Free Transportation For Returned Soldiers Proposed by Kinsmen

Extending their offer of service to members of the armed forces returning from overseas, the Belleville Kinsmen at their Monday evening meeting unanimously approved of a proposal to provide transportation home for soldiers getting off the train at Belleville.

The birth of the idea came with the realization that with the present scarcity of taxis, it may often be difficult for boys returning from overseas to obtain transportation home. This being the case, the club members here have offered their car and will act in the role of Good Samaritans. A suitable sign will be positioned on the station platform informing soldiers returning from overseas that if necessary they may call upon Kinsmen members to provide transportation. They will be invited to inquire at the railway ticket office for information.

While no actual date was set for the inauguration of the service, it was expected that by July 15th the sign would be in place and other organization completed.

Must Get Permission To Close Plants For One Week's Holidays

Although Ontario provincial legislation calls for industrial factories and other employers of labor in all provinces to give their employees one week's holidays during the year, plants and factories may not be closed for that period without permission from the Regional War Labor Board and such action the National Selective Service officer. It has become increasingly popular for industrial heads to close their plants for a certain period to afford workers holidays, but permission to do this may be denied only when assurance is given that high priority production will not be seriously interrupted.

Industrial heads contemplating closing their plants for a holiday period must first obtain permission from the Regional War Labor Board, and following that, from their local selective service officer.

Several Belleville plants have already obtained the necessary permission to close their plants for a holiday period, it was stated.

PATRIOTS HID AIRMEN

New York, June 27 — (CP)—BBC reporter Collin Wills told in a broadcast last night how four American airmen who had crash-landed at Cherbourg on D-day and had been hidden away by French patriots, were found by advance patrols penetrating into the port. Wills interviewed the rescued airmen while the American forces were still shelling the town.

Find No Evidence Of Any Plot Says Justice Minister

Ottawa, June 27.—(CP)— Justice Minister St. Laurent, replying to a question of Fred Rose (Lab. Prog., Montreal Cartier), said in the Commons yesterday the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have "found no evidence of any organization plotting to establish a corporatist state in Quebec or any other part of Canada."

Mr. Rose placed the question on the order paper after Senator T. D. Bouchard, Liberal member from Quebec, said in the Senate that the "secret" order of Jacques Cartier was plotting to set up an independent and Catholic state in Canada.

Mr. St. Laurent said he was not aware of any such organization. He added that since the question had reference to recent statements in which could be inferred the R.C.M.P. investigated "with the utmost diligence" any asserting or rumors of subversive activities.

"In view of the statements made by a prominent man in another place (the Senate) is the Minister not of the opinion that a Royal Commission should be set up to investigate the matter?" asked Hon. R. B. Hanson, (PC-York-Sunbury).

"The Minister of Justice is not of that opinion," said Mr. St. Laurent.

Chinese Troops Occupy Mogaung

Kandy, Ceylon, June 7 —(CP)— British and Chinese troops have occupied the Japanese stronghold of Mogaung in northern Burma after a bitter three-day battle, an Allied communique announced today.

The final assault, in which the Allied forces drove into the town from three sides yesterday, was preceded by a deadly artillery ardment, the bulletin said.

The fall of Mogaung promised to intensify pressure on Japanese forces battling to retain Myitkyina, 40 miles to the east and last important base in northern Burma remaining in enemy hands. Myitkyina already has been partly invested by Allied troops.

TO INCREASE GRANT

Toronto, June 27—(CP)—Ontario Health Minister Dr. R. P. Vivian announced yesterday the Ontario Government will increase the provincial grant for indigent patients in Ontario to bring the level up to $2.75 per day, including municipal grants. The grant per day is to be granted municipalities is increased from 60 to 75 cents providing the municipality has increased its grant from the present $1.75 to $2.

Orland Pinkston Installed Prexy Of Rotary Club

Orland E. Pinkston, secretary of the Belleville Rotary Club for the past few years, and recently elected president for the 1944-45 term, was officially installed in office at the Monday luncheon of the club.

Past President Howard Clarke acted in the capacity of installing officer, pinning the past-president's pin on the newly retiring president-elect John Deacon. He also installed the new secretary, Arthur Irvine, C.D.S. manager here, who succeeds President Pinkston in the secretarial chair.

Other officials for the incoming year include Rotarian Charles Sparling, treasurer, and the Rev. Bert Howard, Percy McKeown, as directors, and as vice president by virtue of his former office, Rotarian John Deacon.

There was no guest speaker at the luncheon, the major part of the meeting being confined chiefly to matters of the business nature, as reports from various chairmen, including Rotarian Charles Sparling, as well as that of the Crippled Children's Committee were laid over and will be read to the club early in July.

President Pinkston in a brief address to the clubmen warned of the difficult days ahead, but admitted the fact that he was following in the footsteps of 22 predecessors. He knew, he said, that he would get the full co-operation of the club members and expressed the hope that the coming year would be as successful as the past.

Tribute was paid by retiring president Deacon to splendid assistance rendered by Secretary-Manager Irvine, and to pianist duo of musicians Leo Riggs and "Sandy" Saunders, for their splendid efforts put forth by the chairmen of the various committees in the footsteps and camaraderie exercised by all Rotarians present.

Heaviest Attack Since Nazis Launch Robot Assaults

London, June 27, (CP)— Breaking through a cloud cover, German robot bombs subjected Southern England during the night to one of the heaviest attacks it has suffered since the Nazis launched their robot assaults.

The robots seemed to include some of a different type. One crossed the sky at a slightly slower speed than the others and its engine cut out and then re-started. Some apparently carried heavier loads of explosives.

In the face of continuing attacks by these blind-striders, two London newspapers, the Daily Express and the Daily Mail—are campaigning for the evacuation of the stricken blackout.

"If pilotless planes are to replace bombers the sole original reason for the blackout will have gone", said the Daily Mail.

Cherbourg Is First Large City Back To French People

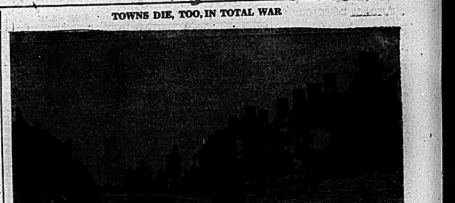
New York, June 27. (AP)— Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, American ground commander in Normandy, declared in a statement there today that the forces who have carried out the attack on Cherbourg have done a magnificent job".

"It is a pleasure to say to the people of France, here is the first large city to be returned to you," Bradley stated, as quoted by an NBC broadcast.

70 Injured in Battle Of Police and Civilians In Guatemala City

San Jose, Costa Rica, June 27.— (CP)—A traveller arriving here yesterday said seventy persons were injured Sunday night in a pitched battle in Guatemala City between armed civilians and police, and that tension was increasing throughout the country.

Travellers reaching here last Friday said a general student strike had broken out in the National University in Guatemala, possibly in reaction to presidential suspension of constitutional guarantees, or as the beginning of general pressure on advance to force President Jorge Ubico to resign.



MRS. CHURCHILL TO ASSIST

Washington, June 27—(CP)—Mrs. Winston Churchill will be heard in a Trans-Atlantic Radio Broadcast today supporting the United States Red Cross War Fund Drive. Both she and Mrs. Roosevelt will take part in conferences over short wave hook-ups in their respective countries. The broadcast will be carried by CBS at 5 p.m. E.D.T.

GRANDI ASKED TO APPEAR

New York, June 27.—(CP)—Count Dino Grandi, former Italian ambassador to London and a member of the Fascist Grand Council under Mussolini, "has been invited by the newly formed Italian government in Rome to appear before the National Purge Committee that has been set up," the BBC said last night.

House Approves in Principle Machinery to Restore Canadian Peace-Time Economy by Bill

Ottawa, June 27 —(CP)— Many members of the Commons today began preparing to take part in the debate on the budget brought down last night by Finance Minister Ilsley, but while they made their preparations the House resumed study of a bill setting up a department of National Health and Welfare.

The budget debate is scheduled to begin Thursday. As yet there is no indication of how long it will last.

Until the debate opens, the House will occupy itself with government legislation, including the National Health and Welfare measure, given first reading after Mr. Ilsley completed his budget speech. A resolution to the bill was passed after the House gave third reading to a bill setting up a Department of Reconstruction.

Health and Welfare Bill.

The purpose of the Health and Welfare bill is to establish a department under the direction of a minister who would have powers of investigation in matters relating to the "health, social security and welfare" of Canadians. The department would comprise that part of the present Department of Pensions and National Health not included in the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Establishment of a department of veterans affairs already has been approved by the Commons. The department would deal with all matters concerning ex-service personnel.

Opposition members expressed belief the duties the government planned to assign to the health and welfare department might conflict with the duties and rights of similar provincial departments.

Grote Stirling (PC) — Yale) said under the British North America Act most matters dealing with health and social welfare fell under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

"The Dominion government seems to me to be assuming a very large task and perhaps an impossible one when it undertakes the management and control of the social security and welfare of the people," he said. "It does appear to me it would be not only undesirable but harmful if this went out to the public of Canada giving them the idea that the Dominion government is able to accomplish a great deal more in pensions and National Health not included in the Department of Veterans Affairs."

BRITISH SMASH NAZIS' ODON RIVER DEFENCES
FOUR RUSSIAN ARMIES CLOSE IN ON MINSK

Big Tank Battle Rages 5 to 6 Miles Southwest of Caen

Gen. Montgomery's Drive Widens Breach in Line

FLANKING MOVEMENT CUTS HIGHWAY

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 28 (AP)—British tank columns burst two miles through the German's Odon river line and engaged the enemy in the greatest armored battle of the liberation campaign four miles southwest of Caen today.

The clash blazing now in open country may decide the fate of a large part of the German 15th and 17th armies. The enemy had grouped four armored divisions around Caen, his eastern Normandy stronghold 120 miles from Paris.

Carving down southwest of Caen in an outflanking drive, the British infantry and armor tore a breach six miles wide in Nazi defences, but the peninsular base road from Caen, poured over the Odon river, and battered two miles deeper to a point northeast of Esquay.

Slice Highway.

This deep penetration sliced the road from Caen to Evrecy, and threatened the remaining German-held highways feeding into Caen from the south and southeast.

British armor can move swiftly across the open, rolling plains south of Caen, and the Germans must block this thrust or face the threat of having large forces encircled. Swift, stabbing armored drives are an old story to Gen. Montgomery's desert veterans, and one of Britain's most famous tank generals is directing the operations.

Fierce fighting also broke out a few miles north of Caen, with British troops pinning down German defence forces while tanks swept in from behind.

Lash at Reserves.

Allied planes hovered over the tank battle and lashed out at Nazi Reserves. Twenty-five German tanks were knocked out in Tuesday's fighting, and today's battle was on a much larger scale. Planes shot up 27 troop-carrying vehicles rushing about 800 German reinforcements to a weak spot, destroying 12 and damaging the others.

British infantrymen alone have advanced more than 10,000 yards—some six miles—since Gen. Montgomery began his whiplash offensive Monday. The punch won Tourville along the Cross-Peninsular road from Caen, then thrust on northeast of Esquay, about 7 1-2 miles southwest of Caen and midway between the Odon and Orne rivers.

"The operation is very successful and we hold a very strong corridor across the Odon", a staff officer in the field told an Associated Press correspondent.

Important Highway Cut.

Other British units, with supporting artillery fire provided by British and Canadian gunners, pushed forward in the Cambes area, four miles north of Caen, said Ross Munro, Canadian Press War correspondent, in another field dispatch.

Americans in Cherbourg captured a second German general, the deputy commander of Cherbourg, Maj.-Gen. Robert Stattler, yesterday when they stormed the arsenal in the Port City, one of the last centres of Nazi resistance.

Supreme headquarters disclosed that the Allies had suffered 40,549 casualties in the first two weeks of the invasion. A similar announcement was released simultaneously at Ottawa.

FIRST THREE-WAY SHUTTLE-BOMBING OPERATION MADE

U.S. Fortresses Fly To Berlin Then To Poland and Finally To Italy

OIL REFINERIES HIT

Rome, June 28 —(AP)— The first three-way shuttle-bombing operation of the European war was disclosed today. United States 8th Air Force Flying Fortresses took off at Russian bases, bombed a Polish Galicia oil refinery and landed in Italy.

The Flying Fortresses started from England June 21, participated in the record American assault against Berlin, and landed at Russian fields of the Eastern Command, U. S. Strategic Air Forces.

Long-range fighters escorted the bombers on Monday's flight from Russia against a refinery at Drohobycz, 45 miles southwest of Lwow, in pre-war Poland. Many explosions and fires were reported there. A few enemy planes were encountered, but they did not attack, and headquarters said all the bombers and their escort completed the mission. U. S. fighters from Italy joined the escort after the bombing.

Flatten Airdromes

A great Allied aerial offensive aimed at flattening every German operational airdrome in France was resumed today with a triple attack by at least 750 American heavy bombers after the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. had hurled 1,000 planes against the two key rail centres in France and rocket installations along the Channel coast during the night.

The Couvren, Athies and Juvincourt airfields — all in the vicinity of Laon — were blasted in clear weather this morning by the U.S. aircraft.

Railway yards at Saarbrucken and other unspecified military targets in the vicinity of Paris and Laon also were attacked by heavy bombers.

In daylight today another formation of R.A.F. heavies with fighter escort bombed French flying-bomb emplacements.

2,000 Sorties Flown

The R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. took over night operations following a day of brisk Allied aerial activity in which more than 2,000 sorties were flown in unfavorable weather.

The R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raiders split into three forces for their attacks, the two largest striking simultaneous blows at Vitry Le Francois and Vaires, key rail junctions south and east of Paris which the Nazis have been jamming with troops and supplies headed for the front.

The third force of British night raiders meanwhile subjected the Nazis' rocket bomb installations to another heavy assault.

R.C.A.F. GROUND CREWS FLY TO FRANCE

Servicing ground personnel for the first Canadian Fighter Unit to move into an airstrip in France were flown in by Dakota aircraft of the Transport Command, manned by mixed Royal Canadian Air Force and R.A.F. crews. Spitfires escorted the flight from England across the Channel to an airstrip in Normandy from which R.C.A.F. fighter squadrons have been operating since June 10th. This fully operational unit is under the command of Wing Commander M. Brown of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The fighter squadrons are the Wolf Squadron, the City of Oshawa Squadron and the Red Indian Squadron. It's a bit squeezy in half a doorway, but this bunch happened to be from Ontario. Six of the seven are: Cpl. D. Johnson of Toronto, L.A.C. J. Menard, Blind River; Cpl. S. Calvert, Timmins; Cpl. D. R. Adams, Barrie; L.A.C. M. Murphy, Windsor and Cpl. W. ALLIES NEARING PORT OF LIVORNO ON WEST COAST

San Vincenzo Taken From Germans After Bitter House-to-House Fighting

BRITISH ADVANCE

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 28—(AP)—San Vincenzo, only 32 miles south of the big port of Livorno on the Italian West Coast, was wrested from the Germans after a bitter house-to-house battle that lasted for several hours Tuesday night, and today the Allied 5th Army was reported slugging steadily forward.

Meanwhile British 8th Army units took possession of Gioiella and Porto, west and southwest of Lake Trasimeno, moving forward slowly in the face of heavier opposition than that offered the 5th.

San Vincenzo had been converted into a fortress by the Nazis.

Farther inland on the 5th Army front an American armored force continued to roll back stubborn enemy resistance and occupied the villages of Chiusdino and Travale. Chiusdino is only 17 miles southwest of Siena, key highway and communications centre 31 miles south of Florence.

Supported by Italian partisans, an American infantry force bypassed, then surrounded and captured the town of Sasseta, four miles northeast of San Vincenzo, despite its defence by elements of the German 17th SS Division, identified in that sector for the first time.

Other enemy units were mopped up in the village of Belvedere, south of Chiusdino and Travale, while the French, who advanced to the vicinity of San Quirico D' Orcia, 22 miles southeast of Siena on Highway 2, beat back repeated enemy counter-attacks.

Hurriedly Lay Mines

In addition to moving in reinforcements, the Germans opposed further 5th Army advance with increased artillery fire, hurriedly laid mine fields and assembled new concentrations of anti-tank guns. Disabled German tanks were used as road blocks and the village of Travale was demolished by the enemy in an attempt to convert the entire town into a road block.

The 8th Army continued to move forward slowly, capturing the towns of Gioiella and Porto. Gioiella, 4½ miles southwest of Castiglione, on the west shore of lake Trasimeno, fell to a tank force only after a six-hour battle. Limited gains were made on the east side of the lake, where the enemy was holding Magione in force.

Five miles north of Perugia the 8th Army climaxed a day's hard fighting by occupying the dominating hilltops of Monte Bagnola and Monte Pacciano. East of the Tiber the village of Pagliaccia was taken.

Enemy losses at the hands of Italian-based Allied planes were placed officially at more than 100 in two days. It was announced that 38 Luftwaffe fighters were blasted out of the air by American heavy bombers and escorting fighters over the Budapest area yesterday. A total of 65 had been reported destroyed in the air and on the ground the preceding day.

Great Air Attack Supports Thrusts In White Russia

Two Big Obstacles, Berezina River And City of Borisov Remain in Path

50 MILES TO GO

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, June 28 —(AP)— Supported by one of the greatest air attacks ever hurled against the Germans on the Russian front, the Red Army closed in from three directions today on Minsk, capital of White Russia.

Dispatches from the front said that probably never before had Stormovik dive-bombers been thrown with such strength and effectiveness against Nazi armored forces. Hour after hour they were reported searching out German tanks, plastering them in mass with their flying artillery and blasting the way for four armies converging in a great semi-circle on the gateway city to Warsaw and Germany.

Three Spearheads.

The northernmost of the three spearheads aimed at Minsk was composed of Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic Army and 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's 3rd White Russian Army. In the van of this group were the Stormoviks, fast yak fighter planes and medium bombers of Lt.-Gen. N. P. Papivin, Bagramian's 37-year-old air commander, and Col.-Gen. Timofey Kruikin, Cherniakhovsky's youthful aviation chief.

Two of the most astute students of aviation in the Red Air Force, these young officers were reported throwing clouds of dive-bombers and medium bombers against German ground troops and fortifications, blasting bridges and strafing communications lines over a wide area.

Cherniakhovsky, youngest army general in Russia, turned westward toward Minsk after capturing Orsha and drove steadily forward. Two big obstacles were in his path—the Berezina River and the city of Borisov.

Field dispatches said Cherniakhovsky's advance units were less than 50 miles from Minsk and about 26 miles east of Borisov. Other units under his command were reported moving rapidly through sparsely settled lake country to the forest area further north, where they were threatening to outflank Borisov from the northwest in conjunction with Bagramian's troops.

Possess Great Strength.

This combined force, which possesses great strength as far north as positions west of the captured town of Kamen, also offered the Germans another problem. While it is only 85 miles northeast of Minsk, it is just 35 miles from the railway leading from Germany and Poland into Polotsk, 65 miles from the Latvian border and less than 108 miles from Lithuania.

The third thrust to Minsk came from Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's 3rd White Russian Army, driving up from the southeast over the Minsk-Gomel highway and railway.

A tremendous aviation force was likewise in the battle along this front.

Rokossovsky's army has pushed ahead toward Minsk, its advancing units about 75 miles away, while other units mopped up and surrounded a group of five German divisions just southeast of Bobruisk, which is tottering, with Russians already in the streets.

Strong air support was thrown also into the battle for Mogilev, where Gen. George Fedorovich Zakharov's 2nd White Russian Army battled the Nazis in the city's streets.

Between Mogilev and Orsha and Orsha and Minsk, the Russians have seized numerous trains packed with tanks, guns, ammunition and other stores, front dispatches said.

Use New Bomber.

The Red Air Force is employing a new two-engine bomber, the "Tupolev 2," over the entire front. It is especially useful against railways, trains and blockhouses.

JAPANESE FORCES SURROUND VITAL RAIL JUNCTION

Loss of Hengyang Would be Greatest Blow to China Since 1938

MISSIONARIES LEAVE

Chungking, June 28 —(AP)—The High Command indicated tonight that Japanese forces have surrounded Hengyang, vital railway junction in Hunan Province. Loss of this city would be the greatest blow to China since the fall of Canton and Hankow in October, 1938.

"Severe fighting for the possession of Hengyang now is in progress on all sides of the city," said a communique, adding that "the city, however, is still in our hands."

With the fall of Hengyang the way would be open for a Japanese advance on Kuwong, provisional capital of Kwantung, or on Kewlin, provisional capital of Kwangsi, from which most foreign agencies have already withdrawn or are now withdrawing.

Missionaries from abroad who were in the threatened areas have left for Weiyang or Kunmiang.

American planes continued their blows against the Japanese in Hunan, with widespread attacks on troop columns and cavalry units and Japanese-held points. These slowed down but did not halt the enemy advance.

Lt.-Gen. Stilwell's north Burma headquarters announced that seven aircraft were missing from the latest operations in Hunan and Yunnan.

JAP FREIGHTER SUNK

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 28 —(AP)— Aircraft from the southwest Pacific hit Yap Island in the Carolines with 35 tons of bombs and destroyed nine enemy airplanes in the newest sweep from this sector in support of the Saipan operations farther north. Bombers also sank a Japanese freighter and damaged three merchantmen off northwest New Guinea.

363 CANADIANS KILLED IN FIRST 15 DAYS INVASION

1,359 Were Wounded, 1,093 Missing in Figures Given Out

REPORT GRATIFYING

Ottawa, June 28 (CP)—Canadian casualties in the first 15 days of the invasion of France totalled 2,815, it was announced today by Defence Headquarters. There were 363 killed, 1,359 wounded and 1,093 missing.

Canadian casualties were announced simultaneously with those of the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Canadian casualty statement contained no comment, but last week in the Commons Defence Minister Ralston said casualties had been "moderate" and below the total number estimate for the initial phase of the operation. He described this report as "gratifying."

The only Canadian division identified so far in France has been the 3rd division under Maj.-Gen. R. F. L. Keller of Kelowna, B.C., and Canadian paratroopers. However, there are probably other Canadian forces in the action and the United States-British units identified do not necessarily complete the total makeup of the force. The Canadians participated in the seizure of Bayeux and the hard fighting around Caen.

Italian Casualties Announced.

Yesterday Defence Headquarters here announced casualties for the nine months of the Italian campaign up to the fall of Rome, June 4, totalled 11,340 made up of 2,268 killed, 8,572 wounded and 500 missing and prisoners of war.

Using these figures as a comparison, an army spokesman said Canadians, who pioneered mass invasion tactics at Dieppe, suffered possibly more heavily than any Canadian force since.

And his statement seemed borne out for the French figures covered a 15-day period compared to the dawn-to-dusk encounter at Dieppe when Canada suffered 1,985 casualties. The army spokesman made his statement before the French casualties were given and he said he doubted if any day's casualty total in France would exceed the Dieppe figure.

SEE FINAL BREACH OF U.S., FINLAND IN NEAR FUTURE

Finns Say "Perfect Understanding" Reached With Germany

NAZIS PROMISE AID

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, June 28 — (AP) — Relations with Finland were at the breaking point again today, and some officials predicted that the final breach between the United States and its long-time Scandinavian friend would be made in a matter of hours.

The Finnish government's announcement last night that it had reached a "perfect understanding" with Germany and that the Nazis had promised the Finns all the armed help they would need in their fight against Russia, was described by advocates of a break as "the last straw."

At the State Department it was said that the announcement ended all hope of reaching a Russo-Finnish peace on any basis short of Finland's complete defeat.

Finnish policy moved to the fore again just as diplomatic officials became reasonably certain of another development in the rapidly shifting European political picture—that General deGaulle now is almost certain to visit President Roosevelt here the first week in July.

The President said recently he would receive the chief of the French Committee of National Liberation who is seeking United States recognition of the Committee as provisional government of France. At yesterday's news conference, Mr. Roosevelt said the General had asked whether the period July 5-9 would be agreeable to the President and he is being told that it is entirely satisfactory.

In the case of Finland the final decision would have to be made by Mr. Roosevelt. The President is understood to have prevented a rupture of relations on one occasion many months ago. He acted then, it is reported, in the hope that continued American friendship would influence inland to make peace with Russia. One major peace effort failed and possibly others.

PHILIPPE HENRIOT ASSASSINATED BY FRENCH PATRIOTS

15 to 20 Uniformed Men Enter Bedroom of Vichy Minister

A COLLABORATIONIST

By LEWIS HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 28 —(AP)—Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Information and Propaganda, was assassinated Tuesday night in Paris by 15 or 20 uniformed men who forced their way into his bedroom, the Axis radios announced today.

Apparently a victim of French patriots, Henriot was the most important collaborationist yet to fall.

Berlin agencies first broadcast reports of the assassination. A short time later Pierre Laval, Vichy Chief of State, took to the air and declared Henriot "was animated only by patriotism. He fell this morning a hero."

The German agency Transocean, which said Henriot had reached Paris yesterday in company with Laval, declared it was not possible to ascertain whether the killers were "dressed in the uniform of militia or police." D.N.B. declared flatly the assassins were masquerading as members of the Vichy militia.

Forced Way Into Room

Transocean said 15 or 20 men forced their way into the Ministry of Information where Henriot was living, demanded to see him, and fired when his bedroom door was opened.

The Berlin broadcast failed to mention whether any of the assassins have been captured — a strong indication that they got away.

Two weeks ago Henriot was reported visiting Germany where he was said to have conferred with Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, Nazi Propaganda Minister, and Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

D.N.B. reported Berlin comment that Henriot "died for the Battle of Europe" and blamed Britain for inciting "French terrorists to this action." Berlin broadcasts gave him voluminous praise.

Attempts Made Before

Attempts have been made before on the life of Henriot, but each time he escaped.

Born in 1889 in Reims, Henriot began his adult life as a schoolmaster and lecturer. In 1932 he was elected as a Rightist Deputy for Bordeaux and was re-elected in 1936.

He became allied with the collaborationists soon after the fall of France and was named propaganda minister in January, 1944.

All-Out War by Allies Placing Heavy Strain on Nazi Oil Stock

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 28 (AP)—Capitalizing on lessons learned in Tunisia, when the Nazi war machine collapsed in a welter of stalled trucks and grounded planes because of an oil shortage, the Allies are making an all-out effort to speed Germany's final surrender by again draining away her military life-blood.

Allied air chiefs directing this campaign say there already is an "acute shortage" of oil in Germany, but beyond this they will not go in assessing the situation.

Britain's Ministry of Economic Warfare, however, has estimated that German oil production has been cut to one-third of maximum and that the Nazi army is getting less than half the oil it requires for normal operations—let alone for the present tremendous defensive effort it is facing on all fronts.

Since that information became available the Allied air forces have dealt some of their heaviest blows against enemy oil production.

Hit 12 German Plants.

Daylight bombers hit 12 German oil plants June 20 in a raid which the U.S. army air force describe as one of the two heaviest blows they have levelled against the German war effort to date.

Last Friday and Saturday Mediterranean-based Allied bombers attacked the Ploesti oil fields in Romania and on Sunday joined with Britain-based heavyweights in raids on German oil installations in southern France.

On Monday a refinery at Vienna was bombed and last night the Air Ministry announced that a night attack upon the synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen had cut at least another 1,000 tons of oil per day from German supplies—"at least temporarily."

That figure is about one-fortieth of the normal German supply, and on the basis of the latest estimates about one-tenth of the actual present supply.

Germany's normal oil supply (now reduced by two-thirds) is estimated at about 15,000,000 tons annually.

While this total supply is reported to have been cut to about 5,000,000 tons, it cannot be assumed, however, Allied experts point out, that Germany is about to go under, because the oil situation is more complicated than these statistics indicate. Damage to installations is constantly being repaired, and there always is the imponderable question of German reserves.

4 More ME109s Are Shot Down, Winnipeg Men Destroy Two Each

(Written for The Canadian Press)
By P/O. STANLEY HELLEUR

A Canadian Airfield in France, June 28, (CP Cable)—Four more ME109s fell yesterday to sharpshooters of Squadron Leader's Dal Russell's Canadian Spitfire squadron over France. Flt. Lt. Harry Dowding, D.F.C., of Sarnia, Ont., and F/O. Stan McClarry, of Winnipeg, each destroyed two.

The squadron, one of the recently arrived units from Canada, now part of the Canadian wing led by Wing Cmdr. Johnny Johnson, spotted six Messerschmitts flying at low altitude and peeled to the attack from about 8,000 feet.

Both Dowding, who raised his own score to six destroyed, and McClarty were close on the tails of their victims when they made the kills. McClarty, for whom it was first blood, in fact was so close he flew through burning wreckage and scorched the propeller, starboard wing and elevator rudders of his Spit so badly the paint was peeled off.

"I guess I wasn't much more than 50 yards away from him when he blew up", the young redhead said. "He seemed to go up in one big sheet of flame and I was smelling fire and brimstone and burnt rubber. It was a little too close for comfort".

Dowding's aircraft hadn't come to a full stop at its dispersal bay before his ground crew, led by LAC. Maurice Smith of Ottawa, the armorer, were on the wings and asking Downing all about it. "That makes four Jerries knocked off by guns that I have worked on", said Smith.

WORST CASES KILLED OFF

Lisbon, June 28 —(CP Reuters)— An English girl repatriated from Lieberau concentration camp in Germany said here yesterday that when part was moved to Lieberau other part was moved to Lieberau lunatic asylum after the Wilhelmstrasse was bombed during last week's attack on Berlin, the worst cases among the inmates were killed off to make room for the hysterics.

Ex-Newspaper Boys Make Best Officers

Major-General James Ulio, Adjutant-General of the U.S. Army stated in a recent article: "An army doctor in Italy, as a result of his observations in the field, has said he believes the best officers are ex-newspaper boys." It is the General's contention that the best officer material is coming from the ranks of young men who learned to act and think for themselves and make money as boys.

Garage Burned, House Damaged In $600 Blaze

Fire of an undetermined origin starting in a vacant garage at the rear of 340 Ann Street caused considerable excitement in the immediate East Ward district at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning when shortly after two o'clock neighbours discovered the garage to be in a blaze. Damage estimated by fire officials at $600, was done when the resulted before the flames were brought under control.

Burned were the vacant frame garage and adjoining shed which were built up against the brick house at 346 Ann Street, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kolovas, while nearby garages and roofs were scorched by the blaze. The Kolovas residence was also damaged slightly when fire ate into door and window cases.

Hampered somewhat by the short-handedness on the fire department, firemen were hard-pressed to gain control over the flames before extensive damage was done to the building and nearby household furniture. Two of the heavy hose were run to the scene of the fire, while the small hose from the city pumper hose tank was used to spray the fire in the garage. Chief Ross Kolovas, residence to prevent spread of the flames into the window cases. With firemen on the job of shift, the alternative fire, only seven men were available by Fire Chief William Lynch to combat the flames.

Owner of the house and garage damaged by the fire was Miss Ann Hurley, 46 Queen Street, Speaking with the Ontario Intelligencer, this morning Miss Hurley was at loss to explain the origin of the fire as was not even an electric light wire in the garage in which the fire started.

Making Out Will First Responsibility Of Family Man

Why a man of otherwise sound business principles will spend all his years in building up an estate and then fail to spend as much as 60 minutes in drawing up a will to the direction of its disposal after his death, is one of the most amazing facts, which puzzles the legal profession.

Thus were the words of Carman A. Jerry, from the Royal Trust Company, Belleville, when he spoke to members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday noon.

Carman argued, that the making out of a will was one of the first responsibilities of a family man and he further advised, that as the result of changing systems of income taxation and succession duties, if beneficiaries were to be protected as intended, wills should be brought up to date every four or five years.

Despite the fact, that simple wills were often brought out cheaply, he pointed out, they were not always the logical answer to advantageous disposal of an estate, which was explained by the speaker.

Consultation with a legal adviser and full consideration of the man or woman named as executor of a will should be termed as essential factors. "The making out of a will is a simple, short-term affair, but it is a good business and a mark of good citizenship," declared Mr. Jerry.

Able to Offer Assistance.

Trust companies are able to offer valuable assistance to persons making out wills and that this service was being used by persons with comparatively small estates was emphasized by the fact that 35 percent of the business trust companies was in estates amounting to less than $30,000. Trust companies do not usually draft a will in its final form, their duty being only to advise, leaving the role of a client's legal advisor.

Their business was essentially of administration, and the estate under the surveillance of an organization of experts who see to it that exactly what provisions a will should contain.

The guest speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Clarence Farrell, while a vote of appreciation being expressed by Fred Deacon. President Jack McVeigh was in the chair, following a brief business session conducted by Secretary Ken Kinsmen, in the service it was announced by Mr. McVeigh, he was appealed to Kiwanis members to give full support to the present carrier fund drive, staged this week.

President McVeigh announced that the Kiwanis Club clinic would be closed during the first two weeks in July, this procedure having been considered advisable owing to the number of persons who might be out of the city during vacation time. Contributions for the purchase of a magic wagon had been generous, but difficulty was being experienced in obtaining the equipment. Leo Riggs was back at his accustomed place at the piano while Harold Carruthers acted as song leader. Bill Harmon acted as sergeant-at-arms with guests welcomed by Fred Lewis.

'Rainbow Gang' Plans Big Reunion When War Ends

Five or six years ago a group of Belleville youth formed a "gang" together by that invisible bond called comradeship, played their sports hard, fought hard, went to school together. They made the then Victoria Playground their sports field, on Jim Zakos, their headquarters. There they planned for their chats, refreshments and plans for their varied activities.

They dubbed themselves the "Rainbow Gang" and the name stuck.

That was five or six years ago.

Today the "Rainbow Gang," eleven all told, are veterans of the present war. They enlisted within a short time of one another and with the exception of three all are overseas.

They keep in touch with each other and have done so down through the dark war years, and today they are planning for the greatest reunion ever held here by any group of the Bay of peace dawns.

Sgt. Elmer Bonter Wounded in Eye During Invasion

Trenton, (Special)—The big transport' plans roared over the Channel. Around it the sky was filled with fighting, heavy bombers, gliders and other transport aircraft, as D-Day dawned upon an expectant world.

Also they were over the Germ while peaceful fields of Normandy.

The hour approached for their respective objectives. Doors opened and little blobs of white stood out against the early morning sky, to mushroom into billowing parachutes.

Among the parachutists was Sergt. Elmer Bonter, of Trenton, a former newspaper writer and photographer. As he slowly drifted to earth he became separated from his fellows. A gust of wind bore him in a westerly direction and a few minutes later he landed in a Normandy field.

Cutting himself loose from his parachute and securing his pistol, equipment and camera, he proceeded to explore the only photographic opportunity in the area surrounding country, and soon came across a group of German snipers, who became unaligned in the fall but a day or two later was wounded in an eye which necessitated hospitalization.

However, he got his pictures and accomplished his mission back to England. He, and Sergt. Reynolds, of Kingston, were the only photographers with the Canadians. Reynolds also was wounded during the first days of the invasion.

Flt. Lt. Johnson, Belleville, Tells Of Great Damage

With the R.C.A.F. in France, June 26, (CP-Cable)—Wing Cmdr. George Keefer, D.F.C., and Bar, of Chatham, Ontario, leading Canadian fighter squadron, destroyed an ME109 in the Beauvais area Tuesday, for his fourth "kill" since D-Day.

"The bird is out," said Keefer. "I saw the aircraft crash. In an operation just previous to this one Sqdn. Ldr. G. D. Robertson, Toronto, destroyed an FW190, his second in a month.

This squadron had mauled a convoy of vehicles and were en route to a French base when the enemy plane was spotted.

A Spitfire squadron led by Sqdn. Ldr. L. M. Chamero, D.F.C., of Roland, Man., accounted for 27 enemy vehicles on the road south of Rouen Tuesday.

Flt. Lt. W. H. Johnson of Belleville, Ont., said "there were so many burned out vehicles back of the German lines that it was hard to tell whether you were shooting at something already out of commission."

JOHN W. FANNING
(Kapuskasing — Stirling)

Stirling, June 28 (Special) — The funeral of John W. Fanning, Stirling, who died suddenly on Saturday, Friday, June 23rd., took place at Stirling on Monday afternoon, 26th, to St. John's Anglican Church where service was conducted by the Rev. C. B. Brasill, assisted by the Rev. F. C. Beazer, Rector of the Parish of Stirling-Rawdon.

Interment took place in Stirling Cemetery and the bearers were Messrs. W. Wright, D. Bedford, W. West, A. Morrison and Volney Richardson.

The late Mr. Fanning was born fifty two years ago in County Wexford, Ireland, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fanning. Since 1915 he lived at Kapuskasing where he was yard superintendent for the Spruce Falls Power Company. He was prominent in the affairs of the community being a member of the town council and in the activities of the Anglican church, he took an active part being a member of the vestry and Rector's Warden. Previously he was District Deputy Grandmaster of Kapuskasing Masonic District and Past Master of Spruce Falls Masonic Lodge. In the esteem of many friends he held a high place.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Annie Vance; one daughter, Kathleen and one son, Robert, both at home; six sisters, Julian Rose Fanning, Belfast, Ireland; Mrs. S. Downin, Kapuskasing; Mrs. Jack Leach, Ireland; Miss June Fanning, New London, Connecticut; Miss Hilen Fanning, London, England; and Mrs. Jack Livingston, Londonderry, Northern Ireland; two brothers, Mr. Frank Fanning, County Wexford, Ireland, and Mr. Edward Fanning, London, Ontario.

JOSEPH FARLEY
(McKellar, Ontario.)

Joseph Farley, age 70 years, of McKellar, near Parry Sound, Ontario, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, after a brief illness. He came to Belleville direct from his home for medical treatment and was admitted to the hospital on June 20. He was a bachelor.

The body was forwarded yesterday from the Grant Funeral Home, North Front Street, to McKellar, where the funeral will take place.

FOUNDER SELLS BARS

Hershey, Pa., June 28 — (AP) — The candy booth in Hershey Park was unattended and customers were waiting, so an elderly man took over and sold four nickel bars before the clerk returned. It was then learned customers learned they'd been waited on by the 86-year-old millionaire founder of the park, chocolate magnate Milton S. Hershey.

Sqdn. Ldr. Doney Has Part in Launching Popular Song Hit

Squadron Leader Harvey Doney (remember that handsome medical chap at Sizardee who thrilled many Belleville listeners with his swell baritone voice), now officer commanding the R.C.A.F. convalescent hospital at Dryadale, recently stepped out of character, or in it, whichever, of all things, a song-plugger.

It all happened this way:

It is the story of WO, Lew Watt, and Sergt. Jimmy Rose, of the famous PO. C. Outhouse, who never wrote the words of a song in his life, and the O. O. who never "plugged" a tune in his many years of bartioning.

Well, it "just happened."

Lew Watt, the boy who were knocked around a bit while on operations overseas, sat down 'round the piano, and Watts just picked out a tune, It kept repeating itself and within a few days the flying "Geraiwins and Berlins" had the score down on Sheet Music White. Then Outhouse took a crack at lyric writing and lo, a new song, "Waiting For You" was born.

This "just happened" too.

Sergt. Jimmy Rose, concert pianist was present and the trio of birdmen "slipped around the piano" and by some quirk of coincidence the O. O. hummed the tune, Gordon cocked an ear and became interested. So did a well-known Toronto music publisher. So did Gordon Kodofsky, one of Canada's outstanding theatrical men.

That did it. With this moral support, the Watts-Outhouse duo whipped the song into shape. Now it has been sung wherever B/L Doney appears. He "just happens" to have it in his music case and the song "I have left" soon was called for an encore.

Anyway, S/L Doney gets around. The boys are getting around and so is the new song.

Sgt. Jimmy Rose insisted if "Waiting for You" becomes a hit.

George O'Brien Elected Grand Knight of Council

At the final meeting for the season of the Knights of Columbus, George O'Brien was elected Grand Knight, for the third term. The meeting held on Tuesday night in the Club Rooms was the best attended meeting of the season. The election of officers was conducted by the District Deputy George Lee in the chair.

Officers elected were as follows: Grand Knight—George O'Brien; Deputy Grand Knight—Jack Leary; Chancellor—Maurice Callaghan; Warden—Jack Hamill; Recorder—William Pinkle; Financial Sec. — Vincent McIntyre; Advocate—Peter Melchior; Trustees—W. Lynch, W. Doyle, F. Domenico; Inside Guard—Thomas Boyle; Outside Guard—W. Britton; Alternate to Convention—Father Lennon and Chaplain—Monsignor J. F. Nicholson assisted by the Rev. A.L. O'Donnell.

After the election of officers, the District Deputy turned the chair over to the Grand Knight, who thanked the members for the wonderful turnout and for the support given to him during his two years of office. He also stated that the First Degree would be held in October, and the other officers spoke briefly. Lecturer T. Macaro and his committee provided refreshments for the members. The District Deputy extended congratulations to the newly elected officers. The next meeting of the organization will not be held until the second Tuesday in September.

The Budget

Canadians can find grounds for inspiration for the future in what they have already achieved, according to the budget speech of the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, delivered on Monday. In the past fiscal year they have paid in direct taxation 56.7 per cent of the total Dominion revenue. Mr. Ilsley pointed with pride to the fact that "so prominent a feature of the over-all picture for the year was again the large part played by direct taxation. This form of tax is recognized as being most equitable, since it is possible in levying it to take account of family responsibilities in the case of the individual and imposes a burden in proportion to the taxpayer's ability to meet it."

How Canada can bear this burden was shown in the costs of the various services, Army $1,335,445,000, Navy $369,827,000, and Air Force $922,600,000, and Munitions Department $725,000,000.

Canada's gross unmatured funded debt is estimated at $10,689,000,000 of which 97 per cent is held in Canada. The net debt was estimated at $8,842,000,000 and the annual interest charge at an average rate of 2.57 per cent is $274,000,000. Mr. Ilsley gave the assurance that the size of the debt was not alarming and that it ought to be viewed in the perspective. Best of all, "the debt is almost wholly domestic. What is paid in debt charges goes into the pockets of taxpayers whose tax-paying capacity is thereby decreased. We have, through the great efforts of the War Finance Committee as a matter of deliberate policy, succeeded in distributing our new borrowing very widely so that the interest of the public debt will be paid, not to a few institutions and men of wealth but to probably not less than sixty per cent of the income earners of the country."

Of the total expenditure for the year of $5,360,122,000 more than half, namely $2,855,701,000, was the total revenue.

Canada's ability to buy war loan and savings certificates was indicated by Mr. Ilsley who pointed out that the total last year was $2,947,200,00 from these sources and will probably have to be exceeded in the present year.

The Minister called attention to a tendency to sell bonds and certificates before they come due. This meant withdrawal of money from the service of the nation and he advised that buying be curtailed until after the war.

The budget brings no new increases in taxes. It also brings the removal of the compulsory savings in taxes, of all duties on farm machinery, and of the 10 per cent war exchange tax. The removal of the forced savings tax does not imply that the need for saving is less, for it is actually greater than before. Compulsory savings removal means smaller deductions from pay envelopes and hence more money in the pockets of the taxpayers, but Mr. Ilsley advises that voluntary savings will have to be stepped up. There is in the forced savings fund about $200,000,000 to be refunded after the war.

It is allowed losses in any year may be charged back one year or forward three years for corporation or excess profits taxes, and business firms may borrow on the security of refundable portions of excess profits and corporation tax.

Having accomplished so much Canadians will continue their fullest efforts towards achieving complete victory over the enemy.

Cherbourg and Vitebsk

This week has opened under the most favorable auspices for the United Nations and disasters for Germany. Cherbourg has fallen to the American forces and so the first large city of France, also one of the greatest seaports, is in Allied hands and will be used extensively by the United Nations in furtherance of the invasion through France.

Vitebsk, gateway to the historic way to Warsaw, and anchor of the German defence line in White Russia, has fallen to the Russians with five Nazi divisions trapped.

German disasters in this war are numerous, the long line of Red Russian victories, encirclements of Germans and then along the long retreat from Stalingrad continuing with the fall of Vitebsk and heralding other like disasters to the foe. There was likewise a series of disasters which lost the Germans their hold on North Africa, besides the Nazi defeats which have yielded a large part of Italy. To the Germans the period of a year and a half has been of continued defeats and losses.

Now the Allied Powers, able to inflict destruction upon the enemy, are stronger than they have ever been and are fired with the inspiration of victory. The Allies are poised ever ready to strike blow after blow that will end in one result, the downfall of the German menace.

The successes on the three fronts have been perfectly co-ordinated and are making the strategy of the Germans pass through the greatest strain.

Over the heads of the German armies hangs the sword of Allied strength, ready to smite.

New phases of the struggle have opened in the three war theatres.

The war is striking in on Germany and Hitler's fortress is under attack from Normandy to the Baltic States and down into Italy.

What would not Germany give if she could have sowed strife among the Allies! But the great Conference at Teheran is a tie that binds the United Nations together in a way that intensifies the strength of these Powers. It is the tie that is going to strangle the Nazi power. The enemy has lost the power of taking the offensive for any risks he might take are sure to prove disastrous to the Germans.

City of St. Francis

(New York Times)

In Umbria our troops are occupying the country of the most ancient race in Italy. The Umbrians, apparently the first settlers on the coast of the Adriatic and in the valley of the Po, were gradually pushed out by the Etrurians. The Umbrian plain, rich in meadow and vineyard, mulberries and maize and wheat, with its old olive trees, its oaks, and here and there poplar and cypress, its gardens and orchards, its hills crowned with famous cities, has as much beauty, perhaps, as can be seen even in Italy. Our men who reached Perugia the other day are now in its neighbor, Assisi. On the way there they crossed a Roman bridge over the Tiber.

In the city the portico of a temple of Minerva with six Corinthian columns greets them on a public square. A renowned Latin poet, Propertius, was born in Assisi, but it is the city of a far greater poet, St. Francis. This was his city, this plain he could see from his father's house. More than 700 years after his death the young man about town who gave up ease and riches to serve lepers and the poor is one of the best beloved saints and endeared to very many outside of his own communion. His Friars of Orders Gray continue worthily his work. The Order of Poor Clares still hallows the name of its founder, the noble lady who gave up wealth, inspired by the example of St. Francis.

The fifteenth-century churches full of the treasures of revived art are the most interesting monuments of the city. You may see the garden where the briars he rode among brought forth roses, the garden of San Damiano, where the wrote "The Canticle of the Sun." The only fault of Rome is the excess of sights. Assisi is more easily surveyed.

Mortifications are often more painful than real calamities.—Goldsmith.

JUST FOLKS

SOLDIER SILENCE

"Oh, all I know of poetry and fancy speech and song
Is they may cheer you up a bit when things are going wrong.
Fine speeches are for peace time; for when the fighting starts
The heroes are the fellows who possess the stoutest hearts.

"I'm just a private, home once more, a ribbon on my chest,
And soldiers on the fighting line by speeches aren't impressed.
They've been with comrades under fire, land, ocean and the sky
And they have learned the bitterness of seeing comrades die.

"To 'stay-at-homes' all medals are a sign of glorious pluck,
But those who wear them smile, and say they're just a sign of luck.
A thousand others would have done the self-same deeds, they swear,
But luck was very kind, and we just happened to be there."

These fellows who have shared a charge against some fire-swept beach
Have lived to learn the difference 'twixt deed and fancy speech.
Yet, freedom is because of them; and, silent though they stay,
Their deeds will still be eloquent a thousand years away.

Pyle in Normandy:

Pyle Thinks Anyone Who Drinks Eau De Vie Should Be Decorated

By ERNIE PYLE

Barneville, Normandy—(By Wireless)—From this picturesque little town you can look down upon the western sea. In the centre of Barneville is a sloping, paved court, a sort of public square except that it is rectangular instead of square.

At one end of the square an army truck was parked. Scattered around the square were half a dozen American soldiers standing in doorways with their rifles at the ready. There are a few French people on the streets.

We went to the far end of the square, where three local French policemen were standing in front of the mayor's office. They couldn't speak any English, but they said there was one woman in town who did, and a little boy was sent running for her. Gradually a crowd of eager and curious people crushed is upon us, until there must have been 200 of them, from babies to old women.

Finally the woman arrived—a little dark woman with graying hair, and spectacles, and a big smile. Her English was quite good, and we asked her if there were any Germans in the town. She turned and asked the policemen.

Instantly everybody in the crowd started talking at once. The sound was like that of a machine that increases in speed until its noise drowns out all else.

Finally the policemen had to hush the crowd so the woman could answer us.

She said there were Germans all around, in the woods, but none whatever left in the town. Just then a German stuck his head out of a nearby second-storey window. Somebody saw him, and an American soldier was dispatched to get him.

Barneville is a fortunate place, because not a shell was fired into it by either side. The lieutenant with us told the woman we were glad nobody had been hurt. When she translated this for the crowd, there was much nodding in approval of our good wishes.

We must have stood and talked for an hour and a half. It was a kind of holiday for the local people. They were relieved but still not quite sure the Germans wouldn't be back. They were still under a restraint that wouldn't let them open up riotously. But you could sense from little things that they were glad to have us.

A little French shopkeeper came along with a spool of red, white and blue ribbon from his store. He cut off pieces about six inches long for all hands, both American and French. In a few minutes everybody was going around with a French tricolor in his buttonhole.

Then a ruddy-faced man of middle age, who looked like a gentleman farmer, drove up in one of those one-horse, high-wheeled work carts that the French use.

He had a German prisoner in uniform standing behind him, and another one, who was sick, lying on a stretcher. The farmer had captured these guys himself, and he looked so pleased with himself that I expected him to take a bow at any moment.

French people kept coming up and asking us for instructions. A man who looked as if he might be the town banker asked what he was supposed to do with prisoners.

We told him to bring them to the truck, and asked how many he had. To our astonishment he said he had 70 in the woods a couple of miles away, 120 in a nearby town, and 40 in another town.

As far as I could figure it out he had captured them all himself.

Another worried-looking Frenchman came up. He was a doctor. He said he had 26 badly wounded Germans down at the railroad station and desperately needed medical supplies. He wanted chloroform and sulfa drugs. We told him we would have some sent.

One character in the crowd looked as if he belonged in a novel of Bohemian life on the left bank in Paris. He couldn't possibly have been anything but a poet. He wore loose, flopping clothes that made him look like a woman. His glasses were thick, and hair about a foot long curled around his ears. I wish you could have seen the expressions of our tough, dirty soldiers when they looked at him.

When we finally started away from the crowd, a little old fellow in faded blue overalls ran up and asked us, in sign language, to come to his cafe for a drink. Since we didn't dare violate the spirit of hands-across-the-sea that was then wafting about the town, we had to sacrifice ourselves and accept.

So we sat on wooden benches at a long bare table while the little Frenchman puttered and sputtered around. He let two policemen and his own family in, and then took the handle out of the front door so nobody else could get in.

The Germans had drunk up all his stock except for some wine and some eau de vie. In case you don't know, eau de vie is a savage liquid made by boiling barbed wire, soapsuds, watch springs and old tent pegs together. The better brands have a touch of nitroglycerine for flavor.

So the little Frenchman filled our glasses. We raised them, touched glasses all around, and vived la France all over the place, and good-will-towards-men rang out through the air and tears ran down our cheeks.

In this case, however, the tears were largely induced by our violent efforts to refrain from clutching at our throats and crying out in anguish. This good-will business is a tough life, and I think every American who connects with a glass of eau de vie should get a Purple Heart.

SAFE AND SOUND REDUCING

Hypo-pituitary Obesity

A woman at thirty had a figure that rested the roving eye. Clothes built to the standard size fit her without so much as goring a gusset or whatever it is they generally do to make clothes fit. But, alas, by the time she reached the age of forty she had undergone considerable alterations herself. Her waist measure was still 29 inches but her chest or "bust" measure which had been 36 was only 33, while her hip measure, which had been 40 inches was now 46 inches. She had acquired "piano legs", a girdle of fat around the body at hip level, fat pads on the thighs above the knees, and a rather scrawny or gaunt appearance in the upper half of the body, except for fat pads on the upper arms. She had accumulated about thirty pounds of superfluous flesh, not evenly distributed over the body, but almost entirely in the southern hemisphere.

Hypopituitary obesity. Ain't it awful, Agnes?

Like many of her misguided sisters this woman made the mistake of "going on a diet," a freak diet, which she was gullible enough to believe professional beauties use to keep their jobs. She had several goes at it and gave up each time after a week or two of earnest endeavor, achieving evident impairment of health, temper and good looks but not more than a pound or two of weight reduction—the pound or two being promptly regained when she broke diet. Each such break occurred simultaneously with a carbohydrate gorge — induced or precipitated, perhaps, by the abnormal self-denial but such carbohydrate gorges or sprees of overindulgence in candy, sweets, starchy food are characteristic of hypopituitarism. So is increased carbohydrate tolerance — that is, the capacity of the body to assimilate carbohydrate (starch or sugar) without excreting sugar in the urine.

Everybody knows that the pituitary is one of the ductless glands. It is situated at the base of the brain behind the eyes above the back of the nasal cavity. Extracts of the pituitary gland of sheep, cattle or swine are used in medicine. One of these, administered by hypodermic injection, is an effective remedy for hypopituitary obesity, in many cases bringing about a satisfactory reduction and redistribution of the fat in five or six weeks.

But such gland treatment is not necessary in all cases. Equally good results are obtained from faithful adherence to a well planned diet and a daily schedule of moderate exercise.

These hypopituitary folk (mostly women in their thirties, but some men too) not only have a great fondness for carbohydrate foods but suffer real distress when they have to deny themselves such food for several hours, distress which sometimes amounts to serious collapse. This is because their blood sugar level becomes too low. They feel "right" only when they partake of some food which will promptly bring the blood sugar level up to normal.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Whooping Cough

Please explain what makes whooping cough dangerous. Is it loss of strength from the vomiting that occurs with the coughing spells, or is it strain on the heart or what? Our son, nine, has it, and the vomiting is making him lose weight noticeably. (Mrs. D. R.)

Answer — Chief danger is pneumonia. If patient is kept in the open air, not confined in poorly ventilated room at night, this is least likely to develop. Wide belt with insertions of elastic webbing, to support belly, is helpful to patient. X-ray treatments of diaphragmatic region moderate severity of coughing spells. Injections of pertussis bacterin (bacterial vaccine) in incubation stage (7 to 14 days interval between time of infection and beginning of illness) or even in the early days of the illness before a distinct whoop is heard after coughing spell, generally diminish severity and shorten duration of the disease.

Never Mind Fuzz

I am 37 years old. In the last few months have noticed a fuzz appearing on sides of my face. What can I do for it? Do creams and lotions have anything to do with it? (Mrs. H.M.E.)

Answers—Fuzz is on every woman's skin. Sometimes stimulation of massage and rubbing (with or without cream or lotion) causes the practically invisible fuzz to grow heavier and become visible. Best to let well enough alone. If you must do anything, keep it smooth by rubbing lightly with a fine pumice stone. Send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet "Cosmetic Blemishes" which tells how to deal with most facial or complexion blemishes.

Prime Minister King Assures Parliament General Election Will Be Held Before July 1945

Leader of Govt. Speaks Sharply of John Bracken, Leader of Opposition

DEFENDS POSITION

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, June 26 (CP)—Parliament Hill today was deep in the discussion of its commonest topic—the next general election.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King who as leader of the government will have a major responsibility in deciding the date of the next vote, assured the Commons Tuesday night that there will be an election before July 1, 1945.

That in itself was not surprising, as Mr. King on Jan. 31 told the House the life of parliament would continue until June, 1945, and he was opposed to parliaments extending their own terms of office.

But the Prime Minister Tuesday night said that he had told the House previously there would be an election either in the present year or next year. Some political observers, who have forecast an election this fall, said Mr. King's remark was "significant," in that it indicated an election this year still was possible.

When Mr. King spoke in January he said the government hoped to continue its work without being interrupted by a general election until the war was won. But a situation might arise in which the government could not continue with the authority it should have in wartime. In such a possible crisis which would make necessary an appeal to the people, He had no desire for an issue of that kind to develop.

Speaks Sharply of Bracken.

Mr. King Tuesday night spoke sharply of John Bracken, Progressive Conservative National Leader, who is chief of the party having the largest representation in the House although he has not been elected to a seat.

The Prime Minister said that Mr. Bracken had spoken of children's allowances proposed by the government as a "bribe". The allowances would not be payable until July 1, 1945, and the election would have been held before that date.

If Mr. Bracken had made the statement in the House, he would have been out of order, Mr. King continued. He questioned the position in which parliament was being placed before the country when the leader of a great political party was granted licence to say what he pleased about legislation before parliament with no one to call him to order.

"But there would be a reckoning "one of these days" in the matter of public discussion on the making of laws as carried on by men responsible because they had seats in parliament, and discussion outside parliament, by those who profess to represent great parties and at the same time are free to make any assertions about these without being required to make good on what they say."

Outline Liberal Record.

Mr. King made his references to Mr. Bracken as he spoke in support of the government bill to establish a department of National Health and Welfare which received second reading. He outlined the Liberal record of social legislation, recalling the establishment of the Labor Department of which he was the first Deputy Minister. Arguments against the bill, he said, by conservatives were similar to arguments which had been opposition against the bill before the House yesterday.

The Prime Minister said he had not intended to speak of Mr. Bracken's leader- ship, but on occasion to speak of it at another time.

He himself was responsible for fixing the date of payment of children's allowances at July next year.

"I was responsible for this session, that I had told this House and this country that there will be an election either during the present year or next year, before the effluxion of time of the present parliament which means that this parliament will be dissolved before that measure can come into force," Mr. King said.

"I was not going to do what a former leader of the party opposite did. I remember an important election, when money or wheat in storage was distributed throughout the whole of Western Canada within a couple of days before the polling took place.

"I was going to take great care to see that no one should say that a great social measure of this kind, a measure of great responsibility, was going to have its principle lowered by taking steps in any way which could influence the vote one way or another."

Graydon Critical.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, "We do we have social welfare in politics, like you are doing tonight? It is nothing but Liberal party politics."

Mr. King: "The Liberal party is the only party in Canada that has ever put social legislation on the statute books."

Mr. Graydon: "The Prime Minister only believes that."

Mr. King: "I believe that and I do."

Mr. Graydon: "You are only whistling while going through the cemetery."

Mr. King: "Every measure to which I have referred tonight has been a measure with which I have had a great deal to do, and I have had responsibility for, and it has been part of a consistent procedure on my part, as leader of the political party, to see that while need exists in our country and while something can be done to alleviate burdens, and while help can be given, the Liberal party will take those measures which we feel will leave us free to do our full duty in our day and generation."

Mr. Graydon: "May I just say this, that you are very much afraid of John Bracken."

Extend Bank Charters

Throughout the day, the House discussed the bill covering the new department, pausing only to approve two bills extending bank charters for six months beyond June 30, pending approval of the bank bill which provides 10-year extensions.

The bank bills later received first reading in the Senate.

Mr. King referred in particular to two criticisms of the bill.

G. H. Castleden said he was afraid the proposed new department was only a "gesture to hide the failure of our economy."

J. G. Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) said the bill left the impression because of social security were to be brought in but actually it only provided for the machinery with no provision for the adoption of social security.

Mr. King said that the history of measures like that setting up the labor department showed they went good in themselves and what they served to prevent was something in addition which could not be estimated. The department's work in preventing and settling industrial disputes was a contribution hard to estimate.

The Combines Investigation Act, measures covering fair wages, hours of work, old age pensions, unemployment insurance and research all had been sponsored by Liberal governments.

Mr. Diefenbaker had appeared "suspicious" of the value of the measure saying in the new department, but Mr. King said he believed it would be looked on as one of the greatest contributions ever made to the national life by parliament.

Gordon Fraser (PC — Peterboro West) said the removal of children who were ill from homes in which they were a handicap or a menace to other children did not provide for proper care for them should be a feature of a sound health program.

Hospitals Crowded

George Pulford, (L—Leeds), said conditions in hospitals at Brockville, Ont., had become "intolerable" because of overcrowding. Numbers of hospital patients had increased due to hospital care plans under which hospitalization payments were made to ensure hospital bills were met. Women to be admitted to maternity wards sometimes had to remain in corridors.

Earlier Mr. King had said the new department eventually—would administer Old Age Pensions, Pensions for the Blind, the Physical Fitness Bill and Family Allowances.

The Government contemplated a comprehensive national scheme in which federal and provincial activities would be integrated and which would include National Health Insurance.

A central agency on Health Legislation would be required but there was no intention of invading the provincial jurisdiction. There was the hope of a national-federal system of contributory Old Age Pensions.

Mr. King said he remembered the suggestion that the measure lacked sincerity and was "a paper gesture" which had been a member of Parliament but it ill-became any member to speak of legislation brought before parliament for enactment as a "gesture."

In early discussion of the Bill, Mr. Graydon said his party supported steps for the advancement of human welfare. He hoped the provinces had been fully consulted on the federal program as united action by all governmental authorities was needed. Housing had to be considered as a factor related to health and welfare.

During the afternoon debate, Harry Leader (L—Portage La Prairie) suggested a grant to permit examination of a high vitamin diet treatment for cancer developed by Dr. J. D. Davidson of Winnipeg which he said had helped him and many other sufferers.

FINNS COMMITTED TO FIGHTING ON BESIDE GERMANY

Nazi Troops Move Into Finland's Cities and Towns

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, June 26 — (AP) — With the Finnish government finally committed to fighting on beside Germany, Nazi troops moved into Finland's cities and towns in force today in response to a plea for help against the onrushing Soviet armies.

Helsinki resounded with the songs of marching German regular troops and SS Guards. The Germans seemed to be occupying all parts of the country and it was reported some already were in the Finnish front, where previously the Finns fought alone.

Last night a Finnish communique proclaimed that "comradeship-in-arms" had been reached between Germany and Finland and said that in answer to a Finnish appeal German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop had promised the military aid needed to continue the war against Russia.

Finland's Pretension Ended

Swedish dispatches said that so complete was Finland's alignment with the Nazis that henceforth the Finnish communique would be a part of the German communique. Thus ended Finland's pretensions that she was fighting a separate war with Russia.

As the Germans took possession of Helsinki Associated Press staff writer Robert Vermillion was ordered to telephone from there, despite stringent censorship: "I am moving —I emphasize moving—to the American Legation tonight. Watch Berlin."

Sturdevant said Finnish president Risto Ryti had been initiated the request for German aid and that Von Ribbentrop flew to Helsinki to confer with Ryti and Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay. It was uncertain whether Von Ribbentrop still was in Helsinki.

Fortifications Unfortressed

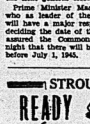
Until the negotiations, it was said, the Finnish parliament was uninformed of the proceedings, a duplication of the actions of Ryti and his associates when Finland went to war with Russia in 1941.

Relations between the Finns, Swedes and Finlanders were described as on a "day-to-day" basis.

One report has said Von Ribbentrop had promised the Finns five German divisions and 500 planes to continue the fight against Russia. Stockholm military opinion was that the Germans, hard-pressed on many fronts, many soldiers.

Madoc

Madoc, June 26. (Special)—An enthusiastic group of children met on Monday morning for the first session of Daily Vacation Bible School held in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church. From the opening hymn, fin the worship period to the closing prayer of the forenoon an unflagging interest was shown in all the activities of the school. This is a new experience for the children of this community, but a pleasant opportunity for learning through the part of the vacation period. The second day the group had grown with fifty per cent and from past experiences in such work it is to be expected that the school will grow still further.



The vacation school continues for two weeks and will be closed on Friday July 7, with a demonstration in the evening of what has been accomplished. Children of all churches as well as those who do not have any definite Sunday School affiliation are welcome. The enrollment shows that many are taking advantage of this welcome diversion. The program of the school includes instructions in the Bible. The primary group under the leadership of Mrs. E. Larsen is studying the Twenty-Third Psalm. The leader is using the flannel graph board to illustrate the truths taught in this Psalm, and the children are making a scroll illustrating each verse as od construction paper. The Junior group under the guidance of Mr. journeys of the Apostle Paul, and as handwork are making a booklet with maps illustrating the various places that the Apostle reached. Besides these activities, much is made of singing. The old familiar hymns are used, but also many new choruses are learned, including the special Vacation Bible School round adapted for this school. A period each day is spent on the spacious grounds where playing games suited for the various age groups. The director of the school is the minister of St. Peter's church, who has had several years of experience of directing such schools in other parts of the province.

The school commends itself to all the people of the community as a definite effort to keep the children off the streets during a period of the summer months where they are not occupied with the regular studies in the public schools. While this is a small initiative attempt it is to be hoped that in future years such a school may be continued as part of the activities for the boys and girls during the Summer vacation.

24 BANDS TO PARTICIPATE

Los Angeles, June 26—(AP)—The swing band boys, Harry James, Kay Kyser, and Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey among them, are going to the financial aid of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Group. To help wipe out a $25,000 deficit and raise $150,000 to finance the Philharmonic's winter season of classical music, the kids of the Jitterbugs will participate in a three-night festival featuring 24 bands.

This way you'll get up to one-half more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit than you will if you use old-fashioned jam and jelly making methods. And you'll get simply lovely jam or jelly—firmer, more sparkling and better tasting.

There are other important wartime reasons, too, for using Certo. It's so much quicker, so easy that even beginners find it very easy to use.

Certo Hides Fruit Ge Further —Saves Your Time and Energy

SUCH A VERY SHORT BOIL—It's quite astonishing how Certo cuts down boiling time. Certo jams need only a one to two-minute full, rolling boil . . . Certo jellies only a half minute to a minute! No long, tedious boiling and stirring. You economize on time, on effort and on fuel.

50% MORE JAM OR JELLY—During this very short boil practically no fruit juice boils off to steam as it does when you use the old long boil. The saving is so great that you get an increase of about 50%—or one-half more—jam or jelly without any increase in the amount of fruit you use.

RETAINS NATURAL TASTE AND COLOUR—Long boiling spoils the natural fruit taste and dulls the natural colour. But boiling time with Certo is so very short it cannot spoil either taste or colour. The luscious taste and lovely colour of the fresh fruit are both preserved in Certo jams and jellies.

ENDS GUESSWORK—You end guesswork when you make jams or jelly the Certo way. You get easy-to-follow recipes that give exact quantities and timing—full directions for every step. Different fruits need different handling. Follow exactly the Certo recipe for the fruit you are using and you'll get splendid results.

WHAT CERTO IS

Certo is fruit pectin—the natural jellying substance in fruit—extracted from fruits in which it is most plentiful. It allows you to make jam or jelly from fully ripe fruit instead of the under-ripe fruit called for in old-fashioned recipes.

Look for Book of 72 Tested Recipes under the label of every Certo bottle.

A pound of jam or jelly made the Certo way contains no more sugar than a pound made the old long-boil way.

WEDDINGS

PARKS—ADAMS

Picton, June 24. The home of the bride's parents at Wellington, was the scene of a lovely wedding at three o'clock, Saturday, June 24, when Rev. J. F. Lane united in marriage, Reta Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Adams, and Corporal Jack Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Parks, Bloomfield. Baskets of peonies graced the living room.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length gown of Chantilly lace yoke with shirred bodice, long sleeves with pointed cuffs and matching accessories and carried pink Delight roses.

Miss Eleanor Foster, Bloomfield, as bridesmaid, wore a pink silk jersey and white accessories. Her corsage was of Johanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Parks, mother of the groom, was best man.

At the reception following, the bride's mother was in heavenly blue English imported lace with white accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother chose midnight blue crepe with white accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. Then were 75 guests, including several from Toronto, Belleville, Consecon, Picton, Demorestville, Ameliasburg and Deseronto.

For travelling to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride donned a navy flannel silk dress with matching accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Parks will reside on Bloomfield Road.

WHITNEY—O'BRIEN

Bancroft.—A very quiet wedding took place Thursday, June 22nd, at 9.00 a.m. at Our Lady of Mercy Rectory, Bancroft, when Reverend Father Rita Ellen O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien of the Township of Wicklow, became the bride of Jack Whitney, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Percy Whitney, of Whitney, of Cobalt, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. Kennedy of Bancroft, with Miss Anita Burke, of Maynooth, playing the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in white brocaded satin gown with a floor length veil and carried a corsage of red roses. Miss Margaret Haxton, of Weston, was the matron of honor and the groomsman was Mr. Patrick O'Brien, brother of the bride. Following the wedding ceremony the party left for the bride's home, where a reception dinner was held. About twenty-five guests were present.

The bride and groom left later for points in the south and upon their return they will take up residence in St. Thomas, Ont.

SAGER—VARTY

Major Elmer Sager, Army Examiner at the Officers' Training Centre, Brockville, was married on Saturday afternoon, June 24, in the Metropolitan United Church, Toronto, by Rev. Dr. Percy Bryce, to Miss Marjorie Mae Varty, daughter of Hiram Varty, Tweed, Ont. Major Sager is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Sager, Ancaster, Ont., and served overseas with the C.E.F. during the Great War. Both he and his bride are former Toronto schoolteachers.

McCAW—BUCKSTUHL

Under an arch of pink and white in a room decorated with ferns and white peonies, Muriel Jean Buckstuhl, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buckstuhl, Ont. 2nd., was united in marriage on Friday, June 23, at three p.m., to Frank Herman McCaw, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCaw, Oak Hill, Kent, by Rev. V. Keogh, pastor of the United Church - officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the home of the bride's parents and was attended only by the immediate relatives.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length gown of Jersey crock, with a white hat with Gordon Hat, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Parks, Bloomfield. Baskets of peonies graced the living room.

She was attended by a sister of the groom, Mrs. David Wannamaker, who wore a blue silk dress with white hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was of garnet roses.

Mr. David Wannamaker, brother-in-law of the groom, was groomsman.

The bride's mother wore blue flowered crepe while that of the groom's mother was a navy sheer marquisette.

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served. The bride's table, centred with white lilac in the community hall where a reception was held, was presided over by the bride's mother and the groom's mother.

The evening was spent in dancing. Many useful gifts were given showing the high esteem in which the popular young couple. A lunch was served at midnight, the bride cutting the beautiful wedding cake centred the table. The assistants were Misses Mae Greer, Nancy Dewers, Eva Burley, Mrs. Nest Rhoff, Mrs. Beverley Beals, Mrs. Lorne Dewers, Mrs. Jack Ogilvy, Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mrs. Dewers, Aubrey and Dewitt'ville.

Gifts were to the bride, a walnut cedar chest; to the bridesmaid, silver candle holders; to the best man, carved book ends and ash tray.

Importance of Exercise

Here's an exercise that will keep you slender and limber.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MEN ARE reported to confess that they don't exercise. They don't have to confess; their bodies make each and bay windows tell the world. Many women say flatly that they hate exercise; the mere mention of it gives them goose flesh. But they can do it and to lift an eyebrow now and then.

Then there's the woman who claims that calisthenics are a bore, she wouldn't exercise if she could; then she don't interest her, and anyhow she hasn't the time. But she makes time for interesting ten-minute workout before the morning bath and for another to make her feel spirited. The trouble is in getting started. Then must be a special time for physical culture otherwise it goes by the board.

Make Time.

The average woman, unless she is a demon housekeeper, or interested in many personal, social, golf, archery or tennis—uses her muscles for all of the day's doings—herself an injustice. Anyone can find time for a brisk walk each day. And there is refreshing, the grandest exercise of all. Office and factory work is great, but scarcely the real need of outdoor activities.

Avoid exercise and, after the forty mark is passed, you'll be a sagger, face and body. Shoulders, tummy, jowls, will all do it. Then again because the muscles will have lost tone and elasticity.

Muscle Toning.

Muscle flexing of the torso counts more for figure improvement than for reducing. Reducing things they need workouts too. The big idea is to avoid hip spread. Keep the waist line nipped and pretty.

Let's do your back in bed, hands under the buttocks for support. Lift the legs slowly until you are fairly standing on the back of your neck; then down slowly. If you don't think that's fun, you're goofy, because it is fun.

When you're on your side a dozen deep, full breaths, then sit it again. Good for your stomach, liver, and intestines.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another of Those Taken-For-Granted Wives.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My husband has said time after time he loves me, but he's always too busy to show it. He's an automobile mechanic and is unmarried men being lucky, etc. He has no regular hours, and comes home only once in a while. If I am sick I can take care of myself, but if he has an accident or a pain, I'm nearly frantic with worry getting him well again.

"When we go out together—shopping or the like—he wanders off by himself and stays far away from me, and then when he sees me he acts as if I were a total stranger. He seems like a man talking to a woman just because it would be unpleasant to her for his wife's sake.

"I've never been able to understand his strange actions since I married Stella, my husband, a few thousand deaths a day. I'm not ill but don't seem able to dig myself out of this apathy. When he wants relaxation he goes to smokers, burlesque shows, and I'm supposed to be a married buddy of his take women and go places.

"Women who find themselves in the "taken-for-granted" class should drop their invisible-ink character. They seem like that

Dear Jane,

Great news . . . our Jim is coming home next week and is bringing his pal, Bill Smith and I are planning a Welcome-home party for them on Sunday afternoon, July 2nd, from three to seven at our house, and if will be a real welcome-home if you and Bill will come and help Jim and to meet his (and now our) Ruth. JUNE

I hear in the early morning,
In the hush of the twilight dim,
A bird singing over and over
The notes of its morning hymn.
And the sun drops gold on the hillside
All decked in pearls of dew,
And the wind whispers soft in the valley
And vathers the day anew.

And in a tree by the-window
A little bird builds her house,
And she sings in the glorious sunlight
That falls from the sky's blue dome;
And the world glows green and golden
In the light of a bright June day,
While the heart dreams of a June time
That never shall pass away.

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Homecoming Party For a Soldier And His Bride.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our son has been in service overseas for over two years, and we have not seen him in that time. A year ago he was married in his bride's country, and they had a wedding reception there. Now we are expecting him and his bride home soon and since my husband and I would be unable to attend the wedding, we would like to give them a homecoming party. We want so much to have all our relatives and friends greet our son and meet our new "daughter". Will you please help me plan this party?

—Our home is small so we could not accommodate all our relatives and friends at the same time. What would you advise . . . have two small parties at one time and friends at another time? Or would you think it better to hire a hall and a caterer or make arrangements to hold the party in a restaurant?

2.—Who should introduce our daughter-in-law, should we or our son? When should the introductions be made? And where should each of us stand?

3.—Do you think it would be better to have the party in the afternoon or evening? Will you please suggest a menu?

4.—Should we send written invitations?

S. E.

What happy people you and your husband must be with these wonderful additions in your family. You'll certainly "be nice to come home to", both for your beloved son and for his new daughter in whom you're planning to give such a warm-hearted welcome.

1.—Please, since this is a welcome-home party, have the parties in your and your son's home, for this home-background will be more important and dear to your son and his wife than any other feature in the affair. Since you're desirous to do all in plan, I think, is to have two parties at your home, one for the relatives and friends to the next one.

2.—I suggest that you and your husband, as hostess and host, and your son and his wife, as guests of honor, stand in an informal receiving line. Your husband might stand first, then you, then your daughter-in-law, then your son. This brings you in the right position to introduce your son's wife (that is, if you prefer and delightful privilege): for example, to a relative, "Aunt Katherine, this is Ruth.

3.—You will know best which time, afternoon or evening, will be more convenient for the majority of your guests. You might like to have the relatives-party on Saturday afternoon or evening, and the friends-party the next day, a late-afternoon Sunday party. Or, if receding Sunday afternoons. If budget counts, have the parties in the afternoon, serve a simple tea-menu—sandwiches, cake, tea or coffee or both or hot coffee and fruit punch).

A terrifying FIRE in my kitchen was stopped!...

thanks to GYPROC Fire Protective WALLBOARD

"I THANKED those who helped us put out the fire—but my friend said: 'Thank "GYPROC" Fire Protective Wallboard! It was the "GYPROC" Wallboard that kept the fire from spreading. "GYPROC" won't burn!' If it hadn't been for "GYPROC" we might have lost our whole house. The fire was confined long enough by "GYPROC" walls and ceiling to enable it to be brought under control, and what might have been a disastrous fire was prevented."

When buying wallboard demand "GYPROC"—the kind that won't burn. Build fire-protection into your walls and ceilings with "GYPROC". Wallboard. Write for free booklet.

Pte. J. Chatrand Reported Missing

Trenton, Special—Mrs. M. Chatrand, 20 Bay St., has been officially advised that her son, Pte. Joseph G. Chatrand has been reported missing in action on June 7th, presumably in the invasion of France.

Pte. Chatrand, who is but twenty years of ago, left Camp Borden on June 6th, 1943 with the Glengarry Highlanders but upon arrival overseas was transferred to the North Nova Scotia Regiment.

Wounded on D-Day.

Official word has been received by Mrs. A. Vieau, 1 Campbell St., that her son, Pte Donald V. Vieau was wounded in the invasion of France on "D" Day, June 6th. Nature of his wounds are reported to be fractures of left arm and right leg.

Pte. Vieau who is 22, enlisted with the artillery from Kingston and has been in service three years this July. While in England he took course in signalling.

A brother, Pte. Gordon Vieau, who spent four years overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, has recently been returned to Canada after injuries in Sicily, while another brother, Jack is serving with the Canadian Navy on a Corvette.

Photographer Given Award.

Mr. J. Nulty, prominent local photographer, has been given an "Award of Merit" for photography by the Ontario Photographers' Association which met recently in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, to celebrate their Diamond Jubilee.

This was the first time Mr. Nulty had ever entered any of his work in competition of this kind, and the portrait which won this merit is now a prized possession of his studio.

More Linens Needed.

A considerable quantity of new and used linens have been collected for the Russian Relief and are now at Red Cross headquarters from where they will be shipped next week to Toronto. If anyone is still desirous of donating they may still turn articles in at the work rooms.

Much Red Cross work is still to be accomplished to finish out present quotas at the work rooms and it is hoped those who go away to enjoy summer life at cottage and camp will take along with them Red Cross work of some kind to do while there.

Three donations of money were turned in on Tuesday from Public School classes.

Miss May's class of Dufferin School brought in $3.20 and Mr. MacElwain's class of College St. School donated $1.60, while $22.60 was turned in by Miss Walker's Grade No. 13 of College St. School as the proceeds of a raffle of a quilt top which the pupils of the school made. The lucky winner was Miss Catherine MacKenzie, a former pupil of the school.

Police Court.

Appearing before Magistrate J. B. Garvin in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday Clarke McMurter was given one year's suspended sentence. McMurter was charged, with public mischief arising from a falsely reported hold-up. He told the police that he was held up about 2.30 on the morning of May 21 near the C. P. R. station after leaving a passenger train. His assailants, he said, were two uniformed men with red patches on their shoulders. Police, at the time, took his story, that he had been robbed of $25 and he was questioned then and later as to the sum of money which he had spent and as to where he had obtained it. Upon further investigation police were able to prove, by the discrepancies in his story as to the amount of money he was paid before leaving Burlington, Ont., that the hold-up was false. With the facts in their possession, McMurter readily admitted that he concocted the story to save embarrassment in his home as he had no money to turn in to his wife.

He was also charged with non-support which was enlarged for six weeks.

William Beatty charged with assault was given suspended sentence of one year, as was Muriel Webb.

Keith Brown charged with assaulting a young boy who had stolen some pea pods from his field was told by the Magistrate that he had used altogether too much force. He was given three months suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs of $9.75 including medical costs.

Arthur Sharpe, charged with obtaining $825 for a car which he had sold to an airman and which had a lien against it of $234 was given two years suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs of $16.75 and make restitution of the $234.

Myles Kleinstuber was charged with theft by George Hibbitt of canned goods and other household articles. Hibbitt stated that he had told Kleinstuber he could have the goods if he paid for them. The Magistrate dismissed the charge with the statement they were in the wrong court. Debts could not be collected in police court.

D. Tripp was fined $23 for breach of the Highway traffic act. B. Medwid also paid $7.50 on a similar charge.

Seven paid the usual $10 and costs for breach of the Liquor Control Act.

One adult and fourteen minors appeared in court on charges of wilful damage to property. It had been stated that a house recently vacated had every window in it broken including some of the sash. The Magistrate ordered each to pay $4.50 towards the damages.

There were thirty-three cases before Magistrate Garvin and they were all disposed of in two hours. Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan, K. C., County Crown Attorney, prosecuted.

Expect No Flood Imported Goods Into Dominion

Ottawa, June 28. (CP) —Repeal of exchange restrictions on the import of non-essential goods from the United States was recommended by Finance Minister Ilsley in his Budget speech last night but no flood of imported articles for the benefit of Canadian consumers was expected.

The repeal of section one of the War Exchange Conservation Act will end one of the regulations prohibiting the entry to Canada of a long list of non-essential articles, other than from the Sterling area and Newfoundland.

Officials said that United States prices are generally in advance of those in Canada, and subsidies still would be necessary to keep imported articles under the Canadian prices ceiling. The Prices Board already subsidizes the importation of foods and other supplies considered essential and is unlikely to assist the importation of luxury products of any kind.

Other restrictive factors will be the shortage of shipping space, both by ship and rail, and the limited supplies of most foods and materials in the United States.

The Minister warned that relaxation of the Exchange Conservation Act provisions might make necessary the supplementing of other import controls.

Roy H. Thomson Buys Four Papers

Sarnia, June 28—(CP)— Change in ownership of four Ontario evening papers was announced Tuesday by H. M. Hueston, speaking on behalf of himself, A. D. McKenzie of Sarnia and Allan Holmes of Galt, point owners.

The papers are the Sarnia Canadian Observer, the Galt Reporter, the Woodstock Sentinel-Review and the Welland-Port Colborne Tribune.

Mr. Hueston said announcement is being made today in each of the four cities that ownership of the paper concerned is transferred to a company headed by Roy H. Thomson, publisher of the Timmins Daily Press.

The individual announcements quote Mr. Thomson as saying there will be no change in the personnel of the staffs and that the papers' policies will continue unaltered.

Canadians Throng Streets of Rome

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 28 — (CP Cable)— Hundreds of Canadians are among the thousands of Khaki-clad sightseers thronging the streets of Rome today, wandering through St. Peters and poking about the colosseum and other places of historic interest.

Canadian Auxiliary Services have established a mess hall and arranged conducted tours for the battle veterans, but due to the local housing situation it is impossible to find a leave centre in the city itself.

Meanwhile a school just outside the city has been taken over and the men are able to base themselves there for leave.

Surviving are his wife Lillie May Roy; two sons, Carl J., Dundas Ont., Kenneth R., Toronto. Margaret (Mrs. Wm. Ware) Montreal. One brother George formerly of Tweed.

Argylls Carry Out Tactical Scheme At Fair Grounds

Battling invading waves of heat and mosquitos, the lads of the Argyll Light Infantry held a successful tactical scheme at the city fair grounds last night.

Using military vehicles and personnel the recce lads successfully captured enemy strongpoints but strong enemy reinforcements in the form of mosquitos, some of which, the boys swear, carried 20 millimetre guns in their wings, held up the advance for some time.

The scheme was held as part of training in preparation for the sterner tasks which will be dealt with at the summer training camp at Connaught Ranges in July.

Harmless Spray Keeps Dogs Away

If the dogs and cats of the neighbourhood persist in damaging the lawn and ornamental plants outside the house, a simple spray will repel them, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The name of the material is nicotine sulphate.

Mix one teaspoon of the nicotine sulphate to one gallon of water. Spray thinly. The experts say that it can be spread so thin that persons are unaware of its presence, but animals hate it.

Air Force Stops Recruiting Until First of October

Ottawa, June 28 (CP)—Air Minister Power announced today suspension of all R.C.A.F. recruiting until Oct. 1 as a result of "diminishing strength" of the German air force, the low rate of casualties and reductions in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Maj. Power also announced that an accumulation of fully-trained fighter pilots in the United Kingdom has made it possible to extend the length of pilot training courses at service flying training schools in Canada by eight weeks.

"This extension will enable us to give more advanced training in this country where weather conditions are ideal for flying," he added in a statement.

Maj. Power said the suspension of recruiting would avoid withdrawing additional men and women from the manpower resources of the nation "at this critical time," and added:-

"Should like to emphasize that the air force is continuing to train all categories of aircrew in accordance with anticipated requirements.

"I should also like to reiterate that the gradual reduction in the air training plan will in no way affect the output for approximately a year, at which time it will gradually be reduced to a point where we will be producing all the aircrew necessary to maintain our operational force at its maximum efficiency."

Balfour Says Germany Is Very Powerful

London, June 28. (CP-Reuter)— Capt. Harold Balfour, under-secretary for Air, replying to a suggestion in the House of Commons Tuesday that the war with Germany would end soon, said: "My own personal view is that the enemy is very powerful and it will be a long time before we have Germany finally beaten".

Dewey-Warren Ticket Knocked Into Cocked Hat

Dewey Nominated

Chicago Stadium, June 28—(AP) —Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York was nominated for President today by a Wartime Republican National Convention that was his from the start.

Chicago, June 28 — (CP) — Republican hopes for a swift nomination today of a Dewey-Warren ticket for the presidential elections next Nov. 7 have been knocked skyhigh by the announced refusal of Governor Earl Warren of California to be second man.

Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York was expected to be nominated on the first ballot today and to arrive from Albany, N.Y., in time to make his acceptance speech before the day ends.

Gov. Warren — known to be Gov. Dewey's choice for vice-presidential candidate, and apparently the popular choice — had been expected to be nominated with equal celerity, bringing release to the sweltering delegates.

But Gov. Warren — who had repeatedly said he was candidate for no office and would serve out his term as Governor of California — had had no ethical opportunity for public rejection of nomination as vice-president until late last night, when he was approached by the Oregon delegation.

He lost no time in saying "No"— and it was not because he did not support Gov. Dewey. He said his job was in California.

There were hopes among his supporters here that when Gov. Dewey arrives he may be able to talk him into changing his mind, but in the meantime a Dewey spokesman said last night that Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio would be acceptable to the New York delegation as vice-presidential candidate.

Names Proposed For Leadership Include Gordon

Toronto, June 28 —(CP)— Despite the expression of confidence and pledge of united support given former Premier Harry Nixon at Monday's annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal Association, gossip continued in party circles Tuesday that the Liberals would have a new provincial leader before the next legislature session.

This gossip was prevalent Monday around hotel corridors prior to the association meeting which pledged Mr. Nixon support and continued Tuesday.

Names heard in connection with the leadership Monday were Arthur Slaght, member of parliament for Parry Sound, and Lt.-Col. Harry Hamilton of Sault Ste. Marie who Monday relinquished the presidency of the association. Tuesday a new name was in the gossip list—that of A. St. Clair Gordon, former provincial treasurer and one-time chairman of the Provincial Liquor Board.

It appears that Mr. Nixon is headed for the Senate.

Ralph H. Hubbs Resigns Post As C. A. S. Supt.

Picton, June 28 — It was announced last night that Ralph H. Hubbs has resigned as superintendent of Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society. His resignation becomes effective July 31st on the fifteenth anniversary of his assuming this position. He succeeded his father, the late George Hubbs. The great growth in this work has been ably coped with by Mr. Hubbs, who for ten years served as secretary of the Provincial Society.

Kinsmen Club

Canon Hubbs was guest speaker at the Kinsmen Club Monday night, his subject "Education" as his subchoose "Education" as his subject. He felt that teaching should be a profession and not a trade, and that the process of learning should be a highly exciting and exciting affair. The speaker stressed the importance of pupils learning for themselves, and that they be fitted for other than white-collar jobs.

The club is investigating the possibility of a swimming pool here, and plans a carnival in August.

Cadet Camp.

Fifteen Cadets from Picton Collegiate leave for Connaught Ranges tomorrow to attend the cadet camp. They will remain until July 8, after which date reserve units will go into camp. Last year, the cadet camp was held in Bellington.

Decorate Graves.

Members of the Canadian Legion, and Ladies' Auxiliary and representatives of the Royal Air Force held decoration day last Sunday. At the war memorial, flags were placed and Sq. Leader Guinness, R.A.F. Padre offered prayer. At the Veteran's Plot in Glenwood, a short service was also held. The graves of R.A.F. fliers killed in crashes were among the 63 in the cemetery decorated with small Union Jacks.

Attacked by Steer.

George Rose, Woodrous farmer, suffered severe bruises when attacked by a steer on his pasture farm at Point Petre. The animal pinned him against a fence and he managed to escape as the animal backed up for a second charge. He was confined to bed for several days. Earlier, the steer had attacked and knocked down, Mrs. Clayton McCaw who was visiting the farm with Mr. McCaw. She was painfully bruised.

Fifth Anniversary

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church marks its 111th anniversary next Sunday. At the evening service, a special order of service is to be followed, along the lines of that used by the Scottish Covenanters during their time of persecution. The elders preside, the congregation stands to pray and sits for the music which consists only of Psalms without accompaniment of any kind. The presentor leads the singing of Psalms, elders read the Commandments and Decalogue, and the Beadle will perform his duties. The Rev. Hilal, M.A., B.D. will preach.

The anniversary observance began last Sunday, Rev. R. Graham was guest preacher, Five children were baptized and the Lord's Supper was observed.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg—The Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church met at the home of Mrs. Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. Sharpe for the June meeting.

Mrs. Albert Richardson and her sister Mrs. M. Deacon of Orental, Sask., who has been visiting here for a short time left on Tuesday to visit relatives and friends at Hamilton and Watertown.

Kidney Ragouts

We think this "KIDNEY RAGOUT" is new and will help relieve the monotony of wartime menus.

Wash and halve 8 lamb kidneys. Then remove thick white tissue. Cut into quarters; cover with cold water. Add 1 onion sliced, 2 medium tomatoes, chopped, with 4 tablespoons of flour and dry in 4 tablespoons melted fat until it is cup of minced onion until brown. Add kidneys, tomatoes, tablespoon parsley, 2 tablespoons H.P. Sauce and simmer for 10 minutes. Serve piping hot on buttered toast.

Get a bottle of H.P. Sauce today and try this nation-time recipe. Incidentally, try serving H.P. with meat, fish, stew, salads, (not to mention cakes and taste the difference.

LANDING ON R.C.A.F. FIELD IN NORMANDY

Servicing ground personnel for the first Canadian Fighter Unit to move into an airstrip in France were flown in by Dakota aircraft of the Transport Command, under the control Royal Canadian Air Force and R.A.F. crews. Spitfires escorted the flight from England across the Channel to an airstrip in Normandy from which R.C.A.F. fighter squadrons have been operating since June 10th. This fully operational unit is under the command of Wing Commander W. Brown of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The fighter squadrons are the Wolf Squadron, the City of Oshawa Squadron and the Red Indian Squadron. Giant Dakotas of the Transport Command carrying ground personnel to the Canadian airstrip in France churns up the dust on a hastily constructed strip, somewhere in Normandy. The dust is worse than the desert, dangerous, for flying and choking to the lungs.—(Photo by F/O. Cecil Bowland, R.C.A.F. Public Relations Photographer in France.)

The War Today—

Finland Takes Step to Utter Ruin, Supports Her Pro-Nazi Leaders

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
Substitutive for Dewitt Mackenzie
Associated Press War Analyst

Finland has taken the road to utter ruin which she so narrowly escaped in 1939-40.

Some of us may regret it, remembering her progress between the wars, and with what bravery she fought the winter war as the Russians coldly practical, prepared their strategic defences for 1941.

But Finland supported her pro-Nazi leaders, possibly hopelessly but probably willingly, preferring the German to the Russian. For that decision, which only staved off this day when she has become another satellite, she must suffer.

Oddly enough, the man most responsible for Finland's position is a former Russian army officer, Field Marshal Gustav Mannerheim, hailed from 1918 to 1941 as Finland's greatest patriot. He now stands as another Mussolini, wrecker of the country at whose birth he played the roles of both father and midwife. He now ranks even lower than Hitler's other satellites. Der Fuehrer brought them into line with irresistible pressure. Mannerheim joined him with gusto.

Not that Mannerheim would have joined happily in a war on Russia with Germany, Belgium, Britain or the United States. But he saw opportunity for revenge, for recapture of territory, and for venting of an old grudge against the Soviets.

And let there be no doubt as to Mannerheim's responsibility. A Swedish writer aptly said: "Finland is a republic but has both a president and a Regent. The King is called Mannerheim."

A high-ranking officer in the Czar's army, Mannerheim, then 40, fled from the Bolsheviks in 1917. Returning home after 20 years, he found the Finns dreaming of freedom. He organized an army, invited German help in the form of General Von Der Goltz' Baltic army, drove out the Russians and was dictator of the new state until, having fostered elections for a republican government, he stepped out in 1919.

LONDON LETTER

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 28 (CP) — The Brigadier hates Hitler's guts but he didn't hate him, but he did have a mouth organ so he pitched right in to help Britain's war effort.

After all, the elderly soldier had fought in Britain's wars and skirmishes since before the turn of the century and he didn't see why he couldn't be of some use in this scrap. So he dusted off the mouth organ he had learned to play as a boy and went to work.

You'll find him almost any evening, generally in the cavernous, smoky shed that is Ruston Station, merrily wheezing out tunes like, "Tipperary," "Over There," "Sieg Hein AR," and other soldier ditties for the benefit of departing and arriving servicemen.

He gets around to Victoria Station, too, and to the Savoy, but Euston seems to be his favorite stand because it was from there, he says, that he left so many times himself to take part in the wars of the Empire.

He doesn't want his name told because he doesn't feel that a mouth organ virtuoso and a retired member of His Majesty's Forces are quite synonymous. But, confidentially, he admits he hasn't had so much fun since he was a swashbuckling subaltern in a bearskin shako.

It would see, too, that he succeeds in his own particular branch of war work. Soldiers, sailors and airmen are continuously crowding around this Brigadier in the neat tweeds with the row of campaign ribbons on his breast, yelling "Hey, tell me about Lili Marlene?"

The "Hey Pop" greeting from Canadian and American privates at first discouraged the brigadier at first, but now he merely frowns slightly and struggles with the new tunes that have been born with the war.

He got the idea, he said, when the Brigadon went off to war early in the conflict. The brigadier said he was "deeply shocked" to find that in this war the boys were singing the old standard, the band playing and general hula baloo that was an indispensable prelude to battle in his day.

"Music," he said, "is as much a part of a soldier's diet as bully beef. Singing soldiers are happy soldiers, so I decided to give them music."

PICTON

Effects of Inflation Devastating on China

Picton, June 28—Devastating effects of inflation arising from China's long struggle against Japan, were cited by Mr. Lewis Walmsley, formerly in charge of a mission school at Chungking, Szechwan, China, in an address here. Before the war, Chinese workmen received 20 cents a day, now they receive $45 a day in the new currency. Rates at the Mission School were originally $45 a month, they are now that much daily, said the speaker, under such conditions, there is a struggle to exist which might be alleviated for a brief period by selling personal possessions, he said. In discontinuing the school temporarily, he told of transporting the faculty which remained to continue their schooling in India, and the teachers' trek made by the route across the Himalayas.

Canada, said Mr. Walmsley, remains mind of the book, "How Green is My Valley", in the sense that the manner of living here has been so little changed in comparison to the chaotic conditions which prevail elsewhere much of the world.

Christian teaching benefits were stressed by Mr. Walmsley. Students included sons of China's leaders, and they learn that the thought of rising force in international affairs may be replaced by international co-operation based on the Christian concept, said.

We must realize that nations of the Far East will surge forward a to great power, said Mr. Walmsley.

Rossmore

Rossmore — The Ladies' Aid met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. Belnap with twenty-two being present. Mrs. Boote opened the meeting and Mrs. Chas. Reddick read the report of the last meeting. Mrs. Will Belnap was the Aid prize and Mrs. Shoniker the door prize. Mrs. Bon Gerow won a crocheted centrepiece donated by Mrs. Vandewater. It was Mrs. Belnap's birthday meeting. Mrs. Chas. Reddick read a short address and Mrs. E. Gerow presented her with a gift for which she thanked the ladies. Lunch was served by the hostess.

Resuscitation

As an aid in preventing drowning, gas asphyxiation and electric shock, the Industrial Accident Prevention Association have sent to Ontario's plants a pamphlet on artificial respiration by the prone pressure method.

The timely poster is designed for factory bulletin boards and illustrates the preliminary and general rules for resuscitation. Here are the preliminary rules:

Electric Shock — The victim must be freed from the contact as promptly as possible, by a dry stick, dry rope, dry coat or other non-conductor. The use of your own hands is dangerous and may add another victim to the accident.

Gas Asphyxiation — The first thing to do is to get the patient fresh air indoors. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Do not breath gas yourself, even for a short time. If it does not overcome you, it will cut down your strength.

Drowning — Quickly remove victim from water and place on ground or other hard surface. If possible, have head slightly lower than rest of body, so that water and other liquids will drain away from the victim.

BASEBALL GOING AFTER ITS THIRD $500,000 GOAL

Clubs Have Raised $2,130,000 for Relief Since War Started

FANS PROTEST

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Baseball strikes out after its third $500,000 war relief goal tonight as the National League attempts to unravel one of its "suspended" game entanglements.

Across the board in all four western parks of the senior circuit, gate receipts go direct into war funds. The situation will be reversed in the eastern parks of the National on July 26 and the National League will stage its eighth-game program on scattered dates beginning July 7.

Baseball has raised an estimated $2,130,000 for the war including relief games by each club in the major in 1942 and 1943, two all-star tilts and portions of two world series galas. Once again the dogged for the relief games is "hit the $500,000 mark."

St. Louis has a double feature in the playoff of one of the "suspended" game of May 16 in addition to the regular tilt with the Phillies. Freddy Fitzsimmons' club held a 9-6 lead in the seventh inning when the contest was called to allow the Phils to catch a train.

JERSEY GIANTS IN SECOND PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Team Has Jumped From Last Place to Present Position in Month

LEAFS SPLIT

By The Associated Press

Not many teams have jumped in one season from the cellar to the championship. Jersey City, in the International League, may do it this year.

The Little Giants, last in the 1943 pennant race, walloped Rochester twice last night, 10-3 and 5-1, to climb into second place only 1½ games behind the first-place Buffalo Bisons.

Baltimore backed up Red Embree's effective pitching with a flock of base hits to whip Montreal, 8-5. Embree got off to a bad start yielding two runs in the first on three hits and a wild pitch, but was untouchable thereafter except for Morris Arft's homer in the fifth.

Buffalo lost its fifth of six games since returning home in taking a 9-1 drubbing from Newark. Jim Tobin's pitching highlighted a 4-run second inning for the Bears.

Al Jarlett pitched Syracuse to a 6-1 victory over Syracuse in the 1st game of a doubleheader, but the Chiefs gained a split by taking the nightcap, 6-4. The Syracuse hitting runs in the second game came in the ninth inning after Tony Castano's error with two out, put a Syracuse runner on first base. A base on balls followed and Castano then doubled both runners home.

RAZE FRENCH VILLAGE

London, June 28 — (CP) — The Germans razed the French village of Orsday-sur-Dur Oise four days after the Allied invasion and only ten of the village's 1,200 inhabitants are known to have escaped, the French press said yesterday. The village is 45 miles northwest of Limoges. A three months old baby was killed in the church where some townsfolk sought refuge and when all inside were burned alive, the agency said.

'MARINES' TACK UP SEVENTH WIN IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Defeat Alemites 10-1 With Anderson Doing the Chucking

GARRISON DEFAULTS

Stephens Adamson "Marines" tacked up their seventh straight win in the Belleville City Softball League with a 10-1 victory over Alemites to top a scheduled doubleheader last night. The nightcap was defaulted by Garrison to Point Anne "Cementmen" when the the soldiers failed to put in an appearance.

Two Marines runners crossed the plate in the first as a result of Wardhaugh's single and Carson's triple. The lone Alemite tally came in the 6th when Booth singled and was booted home by Philp's hard hit single.

Latchford's sixth inning double gave the Marines another run, Bill Anderson scored on another marker with a two base smash in the 7th. Carson came in the 8th and got the game clincher for the Marines. Two Marines, Latchford and Philp coupled with consecutive singles and a walk spelled the final for Alemite pitcher Lemon.

Anderson was on the mound for the Marines while Connie Harris and Patterson did chucking duties for the Alemites. Anderson whiffed 8 and Harris five.

OREGON OCTOPUS

It's Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Oregon Octopus, who chased Wild Bill Longson out of Salt Lake City and clean to Canada and is still seeking wrestling recognition. "Strangler Bob" has a chance to add to his ring prowess at the Hume Arena tonight when he meets Cheri Vallina, the Florida State champion, who is making his first appearances in Belleville. Vallina comes to Canada highly recommended by Promoter Paul Bowser of New York.

Of course, the principal show will see Al Dunlop and Vern Baxter settle their ring arguments in the main event. There's little chance to any definite decision in, two previous meetings, for a gala pre-holiday three-bout show.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 28 (CP)—A wee lad of five, dressed as a jockey and mounted on a white goat, arrived from a delivery wagon, won a prize in a carnival procession at Bath.

That was right years ago but the child has had food enough for profession. Now he has blossomed as an apprentice jockey and his name is Gordon Richards, after Britain's champion jockey of the same name but no relation.

To avoid confusion Gordon II will be referred to on the turf as G. W. Richards. The "W" was picked at random because the apprentice has no middle name.

So far, Gordon II has ridden but once and that at Salisbury where he placed fourth in an apprentice handicap on a 10-1 shot. Champion Gordon Richards had 30 winning horses up to late June.

Incidentally, two of young Gordon's brothers are named after famed jockeys of other days—Steve after Steve Donoghue and Archer after Fred Archer.

Those intrepid Yugoslavian Partisans recently took on the 5th Army in a football match at an army rest camp in Italy—and were beaten 6-3. A crowd of 5,000 including girl guerillas, cheered the match which was arranged by Alex Jackson, former London Chelsea international.

The Partisans, of course are no novices to soccer. Leading British clubs touring Europe before the war invariably stopped for a game or two in Yugoslavia. In one of the last continental matches an English team containing such international greats as Eddie Hapgood and Stan Matthews, was beaten 3-1 at Belgrade in 1939.

So keen were the Partisans for this match they had three planes cross the Adriatic from Yugoslavia and join the team. Two of the Partisans played in peacetime international.

Just to show you folks back home that Canada's armed forces, wherever they may be overseas, get plenty of sports entertainment both as spectators and participants, here's a Y.M.C.A. report that cleans up 1944 to the end of April.

In the first four months of that year 383,837 soldiers, airmen and sailors participated in 47,131 sports sessions attended by 228,547 spectators. Sports included boxing, basketball, volleyball, hockey, rugby, track and field meets, softball and golf.

A little ship with a great football team—a motor minesweeper which keeps Anzio harbor approaches free of enemy mines—shortly will have its service performer and is demanding another professional footballer as a replacement.

Telegraphist N. F. Griffiths, one of the crack Tottenham Hotspur, has led the almost unbeatable ship team to triumphs in Mexico, Naples, Algeria and other eastern ports against teams from much bigger ships. The team is at work many games remaining on the schedule, Griffiths is leaving to train for a commission.

CREATES BLACK MARKET

Toronto, June 28 — (CP) — The Globe and Mail, in a newspage story today said a Prices Board order which reduced the wholesale price ceiling for strawberries from 20 to 19 cents last Saturday, with no ceiling for canners and processors, is claiming to have created a black market almost overnight with attendant serious retail shortages.

Outlook for Amateur Hockey Next Season Not too Bright

By The Canadian Press

It's probably too early to worry about it but the outlook for amateur hockey next season isn't any too bright. You can take the word of George Dudley of Midland, past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. Dudley told a banquet at Hamilton last night that it is "almost a certainty" there will be no service teams in senior amateur hockey next winter. He expressed the hope civilian teams would provide the relaxation the people needed.

The Montreal Jockey Club has widened the conditions for the Queen's King's Plate, but not to the same extent as the King's Plate it-self at Toronto. At a meeting at Montreal yesterday it was decided to allow entry to the Quebec King's Plate of all three-year-olds and up bred in Quebec and owned by a Quebec resident. Previously a horse had to be foaled in Quebec and owned by a Quebec resident as late as June 1. The change in conditions for the race at Blue Bonnets July 8 means that horses like Bachelor Bridals and Cattari now racing in Ontario will be eligible.

It's been done before, but it's still a feat to win three riding five winners in one afternoon. Bobby Watson did it yesterday at Thistledown in the first, second, third, sixth and seventh races. Making it a two-man show, Benny Lewis won the fourth and fifth events. Watson is now last riding Winnipeg to ride H. C. Hatch's horses in the Canadian Derby and the Winnipeg Futurity.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, June 28 — (CP)—Horseflesh always has been cheap in the west, but this economy business can be carried too far, Ft. James Speers might be prompted to lament. James Speers turned off 13 thoroughbred yearlings from his Whittier Park farm, and obtained an even dozen for the lot.

Herb Crossley (Winnipeg Tribune) Manitoba estimates it costs about $1,000 to raise a racer from a foal to the competitive stage. Figuring it that way the buyers got all the best of the bargain.

This was the first yearling sale in eight years in Winnipeg, as the Manitoba Jockey Club wasn't greater demand. Speers, incidentally, says he sold the yearlings because he has no wish to enter racing campaigns actively. He says he is interested only in breeding stock and track management and promotion. He's been a consistent booster for the independent owners.

Political Tracks:

We see by the Toronto Globe and Mail that Dick Gibson is bidding for the Progressive Conservative nomination in Hamilton West for the next Dominion election. Dick ruled the Windsor Star sport room for years before going to New York as sportster and publicist for New York Rangers. At present he writes general news in Sarnia . . . Back in Moose Jaw he used to be a track star, so he might run nicely on Bracken's party line!

This and That:

Sports say at least three carloads of horses are headed west for the Lansdowne Park season, one being July 1 on the 'west coast . . . Incidentally, racing fans on the coast have been circulating the wishful rumors that Whirlaway and Count Fleet may be bought and taken west. But Fred Schelle wouldn't take $100,000 for them, nor will Northwood tempted by a $10,000 offer for the mare Twenglish, as they have to wait until Middas makes his headquarters on the coast . . . sons can usually follow in their fathers' baseball footsteps, but George Gainer has done just that in Welland, Ont. George senior was one of the smoothest righthanders in western Ontario, and son George has just flung a no-hitter as a Juvenile. He fanned 20 batters in the process . . . The country is going under the softballs. The Ottawa Tennis Club, quite a conservative body, is installing lights for benefit of day-working players.

A Plaintive Plea.

(From The Park City, Utah, Record, weekly, classified advertising column):

"Found — Lady's purse left in my car while parked. Owner can have same by describing property and paying for this ad. If owner can explain satisfactorily to my wife how purse got into car, I will pay for ad myself."

Nothing much for automobiles to do any more except sit around and get backbiting of the arteries.

Want to organize.

For the past few weeks two groups of teen age lads have been playing exhibition baseball games after supper each day either at the Air Grounds or the Alemite Field. These boys are still in need of catchers' equipment, bats and balls, but are willing to get behind baseball and make it a civic issue in the matter of regular league fixtures with the idea in mind of getting baseball back to prominence. Jack Doyle has been named manager of the Alemite team while Bob Bland still capably looks after the business end of the Foster Ward team.

Out around Corbyville Gerald Sheridan has garnered together the nucleus of a baseball team and with Harry Moore's Trenton club now functioning the organization of a recognized baseball league is the next move. Jack Doyle's team leaves moves into Trenton tomorrow evening for an exhibition game while on Saturday afternoon a holiday ball game will be played at the Alemite Field. Some evening next week efforts to organize a city and district baseball league will be made.

Golfing Problem.

Speaking of coincidences — The other day a local golfer called up to ask what the penalty was in tournament play if his ball struck a flag stick with a ball played from within 60-feet of the green . . . The answer, of course, is two strokes . . . That evening we happened to run across a story of how the same ruling cost Gene Sarazen third place money in the Canadian Red Cross Open in New York . . . The fluke incident occurred at the finish of Sarazen's final round when a wedge flick by Sarazen, his from within the 60-foot limit, hit the flag stick . . . What happened was Sarazen's caddie had his hand on the flag stick but didn't pull it out quickly enough . . . Gene needed a four on that eighteenth hole for a 69, but wound up with an ignominious seven, which boosted his score to 72 . . . The purpose of this rule is to penalize the fast-scoring ball that might overrun the green if the pin were not in the way. Incidentally, Sarazen blamed himself and not the caddie for the accident . . . Known as the "Count Fleet of the fairways" Gene just steps up to his ball and sacks it without preliminary flourishes or time-wasting manoeuvres . . . He scarcely glances at the line of a putt . . . That was what happened when he hit the flag with it . . . The caddie just wasn't ready for him.

Remember When.

Primo Carnera, Italy's Ambling Alp, won the world's heavyweight boxing championship by knocking out Jack Sharkey at the Long Island Bowl 11 years ago today. The end came in the sixth round when a right uppercut flattened the Boston sailor. Sharkey was the third man in the ring at a wrestling bout staged at the Hume Arena a week ago tonight.

Wrestling News.

Local wrestling fans will be interested to know that Bob Wagner, the meek little Vallina in the curtain-raiser at the Hume Arena tonight, met and defeated "Whipper Billie" Watson at Ottawa sometime ago. Since that memorable night Wagner has not been so prominent east of here. However, what local grappling fans are more interested in tonight is whether or not Vern Baxter can put an end to Al Dunlop's pugnacious ring antics or not. Baxter promised to tame Dunlop if given top billing at a main bout attraction. He got it.

Ball Shortage Eased.

Baseball's manpower shortage appears to have passed its acute stage with the major leagues settled down to a six months' run with prospects of a pennant race and night baseball to bolster mid-week attendance.

Big league rosters haven't undergone any drastic changes since the season opened, although the draft boards still hold the answer to the question as to whether they will be able to finish the season.

A complete indoor loop setup is also operating with three double A circuits, one "A1" league and one "A2" class as well as a "B" class and three class "D" organizations. The next stream of players marching towards the services, however, is hurtling matched by the steady influx of war veterans returning after discharges. Tom Warren, Brooklyn pitcher, was a Canadian, and Jack Kramer, St. Louis Browns hurler, was with the Navy before he returned to the diamond.

Rudy York, rejected for service, has rejoined Detroit to send that city's pennant stock soaring.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 416

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

To mess with a two bid is fatal. If you must stick in some of your phony bridge work, save it for bids that will cause your side less grief.

An opening bid of two in a suit shows a hand that expects to take four tricks for a game; is fornonsuit tricks for a game; is forcing to game; asks partner to signal as once whether or not he has help for a slam.

Help for a slam is assumed to be a sure trick; an ace of K-Q. With no sure trick, the immediate responding signal is a bid of two notrumps. Any other responding bid shows a sure trick.

With a sure trick, what responding bid other than two no-trump bid should be selected? Merely follow the normal order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

Mainly remember that you show a sure trick if you don't bid two no-trump at once. But tell the truth and nothing but.

AT THE McCARTHY — Seven of this screen's greatest stars in two of the screen's greatest hits! That's the spectacular treat in store for patrons of the McCarthy, next, when Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent will be seen in "The Rains Came," while Ronald Coleman, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell and Victor McLaglen star in "Under Two Flags."

takeout or an assist.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two spades and you have this hand:

♠ A 6 5 4 3
♥ K J 10 9 4
♦ 6 5 4
♣ 5 6

You have a sure trick. So, your first response is not two no-trump. With a biddable heart suit, your first response is a signal to stop forcing to game. You will get another chance to bid. You can then show your assist, if necessary.

You also have adequate trump support for your partner's spade bid. Why not show your spade assist? Because a takeout comes before an assist in the order of choice of bids.

Are you afraid your partner will not know you have support for spades? No. The opening two bid is forcing to game. You will get another chance to bid. You can then show your assist, if necessary.

Mainly remember that you show a sure trick if you don't bid two no-trump at once. But tell the truth and nothing but.

AT THE BELLE

"Tender Comrade"

The problem of what a young wife should do when her husband is drafted and goes overseas, is solved by Ginger Rogers in her newest RKO Radio vehicle, "Tender Comrade," when she gets a job in an aircraft factory. Robert Ryan, Ruth Hussey, Patricia Collinge and Mady Christians are in the feature cast.

"Under Command" is now in its fourth and final day at the Belle theatre.

The first of the Official Invasion films and a Donald Duck cartoon will be shown on the same program.

"Pur Jills and a Jeep."

Six new hit songs by Hollywood's top song team, Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, are heard in 20th Century-Fox's new star-studded hit, "Four Jills and a Jeep," which opens next at the Belle theatre.

Packed with laughs, music, drama and romance, the film dramatizes the eventful tour of four American entertainers who visited the fortlike North Africa battle lines to entertain our service men, with the picture features Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye, and Mitzi Mayfair with Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra, John Harvy, Phil Silvers, Dick Haymes, sensational radio singing star. Guest stars include Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda and George Jessel who acts as master of ceremonies.

The new hits by McHugh and Adamson heard in the film include, "How Many Times do I Have to Tell You?", "The Old Army Game," "Chile," "Crazy Me," "How Blue the Night" and "You Send Me."

Rommel in "Tunisian Victory."

Two high ranking officers of the unwilling actors in "Tunisian Victory", the Second feature coming next to the Belle theatre which recounts the campaign of the American and British armies in the capture of Tunisia.

One is Field Marshal Rommel and the other is Marshal Kesselring, chief aide to Rommel.

Shown on Captured Reels.

Both of the Nazi marshals are shown on reels captured from the Germans and presented into the story of the fighting in North Africa.

"Tunisian Victory" is the first feature joint production of the British and American army film units and picks up where "Desert Victory" left off. It begins with the storming of the Mareth Line by the British Eighth army and ends when the Germans are thrown out of Tunisia.

"Yokel Duck", a funny Terry-toon cartoon completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

The Rains Came—Under Two Flags

Two of this screen's greatest all-time hits, with no less than seven of the screen's outstanding stars, is the spectacular entertainment which will open on Thursday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Under Two Flags and The Rains Came, two films which have received unstinted praise throughout the nation, comprises the new bill.

Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell and Victor McLaglen are starred in Under Two Flags while Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent appear in The Rains Came.

With both pictures brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox from best-selling novels and spectacular success demonstrates anew that great books make great pictures.

Ouida's famous story, Under Two Flags, a tremendous best-seller since it first appeared, is a drama of the French Foreign Legion. The romantic aspects of the story have been described as "burning as the desert sands" while the spectacle climaxes in stark as reality warfare as the vast Sahara itself. The climax of the film comes in a lonely desert outpost, where Colman and McLaglen, with ladies in their hearts for each other over the women in Rosalind Ivea, Claudette Colbert and Rosalind Russell, find themselves united in a desperate battle against overwhelming odds.

In The Rains Came, Louis Bromfield has written perhaps the outstanding novel of his career. His fascinating characters come vividly to life with Tyrone Power as Major Rama Safti, Myrna Loy as the amorous Lady Edwina and Geo. Brent as the world-weary Tom Ransome.

The earthquake, flood, fire and plague which highlight the novel have been faithfully reproduced in the motion picture production and are said to provide the most breathtaking spectacle sequences the screen has ever shown.

AT THE CAPITOL

Gene Autry

A personal appearance tour with Gene Autry is as much fun as a permanent three-ring circus. His train resembles a caravan. Gene, driving in his own car and carrying two boys, who work in his act in the lead. Next comes a car, which carries the boys who look after the scenery, publicity, etc., and last of all in his luxe travelling stable comes Champion. Champion rides in solitary splendor along with his fifteen hundred dollars worth of saddle and bridle, handtooled and virtually covered with silver mountings.

No ordinary trailer for Champion, his is electrically heated and there is a built-in water trough and feed bin. It even has soft floor, so that the many miles they must traverse on roads that are often rough will not make his feet sore.

Immediately preceding the trailer is the truck which is loaded down with the necessary scenery and props.

Gene and Champion are brought back to town this week on the screen at the Capitol Theatre where "Boots and Saddles," an Autry re-lase, is billed, starting next. Republic never seems to be at a loss for clever and unusual vehicles for their popular cowboy star and this one is no exception.

"Gang's All Here"

(In Technicolor)

"The Gang's All Here," 20th Century-Fox's new Technicolor musical extrumph is scheduled to open next at the Capitol Theatre as the added bit.

Starring in this extravaganza of song, samba and sweet romance are glamorous Alice Faye, exotic Carmen Miranda, Phil Baker of "Take-It-or-Leave-It" radio fame, and the king of swing—Benny Goodman and his Orchestra.

The featured cast boasts an outstanding trio of Hollywood's top comedians—Eugene Pallette, Charlotte Greenwood and Edward Everett Horton—and a succession of dazzling situations naturally ensues. The celebrated ballroom dancer Tony De Marco is also among the featured performers, and gives a breathtaking interpretation of the famed Brazilian "Samba" in his incomparable style.

Music and lyrics for the new hit were written by Leo Robin and Harry Warren, while Busby Berkley, who also directed the picture, staged and directed the brilliant dance sequences. "The Gang's All Here" was produced by William LeBaron.

The 2nd chapter of "Captain America" and a color cartoon completes the big double program.

She was booked in the city jail on a kidnapping charge. The baby was returned to her mother last night.

Hints on Keeping Earthworms Fresh and Lively

Many fishermen who have trouble getting and keeping earthworms just when they need them may find the following directions useful.

To keep earthworms in a tight box, preferably constructed of ...longue and gyrve make a suitable writes Ray McGibson in Family Herald and Weekly Star. The box should be at least 14 inches deep and of a size proportionate to the numbers of worms you wish to keep. A box 18 x 36 x 20 inches will serve very well for several hundred worms. If the exterior of the box is tarred it will last much longer. Creosote should not be used, because of the possible harmful effect on the worms. The inside of the box must not be treated. A well fitting lid should be supplied, which must project over the edges to prevent flooding during rainy weather. The box should be set in the soil, with the upper two or three inches above the surface in a fairly well drained spot, and must be shaded to prevent the temperature of the interior from rising too high in mid-summer. A temperature of 75 degrees Fahrenheit or above is quickly fatal to earthworms. Fill the box with a fairly good soil which is damp but not wet. A loamy soil is preferable, but a sandy soil will not do. Some richer the soil is in humus the better as the worms need less artificial feeding in rich soil than in poor. After you have stocked the box with worms, the surface of the soil may be covered with a layer of cut sods if desired, but a very good covering consists of well rotted leaves which form a considerable part of the earthworms' diet. If the weather is very dry it will be necessary to moisten the earth occasionally, but use care to avoid flooding as too much water is bad for the worms. Pressing also will kill them. They may be protected in winter by covering the box with half decayed manure. It will be found desirable to feed the worms occasionally a little fat in the form of chopped beef or a little sugar to worms cheap form. One dealer has stated that he had success in feeding them ordinary molasses spread on the surface of a gunny sack or burlap which he simply laid on the soil with the sticky side down and moistened occasionally. The worms will reproduce more rapidly it well fed. If they do not obtain enough food they will shrink in size and lose their vigor.

Earthworms may be sold or used freshly dug but they are much more desirable if "scoured" before use. To carry this out, a quantity of magnum moss such as is used by nurserymen in packing plants is put in a jar, stone crock or tight wooden box. This moss which grows in shady, swampy woods should be well moistened, then all excess moisture rung out before putting it in the container. The worms should be placed in the moss, preferably for three or four days and kept in a cool place. At the end of this period, they should be almost transparent, tough and lively. In case it becomes necessary to keep them in the moss for some weeks a little sweet milk should be poured over them at intervals of about a week; but the moss should be rung out in clean water every week or ten days.

SEA-GOING TANK

Port Moresby (CP)—A tank was put to sea in a landing craft off New Britain when several troop-laden Japanese barges were seen. The tank crew opened fire and sank one and patrol boats sank others.

ON THE ROAD TO Mandalay
An airgraph letter received recently from a Canadian flier in India "on the road to Mandalay" says: "I received another dozen of Sweet Caps . . . This is the second canoe I have received from you and once again I want to thank you . . . Both cartons were in very good condition and the cigarettes were just as fresh as the day they were put in."
Wherever Canadians go, Sweet Caps go along. On country duty or in the far North, in Great Britain, Italy or India, Canadians demand the mildness and flavor of the cigarettes which are first in their favour over here, over there, everywhere!

"CUPID RIDES A BUS"

by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER THREE

"Sounds like a menagerie."

"There's plenty of room for one, on this bus." He chuckled. "At least, if you all don't get along together, you can get up and sit upstairs on the upper deck."

"A Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Evergreen. Tourists, so they say. He's mum as a clam, and she talks a blue streak. Thank heaven, they aren't carrying any animals along."

"And that leaves you. . . ."

"Tony Taylor, at your service," he bowed. "Just thrown out of colleges for the third and last time, and off to see the world."

"With a bus you won in a crap game?"

"Only as far as Florid. From there, I hope to take a ship for somewhere else. Anywhere."

By this time they had come down upper fifth Avenue, and were approaching the zoo. Tony came to a stop, and blew his horn.

"We're picking up Mr. Smock, here," Tony explained. "He's been to say some farewells over in the animal house, I think."

Ginger saw a stout, rubicund man approach , carrying an old-fashioned valise, and a mustard-colored cat. Tony waved to him, and opened the door to help him in. He introduced Ginger.

Mr. Smock took off his hat with a flourish, disclosing a head almost bald. He smiled, showing several gaps, and bowed gallantly.

"Very happy to meet you, Miss Drake. I am sure we will all have a most felicitous journey." He displayed the cat. "This is Casanova, my comrade these many years. He's a sad dog, I'm afraid, but a gentleman."

"Oh, a Thomas cat," said Ginger. "How nice."

"By the way, Mr. Smock," Tony broke in, "one of our fellow-passengers, Miss Love, is bringing along a goldfish. I hope your cat minds his manners."

"Never fear! I'll see he behaves." He consulted the lion tamer. "Anyway, Casanova isn't very partial to sea-food."

They drove on down the Avenue, through the light early-morning traffic, smiling at each other when the bus passed a bewildered would-be passengers.

"It's the sign," explained Tony. "I should have changed it to Grant's Tomb, or the Bronx, or something."

"Why don't you?" asked Ginger.

"Because we're going through Washington Square, anyway."

"A charming old square," said Mr. Smock. "I remember, many years ago, I kept company for a time with a lady snake charmer in my circus. We used to ride on top of a bus like this, on moonlit nights, and hold hands."

"Did she have her snakes at home?" asked Tony.

"Of course . . . I was a drinking man in those days. Ida was a very considerate woman." He sighed. "Show me a woman who likes animal life, Miss Drake, and I'll show you a true ornamental to her sex. I revere such women."

"Would you classify crooners under animal life, Mr. Smock?" asked Tony, very seriously.

"A crooner?" The lion-tamer was puzzled.

"Skip it," said Tony, with a quick glance at Ginger, who stared straight ahead. "Ah, there are the Evergreens."

Mr. and Mrs. Evergreen stood awaiting them on the lowest flight of steps of the Public library at Two-Second Street. Why they should have chosen this spot to board the bus,Ginger could not imagine, unless it was because from force of habit, they always took busses there.Each had a suit-case as their sole luggage. They clambered aboard, and as they found seats, Tony as host, introduced his fellow-passengers to each other.

Mortimer Evergreen was thin and sandy-complexioned, and smoked glasses and a tiny Chaplin moustache. He never smiled, and spoke, when he spoke at all, only in discouraged monosyllables. His wife, on the other hand, a not unattractive brunette talked incessantly. She was a very cheerful persona bit on the scatter-brained side, and loved to accent words in the most unexpected places.

"Such a delightful way of going to Florida," she told Ginger, almost in one breath. "And in a Fifth Avenue bus! Isn't it too utterly quaint?

"It'll get us there, I hope" said Ginger dryly.

"Do you really think so?" queried Mrs. Evergreen. "I do hope you're right. It would be just too awful if anything happened before Mortimer and I—"

"What in her name is Mr. Evergreen, evenly, "your nose is shiny".

"Oh!" She caught herself, almost in the act of what had been a signal that she was talking too much. She took a compact, and powdered her nose. "Thank you, Mortimer."

"In business, Mr. Evergreen?" inquired Mr. Smock, "or just traveling for pleasure?"

"We're travelling— began Mrs. Evergreen.

"Shhh, your nose—"

"Thank you, dearest," Smiled Mrs. Evergreen, and smiled weakly at Ginger. "My husband can't stand me with a shiny nose."

Ginger smiled bravely back. She was wondering if she were travelling with a troupe of lunatics. If it were not for her having to be in Florida by Monday—

"We're travelling for my health," said Mr. Evergreen.

"We always travel for our health", Mrs. Evergreen could not resist.

"There's nothing like travel," said Mr. Smock. "I remember when I was with Buffalo Bill—"

By this time they had reached Washington Square. Tony drew up on the bus with a flourish close to the Arch. A stout lady wearing much make-up, was standing amid a small mound of baggage. There was a purple ostrich-plume in her hat, and a longnetie hung on her ample bosom. In one hand she carried a huge hand-bag, and in the other, grandasin. In a basket she had case that half covered it from sight. Tony helped her up.

"Good morning, Miss Love," said Tony, hopping out. "Can I help you with your bags?"

The lion-tamer gallantly hurried to aid with the luggage, and Tony introduced them all to Miss Desdemona Love. She was well in her fifties at a charitable estimate, and carried herself like a tragedy Queen. She was enthroned at last, and her portable goldfish bowl placed at her side. Once seated, she partly rolled down the top of black coverings, so that a long tropical fish of brilliant coloring could be seen.

"What's that—a goldfish?"asked Mrs. Evergreen.

"That's Gertrude," beamed Miss Love. "A Mexican sword-tail, my dear—not a common, ordinary goldfish by any means. Gertrude is very intelligent—aren't you? Gertie?"

"Does she understand you?" asked Mr. Smock, with interest.

"Of course she does!" said Miss Love. And gave a genteel little scream. "Whose horrible cat is that?"

The lion-tamer winced, but loyally patted his mustard-colored pet, who was staring with inscrutable eyes at Gertrude in her bowl.

"Mine, Miss Love. But you have no occasion to be worry—Casanova isn't partial to sea-food. He'll behave."

"He'd better—or it will be just too bad", said Miss Love, staring at Casanova through her lorgnette. "There was cat like that backstage once at Daly's when I played with John Drew and Fanny Dawnsport—a child's part, of course!" she added, hastily.

"So you're an artist, too?" said Mr. Smock flatteringly. "I'm a great admirer of the stage, Miss Love."

"Perhaps not an artist, dear man but certainly a Thespian," said Miss Love. "I was born in a troupe—it's safe to speak."

Mr. Smock eyed her formidable girth.

"You don't say!" he said, with awe.

"Do any of you play bridge?" Miss Love wanted to know. "I do hope we have a foursome here. It's a long trip down."

The lion-tamer was a bridge addict, it seemed, and so were the Evergreens. Ginger pleaded not guilty, Tony, of course was driving.

"That's fine," said Miss Love,"I don't see why we can't improvise a table in the back of the bus, with our luggage. We could start a rubber right away."

"If the table," offered Mr. Smock. "Everybody agreeable?"

"I never play before breakfast," said Mr. Evergreen, firmly. "Besides I'm going to take a nap." He settled back in his seat, and pulled his hat over his eyes.

After that, then," said the actress, much disapponted. She picked up a morning tabloid which she had brought aboard, adjusted her lorgnette, and opened it. Mind Love, like most Thespians, was a keen student of human frailties, and liked to discuss them with her friends.

"By the way—did you folks read this morning about that perfected thrilling jewel robbery on Fifth Avenue yesterday?"

"Who—what— robbery?" asked Mrs. Evergreen. She shot a look at her husband, who looked back at her.

"She means the Bankbeer Diamond, of course," said Mr. Smock. "What does the paper say this morning, Miss Love?"

The police are expecting to arrest the crook today," quoted Desdemona Love, avidly.

"But I don't see how they can, when—" It was Mrs. Evergreen, slightly agitated, who spoke then impulsively.

"Jessica!" said her husband. "Your nose is shiny, my dear."

"Oh, is it, Mortimer?" Flustered, she applied.

"Think they'll get away with it?" the lion-tamer asked in general. "Of course they won't," said Miss Love. "The police have spread a dragnet all over New York. They'll never get out of it—and serve them right, I say!"

It was then that Mr. Evergreen again came to life.

"I've just remembered, we did have a spot of breakfast this morning," said he. "So why not have a rubber of bridge, after all?"

"An excellent suggestion", cried Miss Love. "Mr. Smock—would you like the table? We have a deck of cards".

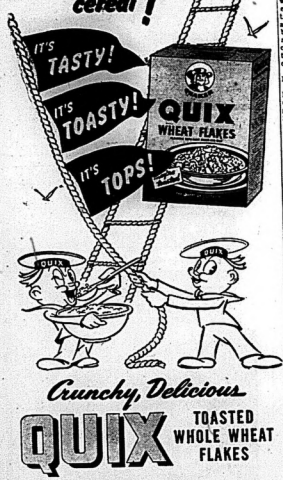
With alacrity, Mr. Smock erected a table.

Up front, neither Ginger nor Tony was paying much attention to the conversation behind them. Ginger was in a brown study, in thought; musing simultaneously on Ronny Rockaby and on her new adventure that lay ahead. She was remembering, with much pleasure, how he had kissed his Ronny a short half hour before.

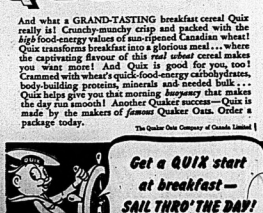
Tony, meanwhile, was driving through traffic, was as silent. The bus sped down the Avenue of Mists, and approached, at last the Hudson Tunnel. He noticed that the line of cars waiting it was being stopped, every so often, and admitting by leaps and bounds, and wondered what was up. As the bus reached the entrance, he saw a number of hard-faced men who looked suspiciously like police-detective force, grouped at either side of the road sharply scrutinising each car that passed.

"Who are those men?" asked Ginger, idly.

"Look like detectives, to me", said Tony, and a was not angry at him, and willing to talk. "Must be on the look-out for somebody".



Almost automatically he glanced in his rear-vision mirror, and saw that the bridge game was well under way, Mr. Evergreen, incidentally, still wore his dark glasses.



The detectives glanced at the familiar outline of the green, double-decked bus, and waved it on. "We've got", was what Tony, "caught or bust".

"By Monday', said Ginger, "or—I'm busted".

They were in the Tunnel, and on their way.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 28 —(CP) Golds and industrials were hardened to ease down a bit in the early session while small index gains were held at noon by the base metal and Western oil stocks. Further general weakness was shown in the early afternoon.
Volume totalled 672,000 shares for three hours.
Traders took profits in the gold and base metal groups. Labrador backed down 6c cents to 2.26 and small losses were netted by Falconbridge, Sherp Rock and Aldermac. Nickel weakened and Smelters and Noranda strengthened. Buffalo Ankerite also firmed. Index included Dome, Teck Hughes, Madsen, Preston, Malartic Gold Fields, Negus and Kirkland Lake. Late Dufault advanced 3c cents and Giant Yellowknife 3c.
The utility, food and paper issues were steady to strong and other industrial groups were quiet and firm.

WALL STREET

New York, June 28 —(AP)— Profit selling put the stock market in reverse today after yesterday's rise to new seven year tops and leading issues fell from fractions to around 2 points.
Volume declined down from yesterday's 2,179,000 share turnover.
Pivotals in lower ground included Chrysler, Anaconda, Willys-Overland, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Inwester, Bendix, Westinghouse, Dupont and Pan American Airways. Park and Tilford dropped about 4 on the year's low.
Canadian issues were easier.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 28. (CP)— Prices were steady in slow cattle trade on the Livestock Exchange here in by mid-session today. Veal calves were slow and steady. There were no sheep sales. No prices was established for hogs. Lambs sold steady. Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service at Toronto 250, calves 300, hogs 200, sheep and lambs 300. Unsold from yesterday were 1,400 head of cattle of mixed quality.
Prices in the trade included:
Cattle: Weighty steers $11 to $12, butcher steers $10 to $11.50, cows $5 to $9, bulls $6.50 to $8.25, fed heifers $10 to $11.50, stockers and feeders to $11.
Veal calves: $12.50 to $14 for choice, common downward to $7.
Lambs: $15.50 to $16 for choice, common downward to $13.
Hogs: $17.65 to $17.75 Grade A dressed.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, June 28 —(CP)— There were only 19 cattle, 45 sheep and lambs, 166 hogs and 126 calves for sale on the two Montreal livestock markets today.
Prices on classes of livestock were unchanged.
Butcher cows, bulls 7-9.75, bologna bulls 6-8.50.
Veal calves 15-16, Drinkers 6-9.
Medium to good spring lambs 15, heavies 10 up. Lambs weighing less than 60 lbs. cannot be slaughtered.
Hogs 17.65 for Grade A dressed. Sows 13.50-15.75 dressed.

PLANES ON HAND

The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan has almost 12,000 planes, more than 5,000 single-engined aircraft and nearly 6,000 twin-engined.

Flies Low to Warn Farmers Neighbors House Is After

Stratford, June 28—(CP)—An unidentified flyer, circling his plane low over the homes of farmers in Hibbs Township near here, awakened them last night and brought their attention to the fact that the home of John Gromeler, a neighbor, was on fire.
The farmers formed a bucket brigade, but their help was to no avail. The house burned to the ground all personal effects except a few small items were lost. Cause of the fire was unknown. Damage was estimated between $5,000 and $6,000.

CONVERTED INTO NEW UNIT

Rome, June 28 —(CP Cable)— Left without fanfare or ceremony, the R.C.A.F.'s famed City of Windsor Spitfire Squadron has been converted into a dive-bombing unit under a new commander. The command was taken over by Sqdn.-Ldr. Oliver Charles Kallim, D.F.C., of Ironwood, Mich.

48th Chaplain Continued Duties Despite Wound

Toronto, June 28 —(CP)— Despite a hole blown in his leg when he was trapped under a tree in a bomb explosion, Hon. Capt. Stewart Bland East of Toronto continued his duties for four hours as chaplain of the 48th Highlanders in their big push before the fall of Rome before returning to others discovered it and ordered him out of line, it was learned here today.
A graduate of Emmanuel College, Capt. Bland engaged in ministration in the Royal Canadian Artillery in order to get overseas. His father, Rev. Samuel R. Bland, is filling his pastorate in the United Church at Jarvis, Ont.

BRITISH SMASH NINE ENEMY COUNTER-ATTACKS SOVIET ARMIES WITHIN 37 MILES OF MINSK

Germans Attempt To Halt Flanking Move Near Caen

Montgomery Forces Battle Against Rommel in Heavy Armored Clashes

BREACH WIDENED

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 29, (CP)—The Germans were reported in front dispatches today to have thrown the bulk of their 15th and 21th armies into the defence of Caen, in an attempt to halt the British flanking thrust south of the industrial city.

But General Montgomery's men have smashed nine counter-attacks in the past 24 hours and widened a breach in the enemy's front line.

Supreme Headquarters announced British infantry and armor—supported by artillery—the first British and Canadian guns — were streaming across the Odon River west of Caen in an ever-widening bridgehead.

Field Dispatches said the Nazi command had sent practically the entire strength of the two armies into fierce armored clashes on three sides of the city.

General Montgomery is forcing the battle against his old desert opponent Field Marshal Rommel, who is struggling to prevent British columns from strangling his communications along the Caen strongpoint.

Destroy 37 Nazi Planes.

The long-dormant Luftwaffe sprang to life under a cloud cover to support Rommel's counter-attack to drive back the Allied attack, but 37 of the Nazi planes were downed.

American units continued to mop up on the Cherbourg peninsula, and the only German resistance reported was coming in that region was at Cape de la Hague, where it was unofficially estimated about 2,500 Germans were still holding out in isolated pockets.

Indications the Germans might be moving strategic reserves from the battle front to possibly even Italy to bolster France to meet the increasing threat of the allied invasion armies was seen in the heavy RAF-RCAF and Mediterranean attack on Metz, important railway junction in eastern France.

Today's communique No 47 told of a similar attack on the French rail center of Blainville, 12 miles eastern France.

There has been little change in the front positions in the last 12 hours, with tank and infantry fighting to the south, north and northwest of Caen continuing, the communique Command said, and added: "It is expected the Germans will make a co-ordinated major counter-thrust".

International at a Glance

A New Medicine To Stop Measles Available at Cost

Chicago, June 29. (AP)—A new medicine to prevent measles, a discovery used so far only by the armed forces, is going to be made available in the United States at cost, the American Red Cross announced today.

The preventive is called immune serum globulin and is obtained from the blood contributed by citizens through the Red Cross.

Recent studies disclosed that the serum contains all the blood's anti-bodies, the substances which provide immunity after one has had a particular disease. So far immune serum globulin has been used only for measles.

The announcement, published in the journal of the American Medical Association, said that now that a surplus has been built up, beyond the needs of the armed forces, the Red Cross decided to release the medicine to civilians.

Five pharmaceutic manufacturers process the material and have agreed—since the blood is donated by the people—to make the product available through health departments at cost.

American War Casualties Now Total 244,158

Washington, June 29 — (AP) — American casualties in the war, including the first two weeks of battle in Normandy, total 244,158 and of these, 55,206 are dead — 33,104 soldiers and 3,102 navy, marines and coast guard personnel, War Secretary Henry Stimson said today.

A report of Supreme Allied Headquarters showed that during the first two weeks of the invasion of France American casualties totalled 24,162, including 3,082 killed, 13,131 wounded and 7,949 missing.

Capt. Owen Atkins, Belleville, Wins Battle Spurs With Fort Garry Horse

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in France, June 29—(CP Cable)—During the fighting on the hedgerows of Normandy, at Berniéres and St. Aubin and in the inland push and defeat of German counter-attacks on the Canadian 3rd Division, lankmen of the Fort Garry Horse, a Winnipeg Regiment, won their battle spurs.

Like the tanks of the Ypsilanti Pusillers from Detroit, Que., and the 1st Hussars from London, Ont., the Fort Garrys went through several heavy actions in the first 10 days ashore in France and in every fight they showed skill and courage in gaining and holding valuable positions while giving strong support to central and eastern Canada Infantry Regiments.

Two Fort Garry squadrons landed in the initial assault, a squadron commanded by Maj. J. A. Meindel, Winnipeg, coming in at Berniéres to support the Queen's Own Rifles from Toronto and a squadron commanded by Maj. Roy Bray of Virden, Man., touching down at St. Aubin to fight alongside the North Shore (New Brunswick) Regiment. O. C. Wemsted.

Meindel was wounded on D-Day by mortar fire and the squadron leader was taken over by Capt. Alex Christian of St. James, Man.

Maj. H. B. Blanchard of Winnipeg brought in the third Garry squadron and linked up with Brigadier R. A. Gibbon's column at Lake Megantic, Que., to advance inland far ahead of any other units on the Eastern front of the Allied line. They cracked through to Aguersay, six miles from the coast, wiping out enemy pockets en route.

Headquarters squadron, commanded by Maj. C. J. Fletcher of Winnipeg, saw action early, too, with the commanding officer and regimental headquarters staff. On the staff were Maj. E. M. Wilson of Stayner, Ont., and Capt. G. J. Mills, Toronto.

Medical Officer Capt. B. W. Casselman, from Sir Mario, Ont., was praised for the way he and his medical orderlies cared for the casualties.

Bray's squadron saw more action than the Garrys ever just east of Tailleville where it attacked strong enemy positions with the hard fighting North Shores.

Peterborough Captain Killed.

The squadron which Christian now was commanding went down the highway from Caen and shared in some of the hottest action as the Hussars and Lincoln Regiment, the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders held a line against German counter-attacks and shelling that roared for four days.

Capt. J. M. Hall of Peterborough, Ont., acting second in command of Christian's squadron, was killed in the Buissons action while he was in command of the squadron.

Blanchard's squadron working with a Royal Marine Commando fought for one entire day clearing the German-infested valley of the River Rau, along six bitter miles from Thaon to the Caen-Bayeux highway.

Then the Garrys were moved through the woods and along the river bank, shooting into caves and trenches where Germans were holding out right in the centre of the Canadian allied bridgehead.

ALLIED 5TH ARMY PUNCHES FORWARD ANOTHER 5 MILES

Capture Castagnet Only 25 Miles From Port of Leghorn on Italy's West Coast

12 MILES FROM SIENA

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 29—(AP)— Along a highway littered with enemy dead and abandoned equipment, troops of the Allied 5th Army punched forward another five miles along Italy's West Coast yesterday and captured the town of Castagneto only 25 miles from Livorno (Leghorn), while a second column farther inland pierced through German lines to within a dozen miles of Siena, Allied dispatchers said today.

Livorno is an important port 11 miles south of Pisa, and Siena is a key rail and communications center 37 miles south of Florence.

The British 8th Army reported gains ranging up to a mile and a half in the areas of Lake Trasimeno and north of Perugia. Eleven guns were destroyed and 200 enemy troops were wiped out in shopping up Casella, area northeast of Perugia.

West of Lake Trasimeno the villages of Frattavecchia and Laforce were occupied. Among trophies taken were German railway guns with 70-foot barrels, firing 500-pound projectiles.

An official spokesman declared the enemy was falling back in confusion" in the Tyrrhenian coastal sector, where the incessant battering by American guns caused heavy casualties and the roundup of prisoners, from which German units progressed steadily.

Control Lateral Road.

Capture of Castagneto gave the Allies control of an important lateral road which, turning inland the enemy's coastal defenders with the Nazis' central army.

229 NAZI TANKS DISABLED

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 29—(AP)— Allied Supreme Headquarters announced today that 292 German tanks have been disabled or destroyed in Normandy since D-day.

FO. EVERETT C. GOWSELL INVESTED

Unable to be present at Ottawa at the investiture when the official announcement of the award was made several months ago, Flying Officer Everett C. Gowsell, son of Mr. John Gowsell, Foxboro, was recently presented with the M.B.E. by Air Commodore Adelard Raymond, Air Officer Commanding No. 2 Training Command, in an impressive ceremony at No. 2 A.N.S. at Charlottetown, P.E.I. In the picture above Air Commodore Raymond (left) is shown pinning the medal on the tunic of Flying Officer Gowsell. The citation accompanying the award stated in part that the medal was given "for outstanding devotion to duty".

Member of the R.C.A.F. since prior to the opening of the war, Flying Officer Gowsell was stationed at Trenton and later at Dauphin, Manitoba. He is now stationed in the Eastern Air Command as inspector of stored aircraft. His wife lives at 260 Dundas Street, Belleville.

U.S. AIR FORCE ABANDONS FIELD AT HENGYANG

Drops 1,000-Pound Bombs to Render it Useless to Enemy

TO HALT JAP DRIVE

Chungking, June 29 (AP)— The U.S. air force has abandoned its airfield at Hengyang, strategic city surrounded by Japanese forces, and a communique today said American bombers dropped 1,000-pound bombs on the field—formerly one of the U.S. 14th air force's principal forward bases in China.

The attack, which took place Tuesday, was aimed at making the airfield useless to the enemy. It left one runway destroyed, Lt.-Gen. Stilwell's headquarters said.

The American air force communique issued by Maj.-Gen. Claire Chennault was also silent on an attempt to arrest Japan's drive down the Canton-Hankow railway, an offensive designed to blast Chungking and make difficult the supply problems of both the Chinese army and the American air force. The communique reported attacks at a dozen different points along the railway and in the vicinity of Hengyang.

Nazis Rush Up Reinforcements

By DON CAMPBELL
Reuters War Correspondent

On the Tilly-Caen Front, June 29 —(CP-Reuters)—The Germans have rushed up reinforcements to meet the sharpening threat to the whole of their defensive line south of the river Odon.

British infantry have been engaged for the last few hours in mopping up small but strong pockets of German resistance on both sides of the river.

About 150 German tanks are in this sector in groups ranging from ten to 60 but the Germans are showing restraint in committing them in large forces, only three or four from each group being so used.

"I am quite happy with the picture as a whole," a staff officer commented.

"The infantry are fighting along both sides of the Odon although there are groups still holding out well behind our forward line. Otherwise the situation is quiet."

U. S. WARSHIPS, PLANES ATTACK ON 3,300-MILE ARC

Forces Advance on Saipan Island Score Gains of Up to Two Miles

NEW BLOWS FORECAST

Pearl Harbor, June 29 —(AP)— While American warships and planes attacked half a dozen Japanese bases along a 3,300-mile ocean-spanning arc, U. S. forces on Saipan Island scored gains of up to two miles, headquarters have announced.

From Washington came the promise of impending blows at Japan itself. Secretary of Navy James Forrestal said at a press conference:

"The final occupation of Saipan will enable us to project surface and air operations that will include the mainland of Japan, the Philippines and a greater part of the Dutch East Indies."

American marines and infantrymen already possessing the southern half of Saipan, occupied two villages in a two-mile push up the east coast. On the west coast they blasted the Japanese from Garapan, Saipan's largest town.

An estimated 30,000 Japanese defenders were pushed into Saipan's northern peninsula, an area two miles wide and seven to nine miles long.

Meanwhile a trap, already narrowed to 150 miles, was compressed today on thousands of Japanese at Wewak, British New Guinea.

The erasure of 80 miles of Jungle trails in 28 days by Australians who are within 70 miles of Wewak on the east was disclosed by General MacArthur, Americans have been approximately 30 miles from it on the west since Wewak was by-passed in the April 22 invasion of Aitape

BUZZ BOMB TURNED AROUND

Somewhere in Southern England, June 29 —(CH-Reuters)—Straight-faced anti-aircraft gunners tell this story about one German buzz-bomb which failed to land where the Germans hoped it would. An anti-aircraft shell burst immediately behind the robot projectile as it whizzed across Southern England, they said. The blast caused the buzz-bomb to turn around and it was last seen headed back towards France.

3,000 AIRCRAFT USED TO SCOURGE WESTERN EUROPE

Important German Installations Across Face of Europe Hard Hit by Allied Forces

NIGHT BLOWS HEAVY

London, June 29 — (CP) — Upwards of 1,000 American heavy bombers slashed Germany today, hitting four aircraft producing centres, a synthetic oil refinery and a number of other military and industrial targets in the north of the Reich.

Escorted by an equal number of fighters, the heavies attacked aircraft plants at Leipzig, Oschersleben, Brunswick and Aschersleben and a refinery at Bohlen, capping a 15-hour air offensive which saw more than 3,000 Allied planes scouring important German installations across the face of northwestern Europe.

Leipzig, Oschersleben and Aschersleben are within 90 to 100 miles southwest of Berlin, while Falkersleben is 40 miles east of Hannover. Bohlen is also in the Hannover area.

Railroad centres haltingly feeding reinforcements to the Germans' taxed battlelines were other targets in the big assault.

In darkness preceding today's assaults, R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers struck at railroad centres about the French town of Metz near the German border in an attack which cost 20 planes, including two Canadian crews.

Saarbrucken Pounded

In simultaneous operations, Mosquito planes flew into Germany, hitting Saarbrucken just across the border and an oil plant north of Essen, returning without loss.

The night blows came after daylight attacks by more British and American heavy bomber formations yesterday, which included the bombing of the Saarbrucken rail yards.

Several hundred heavy bombers carried out the night attacks, knifing their way through the heart of man opposition. Metz is 30 miles from the border near the Pres Great War battle field of Verdun.

On the night sisters Alan Blaine ville nearby and other objectives around Nancy, 30 miles south of Metz.

Operations Limited

Operations were heavier, which limited the scale of operations over Germany, but Allied fighter planes were shot down in daylight.

Two bombers attacking Saarbrucken and Metz failed to be beachhead were shot down last night, one falling to a Canadian intruder.

From all operations yesterday, Allied fighters and bombers are missing.

Another precision attack like last night's demolition of a German corps headquarters south of Caen, Montgomery's battle command is by Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's White Russian army moving down the Bobruisk-Brest-Litovsk highway west of recaptured Slavyi Dorogi. This road skirts the Minsk marshes and leads to positions from which the Minsk-Warsaw railway could be cut from south of Minsk.

Freeing of Mogilev Opens Route To Leningrad, Odessa

Push Germans Back Along Same Road Used by Napoleon in Disastrous Retreat

THREE MAIN THRUSTS

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, June 29 —(AP)— Soviet armies nearing Minsk drove within 37 miles of the White Russian capital today, pushing the Germans swiftly over the same road to Warsaw and Berlin which Napoleon followed in his disastrous retreat from Moscow.

With the freeing of Mogilev the Russians for the first time in nearly three years have a direct rail route between Leningrad and Odessa.

A Russian military commentator, Col. Nikolai Akimov, said the reopening of this rail route "is a factor which should be considered, for the advantage it affords in transferring forces parallel to the line of the front is one of the major conditions for achieving supremacy in any direction chosen for new blows."

Field dispatches said the Germans had retreated from this area so quickly they had had little time to damage the rail line.

The three main thrusts at Minsk were: Along the Smolensk-Warsaw road; over the Bykhov-Minsk highway across the middle of the Berezina River; through the valley of the Pitch river over the Gomel-Minsk railway and highway.

Reach Upper Beresina.

Red army troops on the Smolensk road reached the upper Berezina north of Borisov, near where Napoleon, with his staggering remnants, made a crossing at the village of Studenky. Here advance units were 27 miles northeast of Minsk and Borosov appeared almost as gone.

On the Bykhov-Minsk highway Red army units approached the middle Berezina, through rolling woodland. In the valley of the Pitch the Russians northwest of Osipovichi were 55 miles from Minsk.

Two large-scale outflanking movements were part of the drive toward strategic Minsk in the fall of Minsk.

In a swift sweep of Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st Baltic army through the Lepel lake country. Here advance units were approaching to within 30 to 40 straight line miles of the Polotsk-Minsk railway, cutting of which would isolate Polotsk from the north and east of Polotsk from the south.

The second outflanking movement is by Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky's White Russian army moving down the Bobruisk-Brest-Litovsk highway west of recaptured Slavyi Dorogi. This road skirts the Minsk marshes and leads to positions from which the Minsk-Warsaw railway could be cut from south of Minsk.

Criminal Code To Be Amended By Parliament

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 28. (CP)—Some of the ablest lawyers in the Commons yesterday agreed the criminal code needed revision, that many of the maximum sentences were out of line with modern times and with penalties for other offences in the code.

As the House speedily passed the annual bill which makes amendments to the code, John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) a prominent Saskatchewan criminal lawyer, proposed a committee of jurists, psychiatrists and experts in penal administration be set up to review the code.

Justice Minister St. Laurent said the proposal was a good one and hoped steps could be taken up after the war.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he thought one of the sections being amended presented an anomaly. It provided a maximum penalty of life imprisonment for theft from the mails. The amendment was to remove the minimum penalty of three years' imprisonment and permit the courts to impose shorter sentences.

Mr. Diefenbaker and some others contended there was no difference between a maximum penalty of life and a minimum of possibly a few days.

Mr. St. Laurent said it was possible to conceive cases of mail theft, such as the mail robberies of earlier times, in the light of which the section was probably framed originally—which would call for a life sentence while the removal of a dollar bill from a letter would call for a light sentence.

He was careful in dropping the life sentence maximum unless the whole code was revised, as there were many other instances where maximum penalties were out of line with modern conditions.

After giving the code amendments third reading the House spent an hour on fisheries department estimates and then adjourned to start the budget debate today with Hon. Earl Rowe (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe) leading off as chief opposition financial critic.

Hail of Lead Poured Into Wood by Allies

By MONTAGUE TAYLOR
(Reuter War Correspondent)

In the Caen Sector, June 29 (CP-Reuter)—For nine hours now the bombardment on this sector north of Caen has been fought nonstop.

The British troops have made considerable advances, moving more fin nme as I write this dispatch on an ammunition box under a tree, machine-gunners at intervals hail of lead into a wood screening the village of Epron, two miles north of Caen.

The battle began at 3 pm. Tuesday, and blood has flowed freely since then. Casualties are the worst we have, and snipers and machine-gun nests added to the difficulties of the battle. It also closely and prominently bound up with the heavy fighting being done by the Canadians. It began spectacularly with Spitfires strafing German artillery positions. Then British warships opened up with machine-guns swept the wood 3,000 yards away.

Germans replied with mortars and mobile guns.

Lieut. Carlisle Has Lucky Escape When Landing Craft Hit Mine

An Invasion Port, June 29—(CP) Lieut. Alex Carlisle's brush with a mine on "D-Day" is gaining for him the reputation of being the luckiest man in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Carlisle, who comes from Peterboro, Ont., is First Lieutenant on a Canadian-manned infantry landing craft commanded by Lieut. David Boltly of Port Arthur, Ont. On "D-Day" he was standing on the forward deck of a troop landing ramp, making ready to disembark, when the ship hit a mine.

The ramp up-ended and threw him against the bow of the ship. He hit the water so hard that for a moment he only saw seconds—he seemed to be going down, down, down. Finally he felt the landing craft pounding over the top of him. Just then he felt the hard steel of the keel butting his shoulders. "That's when I decided it was all over — but I didn't stop fighting that underwater, although my buoyant life jacket kept pulling me up," he said. "I finally broke the surface and popped up on the other side of the ship, quite safe, and it was slipping away from me. It just wasn't my time to quit. Boy! I'm lucky!"

Carlisle, nursing a few bruises, struck out for a tank landing craft half a mile away, and after reaching it was transferred back to a Canadian landing craft.

His ship, down by the bows, finally grounded on the beach and discharged all of her troops except the few killed by the explosion. Lieut. Boltly remained on the sinking condition Lieut. Boltly nursed her back to the safety of a dry-dock for repairs.

LIEUT. W. V. FAULKNER REPORTED BETTER

Wounded May 22rd., in Italy when struck in the back of the head with flying shrapnel from German mortar shell, Lieut. William V. Faulkner, 22, son of Mrs. Hazel Faulkner, 44 Cathcart Street, is progressing favorably in convalescent hospital in Italy according to word received by his mother. Born in Belleville, Lieut. Faulkner enlisted in the Canadian Armoured Corps and went overseas in April 1943. From the time of his injury until recently he has been in base hospital, but his re-covery to convalescent hospital is evident of his progress toward re-covery.

CHILDREN IGNORE WARNINGS OF M.O.H.

Thus far denied the facilities of the wading pool at the Victoria Public Baths in Victoria Park which ordinarily would be in operation at this time of year, children already out of school are ignoring the warnings of the Medical Officer of Health and are swimming in the water of the Belleville Harbor. The Medical authorities earlier in the season warned, that for health reasons it was not safe to bathe in waters adjacent to the Moira River within the city limits.

Water pressure pipes used for flooding the wading pool are being cut of repair apparently has been the holdup in getting the wading pool into operation this year. New pipes have now been delivered and undoubtedly the Parks Board will make efforts for their installation.

SCHOOL CHILDREN OUT FOR HOLIDAYS

With a light of expectancy and anticipation in their eyes public school children of the city answered the ringing of the school bell for the last time this season this morning. Tonight schools of the city close for the Summer holidays. By this afternoon pupils will have been informed by their teachers just how each has made out in examinations and with their minds at rest will go home making plans for the enjoyment of the summer holiday season.

JIGGER DERAILED BY STONES ON TRACK

As the result of a childish prank A. Haines, local C. P. R. employee narrowly escaped serious injury when the gasoline jigger he was riding was derailed on the main-of-way west of Belleville yesterday. The cause of the derailment was as the result of a six-year-old boy having placed a number of stones on the track causing the derailment.

Police Inspector J. C. Hayes and C. P. R. Investigator Mann investigated the placing of the rocks on the railway tracks and questioned the small child responsible. Railway authorities deem it fortunate that a gasoline jigger was passing at the time as otherwise a fast C. P. R. freight train following might have been derailed causing considerable damage. Mr. Haines sustained some abrasions when the gas jigger was derailed.

Pyle in Normandy: Soldiers in Normandy Learning Fast About the Art of Sniping

By Ernie Pyle

Somewhere in France—(by wireless)—Sniping, as far as I know, is recognized as a legitimate means of warfare. And yet there is something sneaky about it. It is not that outrages the American sense of fairness.

I had never sensed this before we landed in France and began hearing the word "sniper." We have had snipers before—in Algeria and Casablanca and Sicily and places. But always on a small scale.

Here in Normandy the Germans have gone in for sniping in a wholesale manner. There are snipers everywhere. There are snipers in trees, in buildings, in piles of wreckage, in the grass. But mainly they are in the high, bushy hedgerows that form the sides of all the Norman fields and line every roadside lane.

It is perfect sniping country. A man can hide himself in the thick fence-row shrubbery with several days' rations, and it's like hunting a needle in a haystack to find him.

Every mile we advance there are more and more snipers left behind us. They pick off our soldiers one by one as they walk down the roads or across the fields.

It isn't safe to move into a new building until the snipers have been cleaned out. The first house I moved into had shots ringing through it for a full day before all the hidden gunmen were rounded up. It gives you a very spooky feeling that you get on moving into a place you suspect of being sown with mines.

In past campaigns our soldiers would talk about the occasional snipers with amusement and disgust. But here sniping has become more important, and taking precautions against it is something we have had to learn and learn fast.

One officer friend of mine said: "Individual soldiers have become expert snipers before, but now we're sniper-conscious as whole units."

Snipers kill as many Americans as they can, and when their food and ammunition run out they surrender. To an American that isn't quite ethical. The average American soldier has little feeling against the average German soldier who has given up open fight and quit.

But his feelings about the sneaking snipers can't very well be put into print. I'll just say we have to kill the snipers before the time comes for them to surrender.

As a matter of fact this part of France is a sniper's paradise. The land is not fighting between small groups. It is a country of open fields, every one bordered by a thick hedge and a high fence of trees. There is hardly any place where you can see beyond the field ahead of you. Most of the time a soldier doesn't see more than a hundred yards in any direction.

In other places the ground is flooded and swampy with a growth of high, jungle-like grass. It is kind of stuff it is almost man-to-man warfare. It's the first time I arrived a long time in the Pacific says this fighting is the nearest thing to Guadalcanal that he has seen since.

Thousands of little personal stories will come out of this battle of Normandy beachhead. A few that I pick up from time to time I will pass along to you.

The freakiest story I've heard so far is of an officer shot clear through the face. He had his mouth wide open at the time, and caught the bullet. The bullet went in one cheek and right through his mouth without touching a tooth or even his teeth, and out the other cheek. This actually happened. Yet actually the wound is a fairly slight one and the officer will be in action again before very long.

Capt. Ralph L. Hays, of Prospect, Va., claims the distinction of being the first soldier to receive a set foot on French soil in World War II.

He hit the beach 65 minutes after H-Hour, with the combat engineers unit he commands. Like everybody else he had rough going—but he wasn't hurt. He is a Methodist, and before the war was a pastor at Bassett, Va.

O. B. C. NOTES

As in other years, July will be a holiday month at Ontario Business College. Classes will be resumed Tuesday, August 1st.

Because of war conditions, young people in Bermuda, the West Indies and South America have found it difficult to come to O. B. C. in the last few years. Some have written from Jamaica, Antigua and Trinidad of their intention to come as soon as possible.

A few days ago Mr. Rufus Cargill, Trinidad, B. W. I., wrote that he expects to bring his family to Belleville next spring as his son and daughter, as well as himself can take courses at Ontario Business College.

Another French-speaking student is Miss Pineau, arrived recently from Trois Pistoles, Que.

Miss Enzo Belanger, after attending for several months, has returned to Shawinigan Falls, Que., where he is now employed of an important business.

Miss Dorothy Jean Dunham has returned to St. Augustine, Florida, U. S. A., and has secured a good office position there.

Bertrand Mattison, Sorel, Que., J. Gauthier, Three Rivers, Que., and Marc Bergeron, Arthabaska, Que., have graduated and returned to their homes. Other students from Quebec, who have been at O. B. C. this year, are: Miss Irene Christie, Clapham, Miss Dorothy Beale, Inverness, and Miss Elialins McEachrane, Thetford Mines. The fathers of Miss Christie and Miss McEachrane are graduates of O. B. C.

Among others who went lately to office positions were Nancy Davern, Doris Aitkins, Grace Cannon, Jessie Dunsbury, Rhoda Adams, Marie Embury, Nadine Mark, Ruth Morgan, Hellaine McEachrane and Mrs. Marjorie McCaw.

Within a short period the following have completed courses here:—Robert Bland, Bruce Carter, Lloyd Carter, Jean George, Eileen Sager, Grace Cannon, Nadine Mark, Dorothy Cox, Geraldine Campbell and Doris Burd.

POLICE COURT

Hit-Run Accident Costs Driver $60

As a sequel to a hit-and-run accident on the York Road, 67-year-old Edward Smith, Shannonville, was convicted on three different charges in police court here on Friday today.

Smithwith admitted to Highway charges of leaving the scene of an accident and of reckless driving. The charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence. Provincial Constable A. Carruthers told the court that while investigating the hit-and-run accident south of Shannonville he apprehended Smith and during the investigation the officer added he found a bottle of beer in the accused man's car. Sixsmith suggested some person must have put the beer in his car as a prank. The fines and costs imposed amounted to $60.

E. E. Pollwell and O. E. Butler appeared in the court as special prosecutors for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board for three cases involving the alleged use of loose gasoline coupons. The charges were William Ward, Norman Hockson and Wm. Deline, all of Belleville.

FO. Geo. Hawley Reported Missing

"Missing during air operations" is the dreaded message arrived once in the city yesterday when Mrs. Jo. Hawley, 212 Coleman Street, himself a discharged wounded air force officer, received word that her brother Flying Officer Geoffrey Hawley, formerly of this city had been shot down over Normandy.

FO. Hawley's wife, who is a section officer in the women's division of the R.C.A.F. is stationed in Ottawa doing communications work.

The missing pilot went overseas in 1939 and has been active ever since. He joined the R.C.A.F. here but was transferred to the R.A.F. shortly after arrival in England. He worked as a plumber during his sojourn in Belleville.

He himself has had a marked career in the R.A.F. Commissioned as an R.C.O. he was a radio officer on board a ship operating in the Channel. Later he was sent to Cardiff, Wales, and from there to San Pedro, California, for special courses in wireless.

Joining the Ferry Command when it was first organized he accompanied his bombers to nearly all parts of the world. He has had three trips in Russia, where he landed the big craft in Ireland and West Africa. Now down with a year while crossing the Atlantic, he was severely wounded in the leg. He was discharged a few months ago.

Tribute Paid to Stretcher Bearers By Returned Veteran, Sgt. J. Irvine

Tribute to unit army stretcher bearers whom he termed "the unsung heros of the war," and to the importance of modern medical science was paid by Sgt. Jack Irvine, veteran of the Sicilian and Italian battlefronts, upon his return home to Belleville this week.

Struck by enemy mortar shell fire as he was "ploughing" it through the Italian mud north of Ortona last January 24th., Sgt. Irvine has since been in hospital in Italy and in England. He returned to Belleville last week aboard the Lady Nelson and is now spending 28 days' furlough with his aunt at 118 Dundas Street, West.

"With the advantages of present day medical science, a wounded soldier now has a splendid chance for recovery," he said, "I take my hat off to the unit stretcher bearers. It is only a matter of hours after a chap is wounded that he is in hospital receiving the best that medical science has to offer."

Bullpha drugs and blood plasma were doing miracles in assisting the battle victims on the road to recovery, he said.

Tells Stretcher Fire.

"We were slogging it across a bit of open territory in the region north Grande north of Ortona when we ran into a barrage of enemy mortar fire," stated the returned soldier by way of explanation. "Some hours later, I was in hospital 20 miles to the rear and was on the operating table. Previously I had received a blood transfusion."

Member of a Canadian armored unit, Sgt. Irvine indicated the exceedingly never-ending task had made the fighting around Ortona strictly an infantry show. His own particular job both in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns had been as a member of the demolition squad cleaning up, assisting the initial thrust by the infantry.

Great to be Home.

"It sure is great to be home again after more than four years overseas," stated the returned man. "It was a wonderful experience, but one I would not care to go through again."

Passing over the glory which Canadians had won for themselves in their push up the Adriatic coast for Irvine was loud in his praise for the job the Canadians had done in the armoured corps. more than a month ago paved the way for the 5th Army Generals. Canadians really did a good job in helping to smash the Hitler line," he said.

He spoke of meeting up with Captain Jack Irvine, a former local physician now with the medical corps in base hospital in Italy, Belleville boys in Sgt. Irvine's unit were Frank Marvin, wounded in Sicily and expected home shortly, and Bob Cook. At Maple Leaf City in Italy they met up with Capt. Bert Wells and had also seen Sgt. Harold Savage, winner of the Military Medal.

To Go Back to Hospital.

Still carrying pieces of shrapnel in his hip, but slowly regaining the use of his leg upon which he has had several nerve operations, Sgt. Irvine will go back to hospital for another three or four months.

In the meantime he is seriously considering the occupation which he will follow after his discharge from the army. He expects to take advantage of one of the many courses offered returned men as part of the government rehabilitation program.

"The boys overseas don't want charity when they return to Canada and again take up civilian life," was his comment. "Definitely do want a chance to stand on their own feet—and they'll need a bit of assistance to get a start."

Response Greater Than Expected In Aid for Russia

Splendid response from Belleville and district householders to the green bag shower for the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund was reported this evening by local workers who announced that the local drive for linens, towels and bandages for Russians would be concluded on Friday evening.

"People have just been marvellously generous in their donations of linens," stated an official today. "The response has been much greater than we expected and a great many really good and valuable articles have been received. We have had literally hundreds of towels given."

Extending the warmest of thanks to every person who had assisted in the local campaign for linens, the official suggested that those who had not contributed linens who had intended donating linens. These garments would be added to their donations delivered to the local Lobby store before Friday evening.

Following the campaign's close a complete list of the articles donated will be announced by the committee in charge.

CWAC Bands, Precision Squad And Other Units Parade in City

Conclude Performance With Band Concert on the Armouries Lawn

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Immaculate in their trim uniforms of tropical fabric, crack bands and precision squads of Canada's women's army thrilled thousands in heat-weary residents here Wednesday night in a parade and concert that gave a new insight in the Canadian Woman's Army Corps place in the war life of the nation.

The CWAC bands, pipe and brass, the only women's organizations of their kind in the British Commonwealth outside of the United Kingdom gave melodic evidence that their reputation of being two of Canada's smartest musical aggregations is no finah in the pan.

The bands are as much at home swinging along the street at the head of a parade as they are seated in the comparative comfort of a band shell. This was amply demonstrated here last night, when both organizations marched through city streets in the van of a parade that included their own precision squad from Kingston under Major M. P. Brent; the Belleville Sea Cadets under Cadet Audrey Cox; the Belleville Air cadet squadron under F/L. L. Dawson Boyd and the 34th Field Battery RCA with guns and mechanized equipment under Captain G. H. Carver.

Route of Parade.

The parade, headed by Provincial Police Officer Charles Siple in an official car swung through the Armouries gates to Pinnacle Street to Victoria Avenue, from there to Front Street and down the main thoroughfare to Dundas, swinging east at this point, it turned up Pinnacle to the Armouries, where it was dismissed.

The current heat wave did not deter thousands of heat weary residents from turning out to view a sight, that is always high on the annuals of the city. It was the first time in the city's history that such a lady officer, Major Brent, took charge of a parade, and what she did is a manner worthy of emulation by the male equipterpart.

The streets were literally packed with crowds of curious humanity, especially the main thoroughfares. The efficiency of the khaki-clad girls, their military timing of the two bands as one picked up the beat where the other left off drew the admiration of the spectators. Dominion Square sounded members of the two cadet corps, while the balcony who sanctioned "ed" added a further touch to an already colorful turnout.

Large Crowd.

As the parade swung through the Armouries doors to conclude its march the crowd converged on Pinnacle and Bridge streets and thronged every available point of sight-seeing vantage. They were not disappointed. On a specially constructed platform at the east end of the lawn, the smart brass band took its place and under the baton of Bandmaster Sgt. Bandy of Vegreville, Alberta, holder of two musical degrees, offered a concert, that not only brought out the musical abilities of the players, but delighted its large audience.

Lovers of Scottish music and the pipes had their musical appetites satiated with a sparkling display of manoeuvres and tunes from the Land O' the Leal. Auburn-haired Pipe Major Dorothy Victoria, B.C., led her nineteen pipe-playing and drum beating lassies through the intricate mazes of speckled marching, the skirl of their own bagpipes. The band who appeared on two different occasions during the concert drew the unstinted applause of the audience. Drum Major Brent.

An outstanding feature of the pipe band was the performance given by Drum Major Joan Turnbull, Vancouver, who with the traditional leopard skin of the "big drummer". Her ability in handling her drumsticks was clearly proven and she was the recipient of thousands of eyes as her whirling sticks beat the Scottish tempos on her drum.

The bands under their officer in charge, Captain Grace McNeill are enroute on a trans-continental tour in the interests of recruiting. They arrived here shortly after five o'clock from Trenton, and were given an official welcome by Mayor Harry Rollins. Later they were the guests of the city at a dinner given in the Hotel Quinte.

Precision squad under Major Brent arrived by army vehicles shortly after seven o'clock from Kingston. One vehicle caught fire enroute here and the CWACs were forced to "double up" in the remaining vehicles while repairs were being made.

A feature of the concert was the playing of the official CWAC march "Athene" composed by Mr. Reg. Hinchey of this city. Mr. Hinchey 33,000 feet.

was present and was loud in his praise of the rendition of his score by the band.

The bands and contingent under their respective officers left for Kingston shortly after ten o'clock.

QUEBEC ELECTION DATE AUGUST 8

Premier Godbout Fires Opening Gun in the Campaign

Quebec, June 29 (CP)—The Liberal government of Premier Godbout will seek a new mandate from the electors of Quebec Aug. 8 with dissolution of the provincial legislature to take place today. Advertisement of the election date was made last night by the Premier in a broadcast address over a provincial network.

The administration of the provincial legislature has been in office since the general elections of Oct. 25, 1939 when 69 Liberals were elected to the 86-seat House. In a redistribution bill passed at the fifth session of the legislature, the number of seats was raised to 91.

It is expected that Liberals and the Union Nationale Party will run candidates in every constituency while the Bloc Populaire is expected to run in about 45 ridings. The C.C.F. will seek representation in about 20 seats with the Labor-Progressive Party showing around 10 candidates in urban constituencies. Scattered representation may be sought by supporters of the Social Credit Party.

Standing at Dissolution.

At dissolution last night in the legislative assembly was: Liberals, 59; Union Nationals, 17; Nationalists, 1; Independent, 1, and vacant, 8.

Premier Godbout first declared the opening guns of what is expected to be a heated election campaign. He revealed the legislation brought in by the Liberal administration in the past five years and criticized the Union Nationale and Bloc Populaire parties.

"Union Nationale and the Bloc Populaire represent the deadly rise of a narrow spirit, opportunism and fanaticism in our province," he said. "These are three forms of provincial weaknesses which are among the most harmful. They are sources of division, bewilderment and danger. To drink at this fountain would be to accept with all its consequences, the poisoning of our national life."

During the 31st legislature, the government gave the province financial stability, he said. The Aug. 8 election will give female voters their first opportunity to exercise this franchise on a province-wide basis.

New U.S. A-A Giant Can Outreach Highest Bombers

Erie Proving Grounds, Lazarus, O., June 29—(AP)—Capable of out-reaching the highest-flying bombers, a new anti-aircraft giant is being used by the United States Army to clear the skies of attacking planes.

Army ordnance experts at this testing ground say tool the wraps from the 120-mm. anti-aircraft cannon, bigger than any other similar armament known.

Newsmen saw a demonstration of the 50-ton mobile monster, with a potential firing rate of 12 shells a minute. Newest feature is an automatic rammer, which puts a 50-pound shell in the breech, adjusts its fuse and rams home a semi-fixed charge of powder.

Assembled in Grand Rapids, Mich., the gun costs more than $100,000 per unit, Col. P. E. Runcie, commander of the Proving Grounds, said.

Described by one officer as "a bit bigger, and 10 along backs," because of its highly secret mechanism and crew of 19, the gun has been in combat, although no details are available on its performance, Col. Rundell asserted. Proof-firing and testing of the gun was begun several months ago.

Biggest army anti-aircraft weapon previously used was a 90-mm. gun which sent a projectile less than half the size of that fired in the new unit to a height of about 32,000 feet.

The War Today—
Have Major Nazi Forces in East Been Withdrawn to Shorter Lines?

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
Substituting for DeWitt Mackenzie,
(Associated Press Analyst)

The speed of the Red advance through White Russia, with the capture of Minsk apparently a few days away, supports previous reports that Hitler has withdrawn his major forces to shorter lines back in pre-war Poland — possibly along the Bug river.

Points like Orsha and Mogilev don't fall overnight when the Germans really try to hold them, even before such great power as the Russians are displaying. The Berlin radio, broadcasting about an elastic defense in the east, without benefit of reserves until the Allies have been driven out of line in the west, also supports the thought. If that were true, no such broadcast would have been made.

Reports at Nazi Stand at Bug R.

For a year there have been reports from various sources that the Germans were preparing to stand at the Bug, the "Ribbentrop" boundary line laid down and that if driven back from there a last ditch fight would be made along the Vistula.

This would not mean, of course, an uninterrupted Russian march over the 300 miles from their present central positions, or the 100 miles from their westernmost salient at Kovel, to Brest Litovsk.

Large German armies already have been driven out of line in the present drive. They are not all gone. Today will be attempted at every strong point, principally at Minsk, Baranoviche, Bialystok and Brest Litovsk, and there probably will be a tremendous battle for Lwow where the fighting is extended southward.

But, as in Italy, the Germans probably are down to the point where little effort will be made to save territory which obviously cannot be held for long.

Comparative Fortunes of War's End Obvious to Hitler

The comparative neatness of the war's end must be as obvious to Hitler as to anyone. If he is to keep a semblance of order some "break" he must gather his weakened forces into a more compact area. The power behind the Russian offensive, the smashing blind strength on the shore of France, pressure from the south with every day that goes by extended Allied air superiority, all have dictated his only course.

Kinsmen Carnival Well Patronized On Opening Night

Favored by the crowd gathering attraction of the C. W. A. C. mills and large pipe bands which paraded through local streets and gave a concert on the Kinsmen Carnival lawn during the evening, the sumptuous city's carnival opened in the Belleville Kinsmen Club grounds last night, amusement and entertainment. Swelteing booth attendants were kept busy catering to the wants of the thousands until well after eleven o'clock. The parade delayed placing of booths on Front Street, but in spite of the hold up and the fact that the carnival did not get underway until nine-thirty, net proceeds for the night were reported in neighborhood of $600.

As in accordance with carnival crowds bingo games proved the main attraction and huge crowds soons were crowded throughout the evening. Substantial prizes were been awarded away by fortune ate winners. Local wrestling fans got a look at two of their favorite wrestler when "Whipper" Billie Watson appeared with Mayor Harry Rollins as a helper at one of the two bingos.

Many refreshment booths also did a land office business gathering in the thirsty crowds while in addition there were ten other concessions and a fortune telling booth. All of which saw varying activity.

With the aspect of cooler weather this evening and expectations of getting away to an earlier start, Kinsmen officials are confident are in trusting that an even better night would be seen tonight. Friday evening will be the last night for the carnival.

Only One Vendor Sells Strawberries On City Market

That was not a riot or an accident that occurred on the city market this morning when a large number of people suddenly surrounded an automobile that had just pulled in to sell.

It was just the reaction of a number of strawberry-hungry citizens, who scanned the market from the early hours in the hope that strawberry mamma might fall from some rural heaven.

However, the flurry did not last long. The vendor did have a few boxes, but succeeded in selling them from her at the ceiling price of 26 cents. She then calmly booked orders, where upon the strawberries wire murmured silent prayers.

That was about all there was to the city market, with the exception of a plentitude of new peas. These sold at a common level of 40c to 50c the price for the finely tinged product. Potatoes and a few vegetables sold at early week prices.

AIRMEN BAIL OUT

Brockville, June 29 —(CP)— Two airmen from Trenton R.C.A.F. station bailed out of their Harvard trainer plane about three miles northeast of Brockville early today. The men were unhurt. The plane crashed in a field and burned. The fliers are reported to have lost their bearings and run out of gasoline. The badly damaged machine was fully located about a half mile from where the men bailed out.

Kinsmen Carnival Residents Enjoy Cooler Breezes After Hot Spell

With official thermometers for the week two days hovering near the 90 degree mark, swelteering residents were today promised a respite from the excessive heat when the weatherman this morning predicted "generally fair and cooler."

It was indeed a welcome announcement to the majority in the city and district who for the past two days have been under the heat degree every bit of available breeze and who have caused their electric fans to do overtime in succoring to official records at the Belleville Water Purification Plant the highest temperature recorded was Wednesday's afternoon when the mercury tower rose to 88.2 degrees. It was the hottest day of the year thus far.

Thermometers in the downtown areas far exceeded the reading at the Purification Plant, however. Each one resident claiming his went up to 110 degrees in the sun in his back yard. On both Tuesday and Wednesday evening the bay bridge was jammed filled and with cars as their occupants sought the cooling breezes of the bay.

Many people on Wednesday blamed it all on the humidity but the weatherman inflated the humidity was not exceptional, just normal. At any rate it is welcome news to know that the heat wave which came up through the mid-western States is now passing over.

Heat Wave General.

(By The Canadian Press.)

Ontario residents yesterday sweltered under the hottest day of the season with the thermometer hit new highs throughout the province. At least two deaths were attributed to the heat wave.

In Hamilton, where the official high during the day was 96, Albert Edwards 49-year-old employee at the Hamilton Potteries, collapsed and died before medical attention arrived, and William Agar, a former company employee at Wingham, suffered from a sun stroke and died.

The temperature in Toronto was officially 94 degrees and thousands of citizens flocked to beaches and swimming pools to get relief. Humidity also hit a high of 78. It was the hottest day since last Sept. 1 although it was three degrees warmer than the record hot day last summer of June 28.

The weather generally was boosted in heat with the warmest spot at Windsor, where an official 96 was registered. Other temperatures were: Port Arthur 84; Ottawa, 87; Cape Sound and Huntsville, 90; Guelph, 94; Galt, 91.

The forecast is for a little cooler weather today.

C.N.R. Down Squires 15 to 11

Harold Gordinier's C.N.R. "Railroaders" moved up a notch by taking the measure of the Columbus Bluejay Squires in this city's Softball match last night.

Although the youthful Squires took an early game lead the more experienced "Railroaders" gathered their hits and scored a dozen even runs in the middle innings.

Don Adams hurled for the Squires and struck out eight while Jack Wright was on the mound for C.N.R. to whiff but two. However, Wright's control was strong and his teammates out-hit Squires 11 to 5.

Maquis

The maquis of France are numerous and have been rendering service of the greatest value to the cause of French morale during the time of the German occupation and are today engaged in work of sabotage against the enemy. The French underground has fought against the Germans.

The underground movement will have a story to tell of remarkable endurance and courage as well as relentless pursuit of the ideal of keeping up the spirit of the people. They have taken their lives in their hands as they have acted on defiance of the enemy. They have gone about in defiance of the Hun and have acted as they felt called upon to act as patriots.

The full story of their undertakings will perhaps never be told as so many of them have no doubt suffered for their loyalty, but enough will be revealed in the days to come when the disclosure will prove of no value to the Germans to indicate the resourcefulness and daring of these men and women who have defied the militarists and the German Gestapo and the worst they could do.

They have made the lives of collaborationists and pro-Nazis in France a nightmare.

Today they see the fruits of their efforts with the coming of the invasion by the Allied troops in Normandy. Their years of work to keep the spirit of the underground alert and ready for the hour of D-Day, have begun to reap their reward.

General Eisenhower has spoken of the work of the maquis as "one of the greatest behind-the-line actions in military history."

Foresee Liberation

Nations which have been under the shadow of Nazism for four years or more have taken an intense pride in being able to share a part in the great invasion of Normandy. Norway is a typical instance. "News of Norway" tells something of the optimism of the Norwegian people. They had heard the instructions of their King and of Gen. Ironside, commander-in-chief of Norwegian fighting forces, to be prepared but not to act openly "except in conjunction with the Allied military command." They were to await "clear orders" from London "when the time is ripe."

But the men of the merchant marine, of the Royal Norwegian Navy, and of the Norwegian air force were in the thick of the world struggle from the first days of the war. They are still in it. Several destroyers as well as other units of the Norwegian Navy participated. Norse merchant ships were co-operating in the Channel, many of them converted for special purposes.

Norway is making her best effort as are the other nations under Nazi domination. The Allied offensive in Normandy has cheered her people. There is no let-up in their struggle against Nazi schemes. For instance there has been ordered a complete boycott by all Norwegians of collaborationist party. The Norwegians are combatting a poll on anti-Russian sentiment about to be undertaken by the Quisling government. One underground newspaper speaks of the cleared horizon and of the stern duty of the home front as the war proceeds against Germany. "If you are given the choice of betraying the home front or being called into a concentration camp, then everyone who wants to preserve his self-respect knows which choice to make. There are worse things than concentration camps."

So Norway and the other Allied peoples look forward to the day of liberation, willing to carry out the heaviest tasks to assure their deliverance. In their strenuous labors for the Allied cause they are proving themselves worthy of the recovery of their rights to freedom.

Army Turns to Bible

At the front the demand for New Testaments and Bibles for service men and women far exceed the supply, it is reported in London. One chaplain went to Italy recently with 1,000 Bibles, and within a few weeks he sent back for 2,000 more. The latest consignment sent to prisoners-of-war camps in Germany was 10,000. Back from Italy, where he went to confirm hundreds of men, the Bishop of Southwark said that they had prepared for confirmation within sound of enemy gunfire. "Before the war it was recognized that the church had rather lost its hold in the people," he said. "Then came the war. The younger generation was told we were fighting a war of good against evil. They asked 'What is good?' We call ourselves Christians, but why? For two years chaplains have been holding 'Padre Hours', and these have been made as controversial as possible."

More Births

The number of live births in Canada in the year 1942 is reported as the highest in twelve years, namely 23.4 per thousand of the population whereas immediately before the war it was reported as low as 20.4. More marriages and younger marriages of course have taken place during war and in this way nature compensates in some way for the losses which war brings.

The Tourist Trade

Tourist trade looks forward to expansion in the days after the war. In the year 1939 American travellers in Canada spent it is estimated no less than $79,000,000 and last year in spite of the fact of restrictions on travel owing to war needs many more thousands, there was an increase of $8,000,000 in U. S. visitors' spending in Canada. Canada is holding out high hopes for tourist travel when the peace era comes even in the face of competition from other countries. The two continents of America will be an attraction for many and Canada is preparing for the day when many in other lands who have been limited in their travel will find the means to journey in the years after the war's close.

Smoking in Church

(Manchester Guardian)

Arrangements to relay services from St. Mary's Church, Chatham, to an adjoining hall where those who wish can sit and smoke as they listen might have seemed a trifling concession to some churchgoers of the past who called it an affront to pipe even inside the church.

In some English country churches smoking used to be so customary that pipe-racks, and even ash-trays, were provided, and in Wales, as late as the middle of last century, the start of the sermon was a general signal for male members of the congregation to light up.

Readers of "Under the Greenwood Tree" will remember an important personage who through the whole of the sermon smoked tobacco borrowed from other worshippers.

What City Taxes Bring

(Ottawa Journal)

The citizen gets, among other things, free education for his children in public and high schools, an unlimited supply of pure water, a sewerage and garbage service, paved streets and cement sidewalks, police and fire protection, free health services, hospital conveniences, street lighting, and so on.

We do get great value for the money we pay the City Collector, but we mostly take it all for granted.

1944 Way of Choosing

(New York Herald Tribune)

One of our agents was returning by train recently from a Westchester weekend and was beguiling the time of day by snapping on the dialogue of two young women on the seat in front. They were, strangely enough, discussing men, especially the type of male who would be a good matrimonial risk. One, who looked absolutely realistic as moonbeams and roses, was saying: "In a civilian, a well baked neck is the thing to look for. That's where you get burned especially in a Victory Garden. And with rations points the way they are, a good provider's what you want these days, not a Tarzan."

JUST FOLKS

DELAYED

A tank or two had saved the day!
But one or two guns more
And the extra plane we had begged, in vain,
Had meant a different score.

The foe came in at the dawn of day.
We had men, and courage enough
But the ship was late with its precious freight
And we hadn't the needed stuff.

We had asked for powder and guns and tanks,
But promises, only, came—
And we couldn't use those! So our death list grows
With many a brave boy's name.

Now, wars are fought with guns and planes
And things which at home are made;
And it's bitter fate, when the need's so great,
To be even one hour delayed!

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By ALAN RANDAL

(Canadian Press War Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, June 29 —(CP)— Pilot Officer D. Ashford, London, Ont., says there is no sensation of movement when parachuting from an airplane in the dark of night. He jumped from a Halifax over England after having been on a bombing trip to Hamburg one week after his wedding.

Wing Abroad, the R.C.A.F. overseas publication, quoted him as saying: "As I went through the door my harness caught and kept me suspended for a while from the kite. The navigator was waiting to drop and he released the harness and down I went. There was absolutely no sensation of falling or of any kind of movement in the dark night."

Gray landed by a haystack near a barn.

The City of Vancouver Squadron has thrown down the gauntlet to D.S.O., D.F.C., a veteran of the found the squadron to which he aerial wars from Victoria. Two Canadians in an R.A.F. bomber crew, the pilot, Pli.-Lt. Kenneth Campbell, Toronto, Ont., and the navigator, William Robert McCrae, Calgary, Alta., have helped establish an unusual type of record. They completed 50 operational sorties over enemy territory, have taken scores of air combats but have never themselves been in a scrap with a night fighter themselves, never felt the shuddering fire, never had their guns fired in retaliation. Only once did they be searchlights, and never turned back from an operation.

WO. Jimmy Bulman of Stanstead, Que., has quite a moan—he just doesn't seem able to get on operational flying. He set out to land a long time ago, went to Britain, back to England and then on to India. He had eight recurrences of malaria in India. In the Middle East he was duty officer for an Australian squadron. He flew a Spitfire in India in three days and

CARDIOVASCULAR DEGENERATION

Degeneration sounds unpleasant when it is known and to the medical man. Medically it has no particular reference to ethical or moral conduct or character, but merely expresses the artificiality, or impossible to generation. Generation means origination, production, development, growth. So when doctors speak of cardiovascular degeneration they mean weakening, impairment, breaking down, wearing out, decline or loss of efficiency of the heart and arteries.

Cardiovascular degeneration includes myocardial disease (heart muscle failure), arteriosclerosis (hardening of arteries), aneurysm, cerebral hemorrhage, stroke of paralysis, from rupture of a small artery and bleeding into the brain or from clotting of blood in an artery in the brain where circulation has slowed down—thrombosis, this is called angina pectoris, coronary thrombosis (clotting of blood in an artery that feeds the heart wall), also inflammatory nephritis (commonly called chronic Bright's disease), degeneration of small arterial branches in the substance of the kidneys.

It is almost notorious that doctors can't cure these various manifestations of cardiovascular degeneration. Troubles of the circulation get a chance to do anything about the arteries, heart and kidneys. But cardiovascular degeneration come under control when recognized and the condition has progressed too far beyond hope of regeneration or repair. Only occasionally can a doctor get a chance to detect cardiovascular degeneration in its early stage or incipiency when proper medical and hygienic measures and advice might possibly reverse the process, at least stop or retard the progress of the degeneration and prolong the individual's life and efficiency. Even the individual does by chance come under medical observation in the early stage of cardiovascular degeneration he or she is likely to ignore the doctor's advice very seriously, for the reason that he or she usually does not have symptoms or signs to give the individual any anxiety. The doctor tells them to do this, that, he thinks.

In the preceding talk about the fact that men do not live as long as they always been so well, so strong—except for a few months before coronary thrombosis caused his death. These few months before the man complained of only a heavy feeling over his chest when he walked fast, and of a feeling he would pass off in five or ten minutes if he just kept on going.

Of course it might have been of less than no benefit to be told more than palliate the distress, but there it is. The individual with cardiovascular degeneration just will not take the trouble or expend the energy to a doctor periodically for a health test. Time enough for that when he is convinced something ails him.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Nois Contendere

Send me all the information you have on the value of raw milk as against pasteurized (pasteurized) milk. I promised the city councillors a brief on this if they would give me two weeks, so I want your argument in this matter.

(B. R.)

Answer — Excuse me from participating in such work. I have no printed matter of that kind. Personally I always drink it raw when I can get it Grade A Raw milk is the ideal food—preferred both by any grade of pasteurized milk. You may quote me on that, but you may quote me as an expert witness in absentia.

Germ-Killer

You said no germ-killer can be used internally or used locally without risk of injuring or destroying normal tissue. Then you mentioned with the recommendation to take tincture of iodine as a germicide.

(P. G.)

Answer — No one recommends taking tincture of iodine as a germicide. As far as I know, its local application to a fresh wound, in which germs may exist, of iodine is perhaps the most reliable disinfectant or germ killer and is not caustic or irritating to the tissues of all first aid antiseptic or disinfectant agents I know.

Enriched Flour

We are pleased by your recent article advocating the use of enriched flour. We produce only enriched flour and no other. We have received many letters commending us for it in our community.

(Miller Milling Co.)

Answer — My advice to everybody who uses white flour or bread or breadstuffs is to buy enriched flour or enriched bread preferably, but ordinary white flour to which is added a fair amount of vitamin B, vitamin C and alcoholic acid or as it is now called, niacin, as well as a fair amount of iron—these do not affect taste or appearance of the flour or bread but restore to it some of the nutritional essentials removed from wheat during milling or refining.

ALLIED 5TH ARMY

The enemy intensified the retarding of the 5th Army advance, following heavy German losses in counter-attacking them, destroying all available bridges. Subsequent attacks failed to prevent a close pursuit, and an enemy infantry battalion which attempted to break the advance by infiltration back through the mountains to the north was wiped out.

An American armored force driving northward from southwest captured the road junction town of Montalcino 12 miles south of Siena, key elements thrust beyond to within 10 miles of Siena. Capture of Montalcinello also was taken.

French units on the right, wing of the 5th Army, made substantial gains, capturing the towns of Montepulciano, Cetona and Chianciano, all south of Siena.

It was announced that the 5th Army alone has taken over 23,000 prisoners since the offensive began seven weeks ago today.

Total bag of prisoners for the offensive exceeds 30,000.

American gunners, with a surprise concentration of fire, destroyed a newly-established enemy artillery unit. In a single sector the Germans had an estimated 30 to 40 two anti-tank guns and 15 calssons, all of which were destroyed.

To illustrate the frame of mind of the bewildered Germans being overwhelmed by the 5th Army, an official spokesman cited this portion of a letter found on the body of a captured Nazi trooper on the 5th Army front:

"For us this is no war any more, it's a cat and mouse game. Their superiority in the air is overwhelming. Our soldiers have become nervous wrecks and cowards.

The Americans are finishing us off in their stride just as they finished off the Italians. Our 1st Army Air Force Liberators successfully attacked the railway marshalling yard at Bucharest and an airdrome at Karlovo, Bulgaria, while U.S. A. F. forces at night hit objectives at Giurgiu, in Romania. The Italian air force in Sicily and enemy planes downed, compared with six American losses.

Despite adverse weather, the Mediterranean Allied Air Force struck at communications with fighter-bombers ranging over the northern Italy battle front, striking at rail and motor targets as well as objectives in Yugoslavia.

"BITES" FOR SCIENCE

Darwin, Australia —(CP)—There is no lack of volunteers for experiments seeking a cure for the treatment of malaria at a special army detachment in northern Australia. Larvae of the anopheline mosquito are being imported from New Guinea. The soldiers submit to bites after having taken a preventive drug. Some have had 1,000 bites in an hour.

TO GET MILITARY AID

London, Ont., June 29 — (CP) — Middlesex County council, at an emergency meeting last night discuss means of cleaning damage caused by last Friday's $1,000,000 gale, decided to ask the defence department to make available some 400 soldiers with tools and equipment whenever possible, to assist in clearing away the debris. Defence Minister Ralston assured on Tuesday that this additional aid would be forthcoming.

Snappy Uniforms

(Windsor Star)

Many American soldiers are seen on Windsor streets, and people have taken an opportunity to size them. Remarks are constantly heard about the uniforms, which are a sharp appearance in summer dress. In their khaki shirts and pants and slacks, they present a picture of cool comfort which one might envy, say authorities, do not seem disposed to follow.

Except for the Navy, our armed services have no attractive summer dress. The men in the Air Force, it is true, have light drill, but of the same cut as the heavy in the winter, with tunics obligatory for wear when going about the city. In peace, these tunics look sloppy and untidy, and they do wrinkle easily.

How much better it would be if the Air Force could have a uniform into shirt and slacks, like the Americans. Such a uniform, with everything to recommend it, neatness, comfort and utility. The present drab leather jacket are, merely the relic of an outworn tradition.

ANOTHER WORD FOR PICNIC

The annual outing of English jam pottiers and their apprentices is called a waygoose.

FIRST AERIAL COMBAT

The French are believed to have been the first to use the balloon in warfare.

Name 'Maquis' First Used In Corsican Guerilla War Against Nazi and Vichy Police

New York, June 29 —(CP)— Creeping into the war vocabulary of the world is a word that probably will forever symbolize the heroic resistance of a people. Since that acknowledged she had "lost a battle," but "had not lost the war,"—Maquis.

It came originally from the island of Corsica, the French penal capitulated, hundreds of proud Corsicans fled to the rugged mountains of their once-free island, to organize guerilla warfare against the Nazis and their Vichy puppet police.

WHEN HOUSE ELECTS

Two Presidents of the United States have been chosen by the House of Representatives.

It is provided for in the Constitution provided that the electors should each vote for two persons, the one receiving the highest number becoming President, the one with the next largest number becoming Vice President.

In the first two elections—1788 and 1792—Washington received the largest number of votes and was the second largest number and the one becoming President, and the other Vice President.

But the third election Adams received the greatest number and Jefferson the second number. Both ostensible political parties were growing up and in the fourth election—that of 1800—the Federalists supported Adams for a second term as President and the Republicans supported Vice President Jefferson for President.

Republicans (Jeffersonian Democrats) agreed on Aaron Burr as running mate in their choice for Vice President, with the result that when the electoral vote was cast Jefferson and Burr each received 73 votes. The individual with the largest number of votes became President and the other Vice President.

But the Constitution was adopted and it became operative in 1804, and the amendment provides that the electors shall vote for President and Vice President separately, and in case no person receives a majority of the whole number of votes the House shall choose one from the three highest on the list.

Only once since the adoption of the amendment has a presidential election been thrown into the House. In 1824 John Quincy Adams, William Crawford and Henry Clay were the candidates, as Presidents, but none of them received a majority of all the electoral vote.

The House chose Adams President although Jackson had received more electoral votes than

Hope 460 R. C. Branches Will Carry on Work In Post-War Program

Toronto, June 28 —(CP)— Each of the 460 Red Cross branches in Ontario is being asked to consider what work it will do after the war, it was announced today. The survey is being carried out by the post-war organization committee of the Ontario division preparatory to planning for a post-war program.

When the war started in 1939 there were 80 Red Cross branches and the executive committee has expressed the hope that the 380 new branches will carry on when hostilities end.

STIRLING

Masons Attend Divine Service At St. John's

Stirling—About sixty members of the Stirling Lodge A. F. and A. M. No. 69 G. R. C. attended the Divine Service held at St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, on Sunday, June 18, a special mark of the occasion the lessons were read by two members of the craft. The Rector Bro. Cyril G. Brazill, L. Th. delivered a very forceful sermon. Basing his remarks on the above text he showed how necessary it was to those one's foundation of Christian building in Christ himself. The choir led the well known hymns "Unto the Hills", "Blest Be the Tie That Binds", "O Master let me walk with Thee" and "Onward Christian Soldiers" as well as rendering a special anthem, for the occasion.

Oddfellows Decoration Annual Event.

A large crowd of the Oddfellows of Lodge No. 239 and visitors met at the I. O. O. F. Hall, Front Street, Stirling, on Sunday and led by the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Band, paraded to the cemetery for their Annual Decoration Day. Enroute to the cemetery they stopped at the cenotaph while Brother Earl Pox, Past District Deputy and Guy Bradshaw, Noble Grand, placed flowers in memory of the veterans of the last war and and observed a minute's silence. At the graveside the members of the Lodge formed a circle around the Union Jack and Brother J. R. Thompkins, Acting Noble Grand delivered the charge. The duties of the day were performed by George Weaver, Acting Chaplain. The band played appropriate hymns and the members of the lodge and band paraded back to the lodge.

Miss Norma McPherson, Reg. N. of Toronto, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elliott.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Pierce, of Campbellford, were recent guests of Rev. and Mrs. Frank Townsend.

Bert Basteido of the H. M. C. S. York, Toronto, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Basteido.

Lieut. R. Hackney, Camp Borden, was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Chute.

A great many from Stirling attended the 75th Anniversary Services held at Wellman's Church, June 25th and also attended the supper served on the following Tuesday evening.

Sgt. Major H. O. McLeaming of Camp Borden is spending two weeks' furlough with his wife and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bateman have returned after spending a couple of days in Toronto on a buying trip.

Mrs. Ernest Brownscombe and daughters, Jean and Ann, of Toronto, visited Rev. T. F. and Mrs. Townsend on Monday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pitcher are visiting their son, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pitchett, of Madoc Junction this week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Fraser and family of Kingston are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stapley.

Springbrook L. O. L. No. 442 are to be congratulated in that they are sending all the boys' of that district, serving in the armed forces, a regular supply of cigarettes. They have just sent a fresh supply to some thirty-seven boys.

The heavy wind and rain storm in this district last Friday night uprooted a maple tree, on the Marlbro Highway, which completely blocked the roadway across from the post office, until the highway department cleared it away.

Several from Stirling attended the mixed double Bowling Tournament held at Campbellford on June 21st. Those taking part in the tournament from this club were: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompkins, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitty, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. D. Basteido, Mrs. F. Long and Mr. F. Mallory.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. J. O'Keefe and Mrs. D. Porth, of Stirling, in the recent loss of their father, the late Chester Lindsay, of Meaford.

Congratulations are in order to Misses Mabel Chapman, of Frankford, Margaret Vanderwater, of Chatterton and Helen Bailey of Stirling in their success in the Normal School exams at Peterborough recently. All are pupils of Stirling High School. Congratulations also to Miss Phyllis Vance, of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, who passed with honors the Toronto City exam of Grade Four Music Harmony.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGee, at the Nicolson Nursing Home on Wednesday, June 21st, the gift of a daughter.

To Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGee, at in Stirling on June 15th, a daughter, Mary Dianne.

"Smile as if you meant it!"

You can't have a real 4-star smile unless your teeth, gums, eyes and complexion are all up to par, because this kind of smile indicates perfect health. 20 Farm Commandos Strike for Higher Wages

Toronto, June 28. (CP)—Twenty volunteer farm 'commandos' went on strike today for higher wages. They sat outside the farm help office in the city hall for half-hour and refused to be transported to the Milton district where farmers were expecting them.

The strikers refused to work in the Milton district where they said they should be paid only $2.50 per day. They said they could get $3.50 or $4 in the Brampton area. Mr. John Bailey, supervisor of the farm brigade finally sent them to the Brampton district.

WEDDINGS

SEMPLE—KERSHAW

In Ryerson United Church, Hamilton on June 17, the wedding took place of Margaret Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kershaw, and Supply Petty Officer Wesley Witmer Semple, R.C.N.V.R., son of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. James Semple, Belleville. The groom's father officiated at the double-ring ceremony, assisted by Rev. C. E. J. Cragg.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore embossed taffeta fashioned on princess lines, and a long embroidered veil draped from a headdress of orange blossoms and Sunbeam roses. She carried orange blossoms, Sunbeam roses and stephanotis. Mrs. J. G. McCallum, as attendant, wore a turquoise blue jersey gown with matching hat decorated with yellow pansies. She carried yellow pansies and Queen Elizabeth roses. Lieut. Stuart Goudie, Kitchener, was best man. Staff-Sgt. Terry Kershaw, Hamilton, and LAC. Jack Hilborn, Toronto, ushered. The wedding music was played by Mr. Leslie Leman and "Through the Years" was sung by Miss Margaret Semple. Thirty-five guests attended the reception afterward at the Estaminet, Burlington, received by the bride's mother, who wore a powder blue and navy ensemble and had a bouquet of pink sweetpeas. Navy blue faconne crepe was worn by the groom's mother, and her flowers were Sweetheart roses and forget-me-nots. For a wedding trip to Northern Ontario, the bride went away in a yellow silk jersey frock, navy accessories, pastel wool coat and had a corsage bouquet of pansies. The couple will reside in Hamilton.

YOUNG—CAIN

The Rev. C. E. Baker was the officiating clergyman at the marriage on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock in the Church of St. Michael, the Archangel of Catherine Matilda Cain, daughter of Mrs. Patrick Cain and the late Mr. Cain, to Douglas Edward Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Young, all of Belleville.

Mrs. James Grant presided at the console of the organ, and also delightfully rendered "On this day, O Beautiful Mother".

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. James Ryan, the bride was pretty in her floor length gown of pink net over taffeta and white fingertip veil caught to her hair with an array of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses and carnations.

Mrs. Martin Kerik, the bride's only attendant, was attired in a pink sheer dress and shoulder length veil falling from a headdress fashioned in coronet style. She carried Spring flowers in dainty pastel hues.

Mr. Frank Cain, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother, who received the guests wearing a blue flowered jersey ensemble complemented with white accessories and corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore rose sheer, white accessories and corsage of red roses.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride selected a dress in pastel blue jersey, matching hat, white accessories and corsage of pink roses and carnations.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Stirling and Harold.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Young will take up residence in Belleville.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, June 30 — (CP) — NUTRITION SERVICES, Pensions and Health Department, says that the following letter from a girl in the armed forces contains wisdom for men, women and children on the home front.

"Dear Folks: I'm sure looking forward to my leave — you won't know me when I get there! What I'm really keen about is the difference in my eyes these last few weeks. You know how droopy, watery and sore they always were no matter how much I slept. Since our messing officer gave us a pep-talk we know we have to drink our milk to shake that watery look. My complexion's in the glamor class now, and I give milk a lot of the credit. I'll tell you about eating whole wheat bread and the rest of the foods for health when I see you."

..WILD BERRIES: "Can I use wild berries for canning and jam?" is a question that is often asked at this time of year. The Agriculture Department, Consumer Section, says, "Yes, by all means gather the wild berries if they are available." Wild berries are often sweeter than their tame cousins which not only improves the flavor of the jam but is also a sugar saver.

And here's a tip: Pick the berries clean. Don't leave the stems and hulls on because the extra handling required later on tends to soften the berry and cause loss of juice.

GLOSSY FLOORS: To take the backbreak out of washing the kitchen floor — whether boards or linoleum — the Nutrition Bureau suggests cleaning with a hot solution of two ounces of turpentine and two ounces of vinegar to one quart of water.

* * *

PICNIC BASKET: Streamlined picnic lunches which can be carried on the street car by workers taking a capsule holiday are suggested by Dr. L. B. Pett, head of Nutrition Services.

"Try wrapping, crisp lettuce in waxed paper, and celery, radishes, whole tomatoes, oranges — they bring health on the march. Hard cooked eggs, cheese, whole wheat bread and oatmeal cookies stick to the ribs for the trek home," he says.

LAKE TROUT with dressing on top, Spencer Method is suggested by The Fisheries Department. Ingredients: two pounds of fillets; one qt. of stale bread crumbs for stuffing; one teaspoon mixed poultry spices (thyme, marjoram, summer savory, etc.); ½ cup of colorlessly fried onion; oil or butter to mix dressing; salt and pepper.

Oil a glass or enamel baking dish suitable for table service. Place fillets in the dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Mix the materials for dressing together, then strew them over the top of the fillets one or two inches deep.

Place in hot oven, 500 degrees for 15 minutes. For the first 10 minutes invert another pan over the fish to prevent the dressing browning too rapidly, removing the cover for the last five minutes. Dressing should be a fine shade of golden brown. Serve, if possible, from the same dish in which it is baked, with Sauce Tartare.

"Wholesome Food Ends Constipation"

"Sure, I'm happy about ALL-BRAN. It really solved my constipation, and so gently. It proved that I could quit harsh embarrassing purgatives—which at best gave only temporary relief. So that's why I praise ALL-BRAN — eating it keeps me regular — and it's a wholesome cereal, too."

Good food, as well as a gentle laxative. That's the big news on ALL-BRAN—if your constipation is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. So simple, too. Just eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly, and drink plenty of water. This pleasant cereal helps to produce smooth-working "bulk" and prepare wastes for easy elimination. Then, to stay regular, you'll enjoy eating ALL-BRAN every day. Remember, it's a cereal—not a medicine. Your grocer has ALL-BRAN in 2 handy sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Pro and Con Suggestions to a Married Woman About to Break Up Her Home.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I've been married twenty years to a man I forced to marry me because there was to be a child. My whole married life has been very unhappy. We have two lovely children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

"My husband has been a run-around from the day we were married. I didn't care because I know he hates me and that's his way of getting even. He never takes me anywhere because he's ashamed of me. Some of his girl friends have even written me to get wise to myself and leave, because my husband wants to marry one of these women.

"My son has been in the service two years. He loves his dad and neither one of the children knows how unhappy I've been. My daughter scolds her Dad for staying out nights, but she still loves him. My son is coming home and I want to tell him that I must leave and make a new life for myself. I'm still young. I'm tired of listening to gossipy women tell me about my husband's affairs.

"The only reason I've stayed on with my husband is because I wanted the children to have a home, but they're grown up now. T."

If you have decided to make a new home for yourself because you find conditions in your old home unbearable, that's one way of looking at it, and perhaps the most logical way.

But if your chief reason for breaking up your home is that you are "tired of listening to gossipy women" tell about your husband's affairs, that's a foolish reason. Perhaps these ladies in relaying such tales have some deep laid scheme apart from the commonness of gossiping to a woman about her husband's shortcomings. It's not unlikely that some one of these ladies may want you to divorce him so that he would be free to marry her.

You tell me your daughter loves her father. Wouldn't you be depriving her of a good deal in breaking up your home? You may have some deeper reason for wanting your freedom. But if you have just some vague idea if you divorce your husband, you may marry again and live happily ever after, that's likely to be a case of wishful thinking for woman who has a son of twenty.

I am making these various pro and con suggestions for your earnest consideration. As you've been married for more than twenty years, don't take any step hastily.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Treatment of Enlarged Pores.

Find a woman whose complexion is coarse-grained—every pore a dent in the skin—and you will find a woman who failed to get an early start in the beauty race. We start out in life with skins so delicate that pores are scarcely perceptible. If one is lucky, the fine texture remains through the years. If it changes for the worse it is because it has not had proper care or because some simple laws of health have been disregarded.

The dry complexion may be a torment, with its scaling surface and its reluctance to hang on to powder, but it usually retains its fine texture. It is a safe guess that enlarged pores follow a period in which the surface of the skin has been excessively oily. There are stumbling blocks in addition to sebaceous glands, sluggish circulation, digestive disturbances. The skin has other enemies—strong sunlight, harsh winds and atmospheric dust. It is surprising that it survives as well as it does.

The first need is to do everything possible to help the skin do its work as an organ of elimination. The daily bath—scouring the entire body surface with soap suds and a heavy brush—is most beneficial, has cosmetic value.

It has been established by surveys that fat foods and pastries excite the sebaceous glands, and overworked glands cause pores to expand. If you are seeking to reform a complexion that seems bent upon its own destruction, avoid fried foods as much as you can, also rich gravies and sauces. Eat a green salad once a day. Before breakfast take orange or tomato juice. Buttermilk has an excellent effect upon the cutaneous covering because of its effect upon the digestive system. Unsweetened lemonade is also recommended, especially if the skin is inclined to be sallow as well as coarse.

Local treatment calls for a thorough soapy face washing at bedtime, followed first by a warm rinsing, then a cold one. Dry gently, apply as astringent made by shaking together one ounce of witch hazel, one fourth ounce of powdered boric acid, one half pint of camphor water. Your druggist will compound this for you.

In the morning use cold water freely, apply the astringent again. If the flesh feels harsh or dry, a little cold cream can be applied, but it should be removed within a half hour's time. Heavy applications of powder are not advisable. Fluff on a light film; don't grind it in with the pad.

It sometimes happens that compact rouge sinks into the pores; in that case, experiment with a creamy product.

Remember; there are two "musts" —the daily bath and the fat-free diet.

The Marry-Go-Round

Lovers— and Others.

Men want but little, here below;
But when it comes to dress,
A stroll along the street will show
We girls want even less!

These early summer romances are like poplar trees and morning glories—so short-lived. Like the good, they often die so young!

The average wolf's heart is like one of these flower-beds in the public-parks; continually blossoming—but always with something new or different. His love never changes; it is merely the object of it that changes.

What confuses a man about a girl's clothes is their antithetical values. He can't get rid of the haunting idea that the more terrible or foolish his wife's new hat looks, the more money it must have cost. It baffles him!

It used to take both hands and all her wits for a girl to hold onto one man. But nowadays, the average girl is so ambidextrous that she can hold down a job with one hand, and keep two or three men in line with the other.

The serviceman on leave or furlough should beware of the gimme girl. She is so easy to get acquainted with; but her primary principle is never to let a man keep any money long enough to get attached to it.

A girl may lose all her illusions about a man, and still go right on loving him; but when he starts wrecking her illusions about herself, it turns her love to vinegar.

A woman is not a real philosopher until she can enjoy the luxury of just being in love, without stopping to wonder how it will turn out.

Many a marriage which has withstood the undertow of poverty for years, has been all washed up on the present wave of prosperity, it seems that when a girl makes lots of easy money, her first thought is either a mink coat or Reno.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Low Back-Pain Not Always Due to Injury.

I write often about sprain of the sacro-iliac joint which causes low back pain and sciatica (the severe pain that runs from hip down back of thigh or upper leg).

Three of four cases of low back pain are caused by infection — teeth, gums, tonsils—and the other is caused by injury such as the sacro-iliac sprain or ruptured disk, or some other less severe injury.

In the study of medicine, physicians and surgeons look for the commonest causes first of any symptoms. It is natural therefore, that in treating a case of low back pain and sciatica that they will look first for infection and then for one or other of the injuries above mentioned—sacro-iliac sprain and ruptured disk.

In the Wisconsin Medical Journal, Dr. Harry E. Mock, Chicago, states that low back pain is not always due to some disease in the spine itself. There are many conditions present in the construction of the spine or in the individual himself which may be responsible for the low back pain.

Every case should be examined thoroughly before the symptoms are said to be caused by injury. Thus an inflamed muscle in the back can cause the individual to stand, sit, or walk in a strained position as he draws his body away from the pain of the sore muscle. And because he has to stand, sit, and walk in this position further pain will develop and injury will be suspected.

"A high percentage of the cases with low back pain occur in individuals who are not strong physically who do not stand or sit erect just because they are not strong. The treatment in these cases is to give corrective and strengthening exercises and encourage the mental attitude. A protruding abdomen can pull pelvis forward and cause low back pain".

In addition to general weakness, some cases of low back pain are caused by diseases of the gall bladder, stomach, and intestines.

Dr. Mock's suggestion is that before treatment for suspected sacro-iliac sprain, ruptured disk, or other injury is undertaken, the patient be put under observation and given treatment by exercise, baths and massage for a few days or weeks.

SERVICE HALTED

Port Bou, Spain, June 29—(AP)—Service on two French railway lines near the Spanish border was halted today, frontier reports said. Nazi authorities were said to have stopped traffic on the Beziers-Pierpignan line, without explanation, while the Tarbes-Toulouse-Carcasonne trunk line was reported cut by saboteurs.

Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell Bid Goodbye by Congregation

Transferred to Lansdowne After Serving in Marmora 18 Years

GIFTS PRESENTED

Marmora, June 19—Members of St. Paul's congregation in goodly numbers assembled at the parish hall on Monday evening to honor Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Caldwell who are shortly leaving the parish, the former having been appointed rector of the parish of Elizabethtown near Brockville. Mr. W. J. Cottrell was asked to preside over this event which opened with community singing with Mrs. L. R. Rundle at the organ. Next "Love's Old Sweet Song" was rendered by a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Rundle, Mrs. P. Gray and Mrs. I. Nichol Mrs. W D Lavender then staged an amusing quiz program which was followed by more community singing Those present then sat down to enjoy a lunch served on tables decorated with roses, peonies and sweet peas by the Ladies' Guild When justice had been done to the repast the chairman after a short introductory speech called upon Mrs. L. R. Rundle and Mrs. W. D Lavender to make the presentation of a R.C.N. pin and a gift of money to Mrs. Caldwell on behalf of the Guild. The address was read by Mrs. Rundle while Mrs. Lavender made the presentations. Mrs. Caldwell replied in a gracious speech. Next came two presentations to Rev. A. B. Caldwell. R. G Winters read an address and W. D. Lavender on behalf of the congregation presented the rector with a purse of money. Miss Jennie Gray on behalf of the Sunday School made the presentation of a beautiful picture. In returning thanks Rev. A. B. Caldwell referred to the various accomplishments in the parish during the seventeen and a half years of his rectoriate. He alluded to the fact that his children had grown up here so that the village in a very real way meant home to them. He had enjoyed many friendships during his stay here and he anticipated that good co-operation would be extended him in the new parish to which he was going.

Able Seaman Arnold Caldwell who was able to be present for the occasion also made a neat speech of appreciation of the friendships he had enjoyed in Marmora. After all had joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne" the singing of the National Anthem brought the evening to a close.

2 C.W.A.C. BANDS ON RECRUITING TOUR IN TOWN

Women Musicians Are Feted by Civic Authorities

Trenton. — History was made in Trenton on Wednesday, when for the first time on record two outstanding bands made up completely of women, some seventy or more in number, visited the town in the interests of recruiting for the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

These two bands the Military Brass and the Pipe Band of the C.W.A.C. stopped off at Trenton during their tour of the Dominion, from coast to coast. They arrived by truck and were welcomed at "Firhurst Manor", where civic officials had arranged luncheon in their honour. Following the luncheon the bands paraded through the town and thence to Governor Simcoe Park, on the bay shore, for an hour and a half program of delightful music. They were introduced to their audience by His Worship Mayor H. R. Cory and between stirring numbers of the Pipers and the Brass Band, Lieut. Nora D. Boothe, of Montreal, spoke of the great need for volunteers for the Canadian Women's Army in order that women might release men for the actual fighting front and thereby be a party to the ultimate victory.

The girls made a striking appearance in their regulation uniforms, Balmorals replacing the peaked caps. A brown rosette backs the diamond-shaped C.W.A.C. cap badge, and though the temperature on Tuesday afternoon was around the nineties, brass drummer Joan Turner, of Vancouver, still wore the handsome leopard skin over her uniform. It is said the skin was presented to the band by the City of Lethbridge, Alta., in appreciation of the band's services during the Fifth Victory Loan. It is called "Susie" and is the mascot.

The Bandmaster, Nadia Svarich, of Vegreville, Alta., is director of the Brass Band and holds degrees of A.T.C.M., and L.R.S.M. Pipe Major Lillian Grant, of Victoria, B.C., who formerly conducted the Highland Lassies' Pipe Band in that city, heads the pipers. She holds four silver cups and 60 medals for piping and Highland dancing.

Starting out early in March from Kitchener, in charge of Capt. Grace McNeill, of Kitchener, and with members from every province the bands have appeared in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Quebec and recently in Ottawa. They are scheduled to appear in Toronto on July 5th.

Among those taking part in recruiting in Trenton was Sergeant Lois May, of Wooler, who is well known in Trenton and has a host of friends. Miss May has been in the C.W.A.C. for more than a year.

It is not known at the time how many Trenton young ladies actually were signed up on Tuesday but it was noticed several gave in their names as likely recruits.

Women's Activities

IVANHOE W.M.S.

The meeting of the Ivanhoe W.M.S., was held at the home of Mrs. George Wood recently.

Group Leader, Mrs. P. Palmer, took charge of the remaining part of the meeting. Scripture readings were taken by Mrs. S. Prest, Mrs. M. Ray, and Mrs. George Wood. A reading entitled "Boy Life Needs Church Life", was given by Mrs. George Wood. Mrs. Clifford Mitz then gave a reading from the Missionary Monthly, called "The Adolescent Girl". Mrs. N. Thomilson gave a poem and the Study Book was given by Mrs. O. E. Wagar. Readings from the "Watch Tower" were read by Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Ray, and Mrs. Thomilson.

The hostess served a lunch and a vote of thanks was extended to her for her kind hospitality.

THE TRILLIUM

Deep within Ontario's wild wood
In the days of early spring,
Side by side with dog-tooth violets
Fairer flowers are blossoming:
Flowers with three white, waxen petals
Rise above the leafy mould,
Waking at the call of springtime
Though the air is keen and cold.

In a wood that I remember
Children picked these pure white flowers—
Trilliums—the chosen emblem
Of the province that is ours;
May Ontario's sons and daughters!
As in childhood long ago,
Keep their hearts all pure and stainless
Like the trillium—white as snow.

FOXBORO

45 Relatives Join in Marking 85th Birthday

Foxboro — Forty-five of Mrs. Mary Ann Kilpatrick's relatives gathered at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Sherry, to celebrate her eighty-first birthday. The house was prettily decorated with streamers and flowers. The people were called to order by Rev. E. Cook and after a few remarks Bernice Kilpatrick presented her grandmother with a number of lovely gifts. After opening the gifts all sang "Happy Birthday." Mrs. Kilpatrick voiced her appreciation. Guests were present from Tweed, Belleville, Thomasburg and Crookston.

Church Service.

A large number attended church service on Sunday morning in the United Church. At the beginning of the service a baptismal font was dedicated by Rev. E. Cook. This font had been donated by Mrs. Frank Howes, Mrs. Clifford Wilson and Mr. Earl Bird in memory of their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bird. Following this a baptismal service was conducted by the pastor and eight children were baptized. An interesting discourse was given by the pastor on "This shall be unto you and your children" and he fully explained the meaning and necessity of baptism. Miss Isobel McCullough and Jack Empey sang "Jewels." At the conclusion of the service Rev. E. Cook presented Mr. Bill Covell with an identification bracelet and pen and pencil set for which Bill returned thanks. Best wishes were extended to him. He is stationed at an eastern port.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q. When do butter coupons 66 and 67 become due?

A. Butter coupons 66 and 67 are now valid. Coupons 68 and 69 will fall due on July 6.

Q. Must beekeepers register?

A. Yes, all beekeepers in Canada must register either with their Ration Administration or Local Ration Board.

Q. Is there a price ceiling on Canadian-grown cherries?

A. Home-grown cherries of all types and cherries imported between July 3 and September 30 are now under a ceiling for the first time.

Q. Is it true that shoemakers can now put full leather soles on children's shoes?

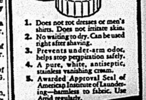
A. Yes, it was announced by the WPTB that a shoemaker may use full leather soles in repairing children's shoes up to size 3 and also in loggers' boots.

Q. I am going to a summer hotel for two weeks. Must I take my ration book with me?

A. Yes, guests at summer hotels for two weeks. Must I take my ration books so that the management may remove the appropriate coupons.

Q. My son is sailing on a Great Lakes steamer and, of course, has his ration book with him. Am I entitled to use his canning sugar coupons and, if so, how am I to get them?

A. You are entitled to your son's canning sugar coupons. Presumably his No. 3 book is in the hands of his captain. If so, the latter should surrender them on demand. You son can then mail them to you. He must mail the books and not the coupons alone, as the latter are not negotiable when loose.



Q. I believe that I was overcharged for bananas. How can I find out if this is the case?

A. Apply to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The retail ceiling on bananas in southern Ontario and southern Quebec is 14 cents per pound.

Home Atmosphere Of London Club Charms Officers

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 20 —(CP)— Alice Massey, wife of Hon. Vincent Massey, Canada's High Commissioner to Great Britain, is no Whistler's mother to sit quietly with folded hands and immobile face. Her hands are always busy, her face always intent, reflecting flashes of interest in the people she's talking to, in whatever she's talking about.

Her eyes cloud when she speaks of some little tragedy that has come to her notice. They snap with fun when she tells an amusing story. She has a quality, indefinable, that leaves you thinking of your own mother.

Mrs. Massey is good copy—so good that after interviewing her you find herself with a fistful of notes and it's hard to sculpture them together into a model of the chatty lady of the Canadian Officer's Club or the versatile hostess of the flat in the Dorchester.

The imprint of her personality is on the club for Canadian officers, just off Trafalgar Square, near Canada House. The walls are green, the curtains orange, the upholstery of the furniture and sofas it looks like home to the Canadian general or second lieutenant.

Behind a serving table Mrs. Massey heaped plates with cold meat and fried potatoes. A red apron covered her plain black dress, but her black hat had a jaunty angle.

"How are you, you haven't been in for a long time—would you like beef or pork?" she said to an R. C. A. F. officer. "How is the leave coming?" she fired at an army officer over the fried potatoes. "What shows have you seen?"

There was a lull and she explained how she founded the club early in the war so men on leave in London would have a homey place to have their lunch. Her son has half what they'd pay in any restaurant they get a plate of home-cooked food, dessert, coffee.

Popular Rendezvous.

More than 24,000 Canadian officers have come here, at the rate of about 180 a day, to eat, to read the papers from their home town and to relax reminisce with old friends.

Mrs. Massey supervises all the cooking herself, every morning at the crack of dawn in her own flat in the Dorchester, with the help of a negro maid. The Massey chauffeur helps her carry it to the club where its kept hot on a little bit of a stove.

Mrs. Massey carves the roasts herself prepares the salads.

"I try to make things taste like Canada," she said.

A junior cadet, Major Helen Wilson of Moosomin, Sask., came past for her lunch box and Mrs. Massey explained she had furnished a dozen regulation flats for Canadian women officers. The large downstairs room is strictly for men only.

This was Mrs. Massey at work. Mrs. Massey at home, with an hour or so to herself in the comfortable Dorchester flat that is a jumble of books and pictures and has a well-lived-in look, is not much less busy. Makes Early Start.

Her day had begun at 5.30 a.m. she explained when the Canadian papers were brought to her in bed with her tea. "I gobble up every scrap of news about Canada" she said. "Vincent and I both long to get back to Canada and our house near Port Hope, Ont.—its an obsession with us."

She's up, has her own home matters in order—and that may include planning a luncheon party for a dozen or more guests—but the club cooking on the way and is off to to the club herself by 9 a.m.

In the afternoon she goes to her office in Canadian Military Headquarters where there's usually a pile of mail and unfinished business. There may be a concert to arrange for Canadian servicemen, or a letter from a young English girl married to a Canadian, and asking her about Canada.

Usually the letters aren't finished, and Mrs. Massey brings her secretary home to the living room which looks onto Hyde Park. Even while she said this, her secretary came in with a sheaf of late letters.

One was a gracious letter telling a mother in Canada how well her son was looking. Another was to a boy just finishing his convalescence at Garmons, the country place the Masseys have turned into a convalescent home for Canadian men overseas.

Mrs. Massey becomes canny when she talks about her fan-flung work, among Canadian men overseas. She insists that it can't be mentioned in an interview. "I just do the sort of things their own mothers would do. I know what its like to have a boy away." (Capt. Lionel Massey is stationed with repatriated prisoners of war.)

The little things are what mother here in London would like to know, like the time Mrs. Massey arranged a wedding luncheon at the flat for a Canadian boy and girl who were married. Like the times she has helped boys shop for presents for their wives and newly arrived babies, the times she has scanned photographers for a picture of a soldier who has become a casualty, so she could send it to his mother.

"I enjoy doing it all so much," she said, and she meant that.

Mrs. Massey is a Martinmer, born in Fredericton, N. B., daughter of Sir George Parkin, who later became head of Upper Canada College.

ROSLIN

Parents, Friends Are Entertained By Pupils, Teacher

Roslin—On Friday afternoon last the children of the Roslin ... with their teacher, Miss Mary McArdle, entertained their parents and friends in the Church Hall at their last Junior Red Cross meeting of the year. Miss Lois Reid acted as chairlady and the children presented a varied program of musical numbers, folk-dancing, readings recitations and a debate. Resolve that "It is better to live in the country than in the City." Those on the affirmative side were Mary Morgan and Kenneth Howes, while the negative side was taken by Sidney Morgan and Norma Bates. The negative side won with a small majority.

The teacher presented a number of prizes to the children, and at the close of the program the teacher, Miss Metcalfe was asked to take a chair at the front of the hall and Miss Shirley Morgan read an address, which had been signed on behalf of those present by Aileen Reid, June Sills and Isabel Bates.

Lois Reid and Mary Bates made the presentation of a Satin bed spread and Satin cushion for which Miss Metcalfe graciously expressed her thanks and all joined in singing "For She is a Jolly Good Fellow." The program closed with the singing of the National Anthem after which the children served lunch.

Chunky Max Lanier of Cards Picked Up Two Losses, Losing Regular and Suspended Game

War Relief, However, Benefitted to the Tune of $80,000

BROWNS BEATEN

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

War relief picked up an estimated $80,000 today from the first four major league fund games but Chunky Max Lanier of St. Louis Cardinals just picked up two more black marks in the loss column.

Lanier worked only 6 2/3 innings last night but he was beaten by the Phillies, 4-0 and charged with another 6-5 defeat in a continuation of a May 16 "suspended" game.

The regular start of the St. Louis season, 34,782, turned out for the novel double-header but the $4,000 fatherget of the Phils applied their fun with a neat four-hit job in the regulation game, while Lanier's mishaps picked up where he had left off in the "suspended" tilt to notch his sixth victory.

Bill Nicholson continued his mid-season rush toward the home run and runs batted in leadership by bashing his 19th and 14th circuit clouts and driving in five runs as Chicago whipped Brooklyn twice, 13-6 and 6-2 before 16,332.

New York Giants' western trip started off on a sour note as Pittsburgh clubbed out a 9-2 edge for Mac Hallowell to hand Hal Fischer his sixth setback.

Dain Clay's 10th-inning single in the opener and Estel Crabtree's pinch single in the eighth gave the Cincinnati a double-decker win over Boston, 4-3 and 3-2.

The Yankee Stadium "jinx" struck down St. Louis Browns who bowed before Atley Donald's talented curving, 7-2. Bob Muncrief's six-game win streak was snapped by the Bronx Bombers.

Don Black kept Philadelphia out of the American League cellar by scattering eight hits for win no. 5 by a 7-3 margin over Cleveland's Vern Kennedy and Washington's Johnny Niggeling came back to trek with three scratchy hits to decision Rufe Gentry, 4-1.

Manager Joe Cronin's seventh-inning double earned Boston a 4-3 twilight edge over Chicago.

VERNON BAXTER DEFEATS DUNLOP IN MAIN BOUT

Wagner Beats Cheri Vallina and Monahan Takes Morgan

THREE GOOD BOUTS

Keeping his promise to Belleville wrestling fans, Vern Baxter, the Oregon Cowboy, walked off with top honors in a victory over Al Dunlop at the local palace de sports Wednesday night before a crowd that undoubtedly were most happy to have their pet pugnacious entertainer back, but in the meantime along came Promoter Frank Tunney and "Whipper Billwhile" Watson to make certain that Baxter wasn't given the business. Whipper Billy was signing autographs along with Marne Tunney, Baxter took care of the fans' No. 1 hate — Mr. Dunlop.

Wednesday night without effort the Oregon "Lumberjack" finally moved into the realm of the leading ring artics. For the initial round Dunlop applied all of the most scurrilous measures available. After weathering a series of elbow smashes, jabs and chops Baxter, which by now you know is Mister Baxter, moved in the fray with a few hefty scissors and that was all for Dunlop and company.

You can't very well like Dunlop down too long, so he bounced back with a vengeance in the second to get matters along about the forty minute mark. Just as the fans were considered there was going to be a third draw fight, Baxter suddenly decided to put an end to Dunlop's reign with as beautiful a flying mare as you'll ever wish for.

Of course the worst trouble came in the initial bout when Bob Wagner not only beat Cheri Vallina in two straight falls but cliff dove of his trousers, so much so that Fox Boulevard Athletic Club Referee Monahan tossed Toar Morgan for a ten spot when the gentleman in blue came into the lower rows of the ringside to be counted out. With all this the spectators will be back again next week.

IT'S seldom too late to mend . . . that's one thing our fire men have learned after years of experience in the fire prevention field. And that's why it will save you money to let us examine ANY fire, before you discard it.

Even holes as big as your fist can be repaired permanently. First we ream out the injured part and cement rubber into the hole. Then a "section repair" is built up inside to replace the broken cords. The repair is then welded into the fire under heat and pressure in a specially mould. Such a repair will last as long as the tire.

Damaged tubes can also be repaired in most cases of extra service.

How is Tall Yow Girl Friend's Age:

If a man wants to know his girl friend's age and thinks she wouldn't be frank if he came right out and asked her, here's a way he can find out. First, he suggests a mathematical game and asks her to get pencil and paper. Suppose she age is 34 and she was born in March—but he doesn't know this:

He—First, write down the number of the month you were born in. Don't let me see what you write. Got that down?

She—O.K.

He—Multiply that by two.

She—All right.

He—Add 5.

She Uh-huh.

He—Multiply the result by 50. Got that?

She—Yes.

He—Add your own age.

She—Right.

He—Subtract 365.

She—Right.

He—Now add 115 . . . What's the final result?

The answer should be: 334. The last two figures indicate her age, 34; the 3 indicates the month of birth, March. He can say, "You were born in March, and you're 24, but it's not my business if you don't say 24.

Of course, she can beat this little game if she simply writes down the age she wishes to be, rather than her real age. Or she can simply say ix-nay am-ay.)

(Reminiscing:)

No other person than Jack "Chief" Williams came to the rescue as a pinch hitter to win a ball game in the Kingston City Baseball League the other night. It must be like old times for the "Chief" to hurl for an Army team as it all it did in 1917 and '18. He first pitched for an Army team in Toronto, Alfred Jack was given the run around by Kingston before coming to Belleville to make baseball history exactly 21 years ago. And he's still throwing the batters. And he's of the old brigade former stars of the Central Ontario in the good old days are certainly doing their part to keep baseball alive in Eastern Ontario. At the end of the players who remained in the game after his war was the hitting star with five hits in both games.

Pat Riley and Felix Mackiewicz walloped home runs and Baltimore Orioles to an 8-4 triumph over Montreal. A five-run Baltimore rally in the eighth inning overcame a two-run Montreal lead.

Leon «Red» Treadway banged out four hits to pave the way for Jersey City's 5-3 victory over Rochester, 7-2.

Syracuse Chiefs downed Toronto Maple Leafs, 7-3, The Chiefs went into the first-inning lead, which included a home run by catcher Len Rice. Three other home runs came by Ray Wallace (same old name) Mele of Syracuse and Harry Pollard of Toronto.

Toronto, June 29 — Once upon a time, one of the past's greatest long-distance runners, Alf Shrubb, was in a reminiscent mood in Portsmouth, Ont., the other day. In a speech at a testimonial dinner he recounted some of the outstanding episodes of his career.

Shrubb started out with the London, England, Harriers, later moving to Toronto, Australia, back to England and the U. S. to run down the best distance runners of the world, against him. He trimmed Tom Longboat twice, the Canadian Indian downed him in a 20-miler at Toronto later.

He was as much ahead of most other runners of his day that professors used to ask him against pet relay teams of three, four or five runners, and he usually won alone.

Then they started matching him against horses and he ran some of the best horses of his time into the ground.

The only kind of horse Alf didn't like to stack up against was a doctor's steed. That animal was just too tough. Shrubb used to say that trotting phenomenal distances while the country medico made his rounds. But a mile-or bread-wagon horse was easy prey.

Incidentally:

Schoolboy Bobby Fisher of Toronto, can't be blamed if he swaggers a bit in front of his pals. The 16-year-old jockey performed a nonesuch trick of riding his first mount to a win at Montreal's Blue Bonnets track. The Vancouver bayside is all the rage now. Because of transportation difficulties race-goers will have to travel to the suburban tracks by bus or street car. Previous vehicles, it'll look like a scene from "Westward Ho!" . . . Bobby Kelly, field man carrier of the boxing game in Saint John, N.B., still winning fights. Johnny, now an army corporal, decision-ed Montreal's Ralph Walton again in their latest night. . . Syracuse Chiefs of the International League go in the International League go in the record books as the only baseball club they manufactured four in one inning in a recent game against Rochester. With one out and runners on first and third, the batter flied between first and second for the first out. The ball turned out to man on third had started for home before the fly was caught, so that made four outs, and a freak triple play.

SWIMMING MEET HELD IN TORONTO

Toronto, June 29 —(CP)—Swimming, diving and water polo men in the limelight at the Ontario swim championships at the Toronto Island pool, carrying off several events for both men and women including the 150-yard men's medley relay in which a team from Peterborough piled up a first place win. The medley was one minute, 29 9/10 seconds.

Hamilton winners were: Bob Parks, who took part in the women's one-mile free-style event in 57 1/5 seconds; Irene Bary who won the one-mile and 100-yard free-style event with Mary Thompson third; Jean Bary, who also finished third in the 100-yard free-style events for junior women; June Woods who won the 50-yard backstroke for girls 14 and under; Miss B. Belbeck who won the senior women's 100-yard backstroke in one minute and 15 seconds.

In addition to winning the men's senior medley relay, the Hamilton team won the senior women's 150-yard medley relay while others placed third in the junior men's relay and the junior women's 200-yard relay.

All other events went to Toronto swimmers.

LESSON NO. 417

By SAM GORDON
The Khibitzer.

Open with a bid of two to show four hand has class. Partner must respond to that no matter what he has. If his hand don't set some of a sure trick anywhere, two no-trump is what he should reply right then and there.

An opening bid of two in a suit is forcing to game. No matter what ales partner may have, if he has no sure trick, his first reply should be two no-trump.

Don't be under the impression that such a two no-trump response always indicates a weak hand. It is not necessarily so. Not by a long shot.

The hand may be worthless. The hand may be strong. The hand may be in between. The two no-trump response says only that it contains no sure trick. It does not deny having a biddable suit or an assist.

Consequently, a two no-trump responder may have a takeout or an assist on the second round. Having already been warned of no sure trick bids, the opener conducts himself accordingly.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two hearts when you have this hand:

♠K J 10 9 8 7
♦3 6 3
♣A 2

Your first response is two no-trump. That swell" spade suit of yours is crying to be bid. But you must first tell your partner that you have no sure trick.

Suppose your partner then bids three hearts or three diamonds or three clubs. Now you can show your strong spade suit with a bid of three spades.

After your first response of two no-trump, suppose partner bids three no-trump. Your bid on the second round would be four spades to show that suit of yours.

No. Two no-trump in replying to an opening two bid does not deny strength. It only denies having a sure trick.

Coldwell Says Press and Radio Ownership Should Be Divorced

Ottawa, June 29 —(CP)— M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, said at the Commons radio committee meeting here yesterday that the body should consider recommending in its report the divorce of radio and press ownership in Canada.

He said he had just heard that Roy Thomson of Timmins, Ont., already owned a number of stations and now was buying up some newspapers. Mr. Coldwell said he thought this was "not a healthy situation" to allow press and radio news channels to fall into the hands of a relatively small group of persons.

Dr. Augustin Frigon, Acting General Manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation said the CBC did not encourage control of press and radio by small groups.

Dr. J. J. McCann (L—Renfrew South) said the 1942 recommendations of the committee had suggested care be maintained in handing out licences in such cases.

Dr. Frigon said he had been told that the Thomson group of papers because he knew he could not attend his activities in the radio field.

Mr. Coldwell said that he was in accord with the recent government policy of divorcing air from rail transport in Canada and he thought the same rule should apply to press and radio.

Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC-McLeod) said it seemed logical the papers would want to keep pace with modern trends by purchasing radio stations. Press as an advertising medium might become obsolete and the papers had the right to protect their business.

Dr. McCann said a publisher told him that a radio licence was as an important part of newspaper equipment these days as a printing press.

Mr. Coldwell said it tended to develop a monopoly.

J. P. Gordon (L—Assiniboia) interjected: "You would allow a man to buy two cows but not a horse and a cow."

Gordon Isnor (L—Halifax) said newspapers felt they needed an extra channel to support their business.

Mr. Coldwell said that while Mr. Thomson might be conscientious in buying up papers he had heard a report that a Mr. Dexter in Hamilton, Ont., whom he did not otherwise identify, had recently "farmed out" six farms to Mr. Thomson.

Dr. Frigon said he understood that Mr. Thomson was merely operating the station.

Mr. Coldwell also said he thought private stations should provide a financial statement for the development of transport which controls the granting of licences.

C.W.A.C. BAND IS RATED TOPS

Winnipeg, June 29—(CP)—It took two years and a lot of hard work before Cwacs at Winnipeg's Fort Osborne Barracks formed their own band but now its rated as tops. Led by a high-stepping drum majorette from Fort William, Sgt. Betty Brading, the 24 young "soldierettes" now are the only Wrac band in M. D. 10.

The girls have played at parades and rallies and even journeyed to Shilo Camp with the basketball team. Officers are looking forward to going on tour and playing for comrades-in-arms at other camps. Decked out in regulation uniforms, with gold lanyards and gloves, they admit they nearly all get "butterflies" when on parade.

Slim, dark majorette Brading is enthused: "The girls are really wonderful. Only two had ever played a bugle before and they're all coming along splendidly." Sgt. Brading is also learning the drums and bugle.

Four provinces are represented in the band. Cpl. Evelyn Hills, a bass drummer, Pte. Hazel Lamore and Sgt. Louise Scott, both buglers, are from Port Arthur. Cpl. Joan Earl is from Vancouver, Cpl. Alice Hawkens from Regina and Cpl. Jean McKnight from Brandon, Man.

Canadian Fighter Units Down 18 Planes Over Front

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 29 (CP Cable) — Canadian fighter units flying over the frontline area in France yesterday had their best day since the invasion started, shooting down 18 enemy aircraft, it was announced today.

Spitfire units accounted for this bag. Last night an R.C.A.F. Mosquito on offensive patrol over the battle area made it 19 by downing a Junkers.

During the night Canadian heavy bombers attacked enemy installations at Metz in northeastern France. Visibility was good and the attack was pressed home in the face of considerable enemy fighter activity.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Rains Came"—"Under Two Flags."

Drama, romance, spectable, suspense, thrills galore, thrills and excitement parade across the screen in breath-taking succession at the McCarthy theatre where two great all-time hits, with seven great stars opened this week.

Rarely have two such famous books, which have been read by millions, been transferred to the screen with such excellent results as in the case of "The Rains came" starring Tyrone Power, Myrna Loy and George Brent, and "Under Two Flags" in which Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell and Victor McLaglen head a magnificent cast.

"The Rains came," Louis Bromfield's best-selling novel of India, is set in beautiful Ommi Ghor, a city in India, Tyrone Power has one of the outstanding roles of his career as the Indian surgeon, Major Rama Putti! Myrna Loy is superb as the amorous Lady Esketh and George Brent is splendid as the world-weary Tom Ransome.

The awesome calastrophes which climax the novel, Bromfield's account of the flood, the plague and the fire-have been reproduced on the screen in spectacular fashion. Indeed, it is doubtful if the cataclysmic breaking of the dams has ever been surpassed.

Ouida's unforgettable story of the Life Guards, which made "Under Two Flags" is an equally memorable screen experience. The vast Sahara desert is the locale where lust, romance and the stirring warfare provide thrill upon thrill.

Ronald Colman and Victor McLaglen as the officers who are forced to hold a post of doom against insurmountable odds while hatred burns in their hearts for each other are matched in noteworthy performances by Rosalind Russell and Claudette Colbert.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gene Autry"

Gene Autry wears more than a dozen different cowboy outfits in Republic's "Boots andSaddles," release of which will be open at the Capitol Theatre tonight.

But when Gene's wardrobe is one of the most extensive in Hollywood, representing an outlay of $10,000, yet he doesn't own a single business suit, tuxedo or cutaway. To call his wardrobe "colorful" is an understatement.

Brilliant purples, green and canary yellows are typical of his every day clothes. For formal occasions, such as his recent appearance at the White House, he wears a cowboy suit of snow white chamois-like boots cost $40 a pair. He buys Stetson hats from the factory by the dozen. Gene has eight silver-mounted saddles that cost $2,500 each.

His fans expect and demand that he be colorful and he can't afford to let them down.

"The Gang's All Here"

Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, popular Phil Baker of "Take-It-or-Leave-It" radio fame, and the king of swing—Benny Goodman and his Orchestra—head a dazzling stellar cast of 20th Century-Fox's new Technicolor musical hit, "The Gang's All Here," which is coming tonight to the Capitol Theatre.

Hollywood's comedians Eugene Pallete, Charlotte Greenwood and Edward Everett Horton are featured in the cast, which also includes the world-famed ballroom dancer, Tony De Marco.

"The Gang's All Here," produced by William Le Baron, was based on a story by Nancy Winsner, George Root, Jr., and Tom Bridges. Bunny Berkeley directed the picture.

Erotics and music of the film's hit-making songs: "The Polka Dot Polka," "No Love, No Nothin'," "A Journey To A Star," "Paducah," "The Lady In The Tutti Frutti Hat" and "Minnie's In New York" and "Minnie's In The Money" were produced by that outstanding team of tunesmiths, Leo Robin and Harry Warren.

AT THE BELLE

"Four Jills and a Jeep"

Acclaimed the year's fastest and funniest screen comedy, "Four Jills and a Jeep," the new 20th Century-Fox hit, opens today at the Belle Theatre. Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair, with Jimmy Dorsey and his Orchestra, John Harvey, Phil Silvers, and introduces Dick Haymes, radio's mellow-voiced singing star. Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda and George Jessels, who acts as master of ceremonies, appear as the picture's guests stars.

"Four Jills and a Jeep" was directed by William A. Seiter and produced by Irving Starr.

"Tunisian Victory"

Misstep can be embarrassing!

At least Lt.-Colonel Hugh Stewart of the British Army found them so when he entered Tunis. Lt.-Colonel Stewart and Colonel Frank Capra, of the United States Army, were co-producers of "Tunisian Victory," opening today at the Belle Theatre. The picture is the first ever to have been made jointly by the governments of the United States and Great Britain and tells the story of the North-west African campaign. It is released by M-G-M.

"We were among the first troops to enter Kairouan, the fifth Holy City of the Moslem World," said Lt.-Colonel Stewart. "It was the first large town to be liberated by the British and American operations in Tunisia. Great was the enthusiasm of the Moslems, it still is, and the whole streets were full of French in Tunis.

"During the two hours I spent there I was grabbed and kissed by about twenty bearded Frenchmen."

A Merrie Melodie colorcun cartoon "Tortoise Beats Hare" is exhibited on the same program.

"CUPID RIDES A BUS" by POLAN BANKS

CHAPTER 4

Ginger sat beside Tony at the wheel, as the green bus with Washington Square at its masthead lumbered majestically through New Jersey. Behind her, the respective owners of a love-starved tropical fish and mustard-colored alley-cat of dubious pedigree with delusions of grandeur, swapped stories of the stage and circus ring. Mortimer Evergreen sat entrenched behind a New York paper, his face buried in headlines; once they had crossed the Pulaski Skyway unmolested, he had lost all interest in bridge.

Tony said: "What do you think your crooner friend will do when he finds out where you've gone?"

Ginger shrugged her shoulders.

"I wouldn't put it beyond him to follow me; he's the most persistent man I ever met".

"I hope he does", said Tony. "I'd like to take another sock at him just on general principles".

"Because hes a crooner—or as a compliment to me?? she wanted to know.

"Because he's a dirty capitalist", he told me. "He makes a fortune—and what does he do with it? Rides around in Rolls-Royces, lives in penthouses, and chases pretty girls like you".

"What would you want Ronny to do—share his wealth?" She was sarcastic, remembering his gibe about Ronny to Mr. Smock.

"Why not?" Tony demanded, belligerently.

"Comes the revolution", she mocked. "I suppose you'd want him to share his girls, too!"

He remembered the bartender's similar joke, and flushed.

"Not little Tony! I've got no use for women".

"What's wrong with them?" she asked sweetly. "Did one of them turn you down, too?"

"Laugh if you want to—but I'm right. America is a woman-dominated country—and that's what's the matter with it. Why do men build up fortunes?—To spend them on women. Who gets the fortunes in the end?—The women! As long as women will demand luxuries—and get 'em—the rich will get richer and the poor will get poorer!" Tony preached.

"Hooray for our side!" said Ginger, with vigor, and clapped her hands.

Tony glared at her.

"It's women like you that cause the downfall of civilizations!" he accused. "Take Rome, for instance—"

She glared back at him.

"It's men like you who make girls like me do things to keep from marrying men like you!"

"You mean you do your best to marry men like me!" he snapped.

"That is—"

"Why on earth should any girl in her right mind want to marry a man like you?"

Tony was temporarily speechless.

'Not that you're so homely," she amended, critically eyeing him. " But just for the sake of argument what have you got to offer a girl besides a bus you won in a crap game and a crazy theory about sharing the wealth?" And as he still was speechless, went on: "No, sir. A girl deserves everything she can get. Clothes, cars, jewels, good times. Glamour. Romance. You're only young once, and you're dead a long time."

Tony found his voice.

"If that's the way you feel, why didn't you marry Ronny Rockaby? He's got plenty of money—and he's supposed to be Prince Charming in the flesh, isn't he? What more do you want?"

"I told you, and anyway, I don't like Ronny's ears."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"When a girl doesn't like a man's ears—she simply doesn't, that's all. I could never live with a man with ears like that. Besides he's conceited."

"But I thought you said a girl deserved everything she can get?"

"A girl does—and I mean to get it, for one." Her eyes took on a faraway look. "I'm going to get it through my career if I can—that's why that job in Miami means so much to me—but if I can't get it that way—"

"Then I suppose you'll marry it!" he exclaimed, savagely.

"Why not?" asked Ginger. It's just as easy to love a rich man as a poor one, now, isn't it?"

Tony snorted in disgust.

Desdemona Love, interrupted at this point.

"Oh Mr. Taylor?"

"Yes, Miss Love?"

"Would you mind stopping at the next gas-station? I have to change some of Gertrude's water."

Both Ginger and Tony turned to look back at her and saw that the actress was testing the water in the fish-bowl with a thermometer she had taken from her purse. The others were watching her.

"Certainly," said Tony. Is your goldfish all right?"

'It's the water—I have to watch the temperature," explained Miss Love. 'And Gertrude is a tropical fish, not goldfish, young man."

"What kind of a tropical fish?" asked Ginger.

"She's a Mexican sword-tail," said Miss Love, proudly. 'I'm taking her to Florida to find her a mate—a Montezuma Helleri, if I can. Although I suppose a Siamese fighting fish would make a better husband."

'Why?" asked the lion-tamer, with professional interest.

"She wouldn't be able to eat him as easily as she ate her last mate," said Gertrude's owner. "She'd respect him. Tropical fish are very sensitive, you know." She pursed her lips. 'And, Gertrude doesn't like traveling—it affects her nerves."

They all stared at Gertrude who was aloofly preening her scales in her bowl; her body was olive-green on top, with bluish below, with a bright green, red and yellow stripe extending to the tip of her tail; her dorsal fin was yellow, too, with a reddish band near the base. Casanova the cat stared most of all....

"What a beautiful, beautiful fish" exclaimed Mrs. Evergreen. "She's like a lovely jewel"

"What's that?" demanded Mr. Evergreen, coming out from behind his paper with a start. He sputtered warningly: "Jessica, your nose is—"

"Not this time, Mortimer!" his wife told him, triumphantly "I'm talking about Miss Love's fish." She bent over the bowl and talked baby-talk:'Is booful Gertrude safe and cool in her lovely, lovely bowl?"

"Safe — and — cool—" repeated Mr. Evergreen automatically, and looked from the bowl to the newspaper he was reading and back to the bowl again. For the first time that day a smile lifted his Chaplin mustache. Just then Tony slowed down the bus as it neared a filling-station. Evergreen coughed, "Miss Love, I'm a great admirer of tropical fish. A great admirer, indeed. Won't you let me save you the trouble of getting out and re-filling the bowl for you?"

Desdemona Love hesitated. She hated to get out of the bus, but she treasured Gertrude and Gertrude's welfare, above her own comfort.

"That's very kind of you, Mr. Evergreen—but really, Gertrude isn't used to—"

[illegible] Mr. Evergreen, rising to his feet and stuffing his paper in his pocket. "I once owned one of the finest aquariums of rare fish in Europe—didn't I, Jessica?"

Jessica looked dazed, but rallied loyally.

"My husband has owned more lovely things than anyone I've ever known," she told Miss Love. "He adores beauty—he simply can't resist beautiful things. If he can't afford to buy them, why he simply ste—" Mortimer turned on her glaring, and she choked. Grabbed her powder puff, and dabbed at her nose. "As I was saying—he simply stops doing anything else and justs spends . hours admiring them!"

'Your tropical fish is safe in my hands," Mr. Evergreen assured Miss Love. "Just telll me exactly what to do, dear lady. It will be an experience to treasure in my memory."

Conquered, Miss Love surrendered Gertrude and her bowl to Mr. Evergreen's care; told him how much water to dip out, and how much fresh to put in its place; how not to disturb Gertrude in the process.

They had reached the filling-station now. Carefully Mr. Evergreen descended with the bowl, while Tony took the opportunity to check up on his gas and oil. The others fell into desultory conversation, as they watched Mr. Evergreen take the bowl and the dipper Miss Love had given him, and make for the water spigot. Reaching it, he began to change the water, as directed.

'Do be careful, now, Mr. Evergren!" called Miss Love, from her window in the bus.

He turned and waved to her reassuringly with the dipper, and as he did so, his newspaper fell out of his pocket and upon the ground. He turned with his back to the bus, then, and did something very odd. With a quick movement, he took from his pocket a large, transparent octohedronally shaped object that glittered briefly in the sunlight, and popped it into the goldfish bowl. Gertrude indignantly dodged it just in time, as it came near shearing a scale off her starboard pectoral fin; it lay in the shadowed bottom of the bowl, then, colorless as the water, and practically invisible to any eye but that of the bowl's piscatorial occupant.

"Say—what's the idea of dropping a piece of ice in the fish's bowl?" asked an interested voice.

Mr. Evergreen nearly jumped out of his skin, and in the manoeuvre, became aware that one of the two filling - station attendants was watching him from within the station.

'It—it's not ice—" Mr. Evergreen stammered. "It's a piece of glass." Then, confused, turned and strode back to the bus, regretting he had not admitted it was ice and let it go at that.

The attendant scratched his head, shrugged his shoulders, then picked up the New York newspaper Mr. Evergreen had unconsciously dropped, and took it into his office to read.

The bus, its crew again aboard, rolled off, southward.

"Well I'll be durned!" The attendant was staring at the very page Mr. Evergren had been perusing with such care on the bus. There was a headline, and a large photograph of a diamond: the largest uncut diamond in the world, the caption said. But it was the picture, not the story, that first held the man's eyes. For the stone was octohedronal in shape, the exact replica, life-size, of the piece of glass he had just seen the man whom the old woman in the bus had called Mr. Evergreen, drop in the gold-fish bowl!

Oscar Smith read on, then—and whistled.

"Fifty thousand dollars reward! —Gosh!"

Oscar scratched his head again, his eyes bright with avarice. It seemed impossible, but then—he had read many and many a detective thriller. At the worst, if he were mistaken, he might get his name in the papers!

Going to the telephone, Oscar put in a long-distance call for the Police Department in New York City. . . . and reversed the charges. . . .

The police official in New York at the other end of the wire, listened, and yelped.

What's that you say? Say it again!"

What is it, Chief?" asked his colleague from the Detective Bureau.

"The Bonkheer diamond . . .!" He turned impatiently back to the phone. "Yes—yes—go on! . . . He had a little mustache you say? And the woman called him Evergreen?

"Great scott!" exclaimed the other. "We might have known it was the Evergreens!"

"You know 'em?" asked the chief.

"Know 'em? They're the cleverest jewel thieves in the world!"

"Okay—we'll pick them up," the other told Oscar Smith on the wire. "Yes—if it's really the diamond, you'll get your reward!" He hung up. "So you think this is a real lead?"

"If it's Mortimer Evergreen and his wife, the stone's the McCoy," said the other positively. "Only Evergreen could have nabbed it in broad daylight like that."

"Zat so?" Th chief was pushing buttons.

"Why he's the guy who stole the British crown jewels from the Tower of London," explained the detective. He shook his head. "He's nuts about beautiful things. If it wasn't for his wife being so sentimental about the Coronation, He'd never have put them back!"

"We'll send out a general alarm between here and Washington," said the chief. A telephone on his desk rang. He picked it up. "Yes? —Who? Ronny Rockaby? Tell him to call me back later—I'm busy now." He hung up, just as a police orderly entered. "George—we've got a line on the Bonkheer Diamond. Now, get this out on the wire. . . . ."

Ginger sat alone now, behind Tony, watching the back of his head. She was annoyed with him, but she had to confess to herself that she did like his ears. Too, it was fun to scrap with him; he treated her like another man when he argued with her, instead of flattering or flirting with her, as other men did; and he sincerely distrusted women. Take Ronny, for instance: he always flattered her, however patronizingly he did so. Unlike Tony, women and the adulation of women were necessary to his life. Last; but not least, she did not care for his ears. Comparing the two men, however unconsciously, she remembered the blow Tony had given the crooner that morning. She smiled, despite herself.

ENJOYS RELIEF AT LAST FROM NERVOUS INDIGESTION

Suffered Three Years Gas Distress, Bloat and Belching; Got Bad Headaches — Nervous, Sleepless Nights —"Feels Like Different Person" Since Taking Syntona.

"About three years ago I fell victim to stomach disorders, which brought on nervous indigestion and I suffered no end of distress until I began taking Syntona a few weeks ago," declared Mrs. E. Dunn, 573 Catharine Street, North Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent report.

"I got such horrid feelings that I became very depressed and worried. There was hardly anything I could eat that didn't sour and lay heavy in my stomach. I would bloat up with gas, belch hot, sour-tasting liquid and have a suffocating feeling just like there was a lump in my throat. My nerves had become so jittery that I couldn't get to sleep for hours after lying down at night. Nearly every morning I awakened with a bad headache and a dull, lame feeling across my back. My tongue was coated and I always had a bad taste in my mouth.

"I tried everything I knew of, but got no relief. Then one day, not long ago, I read in the paper about Syntona helping people suffering like this and I decided to get some. In just a few days I began to feel some better, so I kept on taking it. Now my food digests nicely without souring or forming gas and my stomach never becomes upset. The distressed, suffocating feeling has passed off and I haven't had that horrid nervous condition since. I am enjoying sound, restful sleep, and I don't have the headaches or lame back in the mornings when I get up. My tongue is clear, I am rid of that bad taste in my mouth, and generally feel like an entirely different person. I sincerely recommend Syntona to others."

Syntona is made from 12 of Nature's Finest Medicinal Herbs and Roots. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels .. aids in the elimination of excess acids and poison waste from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was on the way to the sporting page of his paper and ma was doing the bridge problem in hers, and I said, Hay, pop, what you think, ma, 2 different ladies and one man stopped us fellows while we were playing today and asked if we knew where there was any rooms for rent.

Imagine such a thing, the situation is really desperate for a lot of poor roofless soles, ma said. Maud Hew's young neffew has found a splendid defence job in town, but he cant find a place to lay his head, much less put his wife and small baby, and hes only one of untold myriads. How's it all going to end and where's it all going to stop? she said.

It's all going to finish up at the termination, probably, pop said. By gollies it's true, though. Our district manager had to come to town unexpectedly the other day, and every desk clerk in town gave him the horse lagh when he went around asking for a hotel room, and I believe he finely spent the night in a trolley car. Something ought to be done about it, but I dont know who can do it, he said, and I said, Well I had an idea, pop, I thought I'd make a sign saying Rooms For Rent and put it in our front window to encourage people.

Well of all the senseless notions, ma said, and pop said, For Peet sake do you think you'd be doing people a favor by raising their hopes only to dash them to the ground again?

Only I wouldn't pop, I mean I'd keep their hopes raised, I said. I didn't tell you the rest of the idea. The rest of the idea was to rent my room out and make a lot of exter money, and I could sleep on the davenport in the living room. Puds Simpkins had the same idea and so did Glasses Magee, and they may be asking their father and mother right now, I said, and pop said, Well if they are they're getting the same answer you're getting.

Meaning absolutely no, and I called them both up to find out if he was right, and he was.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, June 29 (CP)—Industrial and mining stocks registered modest index gains by noon today on Toronto exchange and the western oils were down slightly. Volume was small compared with recent turnover and the aggregate for the first three hours was 366,000 shares.

Wright-Hargreaves, Pickle Crow, Preston, Central Patricia, Malartic Gold Fields, Giant Yellowknife, Siscoe and Moneta were all gainers in the early hours. The stock of Wasa Lake Gold Mines was listed today and it came ot at 70 to 73 cents. Astoria recovered to 26.

Smelters and Hudson Bay were stronger and Steep Rock was off 5 cents. Other base metals held steady.

Prices were higher for the food and paper stocks and the steels, senior oils and utilities were mainly steady.

Bell Telephone firmed 1-2.

WALL STREET

New York, June 29 (AP)—Scattered specialties attracted strong bidding in today's stock market while many of the past month's climbers encountered enough further selling to stall their progress. Dealings slowed later and prices were a shade mixed near the fourth hour.

Wall Street again was bullish over battle front news and home politics but the long market drive to seven-year peaks inspired investment caution on the idea a corrective reaction might bring better buying levels.

Favorites touching highs for 1944 or longer with gains of fractions to more than 3 points included Thompson-Starrett Common and preferred, Murray Corp., Budd Mfg., Budd Wheel, Hayes Mfg., Sparks Withington, Pullman, United Corp. preferred and American Telephone.

Canadian issues were steady.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, June 29 —(CP)— Trade in cattle was very slow on the livestock market here up to midsession today. A few weighty steers were steady at $11.75-$12 butcher steers and heifers steady at $11-$11.75, cows steady at $5-$9.50 and stockers steady at $7-$10.75.

Veal calves were steady at $7-$14 according to quality.

A few good lambs were steady at $16.50.

No sheep were offered.

Hogs were steady at $17.65-$17.75 dressedweight with sows $13 dressed.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 25, calves 60, hogs 65, lambs 70. Unsold from yesterday were 1,100 head of cattle.

Lord Ironside Sees War Nearing End, Nazi Lines Broken

Bury St. Edmunds, England, June 28 —(CP)— Field Marshal Lord Ironside told a meeting here yesterday "the war is nearly over," because the Germans will not stand and fight on any front where their lines are broken.

"We broke the line in the last war in July, and the enemy never faced us again," he said. "Look at the picture now. We've broken the line in Italy and the Germans are not standing against us. In the east, the line has been broken more than once, and they're not standing against us.

"In the west, we have captured Cherbourg. The great fight at Caen and Tilly will decide in fact whether the line will be broken or not."

Lord Ironside, chief of the Imperial General Staff in 1939 and 1940, added: "Every great war ceases by the fact that men will not fight any more. Whatever the order given by a general or a government, when men cease to fight then the war's over. That, I hope, is just coming."

Judge Rules Owners Of Lost Lake Craft Liable for Damages

Cleveland, June 29—(AP)—Judge Emerich B. Freed ruled yesterday the owners of the Tug Admiral and the Barge Cleveco, which sank in a storm on Lake Erie Dec. 22, 1942, are liable for damages for the deaths of 32 crewmen.

The owners, Cleveland Tankers, Inc., sought in a petition to limit their liabilities to $250, the amount obtained from the salvage of two lifeboats and two oars washed ashore after the sinking off Cleveland harbor.

Judge Freed's ruling, issued in a $2,200,000 damage suit filed by families of 28 of the 32 victims, asserted he had come "to the inescapable conclusion that the Petitioners (Cleveland Tankers, Inc.,) were guilty of negligence and failing to use due care to supply a seaworthy vessel."

Churchill, Allied Commanders Meet With Eisenhower

TWO FORMER VICHY MEN ON TRIAL

Algiers, June 29. — (CP-Reuter) Gen. Eugene Blanc and Col. Justin Mangin, former chiefs of the Vichy Tricolor Legion in North Africa, appeared before on army court here today on charges of treason.

They were accused of having enrolled men in favor of a power at war with France.

Gen. Pierre Weiss, prosecutor, demanded the death penalty but said he would not oppose extenuating circumstances for Gen. Blanc.

The verdict is expected tomorrow.

SHIPMENT OF LINEN READY

London, Ont., June 29.— (CP)— Twenty cases of linen, blankets and clothing, weighing a total of two and a half tons, are ready for shipment to Briansk, London's adopted Russian City, it is reported today. Dewey Sets Out To Win Presidency From Roosevelt

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Chicago, June 29 (CP)—Thomas E. Dewey, 42-year-old Governor of New York who won national fame as a "gang-busting" district attorney, today set out to win the presidency of the United States and end 12 years of Democratic rle in the White House.

Before a tumultuous crowd of 25,000 in the Chicago Stadium yesterday he accepted the nomination handed him some eight hours earlier by virtually unanimous action of the Republican National Convention.

Earlier in his speech of acceptance Gov. Dewey assured the Allied powers that the forthcoming campaign would strengthen—not weaken—the war effort, and he warned the Nazis powers not to believe otherwise.

A Republican victory in next November's elections would not mean the slightest interruption of the war effort. "We are with you to the limit of our resources and manpower," he declared, addressing himself to the Allied powers, and that meant in the effort to make an enduring peace as well as the effort for victory.

Gov. Dewey and his wife and party flew here yesterday afternoon.

Youth against age was predominant theme of Gov. Dewey's acceptance speech. He promised that "next year our government will again have a cabinet of the ablest men and women to be found in America."

"Its members," he declared, "will expect and will receive full delegation of the powers of their office. They will be capable of administering those powers. They will each be experienced in the task to be done and young enough to do it."

The task of achieving a lasting peace, he declared, "is no task to be entrusted to stubborn men, grown old and tired and quarrelsome in office."

He advocated a middle-of-the-road path on the touchy foreign policy issue.

"We are agreed, all of us," he said, "that America will participate with other sovereign nations in a co-operative effort to prevent future wars."

"There are only a very few," he added, "who really believe that America should try to remain aloof from the world. There are only a relatively few who believe it would be practical for America or her Allies to renounce all sovereignty and join a super-state."

Senator. Robert Taft of Ohio, chairman of the platform committee, told reporters: "He stands on the platform 100 per cent."

Wendel L. Willkie, who came from behind to beat Dewey for the nomination in 1940 and who recently criticized the foreign policy plank as "ambiguous," congratulated Gov. Dewey and said he has "one of the great opportunities of history."

Gov. Dewey, first Republican to win the New York office in 20 years, said the present military high command is "doing a superb job" and should be allowed to continue without any civilian interference.

Victoria

Victoria — Church service was well attended on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Lovelace preached a very inspiring sermon.

The Victoria Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mesdames Monaghan-ery on Wednesday evening with a good attendance.

The meeting opened with the president, Mrs. Roy Brickman, presiding. The roll call was answered by thirteen members. The delegates to the Women's Association convention at Belleville, Mrs. S. Fox and Mrs. F. Townsend, gave splendid reports.

Mrs. E. Townsend, the 3rd vice-president, took charge of the Worship service.

The Scripture was read by Miss Audra Brickman. The thoughts on the lesson were read. The presiding officer read a short reading on the topic of "Education." The Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting.

The hostess served a lunch and a social time was enjoyed. A vote of thanks was extended for the hospitality and the lunch.

Some of the Institute members attended an executive meeting Tuesday evening at Mrs. Hugh Weese's. Plans for the 35th anniversary were discussed.

Mrs. Lorne Brickman attended the W.M.S. convention at Demorestville on Thursday.

Mrs. W. Hubbs spent Friday at her son's, Mr. Hayland Hubbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Montgomery were Sunday guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Werden.

Miss Clara Allison has been visiting the past week with her sister, Mrs. Frank Townsend and Mr. F. Townsend.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green and boys spent Saturday evening at Stirling.

Mr. Lorne Brickman called Tuesday evening at Mr. C. Payne's.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brickman and family called on her mother, Mrs. Holmes, Belleville, on Sunday, attended church service at Aiken's Church and were dinner and tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brickman and Marilyn.

6th Tyendinaga

6th Tyendinaga — Mrs. T. Parks is still a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. J. O'Shaughnessy has been in Kingston the last few days with Mr. O'Shaughnessy who has been in Kingston hospital several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McKenzie and family visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. McKenzie, Marysville, on Sunday.

Mr. Douglas Holdrick was a recent visitor at Mr. A. Bolderick's.

Mrs. S. Shaw and Douglas spent Sunday with Mrs. C. Goodman and Alton.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge—The heavy rains of last week slowed up haying considerably but it was of great benefit to pasture, gardens and other crops.

The strawberry crop in this vicinity is much below normal due to weather conditions of last winter and spring.

On Sunday evening Rev. L. W. Scott preached his farewell sermon at this appointment as he expects to leave this week for his new charge near Lindsay. He gave a most appropriate message. Urging that everyone do all in their power to uphold the new pastor. His many Wallbridge friends wish Rev. Mr. Scott and family the very best success in their new field of labor.

Mr. Bert Hinchliffe, station agent, Dryden, Ont., spent a few holidays last week with his mother, Mrs. John Hinchliffe and other relatives in the community.

Messrs. R. Smith, and Clare Lane spent last Monday in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hendricks and family, Belleville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Chisholm.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicolson and daughter, Frankford, were Sunday morning guests of Mrs. Nicolson's father, Mr. John Hogg.

Miss Helen Fisher spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Fisher, Peterboro.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnston (nee Helen Hannah) on the birth of a son.

Congratulations are also extended to Mr. and Mrs. Sam Chisholm (nee Miss Irene Fowler) who were recently married, last Thursday evening between forty and fifty of the neighbors and friends treated them to a rousing charivari. In return for their music Sam responded most generously and served them all a treat of ice cream.

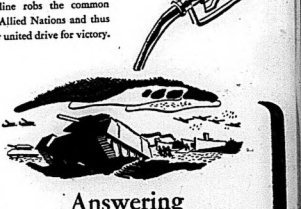
INVASION MAKES MORE URGENT THE SAVING OF CIVILIAN GAS!

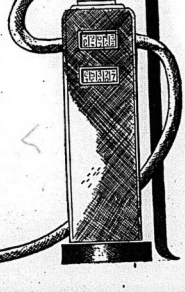
A Message to Canadian Motorists

THE invasion of Europe has thrown a vast and critical burden upon the petroleum resources of the United Nations.

In the first eight days of the campaign alone Allied aircraft flew 56,000 sorties. Many thousands of oil-burning warships and landing barges are shuttling ceaselessly across the Channel. Tanks, trucks, jeeps, mobile artillery, tractors, ambulances, by the thousands, are in action.



The driving power behind all this activity is petroleum—gasoline and fuels drawn from a dwindling crude oil supply. But—there is only so much oil. If existing supplies are to prove adequate, the most stringent economy of gasoline and fuel oil must be practised here at home.



Canada is able to produce only 15% of her own gas and oil needs. The remainder must be imported from the common pool of the United Nations and the bulk of this is shipped here by tankers. Critical manpower is needed to produce our gasoline and oil. Precious lives and precious ships must be risked to deliver it to our shores.

Invasion, and the difficulties of supply and transportation are not our only problems. Right here in Canada gas and oil are needed in enormous quantities for vital war purposes. The Commonwealth Air Training Plan has consumed as much as 548,000 gallons in a single day. Canada's Navy—expanded since war began from 15 ships to 650—consumes over 2,150,000 gallons every week. Army training, war plant operation, food production, essential trucking—all are huge consumers of gasoline and petroleum products.

Gasoline is ammunition—ammunition of which we have all too little. To waste a gallon of it is a crime against our fighting men.

The "whys" and "wherefores" of the gasoline shortage and the need for rationing of all petroleum products is a long story—a big story, which involves almost astronomical figures—a wide story, covering the whole face of the earth. Some of the facts are military secrets. Some are too technical to be easily explained. But in a series of announcements, of which this is the first, an attempt will be made to show Canadian civilians that the needless use of a single gallon of gasoline robs the common petroleum pool of the Allied Nations and thus lessens the power of our united drive for victory.

LESS CIVILIAN GAS MEANS MORE "FIGHTING GAS" FOR THE FORCES

NO. 1 OF A SERIES OF ANNOUNCEMENTS ISSUED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF MUNITIONS AND SUPPLY, HONOURABLE C. D. HOWE, MINISTER

Answering Your Questions about the Gasoline Shortage

How much gasoline was consumed during the 54 days of pre-invasion bombing? . . . More than 200,000,000 gallons.

How much fuel oil does a battleship take in one refueling? . . . Enough to heat an average house for 350 years.

How much fuel does one armoured division consume in every five miles of advance? . . . 10,000 gallons.

How many gallons of petroleum products are required to supply the needs of 500,000 European invasion troops for a week? . . . Over 25,000,000 gallons.

RUSSIANS BEGIN DIRECT ASSAULT ON MINSK
BRITISH WITHIN 11 MILES OF ENCIRCLING CAEN

22-Mile Advances Made in Swift Thrusts by Reds

110,000 Germans Killed Or Captured At Vitebsk and Bobruisk

CROSS BEREZINA RIVER

London, June 30 (CP)—Moscow dispatches said today the Red army had begun a direct assault on the White Russian capital of Minsk, moving up in a semi-circle east of the city and reaching the Berezina river to the northeast in the climax to a week-long offensive that snared thousands of Nazi troops in swift encircling movements, then ground them to bits.

It was reported Red army units in force were plunging into the river, while engineers of two Soviet armies hurried pontoons into place for mass crossings of the last natural obstacle before the city.

Premier Stalin, in announcing Thursday night the fall of Bobruisk—last German stronghold on the "fatherland line"—said five German divisions were liquidated there, with 16,000 killed and 18,000 captured. A special Moscow communique said 52,000 Germans were killed and 25,000 captured in the fighting earlier around Vitebsk, alone.

Free Murmansk Rail Link.

Stalin disclosed also the recapture of the Karelian Soviet Republic capital of Petrozavodsk in the Finnish campaign, clearing the last stretch of the Murmansk-Leningrad railway and giving the Russians a line from Murmansk in the far north of the Black Sea port of Odessa.

Russian authorities in London estimated one-third of White Russia had been retaken by the Red army, and that, apart from the enemy-held Baltic Republics, the enemy now had a foothold in only about one-fourth of the Ukraine, and small areas around Pskov in Russia proper and in Karelia.

Portions of Minsk were reported in flames after an attack by Soviet planes, which Moscow dispatches said also were hammering the retreating Germans with one of the greatest aerial assaults on land forces "in history." Polotsk, Barnovichi and Luninets, important Nazi strongpoints ahead of the advancing Soviet troops, were hit heavily by Russian bombers.

The Russian armies advancing simultaneously on three sides of Minsk yesterday, with gains of as much as 22 miles, Moscow said.

Polotsk, German-held railway junction 60 miles northwest of Vitebsk, was cut off from the south as Gen. Ivan Bagramian's 1st. Baltic army swept into Ustach, 16 miles southwest of the town, and Vetrino, 12 miles west. The railway from Polotsk to Molodechno was severed, and the fall of Polotsk was considered imminent. Gen. Ivan Cherniakovsky's 3rd. White Russian Army, driving directly for Minsk from Orsha, reached the Berezina River north of Borisov, railway junction 46 miles northeast of Minsk, and partially encircles that junction.

More than 500 localities were occupied west of Mogilev by the 2nd. White Russian army of Gen. Z. F. Zakyarou. This drive swept across the Drut River in several sectors and captured Belynichi, 25 miles west of Mogilev.

Conquest of Bobruisk by the 1st. White Russian Army of Gen. Konstantin K. Rokossovsky in two days of bloody fighting brought him promotion to a marshal of the Soviet Union.

Bombers of the Russian northern fleet hit Kirkenes in northern Norway, sinking three enemy transports totalling 20,000 tons and damaging three others, the Moscow communique said. In addition, another transport en route to Petsamo was reported sunk and 11 German planes shot down.

The communique said 3,000 Finns were killed in one sector of the northern front, and Soviet troops liberated 30,000 civilians held in the Finnish concentration camps.

WEATHER FORECAST

Lake Superior: Moderate winds; fair today and Saturday and becoming somewhat warmer.

Allied Troops Still Dislodging Jap Remnants

Kandy, Ceylon, June 30 —(CP)— Allied troops, strongly supported in the air, are continuing the task of dislodging scattered Japanese remnants still clinging to positions east of the Kohima-Imphal road in the northeastern India frontier region, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Across the border in northern Burma, meanwhile, the bulletin said, Chinese troops participating in the siege of Myitkyina have penetrated further into the southern part of the city, which is being bitterly defended by the Japanese.

Southwest of Mogaung, some 35 miles west of Myitkyina, other Chinese forces were reported advancing along the main railway leading to Mandalay.

Chinese Troops On Salween River Capture Miencbin

Chungking, June 30. (AP)—Chinese troops on the Salween front have captured Mienchin, thereby narrowing to 64 miles the gap separating them from Lt.-Gen. Stilwell's forces at Myitkyina in Northern Burma, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Other Chinese forces closing in on the Japanese base of Tengchung, about seven miles southeast of Mienchin, have cut all the roads except the one leading to Lungling on the Burma Road, a communique said.

Japanese planes, making their first appearance on the Salween front since the Chinese offensive began May 11, dropped a small quantity of supplies to the beleaguered Japanese at Sungshan, strong point near the Burma Road bridge over the Salween River.

The Chinese must dislodge the enemy from Sungshan before they can open any stretch of the Burma Road west of the river.

6-YEAR-OLD DROWNED

Ottawa, June 30 —(CP)— David Lanthier, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henri Lanthier of Suburban Westboro was drowned last night within sight of his brother and two other companions when he overbalanced while reaching for a piece of driftwood at Westboro Beach.

EMERGENCY MEASURES TAKEN

Santiago, Chile, June 30. (AP)—The Guatemalan Embassy here announced today it had received a message from its government saying "energetic measures" had been adopted against those who participated in riots in Guatemala city last week-end and that 205 had been arrested.

NAZI RESISTANCE CRACKING UNDER HEAVY PRESSURE

British Eighth Army Captures Castle Of Knights of Malta On Lake Trasimeno

CLOSE IN ON LEGHORN

Rome, June 30 — (CP) — German troops which had delayed Allied advances in Italy by determined resistance in most sectors within the past few days gave ground yesterday and both the British 8th Army and the Allied 5th Army made substantial advances, it was announced today.

Enemy resistance began cracking under heavy 8th Army pressure and British forces, streaming northward, captured the picturesque lake Trasimeno town of Castiglione Del Lago, site of a Nazi seaplane base and also of the Castle of the Knights of Malta.

At the same time German troops on Italy's west coast, breaking off contact, fled northward and American units of the 5th Army, in swift pursuit, reached the vicinity of Cecina, only 20 airline miles south of the port of Livorno (Leghorn).

American armored forces farther inland stabbed to within seven miles of the historic city of Siena. 31 miles south of Florence, and French troops on their right were only 10 miles from the same target.

The new break-through, which appeared to be paving the way for the fastest advance on the widest front since Field Marshal Albert Kesselring managed to slow down the Allied offensive by great sacrifices, was costing the enemy heavily in men and equipment.

Reverberations of German demolitions of bridges and other structures were heard as the Americans streamed up highway 1 along the west coast toward Livorno and Pisa.

Infantrymen found the little town of Bibbona, five miles southeast of Cecina, cleared of the enemy, and by yesterday afternoon they swept on to within 1,500 yards of Cecina. Only scattered fire was encountered and it appeared likely that the Americans today were far beyond the point and well on the way to Livorno, a major port which will undoubtedly prove of immense value in supplying future operations.

On an important laterial road inland the Americans wiped out large numbers of enemy snipers in the village of Monteverdi.

Farther inland tanks reached a point two miles south of Castelnuovo, advanced a mile northeast of Radicondoli and reached a point 14 miles due west of Siena.

French Capture Towns.

The French captured the villages of Frosini and Poggio Siena Vecchia, on high ground commanding highway 73 into Siena. Other French forces farther east reached the outskirts of Buovonvento a road centre on the east bank of the Arbia River, in a six-mile advance. The villages of Pampana and Murlo also were taken.

In a general advance west of Lake Trasimeno, the 8th Army swept through the villages of Nardelle and Pozzuolo. Without opposition it captured Laviano and mopped up Cassamaggiore.

U.S. Destroyer Sacrificed Herself To Save Liner Loaded With Troops

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, June 30. (CP)—An unlucky ship, they called the Awatea when she was running troops out of this port, but one incident told of her Transatlantic ferry career—cloaked by censorship until now—should have served to dispel that reputation.

It was after the Awatea, a trig liner of 13,000 tons, had carried the Canadian troops to Hong Kong —a voyage that probably labelled her a bearer of hard luck to those who sailed in her.

Loaded with members of a Canadian Division, she had put out from here for Britain in the fall of 1942, a time when U-boats were preying on this side of the Atlantic. Thirty hours later, she crept back into port, a great hole in her bow.

Members of her crew told this story:

The convoy, including the liner Letitia, had been attacked not far off the Nova Scotia coast. A streak of white had suddenly ribboned the ocean's surface — the wake of a torpedo headed for the Awatea.

It was seen aboard a United States destroyer in the escort. Its engines racing, the destroyer slashed its way up to the side of the liner with its cargo of humanity and deliberately absorbed the torpedo intended for the Awatea.

Explosions ripped the destroyer to shreds. Detonated by the torpedo blast, depth charges completed the destruction of the gallant little fighting craft. And so great was the concussion that a hole was punched in the bow of the Awatea.

Though it was never confirmed officially, that was the stor the officially, that was the story the came back to port.

Three weeks afterward, the Awatea sailed again, this time uneventfully.

NEW BATTLESHIP ATTACKSONGUAM, TINIAN, HINTED

Yap Given Fifth Blow in Week and 50 Jap Planes Downed

BY-PASS WEWAK

Pearl Harbor, June 30 —(AP)— After crushing the last organized Japanese resistance on the south half of Saipan, American troops battled north step by step today while enemy broadcasts hinted of new American battleship attacks on Guam, Tinian and Rota.

Seven hundred miles southwest of the Marianas invasion scene, General MacArthur's bombers supported the Saipan operation by dealing the Japanese air base of Yap its fifth blow in a week during which more than 50 Jap planes have been destroyed or damaged.

In Washington, the Navy Department said more than 12,000 Japanese planes have been destroyed—better than one every two hours—by American airmen since Pearl Harbor was attacked. American losses were 2,726 planes.

On Saipan, a pocket of Japanese which had been holding out on the southeast tip since the invasion began June 14 was overwhelmed Tuesday, Admiral Nimitz announced in a communique Thursday.

Six miles up the west coast, cautious patrols probed deeper into shell-shattered Garapan, administrative centre of the Marianas. In the mountainous centre of the island, other small gains were made.

Raided by Carriers.

The Berlin radio last night broadcast a Tokyo dispatch saying Japanese naval planes attacked American fleet units, which included battleships, off Guam, Tinian and Rota Thursday. Those Marianas Islands, each with enemy air bases, have been raided by carrier planes and shelled by warships since Saipan was invaded.

The Tokyo dispatch was not confirmed by official reports but the Thursday communique listed a knockout blow to the north of Saipan against Pagan Island. Returning fliers reported the island's air base had been bombed out.

The Tokyo radio said today 170 planes raided the Japanese-held islands of Guam and Rota in the southern Marianas yesterday.

By sea and air, Allied units maintained heavy pressure against shipping lanes and airstrips still used by the Japanese in the New Guinea area.

Air patrols and light naval units destroyed 16 Nipponese barges and damaged four near by-passed Wewak, British New Guinea, Tuesday night.

UNITED STATES BREAKS RELATIONS WITH FINLAND

Cause of Rupture is New Alliance Between Finland and Germany

STATEMENT ISSUED

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, June 30 (AP)—The United States finally broke off relations with Finland today, declaring that Scandinavian country to be "a puppet of Nazi Germany."

After weathering many diplomatic crises during the three years in which Finland and Russia have been at war, the government made the break this morning.

A state department official at 11 a.m. handed to the Finnish Charge D'Affaires, Alexander Thesleff—last remaining Helsinki representative here—his passport and a note from State Secretary Hull giving the reasons for the break.

Mr. Hull stated that the recent infiltration of German troops into Finland "with the consent of the Finnish government and German infiltration into the councils of the Finnish government deprived Finland of liberty of action and reduced the government of the Republic of Finland to the condition of a puppet of Nazi Germany."

The break marks the end of many efforts over a period of more than two years by the United States government to make peace between Finland and Russia.

Mr. Hull's note reflected the long attitude of friendship on the part of the United States towards Finland, saying that "notwithstanding the esteem in which the American people have held the people of Finland, further relations between the government of the United States and the government of Finland are now impossible."

The note, delivered by George T. Summerlin, special assistant to Mr. Hull, also emphasized that the military operations of Finland "have a direct bearing on the success of the Allied effort to defeat Germany.

The note opened with a quotation of the announcement made by the Finnish government last Tuesday in which it was stated that German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop had been in Helsinki and had given assurance of full military aid to Finland and that complete agreement had been reached between the Finnish government and the German government.

ITALIAN-BASED AMERICAN PLANES ATTACK VIENNA

Bad Weather Keeps Allied Invasion Air Forces From Concentrated Bombing

MINESWEEPERS HIT

London, June 30 (CP) —The Berlin radio said a big force of fighter escorted American heavy bombers attacked the Vienna area today indicating a prompt follow up was being made of the blow delivered in the same region Thursday night by R.A.F. heavies.

The night raiders flew from Italian bases and struck an airfield at Feuersbrunn, 30 miles northwest of Vienna.

The German radio asserted that fierce air battles developed over Vienna's suburbs this morning between the U.S. raiders—presumably also operating from Italy—and Nazi fighters.

In Northwestern Europe, however, bad weather which has dogged the Allied invasion air forces almost since D-Day closed in again and for the second time in a week the night passed with no sizeable operations reported over the continent.

British fighter-bombers yesterday evening attacked an enemy tanker escorted by a minesweeper in the Bay of Biscay. The tanker was left smoking furiously and the minesweeper was hit, the Air Ministry announced. It said British aircraft also laid mines in enemy waters last night. No planes were missing from these operations.

British-based American 9th. Air Force craft topped off an active day yesterday, considering the weather, by attacking the Germans' reinforcement lines between Rouen and the Normandy battle front.

They also extended the campaign against railroad facilities to the area south of Orleans, with a blow at the Vierzon-Ville yards 30 miles further inland.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the R.A.F.'s tactical air force, which yesterday hit a new peak of activity with 1,100 sorties, attacked more railroad junctions and bridges behind the German lines.

The total aerial score for yesterday was 55 German planes shot down with 25 Allied planes lost.

GERMAN GENERAL KILLED

New York, June 30 —(AP)—The BBC said last night "it is now confirmed" that Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German division in Finland, and a member of his staff, had been killed in an air crash Wednesday in Finnish lapland.

The broadcast said Dietl's death had been confirmed by "Stockholm messages." It made no mention of Gen. Alfred Jodl, chief of the German Joint General Staff, previously reported killed in the crash.

Guns of Battleship Rodney Back Up Assault on Esquay

Montgomery's Men Reach Point Half Mile From One of Caen's Main Fields

HUNS RUSH RESERVES

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 30 —(AP)— Advance elements of two British columns driving around Caen in opposite directions were within 11 miles of encircling the inland French port today as the Germans threw large armored forces against the Odon river bridgehead in unsuccessful flank attacks.

From newly-captured Marcelet, on the Caen-Tilly Sur Seulles road, General Montgomery's troops struck due east toward Caen in a thrust that menaced one of the city's main airfields. At last reports troops were half a mile from this field.

In the drive to encircle Caen, forward British elements fought in the Esquay sector, southwest of the city, and in the Troarn area to the east. The fighting around Caen slackened somewhat despite German counter-attacks as British units cleaned up parts of the newly-captured area.

British armor east and north of Esquay where the fighting has flowed back and forth could close on Caen from the rear by joining troops 11 miles away in the Troarn vicinity.

Four roads leading to Caen run through this bottleneck and it is likely all are under some sort of artillery fire from Allied lines.

A navy announcement said the assault around Esquay had support from the big guns of H.M.S. Rodney lying off shore. The battleship's guns have a range of 33,000 yards, fully enough to reach the battle area.

German Counters Fail.

Field Marshal Rommel who now is reported rushing strategic reserves to Normandy, yesterday tried to cut off the main British salient with a heavy counter-attack from the south at Grainville and Bretteville, but his forces were halted by a heavy artillery barrage.

It was not known immediately if the Rodney had taken part in this shelling.

Three smaller attacks were launched by the Germans near Colleville but all were repulsed.

There was less fighting directly before Caen than there had been in recent days, but British raiders attacked Breville in the Orne sector.

Today's communique No. 49 made no reference to a report broadcast early today by the German-controlled Paris radio which said British and Canadian troops had landed at the mouth of the Orne Estuary and seized the port of Cabourg, 13 miles northeast of Caen.

As far as was indicated by official reports and recent front dispatches, the present offensive is an all-British effort, except for support from Canadian artillery units. The Canadian-held sector of the front remained quiet.

On the American sector Lt.-Gen. Bradley's troops made a series of small attacks towards St. Lo to straighten their lines, while other units beat down dwindling resistance on Cap de la Hague, after being regrouped with special units.

German resistance also was waning in the Beaumont Hague area, but American infantry was closing in only after heavy artillery and aerial softening of the Nazis' positions.

Breakwater Forts Held by Allies

The series of forts along the Cherbourg breakwater now are in Allied hands. The last surrendered when a medium bomber swooped in at less than 6,000 feet and cloaked it with high explosives.

Outside of the use of fighters, the Contentin Peninsula was the only battle area where the Allies bombarded by air, because of low-lying clouds.

Fighters operating from Normandy landing-strips and from Britain strafed Nazi reserves moving towards the front.

S.H.A.E.F. announced Commodore William Sullivan, U.S.N., who was in charge of clearing the harbors of Casablanca and Oran and helped at Pearl Harbor and Naples, is directing operations to put the port of Cherbourg back into operation as a naval base.

2 Nazi Divisions Trapped

The Navy revealed it was keeping a close patrol around the Channel islands west of the Cherbourg peninsula, where it is estimated two German divisions are trapped. British warships are intercepting supply convoys wherever possible, and the islands which have big guns capable of shooting up to 40,000 yards now are neutralized.

The Berlin radio said today the Germans had repelled Allied destroyer thrusts directed against the Channel islands.

There was no confirmation of this report from Allied sources. The broadcast, recorded by the United States Federal Communications Commission, did not specify when the action had taken place.

Heart-Rending Scene After Wrecking Of Children's Hostel by Robot Bomb

London, June 30 (CP) — The Germans intensified their blind bombardment of Southern England today with robot aerial torpedoes, killing several dozen persons.

The robots were flung across the Channel at frequent intervals during the day. A children's hostel, a hotel, shops, homes and office buildings were hit.

The scene at the hostel was a heart-rending one as rescue units of more than 50 men tore at the charred wreckage with shovels and with their hands and children's bodies were recovered one by one.

The first body recovered was that of a baby and then the rescue party unearthed that of a fair-haired girl, dressed as they had been when they were put to bed.

Broken baby carriages, rocking horses, small shoes and toys were scattered about over the garden and grounds of the home, to which the children had been removed last March after another hostel had been burned out by incendiary bombs.

Total deaths here were not established definitely as the rescue work continued.

Another comet bomb slashed into the roof of a hotel annex and was believed to have caused several deaths.

Still another smashed small shops and a home with accompanying fatalities.

Six persons were killed in another incident.

Britain's well-trained rescue and relief units went to work with the efficiency they displayed in the German bomb-blits period of 1940-41. While workers dug in the smoking ruins of the children's home firemen stood by and played water on the wreckage so fires could not break out to hamper the rescue.

Women of a volunteer air detachment and ambulance workers were quickly on the scene and set up an improvised hospital ward and supplied injured victims and relief parties with warm drinks.

One hit on an office building killed several people among passers-by.

As the day wore on the buzz-bombs kept coming over.

In one area where a bomb hit a great smoke column boiled up, exposing dead and injured persons and smashed vehicles in debris-littered street.

A post-office, a number of buildings and a bus were heavily damaged elsewhere and there were casualties in this incident.

Plumber Had More Trouble Than in Cellar

Great Falls, Mont., June 30—(AP)—Plumber Edwin Johnson said he couldn't attend the club luncheon. A woman had called and asked him to fix a leak. "Oh, let it go until after lunch," said club member Carl Lehman. "Some women expect you to jump at the drop of a hat.

When he returned to his office, he had a telephone call from Mrs. Lehman. "Where have you been?" she demanded. "I called the plumber but he didn't show up. Our water pipes have broken, and the basement's flooded."

PRISONER KILLED

Baltimore, June 30—(AP)—State penitentiary guards shot and killed today a 21-year-old prisoner who, while attempting to escape, barricaded himself in a tower on the prison wall and held officers at bay with a rifle. Penitentiary officials identified him as Salvadore Appititio of Baltimore.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS HELD IN CUSTODY

Two young girls, who gave their names as Helena Rabidoux, Talador Station, and Violet Thompson, 23 Hillcrest, West Hill, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court today charged with vagrancy. Before they were asked to plead Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan K.C. asked for a week's remand during which time these girls are to be examined. Chief Provost revealed the girls had been warned to refrain from loitering about the city streets earlier in the week, but they had continued to wander about late at night.

FO. G.H. Farquharson, Corbyville Downs German Plane Over Normandy

Winging his way with his fellow Spitfire fighter pilots over the battle-scarred fields of Normandy, is Flying Officer G. H. Farquharson, Corbyville, Ont.

Adding further laurels to the brilliant record already achieved by Canadian sky fighters, the pilot has shot down 36 out of a formation of 72 V1 planes the other day.

In the thick of the fight was the ace Ontario marksman, one of which the twenty-two-year-old Corbyville pilot is a member.

Their guns spitting death, the Canadians roared into battle, and to among the victors who sent the enemy crashing earthward was F/O. Farquharson. According to his parents he has raised his "kill" to nineteen and a half.

Before he went on active service with the R.C.A.F. he was employed by the Canadian Explosives Limited at Deseronto.

Trenton Flier Gets $50 Bonus From His Father for Every Plane He Knocks Down; Bill to Date $325

Trenton's ace flyer, Flt. Lieut. Jimmy Kerr, doesn't have to worry about the where-with-all to pay his mess bills, or to ask a pocket loaner, as far as Jerry sticks his neck out far enough for the young pilot to line it in his sights.

For, prior to his leaving for overseas, Kerr's father, inventor of the Gilbert House, Trenton, promised his pilot son that he would receive a fifty dollar bill for every Hun brought down by the guns of the R.C.A.F. member.

Now, Jimmy is collecting. Last Thursday his "kill" amounted to six-and-one-half, or $325 worth of Jerry hides.

Over the weekend, two more Heinies went crashing before the unerring marksmanship of the pride his father received the "half" for $100. Now up comes the question, which pilot will first Will Conn-ing run out of pilots or will Kerr, senior, run out of cash?

Kerr had a grandstand seat on D-Day. With his English observer "Butch," he escorted the paratroopers to Normandy and saw that their drops were protected before landing. The sight of the Allied fleet and armies moving across the channel was an unforgettable one, but the greatest thrill being made" he wrote, "and were so glad we could help. It was all a picnic now, but I wouldn't more have missed it for the world."

Extensive Program of Improvements Adds to Appearance of Tourist Park

Emerging from its cocoon of unkempt lawns, trees, shrubbery, brush, drab-appearing buildings and general unattractiveness through the consistent efforts of the City Council and Publicity Committee, the Belleville Tourist Park is now ready to brand new 1944 appearal, presents an attraction that is already being utilized by tourists and transient visitors.

An almost overnight transformation took place, after the committee viewed the grounds. Quick decisions were made. Advice of outside experts was obtained. Bulldozers, axes, carpenters, painters went into swift action, following the approval of City Council of a financial grant.

Bulldozers ripped through dank underbrush, and trees and laborers cleared the debris behind them. This alone accounted for an enlargement of the original park by approximately one-third.

Buildings Renovated.

New seeding was sown on the cleared land. Now there is a lush carpet of grass shooting up to new life. Buildings were moved back to the edge of the property. Today they stand in attractive, colors of cream and blue. Spotless, in interior and exterior. Showers, laundry, cots, and kitchens. Modern plumbing has been installed. Electricity is available to camper parties in the trailer section which extends along the entire southern boundary of the park.

Tables, with attached benches, also colored in cream and blue dot the fresh green of the lawn. Benches are available at several points. Fresh flowers adorn frontal fencing. Completely painted attractive signs tell a travelling public just what it is all about.

A full time caretaker, John Mulvey, efficient, courteous, is in charge. He, on his newly garbed proleye. The newly cleared property is beautiful in more than one. Not only does it eliminate an unsightly area, but it opens a new vista of Bay of Quinte. In the elimination of big dead trees and underbrush, now, allows for the fresh cool, breezes from the bay that formerly were obstructed by the natural impedi-ments.

Picnics Held on Grounds.

Tradition of appreciative tourists already occupy the park. Lately, civic organizations, training the possibilities and facilities of the fresh shady lawns, have held their annual picnics there. In the past cities, families, lunch in the shady coolness, during the noon hour, to get away from stuffy apartments and houses.

The Tourist and Publicity Committee urge all residents to take advantage of the park, for its attractive tourist park. Insofar as cleanliness and tidiness is concerned, advertising is being inserted in a number of newspapers here and there, which is already showing many doctors of the detachment, under the command of Capt. Earl Bourbonnais of Montreal, who helped in treating Canadian, English and also enemy wounded in the first days of the invasion.

"There were even Russians and Poles taken out as patients", Capt. Bourbonnais said. "They seemed to be glad to be out of the war for In several cases, I used them as stretcher-carriers."

Since the arrival of the detachment in Bernieres-sur-Mer Capt. Bourbonnais and Capt. John McCabe, of Windsor, Ont., who attended last week, took in hand the health of the civil population which expressed gratitude by giving vegetables, fruits and cider to the Canadians.

Among the men of the detachment are Cpl. Teddy Williams, Lansdowne; Acting Corporal Oscar Chevrier, Rawdon, Que.; Corporal Horace Hutchinson, Kingston; Corporal Hornbeek, Kingston; Leslie Bevin, Perth; Private Willis Belleville; Albert Buell, Kingston.

June Building Permits Reach Total of $10,725

In direct contrast to the month of May when more than the usual amount of building activity was seen in the city, only 9 building permits were issued at the city hall during June, it was stated today by City Engineer Charles Mott. Four of the permits issued were for one story cottages while another was for a residence and balance being for alterations or repairs. Permits totalled $10,725.

Rotarians Assume Responsibility For Two Erring Youths

With the interests of juvenile delinquency uppermost, Rotarians Clare B. Morgan and Howard Clarke have taken a long step forward in their efforts towards the establishment of a Big Brother Movement in Belleville.

Following the first step to-wards the establishment of a Big Brother Movement in Belleville, when they assumed the responsibility of the direction of two boys' cases, they were convicted in juvenile Court on charges of theft. Magistrate Lloyd gave the boys suspended sentences until they appear again in court after the court had been approached regarding the first step towards the establishment of the Big Brother Movement in Belleville.

Since the boys admitted to breaking and entering and stealing from the Belleville Golf and Country Club on two three-night thefts, Magistrate Lloyd left disposition of the cases as the lads were of juvenile age. In the case of Chief Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society and himself, Rotarian Clarke. He introduced Mr. Morgan, who in turn outlined the activities of the Big Brother Movement in other centres and assured the court both he and Rotarian Clarke were willing to assume the responsibility of directing and supervising the two juveniles until they reached 18. The boys are to report at their respective homes while Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morgan will make entertainment activities for them. Magistrate Lloyd stated that he would leave the suspended sentence and could at any time be summoned to have the boys sentenced for the charges on which they were arraigned today.

Report on County Road Work

With the Spring program of resurfacing gravel roads in the county roads and bridges system virtually complete, road labor in this district has been augmented by men being released to assist with the hay harvest, County Engineer W. Leacock stated today.

Eighteen miles of road, largely in Tyendinaga Township were coated with crushed rock as well as Hartman Stone Trenton-Frankford road was also recoated. Resurfacing of county road between Deseronto and Consecon has been on the labor program.

Almost all roads scheduled to be treated with calcium chloride have been finished. Recent rains delayed the spraying of Bleasdmon, on asphalt dust, but this is expected to be completed with the present weather.

Contents of three tank cars have already been utilized. Another is being used at Stirling, Madoc and Tweed. Three cars will arrive next week.

Other than three works, and with the exception of weed cutting, county road work will be held to a minimum to free help for harvest work.

Ideal Weather Given Kinsmen For Their Carnival

With ideal carnival weather having been at last obtained for the last two nights, the third and final Kinsmen Club street carnival will be held in the heart of downtown Belleville tonight. Encouraging reports were received on the first two nights of a three-night street carnival when it was announced upwards of $650 had been realized. The carnival proceeds will be given towards the supplementing of the Kinsmen Milk for Britain and Tag Days Fund.

One of the features for Friday night's Kinsmen carnival will be the drawing for a valuable painting from the brush of Manly MacDonald, noted Canadian artist. This painting is valued at over $200. It will be drawn for late in the evening.

Thursday night saw the games of skill and chance being given steady play, while the assorted conveniences of games of bingo did more than their share in carnival business. The players continually repeating as winners. Refreshments did strong business in ice cream and soft drinks as carnival goers endeavored to cool off from the hot summer breezes. One game that attracted interest was that of skill, the player being called upon to place a coin in a certain pool from across a glass jar of water. It was remarkable how few players accomplished the mastery of this science. Tonight will end three-night Kinsmen Carnival program where more games and more fun are the byword.

Small Market

Stated by many residents to be the first real sign of summer, farmers and stores were to be closed on Saturday other than when Christmas fell on that day, district farmers co-operated with city merchants in the public marketed their farm produce. Attendance at the market was also large, with several vendors predicting there would be a large market on Saturday despite the fact it would be a holiday.

New potatoes were offered for the first time this season with the new vendor, Mr. Bowen, of Foxboro, quoting 20 cents per berry box. At the market square farmers' wives quickly bought up the two or three bushels she had to offer. Old potatoes were quoted at 40 cents the peck or $1.50 per bag. Shelled cabbages brought 20 cents the head and onions 10 cents

C. Legion Collects 2,422 Pounds Of Salvage Fats

Salvage fat amounting to 1367 pounds was collected by members of the Canadian Legion here in the second campaign recently completed. Altogether 2422 pounds of this material have been collected by the association in the two drives they have sponsored.

Owing to the lack of suitable collection days during the hot weather, the Legion announces there will be no further collections until November 1st. These collections will be maintained consistently after that date if they are still viable.

All residents who have been saving waste fats for the Legion are asked to continue to do so. The Legion guarantees all such collections will be taken up regardless of the war situation.

Officials today expressed their sincere appreciation to all residents of the city and district who assisted in the salvage of fats, also to the City Public Works Department, Utilities Commission, merchants and industrial firms who generously loaned trucks and drivers to assist with the collection.

C.N.R. Announces Personnel Changes In Central Region

Canadian National Railways staff changes announced yesterday affecting operations in territory in the central region include three officials who will have their headquarters in Toronto.

George A. Stokes, former superintendent Toronto, has been placed on pension, is succeeded as general superintendent Eastern Montreal district by Robert C. Johnson. John A. Rogers, general superintendent transportation of the central region, becomes regional assistant to the vice-president. Lawrence Mason, Quebec district general superintendent succeeds Mr. Johnson at Montreal.

Alfred J. Lomas, superintendent Toronto terminals, becomes general superintendent of the Montreal district with headquarters there. Frank Griffin, Northern Ontario district general superintendent, succeeds Mr. Lomas at Toronto in the Quebec district while W. E. Robinson, general superintendent of transportation, Atlantic region, will supervise the Northern Ontario district from North Bay. Appointments are effective July 1.

In announcing the changes, J. F. Pringle, regional vice-president, Toronto, said the region is the largest operating unit on the Canadian National System in point of traffic, with 7,500 miles of operating track reaching from Rivière du Loup to the head of the Great Lakes.

George A. Stokes, retiring general superintendent, is well known throughout Ontario especially in this city and district. Formerly general superintendent Northern Ontario district, he has served in various capacities in all parts of the province. He became superintendent of the Toronto district in 1926 and ten years later supervised the London District. In 1941 he became general superintendent Northern Ontario district.

Obituary

ZARA VAN VALKENBURGH (Thurlow Township)

After a lengthy illness Zara Van Valkenburgh died at his home on the 3rd. concession of Thurlow Township on Thursday, June 29th. He was born in Ontario, Canada, eighty years ago the late Mr. Van Valkenburgh was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Van Valkenburgh. He was a farmer and for the past thirty years resided in Thurlow Township. In religion he was a member of the Methodist church and was still interested in the district.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Elsa Morrison; three daughters, Mrs. Shepherd Clark, Ontario, Mrs. Hedley Slingerland, Angus, Ontario, and Mrs. Alex. Fraser, as home; three sons, Fred in Vancouver, N.Y.; Harry and Thomas, both of Thurlow Township.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

SUPPLIES TAKEN TO BERCHTESGADEN

London, June 30 —(CP)— The London Daily Mail in a dispatch from the German frontier, said today truck loads of supplies have been arriving at Berchtesgaden which Hitler was believed converting into a "last-stand fortress" for himself and his Nazi hierarchy. The supplies are being stored mainly in underground galleries of the chalet "sufficient to last several years."

Chicago Spotlight

Dewey Faces Tough Assignment In Contest Against Roosevelt

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chicago, June 30 (CP) — The thoughts of Americans, and indeed of politically-minded people all over the world, centred this week on Chicago where the Republican party, the Republican party assembled to choose candidates and adopt a platform for next November's presidential elections.

Everybody who is interested knows now that the party picked the man nearly everybody hoped it would—Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York—as candidate for president.

He must lead President Roosevelt at a time when the United States may be in the most critical stage of the great war into which Roosevelt led them—at a time when the three-times president may be the leader of a victorious nation.

* *

Lavish and costly: This week's convention has been described as the dullest in history, up to the few hours of the actual nominations, but it was not cheap. Millions of dollars were spent, tons of paper wasted, oceans of liquids consumed, all in the name of democracy, and all for the purpose of choosing a candidate known far ahead.

* *

And in three weeks it will happen all over again, with a fourth or fifth candidate and it will seemed they might not get anyone to care for their offices until a cousin went to their Albany home from New York so they could come to Chicago.

* *

Trivia: Because the convention ran a day short of the traditional four days and attendance was low the second day, drink and refreshment concessionaires took a licking; so did those who bought bootlegged tickets. . . . Like everyone else, Governor Dewey made friends and it seemed they might not get anyone to care for their offices until a cousin went to their Albany home from New York so they could come to Chicago.

Dominion Day 1944

Seventy-seven years ago the Dominion of Canada came into being on July 1st., 1867. She was built on the greatest hopes and out of the union of the provinces has come a great modern state whose stature before the world grows more and more. Her history has been one in which she can take pride. Her greatest growth has been demonstrated in the severe times of trial when she was at war in 1914 and again in 1939 because Britain and democracy throughout the world were threatened by the German aggression and love of military power. The Dominion in her 77 years has shown the benign influence which, coming from Britain, British history and early Canadian history has moulded her development.

For the second time in a quarter of a century the future of Canada and of every democratic state in the world has been menaced by the monster of German imperialism. In the period in 1939 Germany picked quarrels when she believed herself fully prepared that she might be certain of conquest. But for the second time she has been defeated and democracy is being saved by the men of the enlightened nations of the earth, the democracies, and among these defenders of righteous justice are the young men of Canada, as ever associated with a great cause, the greatest cause in the world of nations, liberty and the right to a sane national development.

On this seventy-seventh anniversary of Confederation, there is every assurance of victory with the salvation of democracy and the security of the rights of nations to a free and just development. Once again the freedom-loving peoples have demonstrated their power to break down the reactionary forces of injustice, aggression and barbarism.

What Canada is today is due to the nature of the foundation on which she is built. Her past is one in which her people can look for her record has been for peace except when the call came to fight ruthless foes, Germany twice and Japan. The early annals of the development of the Dominion are romantic and inspiring as any nation could desire. In Canada there are two civilizations and two main racial streams which guarantee the oncoming future of a sound democracy. Her pioneers of the, French-speaking and English-speaking races -have written a story of courage that is the worthy basis for a modern state.

Blessed by her geographical location on the world highway of the north, stretching an entire continent wide, with oceans on her east and west coasts and the Polar Arctic on the north and a kindly friend in the United States to the south, this Dominion is midway between the world of the Orient and the culture of Europe. She has a population whose ancestors were men and women of spirit and enterprise, her fields, forests, rocks, waters are rich and her air is most benign and through it will pass aerial argosies of commerce. She has a battle fleet and a merchant navy or great proportions, she is strong in air power for war and peace and security and her ways are those of justice and equity.

Her constitution has been symmetrical, based upon the principles of British justice. She is the heir of British and French civilizations, and the inheritor of the spirit of progress.

The ideals of her gallant sons who extend the bounds of freedom today as they battle in Europe and elsewhere in the world for the rights of nations are living things and these assure that the days ahead of this Dominion will be days made more blessed for the world by reason of the fact that Canadian ideals have been carried out in action on the stage of the world by Canada's sons.

Before very long it is expected that the greatest century of peace and freedom the world has ever known, Germany, will have been defeated and that Japanese militarism and savagery will soon be crushed so that across the world there may begin a reign of peace that will endure and that the ideals of democratic states such as Canada may be exercising their influence in the reconstruction of the world following the havoc of war and in what rehabilitation is required in her own boundaries after the stress of a great war.

Several hundred British policemen are taking part in the job of restoring order in reoccupied territories. They are specially picked men from the towns and villages of Britain, many of whom are commissioned with ranks varying from lieutenant to lieutenant-colonel. They are attached to G-5—the Cival Affairs Division.

Viscount Lascelles a Prisoner

Viscount Lascelles, son of the Princess Mary and nephew of King George Sixth, is believed a prisoner of the Germans in Italy. He adds another instance to the services which the House of Windsor has been rendering Britain in this war. Their Majesties the King and Queen have been very close to the heart of the people by their devotion and spirit of sacrifice and by the contributions which the royal line has given. Early in the war King George lost his younger brother, the Duke of Kent who gave his life in an accident while on a mission for the Allies. The King's brother the Duke of Gloucester has served in places of danger in the present struggle.

The British people have in every class the finest examples of service given to their country. It is fortunate indeed, that finds its King and Queen, the members of the Royal House of Windsor and all the people so united in the one great cause of devotion to the national ideal of justice and freedom.

Lord Lascelles who is a mere youth has run all the dangers of the service and knows intimately the life and dangers of the soldier. His distinguishedness for the wounded with whom he stayed reveals the high principles which animates a young Briton, whether of the reigning line or of the people.

Aluminum Bridges

(Montreal Herald)

For many products peace will bring a change over from shortage to surplus. Pending immediate outlets for these surpluses until old markets can be revived and new uses developed will constitute a major industrial problem.

Aluminum is typical of such products. Today our plants are pouring out millions of pounds and the output flows steadily to the fighting fronts in the form of vital weapons and equipment.

The pots and pans from our kitchens were early mobilized for the melting pot to maintain this flow. Production delays are viewed as national disasters.

But after the war, when this demand is suddenly reduced to insignificant proportions, there will come a period when one of two things may happen.

Either a surplus of millions of pounds of aluminum will be created, or drastic curtailment will throw the machinery of production out of gear.

The industry, however, is exploring possible outlets for such a surplus. One project of the Aluminum Company of Canada now in the planning stage is the building of an aluminum bridge across the Saguenay river at Arvida, the aluminum town.

As post-war highway projects will involve a lot of bridge building, this intriguing innovation is rich in possibilities.

Human nature is so constituted that all men see and judge better in the affairs of other men than in their own—Terence.

FLYING NEWSBOY

You knew him on the corner, and you knew him on your street.
He pattered to your doorway through the rain and snow and sleet.
There were times when he limited the office of his failure to complain
Or because he'd left your paper tightly folded in the rain.
Well, he's now delivering papers from the reaches of the sky.
To the Nazi-ridden counries—and he's really quite a guy!

You wished he wouldn't whistle on his early-morning round,
And you wished he'd leave your paper on the porch and not the ground.
Now, another lad is trudging in his place
along your street,
For the other little fellow's taken on a longer beat.
He is now delivering papers Nazi stories to deny,
And his route lies over Holland and he serves it from the sky!

He goes whistling over Brussels, and goes whistling over Rome,
For he still delivers papers as he used to do at home.
There's a route high over Paris, and a long
one over Berlin,
Where some former Yankee newsboy with his papers thunders in.
He is early up and at it, as he was in days gone by
To all freedom-loving people he's the newsboy in the sky!

30 YEARS AGO

JUNE 30th., 1914

After a hard contest in which the election in the province evinced more enthusiasm on both sides than for many years the voters of Ontario returned Sir James Whitney and the Conservative party to power with a majority of fifty-seven seats. The latest returns indicate that the standing in the new House will be as follows: Conservatives 84; Liberals 26; Labor 1; Independent 1; Total 111. In the city of Belleville the balloting was heavy. J. W. Johnston, the Conservative candidate in West Hastings, defeated D. V. Sinclair, Liberal candidate and member of abolish the tar, by a majority of 947. In East Hastings the returns are not complete, but they demonstrate that Sandy Ponton, Conservative candidate, is elected by a large majority. In North Hastings Robert Cooke, Conservative candidate, was elected by large majority over Hon. F. P. McInnes, the Liberal-Temperance candidate. N. W. Rowell, the Liberal leader, was elected in North Oxford.

Pyle in Normandy:

Little French Girls Lend Splendid Co-operation to News Cameraman

By ERNIE PYLE

On the Cherbourg Peninsula—(by wireless)—A couple of days I rode around the Cherbourg Peninsula with Bert Brandt, Army photographer for Acme Newspictures.

Bert is a swell guy, by now some of the pictures Bert took during that time, so I would like to tell you how they came about.

Picture No. 1: This showed a large crowd of French people, led by the mayor of their town, advancing toward an American soldier with outstretched hands of welcome. Well, that was taken at Barneville.

The people really did welcome us, but of course the actual picture was posed for Bert.

The people were very pleased and eager. The soldier Bert picked out to receive the throng was Sgt. Max Monsorno, of 19617 96th. St., Woodhaven, Long Island. He was one of the Ninth Division men left to guard the town after the others had passed on through.

Bert lined the crowd in its act, through the only Barneville woman who spoke English. She told them how they should advance toward the sergeant, all smiling, and he sure to look at the sergeant, and not at the camera. Then Bert yelled "Go!" The mayor hobbled toward Sergeant Monsorno with his hand out. The crowd surged up behind him. Bert snapped a picture, and then shouted at them to do it again. It seemed the mayor wasn't smiling big enough to suit Bert.

More instructions. More interpretations. The girl jumped up and down with delight. The older people got more dignified. Sergeant Monsorno gave the mayor a colonel-stage welcome, to cheer Bert.

Then Bert yelled "Go!" again, the mayor almost in Monsorno's lap, and then with a smile, and the little girls threw their flowers, and the whole crowd waved their arms. Everybody was very happy, including Bert. And we hope we made you very happy too.

Picture No. 2: Dead horses and wrecked German vehicles along the roadside. The circumstances were these:

We had caught the Germans trying to retreat down the road from Cherbourg in large force. We had interfered them with artillery. The devastation along that road was unbelievable.

The Germans were moving with many horse-drawn vehicles as well as trucks. They were in wheeled farm carts, in fancy passenger buggies, in light wagons along with the big army Wild West covered wagons.

At one place the wreckage was piled so high that traffic couldn't get through until our men had bulldozed a road around off the road. Hundreds of carts and guns and wheeled horses were dead. German bodies lay sprawling, big holes pockmarked the roadway, burned out trucks lay dead by the roadsides, tractors with their steel-tracked telephone wire snarled the highway. That's what took Picture No. 2.

The picture was of a bulldozer methodically pushing dead horses and wrecked vehicles off the road. Incongruous, off the road into an orchard. A man was operating the big bull with a grim got-to-do-it look on his face.

There were scores of pitifully dead horses within a space of a few yards. Some were not dead, at least asleep. Others were in distorted, grotesque positions. They were packed and broken as the bulldozer pushed.

Some people stood looking on.

Bert took his pictures while standing on the seat of a command car in which we had been riding. He had to do it that way, calling to him to hurry up and finish, because the big bulldozer was in the sight which has come the nearest to making me sick at the stomach.

Picture No. 2: Two sweet little French girls about six years old presenting flowers to the men who led them in our car. The circumstances:

We were on our way back to camp after taking the picture of the horses, when we approached a concrete road block the Germans had built across the highway somewhere, as we passed through, two little girls ran out from the side with some flowers to us, but they missed and the flowers fell in the road behind the car. We had gone about fifty yards when Bert said, "Say, that would make a good picture. Let's go get it."

We backed up, got out, and indicated, largely by sign language, that we wanted the girls to run by again. They were smart as whips. They got the idea instantly. Fortunately they were two of the prettiest little girls you ever saw in your life.

We picked some more flowers for them. Then Bert got in the road ahead. I got in the back seat. Bert had me pose my flowers all over my eyes so that it would look as if we were going fast,although we were actually standing still for the picture.

We had to retake the picture three times. The little girls, in their eagerness, would present the flowers too soon. Finally I acted as director, and we got it normal. Then I kept saying "No, no, no," and then I remembered the French word "maintenant," which means "now," and so at the right moment I said "maintenant" and presto, they threw flowers and everything was lovely.

Then I got out of my car, and I had no sooner hit the ground than I was grabbed by my two little friends, plus half a dozen more who had arrived while we had been watching, and they were all over me like a swarm of bees, laughing and kissing and hugging me till I was almost overcome.

It was completely impulsive, and I don't think it had anything to do with the "liberation" part of it. I think it was motivated by the simple fundamental fact that they would like to kiv kiv people. They don't even know who they are. Vive la France!

New Instructions Issued Fishermen In European Waters

New York, June 29—(AP)— Gen. Eisenhower today issued new instructions to American fishermen regarding the ban on fishing for another week, but "this time only" because of military necessity.

A spokesman for Eisenhower headquarters said the supreme commander's "requirement now is that no fishing be done by U.S. coastal waters from the French port of Bayonne, on the Spanish frontier, to the West Frisian islands until July 6, 1944 at 9 p.m. (3 p.m. Eastern War Time)." CBS warned that fishing might become extremely dangerous at any time.

"So you court-martialed and executed an enemy rooster about to reveal our positions!"

HEALTH DEPENDS ON ORAL DIGESTION

When I was a sophomore medical student my father, who had no medical knowledge but was an omnivorous reader, used to debate with me on the primary or essential cause of disease. He had a theory of his own about it, which of course was absurd to my mind then. He maintained that "all disease begins in the stomach". When I undertook to point out the inadequacy of the theory by citing typhoid fever with ulceration in the intestines, father would pause only briefly in the discussion of pathology to say that I was getting down too deep into the intestine if not from failure of the gastric juice to destroy them—and go on from there while I remained baffled and silent. Years I wondered whether medical science was wrong about it after all, so also was my father, and not until I was practically supporting his contention as a practicing medical student, remember.

If father were here today I wouldn't consider it necessary that "all disease begins in the stomach" so absurd as I did then. In the light of our newer knowledge of nutrition the theory requires only a little editing to make it presentable now — change the "all" to much and the "stomach" to mouth—and disease begins in the mouth — and you have as a few words the gist of many volumes of modern scientific literature.

Shakespeare was as warm as father when he put the famous toast in the point of Falstaff: "Now, good digestion wait on appetite, and health on both". Health does depend on good digestion, and good digestion depends on something more than digestion of foods, on mastication, and mastication depends on proper functioning of efficient teeth, either your own or your dentist's, and on the sort of food you choose.

Nearly four fifths of the calories, the energy value of our food normally comes from carbohydrate materials chiefly starches and sugars, cereals, fruits, nuts) and nearly half of the starch in such foods is digested in the mouth by the ptyalin (digestive enzyme or ferment) in the saliva. If such food is being masticated and for a good half hour after it has been swallowed. So it should be clear that when mastication is crippled by loss of teeth, by untreated decay or disease of teeth or gums, digestion of starches is deficient, and a good deal of undigested starch is passed along to the stomach and finds its way to the duodenum, where an excessive burden is imposed on the pancreatic juice to digest it. Stomach and duodenal or intestinal digestive disturbances of a painful or painless nature may be caused by the handicap and general nutrition inevitably declines. No, brother or sister, you can't enjoy good health, vite, if you have a few faulty carious or missing, even if they are back teeth that do not show.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hair Does Not Grow After Death

Q.—Is there any foundation for the question whether human hair can grow after death.

(M. S. C.)

Answer—No.

Saccharin

Understand one ounce of saccharin in one quart of water is equivalent to 32 pounds of sugar—one tablespoonful of the saccharin to a tablespoonful of the sugar. Would it be harmful for one not diabetic to use saccharin as a sweetening in place of sugar?

Answer—Saccharin has sweetening power 300 to 500 times that of sugar. It has no food or calorific value. A quarter-grain tablet is approximately as sweetening to a cup of coffee, milk, water, stewed fruit, chewing gum or chewing tobacco as a teaspoonful of cane sugar (sucrose). General medical opinion is that use of up to five grains a day is harmless to any one.

Preparing for Maternity

Is it dangerous for the nursing baby if the mother has eaten raw pork or raw beef while pregnant?

Answer—No. No one should eat raw pork, lamb, veal or raw beef unless absolutely certain it does not contain the larvae or trichina larvae. If you have a baby on order or one you might wish to have, send for my article on "Preparing for Maternity" or for "The Brady Baby Book"—Bindlow stamped envelope bearing your address.

Homogenized Vitamin D Milk

Are there any children Homogenized Vitamin D Milk. Label says it is "irradiated with vitamin ergosterol". Have Ben Told irradiated ergosterol is a poisonous which causes the bones to become brittle. What is irradiated ergosterol?

(Mrs. K. D.)

Answer—It is synthetic vitamin D—made by action of ultraviolet light rays of certain length on ergosterol, a natural food substance present in various foods. It is not a poisonous drug" and the only thing prevents the bones from being "brittle."

NEW WINE IN OLD BOTTLES

Many expressions in the Bible are used in a popular sense different from the original.

In ordinary parlance, "Let the dead bury the dead," means let bygones be bygones, forget and forgive. But in Matthew 8:21-22 says: "And another of His disciples said unto Him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead."

This puzzling passage is hard to explain. It may mean that the man regarded his work so important that he could not wait to bury his father and he desired the disciple to leave his worldly things and follow him.

Jewish funerals and mourning periods lasted several weeks and some authorities consider the passage to mean that it would be better for the father to remain unburied for the time and for the disciple to delay the work of the Kingdom. Jesus replied that the disciple should follow Him in the work and let the unbelieving relations bury the father. Still others suggest that possibly the father was not yet dead but that the disciple asked to remain with him during his latter days, thus postponing indefinitely the spiritual mission.

According to Isaiah 5:37-39, Jesus said: "And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish."

In everyday speech "putting new wine into old bottles" implies ignorance or insensibility. The English bottle is really the diminutive of butt, a wine cask or skin. Until literally 1700 years ago Glass bottles are not mentioned in literature.

In those days bottles and "butts" were made of the hides of animal skins. The usual wine bottle consisted of the entire skin of a goat, flayed and fitted with the neck of the animal forming the neck of the bottle. The skin was tanned with oak bark and seasoned with smoke to give the wine a special flavor. It can become like a bottle in the sun. Psalms 119:83.

The point of the passage quoted by Christ is that the unfermented grape juice would break the unelastic leather of old bottles. The new spiritual doctrine He taught could not be confined in the old forms of worship and rituals of the old religion.

Says Over Million Lost Annually ThruHigh-Graders

Ottawa, June 30 —(CP)— Hon. W. E. Rowe. (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe) said in debate on the budget in the Commons yesterday the Dominion revenue was losing more than $1,000,000 annually from the operations of "high-graders."

He had suggested steps to encourage mineral development and added that revenue was being lost to the government because the "high-graders' traffic" had not been stopped.

"By operating across provincial boundaries these 'high-graders' are able to elude the vigilance of our Provincial Police forces, who have tried to restrain this illegal traffic," he said.

"May I suggest that at the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial conference an agreement be sought whereby jurisdiction over this nefarious practice becomes vested in our Royal Canadian Mounted Police?"

TOUGH FIGHT AHEAD

Washington, June 30 — (AP) — President Roosevelt last night made public a report from top American military commanders warning the United States that "There is still a tough fight ahead of us" in the war.

PICTON

Flt. Lt. C. D. Grant Killed Overseas

Picton, June 30 — Flight Lieut. Charles Donald Grant was killed overseas last Sunday, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Hugh Weir, Wellington, yesterday. No details were given.

Son of Mrs. Weir and the late Charles Grant, all of his life was spent in Wellington district. After graduating as a pilot he was an constructor at Trenton RCAF Station before going overseas a year ago.

A brother, Douglas, is serving with the Canadian Army in Italy.

Camp Opens

Guns and other equipment are arriving at Point Petre erady for the arrival of men who will train at the anti-aircraft battery there. The permanent staff of ninety has everything in readiness and 500 men will train there. Lt. Col. Waterfield is officer commanding. A similar battery trained there in 1940.

New Potatoes

New potatoes were offered for sale in town yesterday. They were grawn by Stanley McConnell, West Lake. Potatoes appear to be an excellent crop this year, as growing conditions have been ideal. There is a surplus of old potatoes and they sell as low as 75c bushel.

Keith and Lawrence Roblin have sold their hydroplane speed boat to A. W. Way of Vancouver and it is being shipped to the coast this week.

GOODROCK GOLD MINES LTD.
BEST BUY IN YELLOWKNIFE AT TODAY'S PRE-DRILLING PRICE

LOOK AT THE LOCATION
Goodrock owns a solid block of 300 acres, lying alongside the proven Ptarmigan Mines—a property controlled and operated by Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. Limited and on which a 100-ton mill has been set up.

Yellowknife is noted for its high-grade veins. Production from all mines has ranged from $18.00 to $38.50 per ton or better in gold. Already, in the 5-year war period and despite all wartime restrictions, Yellowknife has disclosed six mines which have produced over $14,000,000 in gold. Practically the whole Yellowknife group of properties and interested development companies are registering in market action the high faith which the public is displaying in this new land of rich mineralization.

TELEGRAM from the property (June 12): "Have outcrop 50 feet wide 300 feet long so far well mineralized quartz, slate, greywacke, schist andesite that looks good and should be diamond drilled. Am calling for tenders for 3,000 feet to start with. Am putting on four men to do more stripping on same outcrop. Will keep you posted as work proceeds." C. P. Charlebois.

Fashion Flashes

PEERING AHEAD with the aid of previews of fur fashion shows in store, shop and salon windows, it is going to be the most popular fur season in the modish world, judging from the sketches. Coats have gathered fullness, wide turnback cuffs and a flair for the dramatic.

The survey with the fringe on top appears on a pretty print, black on white or navy. Time is a little girl collar piped in black ribbon, and black buttons down the bodice and a black grosgrain sash.

Here from Puerto Rico are blouses with all the beautiful details, the minute tucks, the embroidery and delicate lace that used to characterize the finest European imports. Batists and handkerchief linens are the fabrics and such a blouse is an adornment to any suit.

Just about the prettiest dress we have seen for a long time is a christening dress for baby, fashioned of white polka-dotted handkerchief lawn, its tiny sleeves and hem edged with lace. The sash is sashed in white, pink or blue. Name and christening date are embroidered above the dress.

To market, to market or to the beach goes a hand-made fruity bag of heavy rough canvas in dark colors with vividly hued stripes. It is a pinch-penny affair and is worn over the shoulder like a big pack.

Demure charm marks many of this season's long sleeved cotton dinner dresses. One beauty is of white batiste embroidered all over with a large flower and garland design and sashed with pale blue grosgrain to form a wide midriff band. Very wide puffed neckline and long sleeves almost off the shoulders.

ITALIAN SANTA

CANADA

A land of rushing rivers
Of mountains and of plain.
Of mines and mighty forests—
A wide and free domain.
A land of peace and plenty
Awaiting honest toil,
Where he, who wills, may wrestle
A living from the soil.

The land our fathers settled
And tilled the forest tree,
That they might dwell beneath the Flag
That stands for liberty—
O, Canada! my pride of pride,
Next to thy wealth alone,
But for the valiant people
Your hundred heroes—of bone.

O'er all thy wide Dominion,
In town or countryside,
May we, thy sons and daughters,
In loyalty abide;
True, true to our vast country,
A well-content to brag
That we were born in Canada
Beneath the British flag.

Rev. Mr. E. M. Cooks told briefly of some of the good qualities of Mrs. Kilpatrick and read an impressive list of birthdays to which all heartily agreed. Then a granddaughter, Miss Bernice Kilpatrick carried in a beautifully decorated birthday cake with gifts.

The basket contained many tributes to the popularity of the guest of honor including many cards and a nice sum of money.

Mrs. Kilpatrick thanked everyone for their kindness after which refreshments were served by the hostess.

Anniversaries Of Weddings Marked

A double wedding anniversary was celebrated on June 11th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Shannon being the former Miss Ethel Thompson, when they celebrated the 40th. year of their marriage and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nash (nee Mary Shannon) their 25th. year of marriage. Following dinner, an address was read by Miss Betty McWilliams and gifts were presented to the celebrants in amount which was a sessional chair and a substantial sum of money.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Reusch, of Rochester, N.Y., sent a beautiful bouquet of flowers for the happy occasion. Mrs. James McWilliams, of Gananoque, also received flowers.

Both birthdays in May, was one of the guests at the party.

WEDDINGS

WALT—COOKE

JONES—WARD

Stirling. — St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 28, when Margaret Ellen Cooke, daughter of Mrs. and Mr. H. Cooke and the late Henry Cooke, became the bride of Everett Frederick Wall, of Trenton, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Margaret Ward. Rev. Canon Thompson performed the ceremony.

The bride wore pretty gown of white with finger tip veils and corsages of Talisman roses.

Cpl. Carl Cook, R.C.A.F., gave the brides in marriage and Rev. C. R. Brazill, rector, conducted the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with roses, delphiniums and peonies.

THOMPSON—CUMMINGS

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Andrew's Church, Shannonville, Tuesday, June 27, when Rev. Mr. Lougheed united in marriage Marjorie Mae, daughter of Mr. Fred Cummings, Deseronto, to Osler Petty Officer Gordon Thompson, son of Mrs. Thompson and the late Mr. Charles Thompson, formerly of Noranda, Quebec, now residing in Deseronto.

The bride was daintily gowned in a two-piece ensemble of powder blue, embroidered in matching colors with navy accessories and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Marjorie Zuricker, dressed in a tan crepe dress with brown accessories.

Mr. William Houston, of Shannonville, acted as groomsman.

After a short honeymoon the groom will be returning to his duties with the R.C.N., in the service of which he has been for the past two years.

CRESSEY—AUSTIN

William George Cressey took as his bride, Margaret Beryl Austin, in a ceremony performed by Rev. J. W. Gordon at Port Hope United Church on Saturday evening, June 24th.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Austin and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Cressey, Toronto, formerly of Sudbury.

The bride wearing white embroidered sheer marquisette, was attended by Miss Pauline Tinney and Miss Vivian Jones. Mr. Willis Cressey was groomsman.

Guests were present from Sudbury, Toronto, Belleville, Cobourg, Brighton, Trenton and many other places.

FOXBORO

Birthday Party Held For Mrs. Kilpatrick

A very pleasing event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Sherry, Foxboro, on June 19th., it being the eight-first birthday of Mrs. Sherry's mother, Mrs. Kilpatrick.

The company consisted of a goodly number of the immediate relatives and a few close friends. Despite her many years of service to her family, Mrs. Kilpatrick is still fairly active and happy going about among her children helping out where most needed.

During the evening a number of the old songs were sung with Mr. (Rev.) Cooks at the organ. Mr. W. Tillmon sang "Mother Machree," in honor of the birthday

Handkerchief Dress

By ALICE ALDEN

HERE IS a mighty useful frock designed to take the wearer through Summer into early Autumn. It is a version of the famous handkerchief dress created by a New York designer, Maurice Rentner. It comes in a brown and white checked crepe top with a brown crepe skirt buttoned down the side to the hem. The orange-and-brown handkerchief button on the dress looks like contrasting drapery and lends animation to the slim skirt.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

A Common Beauty Worry.

Some women with dry, lifeless complexions dread soap as they would the plague. The daily lathering makes the already surface sensitive and irritated, the flesh feels drawn and puckered. But the fact remains that soap heads the cosmetic list, should be used, if possible.

A dry surface picks up atmospheric dust the same as an oily one and blackheads, added to roughness, do not make his appearance more full of charm.

Use of the dry, rough skin calls for ground-in soap products. The first step is to clean the skin with a thin cream or oil, using several applications—removing each one, except the last. Next, dip a cloth in warm water, pass the surface over the soap bar and then cloth over the face, press upon the face, gently. The oil that remains on the skin will combat the drying effects of the soap. It is like the bumper between the door and the ship; it absorbs the shock.

In time the flesh will accustom itself to this treatment. There should be a rinsing of warm water, then of cold, a gentle drying and friction with a cream of fairly heavy consistency. Then on with the make-up.

After the bath, a special oil made for the purpose can be painted into the skin surface all over the body.

Good substitutes for soap are cleansing meals that are found in cosmetic department. These meals contain oil that is solvent and penetrating; the bran part of the meal does the work of a gentle brush, removing dead skin scales and cleansing the pores and openings. The pores of the skin yield their waste matter to this penetrating treatment, so the horror of blackheads is lessened. As meals of this character have a starchy content they give softness to the surface.

The meal is sprinkled over a moistened wash cloth, used in the same manner as soap. There are usually composed of powdered oatmeal, almond meal and fluorescent orris root, in proper proportions.

It is evident that dryness of the skin may be caused by a fat-free diet. Fats of any kind stimulate the sebaceous glands that are nature's skin lubricants. Without these glands the epidermal cells would flake and dry out. The "dryer" glands drink plenty of water. Therefore stimulate the circulation. Whatever stimulates the circulation is helpful. Applications of some creamy substance cannot be too frequent. A film of heavy cream should remain on the face over night.

When we learn more about the skin and its functions, there will be less lamenting on the part of beauty sellers. One rule for all: keep the complexion fastidiously clean, well lubricated, gently massaged at least once a day.

Boys' and Girls' Summer Reading Contest

During the summer months of July and August the Boys' and Girls' Library will be holding a summer reading contest. It will take the form of a "Book Bank Contest".

Each contestant will be given a small imaginary bank book on which he or she will record the names of the books read. These books will be given according to the class of book which it may be. There will also be questions posted up each week, and these answers will be given a value. If these answers are deposited in the "Safety Deposit Box" of the contest-ant will be given an added value in their Bank accounts. The amounts will be added and the units will be given to the winners. Three prizes will be given one for the grades 2 and 4—one for grades 5 and 6—and one for grades 7 and 8.

Any and girls over grade 3 will be eligible to register during the month of June.

HEAVY GUNFIRE HEARD

London, June 20 (CP-Reuters) —Heavy gunfire shook towns on the British side of the Straits of Dover last night, for 45 minutes big guns thundered out from the French coast between Calais and Boulogne, sending over one salvo after another.

The gunners kept up a fast rate of fire for a time and altogether four, six and once eight shells fell in the vicinity of Dover.

The bombardment ceased after about 30 shells had been sent over.

YANKEE DEATH REPORT SEEMS EXAGGERATED

McCarthy's Men Seeking Seventh Straight Win and Sweep of Series

SENATORS STOPPED

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Reports of the New York Yankees' death appears to have been greatly exaggerated! The world champions of today seek their seventh straight and a clean sweep of the series from the league leading St. Louis Browns.

Only half a step from the American League's last-place graveyard two weeks ago, the Yanks of Yawns have pulled out of their tailspin and captured eight of their last nine.

Wall "Monk" Dubiel hurled the McCarthy clan to within two and a half games of the top yesterday by a brilliant two-hit shutout, made possible by Nick Heusser's line single to centre scoring Red Meyberg. Thus they went on to tie last on the ninth and two strikes on the hitter when the veteran catcher pasted Sig Jakucki's "sunday" pitch to earn a 1-0 New York edge.

Shutout pitching was the order of the day, with Jim Bagby Jr. of Cleveland hanging a 6-0 whitewash on Philadelphia's Dutch Leonard mates, stopping Washington, 4-0, for his 11th victory, and Bill Zuber toeing the Pirates to a 1-0 nod over George Munger of the St. Louis Cardinals on a ninth inning single by Jimmy Wasdell.

Tex Hughson collected his 11th decision as the Boston Red Sox shaded Chicago, 3-2, but "Red" Barrett was the turn in a fancy four-inning relief chore to save the game.

The New York-Pittsburgh game in the Steel City ended in a tie with Bill Voiselle opposing Nick Strincevich called at the end of the fifth due to rain.

ROYALS NUDGE CLOSER TO TOP OF INT. LEAGUE

Morris Udelhoit and Elmer Durrett Vieing for Hitting Honors

LEAFS BEAT ORIOLES

By The Associated Press

Morris Aderholt and Elmer Durrett are vieing with each other for slugging honors as they combine their talents to nudge Montreal Royals into a contending spot for the top rung in the International League standings.

Each belted his ninth homer to aid the Royals in sweeping a double-header yesterday from Syracuse, 4-1 and 4-2, in a twilight-night attraction. Both circuit blows came in the first game to give Tom Sunkel his eighth victory.

Walter Chipple and Ed Stevens combined to give Johnny Gabbert his sixth victory in the nightcap. Chipple hit a double and triple, while Bob Steven also had a three-run inning smacth.

Rochester broke a 10-game losing streak by coming from behind to score twice in the ninth and defeat Toronto, 3-2. Red Ripol's single two out scored the winning run. Ripol also made two other hits.

Buffalo handed Ken Brondell his first defeat as Chaffer four wins as the Bisons defeated Jersey City Giants, 4-1.

Alex Mustakis rang up his 8th win, holding Baltimore Orioles to 8 scattered hits in the Leafs 5-1 decision. Jimmy Grundis led the Toronto Leafs with two for two, batting in two mates. .

Pacific Footoffice

Francis E. Buckley, who was last heard of when he quarter-backed the All-Navy team in Bermuda's Lily Bowl football game last January, sends word from the Central Pacific that Seabees at his station would like some football uniforms.

"The Seabee Athletic Association is in its infancy, but in competition with other service teams has made an excellent record", Buckley writes. "Last week we beat the team operated by the Army Air Force; the track team placed third in a seven-team meet at A.O. Meet, May 29th. Plans are under way to have a football team in competition this fall. The only drawback is a lack of uniforms. I'd appreciate any ideas you might give us in respect to schools that are discontinuing football" . . . Well, Princeton dropped out and from what I hear I'll bet that's the Tigers had very little besides uniforms.

Canadian Derby Will Have Six Starters in Wpg.

Winnipeg, June 30—(CP)—A stiff horse, Canadian derby is considered likely in a survey of the stock now in contention for the Week's Premier three-year-old stake to be run at Polo Park here Saturday. A fast-drying Oval gave promise that the 16th running of the $5,000 added classic will be run over the old Canadian Breds that like a slow track.

Bobby Watson, aboard, H. C. Hatch' Ascot II, winning the 1943 running of the King's Plate at Toronto, believes he will be up on the "best three-year-old in the Dominion" in the derby. If the track is heavy, Canadian, the other half of the Hatch entry, will be a real threat and the jockey who booted home five winners in one day at Hamilton, Ont., last Thursday.

Western Breds expected to oppose stablemate the Hatch duo include: Dr. L. H. Appley's Cum Laude, the Whitlaw Park pair, Pearl's Golden Mon, A. G. Tarn's Divulge and S. T. Knifong's Gallite.

Greater Crowds, More Money At Boxing Shows Says Jacobs

By The Canadian Press

Promoter Mike Jacobs gave outstatistics last night at New York's Madison Square Garden the 20th Century Boxing Club had made more money and attracted larger crowds for the first 11 shows at Madison Square Garden this year than ever had been recorded for a similar number of fistic programs in comparable periods in the past two seasons. For the 11 shows in 1944 aggregate attendance was 182,244 and receipts totalled $767,002; for 1943 the figures were 180,544 and $626,272 and for 1942, 150,340 and $604,163. Included in the 1944 shows were the last two title fights of heavy-weight champion Joe Louis. Jacobs's conclusion was that the war's crowds on the athletic material hadn't hurt the game.

Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., with a four-under-par 67 and Patty Berg, carding a women's par 74, were among the leaders to give their teams a boost at the close of play yesterday in the Chicago Victory National golf matches. Revolta's 19-

Toronto, June 30 — (CP) — The battle of words over Tweorth's and Whirlaway's meeting in the Dominion handicap at Winnipeg is still raging. The highly-favored Tweorth has more than the fans who laid $13,000 on her nose only to see her come home a dismal last.

An official inquiry was held in the first race and the stewards announced the classy mare was in season at the time of the race. But that did not satisfy others, who asked why the mare was allowed to race at all.

Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning says that Tweorth should never have been allowed to race, or at least the loyal public should have been warned in time for them to hold up their bets.

Herb suggests something should be written into the racing rules to make an owner responsible for sending an unsound horse to the post. That would be "evidence of dence."

All in all, it was quite an expensive lesson for the faithful.

Entries Received For Open Trebles

Entries for the annual Belleville Lawn Bowling Club Dominion Day men's open trebles are being received from all parts of Eastern Ontario, President Cliff Argue announced today. Already 16 Belleville teams have entered with only one outside competition coming from Kingston, Peterborough and intermediate points.

In competition are the Robertson Rink and Play Hockey. Only 14-end games will be played, with games entered from O.L.B.A. district No. 15. Games Chairman Howard Hanson announced that greens were in fine playing condition and a limit of 24 pairs would be established as the maximum number of team entries accepted.

Entries for the Corbin Cold Cup, men's rinks tournament, sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club, to be held on Civic holiday are also being accepted for one of the biggest events of lawn bowling in Canada.

Starting Tuesday next the club men's trebles will be played. As a holiday attraction, a softball game will be played Saturday afternoon at the Alemite Field.

Roger Bresnahan Claims Mathewson Greatest Hurler

Great Catcher Says. Matty Never Had an Equal in a Pinch

FANNED 677 IN YEAR

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, June 30 — (AP) — Roger Bresnahan, who laid aside his big league catching mitt some 36 years ago, still believes his old battery-mate, Christy Mathewson, was the greatest pitcher of them all.

Bresnahan gained fame as a great backstop for New York Giants and later managed St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

Now a brewing company representative, Bresnahan came back to the Polo Grounds this week for a brief appearance at the war bond show. As he donned his uniform of the 64-year-old Irishman said:

"No two ways about it, he was. He would have loved this. There was a great man.

"Matty was the greatest pitcher of all time. Walter Johnson, Young, Lefty Grove, Carl Hubbell—they were good, very good, but none could touch Mathewson. There was only one Matty.

"Matty never had an equal, particularly in a pinch. He was an absolute master. Matty was not a fire-ball pitcher, but he had a world of speed when he preferred to cut loose. Why, do you know he holds the season strike-out record in the National League?

"He fanned 677 in 1903 . . . his famous 'fade-away' no batter could hit. There never was another pitch like it, except Hubbell's screwball. His was no Matty."

The most remarkable pitching performance he ever witnessed?

"Matty again," Bresnahan replied. "The Giants were in the thick of a pennant fight with Pittsburgh. In one of the late innings we were tied 2-2 when a fluke hit, a couple of errors put three Pirates on and none out."

Tommy Leach, Fred Clarke and Kitty Brandfield, three great starters, were coming up. Matty whiffed Leach on three inside pitches, Clarke with three successive fade-aways, and Brandfield on three drop curves around the knees. I can still hear the crowd yelling. Yes, when you find a second Matty, I'll walk clear across the continent to see him pitch."

CASUAL COMMENT

By K.J.C.

Pat, a private who boasted of absolute fearlessness, was scheduled for night sentry duty. He received two officers planning to "scare the daylights" out of him. One was to dress up like Satan and accost him on his lonely vigil. Came night, and a fearful figure approached the sentry.

Pat (challenging): Who goes there?

Voice (rumbling, sepulchral): The Devil.

Pat: Yaas, Devil. You know where to go.

Around Our Town:

Jim Hunter and the SAOO "Marines" continued their classy pace to chalk up their eighth consecutive win in city softball circles beating the Point Anne "Commandos" 9-3 last night at Point. The Marines knocked Sid Chapiro off the Commando's hilltop when Stan Lee the man was rushed in to fill the breach. However, even Ludlow Lee couldn't stop the Marines' potent attack last night as the powerful leaders pounded out 12 safeties and often . . . Gene LaBonne hit the distance for four bases in the sixth . . . After the game President Joe Sealey called an executive meeting at which time the league players' schedule was decided upon . . . The top four clubs will be included in the play-offs for the Bank of Commerce Trophy with the first and fourth placed clubs meeting in one semi-final game and second and third also clash . . . The ultimate winners will then meet in the finals.

Holiday weekend sports attractions include a girls' game at the Armouries this evening while the Alemite team meets the Belleville Tweed . . . On Saturday the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will hold it's annual open men's doubles and on the same afternoon, a baseball game will be played at the Alemite Field.

A Sound Idea.

As annual sports' D-Day for the benefit of the Canadian Legion and by Bill Corum, sports columnist of the New York Journal-American, who credits the suggestion to Major Edmyfed Williams, chairman of the Illinois Racing Board. Corum proposes:

"That on June 6, 1945, and on every June 6 thereafter, every sport in the United States shall* contribute the net profits of that day to our wounded and bereaved servicemen of the Army and Navy.

"That would mean that every ball game, both major and minor, every race track, golf and football match, baseball and fistic track, bowling alleys, billiard parlors and pool halls—everything that comes under the heading of sport—would turn over its net profits for June 6 of every year to those who have made the greatest sacrifice in the battle for freedom and liberty."

Corum promises to keep campaigning for the plan until it becomes as actually on a national scale.

Did You Know.

Commander Gene Tunney owns a large farm in Connecticut where he plans to live the life of a country gentleman after the war is over . . . Jack Doyle, Chicago Club scout who has been every big league baseball, says when it comes to third baseman he'd take Lonny Weaver of the Chicago White Sox . . . One umpire Bill Stern's arch antagonists was Burleigh Grimes, a chronic umpire baiter and the same Grimes with the Toronto Leafs of the International League . . . Once when Grimes was managing the Brooklyn Dodgers he took exception to Klem's decision . . . Making a squawk while he had half way from the bench to the plate, he suddenly was waved out of the game by Klem, who "You can't do that, Bill," protested Burleigh. "Why, I haven't said a word to you." "No," replied Klem, "but you've been doing a helluva lot of thinking . . . Some of the right mob are still shaking their heads in wonderment about how Henry Armstrong ever managed to pass the U. S. Army physical . . . Only a year or so ago they were saying that the former fight champion was on the verge of going blind due to the numerous cuts that he received around his eyes during his years in the ring.

Remember When.

Sub-Lieut. Johnny Loaring of the Canadian Navy, former University of Western Ontario and Canadian Olympic Games track star, outdistanced Sergeant Bobby Riggs, noted British runner, in the first quarter of a relay race in London four years ago today. Loaring was running for the Navy while Riggs was running for the London athletic club.

And then Bobby Pearce, Australian-born Hamilton sculler, won an easy victory over Jack Beckbank of Britain in a Diamond Jubilee final 12 years ago tomorrow. Pearce went on to win the famed Henley prize in his first attempt. Later he turned professional, and today is in the Canadian Navy.

In the interests of baseball in Belleville the executive of the Belleville Junior Hockey Club recently donated the sum of $50.00 used for the purchases of baseball equipment for the two local baseball clubs. Mr. Milton Fowler Ward, it is gestures like these that will eventually lead to a much higher level in Belleville. Time waiting, they need money to sponsor junior and minor hockey in the city, but baseball enthusiasm exist among the teen aged must be encouraged all of the year around if recreational games are to be kept alive.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 418

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When Elva Tyrne is forced to bid, her heart is all a-flutter. And if her hand is weak, poor bid, her courage turns to butter. She'll make the first reply and then, although the bid still horses, you cannot drag her in again. No; with a team of horses.

An opening bid of two in a suit says it expects to make a game all by itself. With no sure trick, partner's first reply is two no-trump. It admits or denies nothing else.

That two no-trump response does not remove the burden from further bidding. The opening two-bid was forcing to game. Until game is reached, neither partner abouts pass.

A poor hand is no excuse. A hand with no trick is not an excuse. A hand that has absolutely nothing to show is not an excuse. Only death offers a reasonable alibi.

Suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of two spades when you have this hand:

♠J 7 3 2
♥8 4 3
♦6 5 4-2
♣J 8 6

Your first response is two no-trump. So far as partner knows, you may have a biddable suit or an assist. You have said only that you have no sure trick.

Suppose partner then bids three spades or three hearts or three diamonds or three clubs. Neither of these bids is a game. So, you must bid again if it kills you.

Your second round bid is three no-trump. Not because you have no-trump tricks you are anxious to show. You have no takeout suit or assist. You dare not pass. So, three no-trump is the only bid left.

Now suppose partner makes a bid of four clubs. It is not a game contract. You must bid again. Asked for a choice of suits, bid four spades: the first suit shown by partner.

If you value your name, keep it open to game.

Ing "Smiley" Burnette, Ila Hould, Republic's latest find, Judith Allen and Guy Usher. It is no wonder that Gene's latest picture has been eagerly awaited by his hosts of fans.

"Gang's All Here"
The stars are all here!
The gals are all here!
The songs are all here!
The laughs are all here!

Where? Why, in "The Gang's All Here," the brilliant new Technicolor musical triumph which 20th. Century-Fox brought to the screen of the Capitol Theatre yesterday as the added hit.

Noted for its sensational musical entertainments, 20th. Century-Fox has put everything in this new romance-song-comedy feats, and the result is a hit that future screen musicals will be measured by.

Alfred E. Green's production are Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, radio's man with the $64 question, Phil Baker, and the King of Swing, Benny Goodman, and his famous orchestra. Backing up this brilliant galaxy are many of the screen's most popular favorites, including Eugene Pallette, Charlotte Greenwood, Edward Everett Horton.

A color cartoon and chapter two of "Captain America" makes this program ideal for the whole family.

AT THE BELLE

"Four Jills in a Jeep"

Studded with stars, and crammed with an exciting score of new hit songs, "Four Jills in a Jeep" is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

The new 20th Century-Fox hit features Kay Francis, Carole Landis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair, with Jimmy Dorsey and his Orchestra, John Harvey, Phil Silvers, and introduces Dick Haymes, widely acclaimed singing star. Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda and George Jessel, who acts as master of ceremonies, appear as the film's guest stars.

Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson have written all new songs for the picture; "How Many Times Do I Have To Tell You?", "It's Time to Call Carrie," "Ohio," "Crazy Me," "How Blue the Night" and "Fifi" are the titles.

"Jane Eyre" Coming

Hailed as one of the year's outstanding screen achievements, "Jane Eyre," 20th Century-Fox's magnificent filmplay of the celebrated Bronte novel, is slated to open this weekend at the Belle Theatre.

Loved by millions as the most stirring romance in literature, the picturization of Charlotte Bronte's dramatic story of an immortal love pitted against terror co-stars Orson Welles and Joan Fontaine, bringing the two great performers together on the screen for the first time. Academy Award-winner Fontaine plays the part of Jane Eyre, a part that has been described as the role every woman would die a thousandth death to play. Welles is cast in the role of Edward Rochester, the brooding and mysterious master of Thornfield Hall whose love for Jane no powers of darkness could destroy.

Also featured in the film which was directed by Robert Stevenson are Margaret O'Brien, Peggy Ann Garner and John Sutton.

First Invasion Pictures

The first official pictures of the actual invasion will be shown as a special extra attraction along with a funny Terrytoon colorfun and "Youth in Crisis," a new edition of the March of Time, on Saturday matinee the 6th Chapter of "The Phantom" the year's most thrilling serial will be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Cobra Woman"

A mythical South Seas paradise provides an exotic background for Universal's "Cobra Woman" latest technicolor production to star the popular trio Maria Montez, Jon Hall and Sabu. The exciting new screen adventure comes Saturday to the McCarthy Theatre. Featured in a distinguished supporting cast are Edgar Barrier, Lois Collier and Mary Nash. Moroni Olsen, Samuel S. Hinds and Lon Chaney have leading roles.

Action of the picturesque drama centers around the romantic affairs of a giagorous princess and her twin sister. Miss Montez is seen in both portrayals. The actress who scored outstanding successes in "Arabian Nights" and "White Savage" is said to be even more colorfully attractive in "Cobra Woman." Sequence in which her dancing highlights primitive rituals are described as vividly spectacular.

Hall is seen as a valorous islander who helps to stage a rebellion against a cruel monarch and her unscrupulous Minister of Affairs. Lurid sacrificial rites and intrigue among the cult followers are dramatic preludes to the conspiracy in which the twin sister of the princess is restored to the throne.

Lavish settings and the brilliant costumes of the multitudes of dancing girls and atmosphere players are claimed to enhance the effectiveness of the picture.

"Slightly Terrific"

As gay and bright as Springtime and just as welcome is Funny man Leon Errol, Anne Rooney, Eddie Quillan and Betty Kean in "Slightly Terrific" Universal's new comedy musical as the second feature attraction at the McCarthy theatre.

Melodic too, is the wholly diverting comedy production, with no less than half a dozen sprightly new tunes by Milton Rosen and Everett Carter included.

The inimitable Errol, is a dual portrayal, together with Quillan, the Misses Kean and Rooney, Ray Malcolm and Richard Lane, garners a succession laugh-inducing situations which maintain the film's pace at a lively clip.

The dancing wizardry of young Ray Malone and the wholesome clowning of Betty Kean are exceptional.

EARL McCREADY TO MEET KATAN

Featuring three outstanding bouts throughout Promoter Frank Tunney, of the Canadian Sport Enterprises, announced his latest week's wrestling card for the Hume Arena today that will feature the clashes for the No. 1 challenger for the British Empire championship, Earl McCready and John Katan in the main bout. For some time past both McCready and Katan have been endeavouring to get a match with Empire Champion Billie Watson without much avail. Next Wednesday night will settle the right to the No. 1 claimant to the crown.

Supporting this great bout sees Vern Baxter, conqueror of Al Dunlop, meet "Irish Jerry" Monahan in the semi-final, while the curtain-raiser matches the popular Chet Vallis of Florida versus Don Kotch of Minneapolis. Incidentally Kotch is managed by none other than Gentleman Jack Washburn.

German Troops Swarm Through Tragic Baltic Country

MINISTERS MAY QUIT

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, June 29.—(AP)—Finland was faced with the threatened collapse of virtually all semblance of democratic government today as Nazi troops swarmed through that tragic Baltic country, now plunged into full military collaboration with Germany.

As a parliament meeting today the five cabinet ministers of the Socialist Social Democratic Party were scheduled to withdraw formally from the government of President Risto Ryti, Premier Edwin Linkomies, which opened the doors of Stockholm to Nazi forces.

Such action would strip the Finnish government of a great segment of popular support, Associated Press Staff Writer Robert Sturdevant, who is in Stockholm after five days in Helsinki, said he had the impression the resignations might be withheld, however, lest they cause confusion in the morale of Finnish troops at the front.

Social Democratic cabinet ministers about to leave the government are Finance Minister Valso Tanner, minister of World Affairs K. Aaltonen, minister of Communications Valso Salovaara, minister of Trade T. Takkl and John Astrup, minister of Food.

The progressive party and the Swedish Peoples' Party also expressed no confidence in the government in party caucuses. One progressive member may withdraw from the cabinet.

Only Democracy In Name.

At the moment Finland is a democracy in little more than name only since Hyti, Helsinki and Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay accepted Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's proposals for full military collaboration with the Germans without consulting parliament. Some advice said the decision would have met a resounding defeat if it had been submitted to parliament.

Despite the Nazi show of strength in the Finnish capital, Sturdevant said there was a feeling in Helsinki that the Germans were sending only token aid and nothing like the nine divisions Von Ribbentrop was reported to have promised.

London broadcast recorded by CBS said a German pocket battleship and two cruisers "are said to have arrived off Helsinki and there are German infantry and tanks in the city, where only a few Finnish troops remain."

Vadso, of Corp.

Dragging prevented the organization of a new Finnish government which could have asked Russia for peace, said an eye-witness arrival from Helsinki. He said that a move in this direction was under way early last May. Monday but the formation of such a government was held up while the number of Germans in Helsinki grew hourly.

He quoted a leading member of parliament as saying, "we are the victims of a political coup d'etat.

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said it was rumored that Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German divisions in Finland, had been killed in an airplane crash; the correspondent said there had been no confirmation in Berlin.

An NBC broadcast from Stockholm quoted an unconfirmed dispatch from Germany as saying Gen. Alfred Jodl as well as Gen. Dietl was killed in a plane crash, west Berlin reported that Gen. Eduard Dietl, commander of German divisions in Finland, had been killed in an airplane crash; the correspondent said there had been no confirmation in Berlin.

Henriot's Killing Starts Terror Among Vichyites

Madrid, June 29.—(AP)— The assassination at Paris of Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Propaganda, has inspired a new wave of terror in the Vichy portfolio, officials and stirred new terror among those unable to leave, border reports said today.

Vichy reported all Spanish refugees from France said today.

The Vichy radio acknowledged that "Germany has lost a valuable comrade in Henriot," who ranked second only to Joseph Darnand, Reuters, Vichyite Minister," in Nazi favor. The Vichy radio acknowledged today no traces had been found as to the identity of the assassins.

Border reports said that Darnand, minister of the Interior offices had been swamped since Henriot's assassination by telegrams from provincial officials demanding transfers, offering their resignations or simply reporting the disappearance of employers.

The Pyrenees leader at Mont-de-Marsan, the capital of the Landes Department, was reported to have been shot by the Germans when he was captured while trying to desert across the Pyrenees.

The German Transocean Agency said today that all ministers and secretaries of state of the French government were in session with Laval at the Hotel Matignon in Paris, adding:

"Political circles attach particular significance to this session because all members of the government are taking part. Because of the division of Spain between Vichy and Paris departments this is an infrequent occurrence."

Postponement of New Labor Regulations Granted War Essential Industries in Ont.

Toronto, June 30 (CP)—Ontario's rule on the case."

new eight-hour-day, holidays-with-pay legislation becomes effective July 1 and Eric Billington, chairman of the Provincial Industry and Labor Board, explained that postponement of the regulations has been granted war and essential industry.

Mr. Billington said the postponement was "for the duration of the present crisis" and the regulations might be made applicable to these industries before the end of the war if the manpower situation and production needs made it possible.

Postponement is provided for such industries as agriculture, horticulture, fishing, food production, dairying industry, construction and upkeep of roads, transportation, textiles and other undertakings which can be considered essential "in the full maintenance of the war effort."

"Industries in actual war production need not observe the regulations now and need not make any application to the board for a postponement order," said Mr. Billington. "But firms which are uncertain of their status should make application to the board which will

Wing Commander Johnny Johnson Allied Air Ace

London, June 30 — (CP)—Wing Cmdr. J. E. (Johnny) Johnson, an Englishman from Nottingham with 31 enemy planes to his credit in air combat, shared today with Group Capt. A. G. (Sailor) Malan of South Africa the status of top-ranking Allied air ace of this war.

Johnson, who commands a Canadian fighter wing operating from a base in Normandy, downed two German ME109s yesterday in six duels over the bridgehead front to bring his score up to that of Malan. The latter now is on ground duty.

Top-ranking Canadian airman is Pl. Lt. George (Buzz) Beurling of the R.C.A.F., now an instructor in Canada. Beurling has downed 31 planes.

One of the highest-scoring Canadians flying from the R. C. A. F. Normandy base, which was established shortly after D-Day is Sqdn. Ldr. Wally McLeod of Regina whose total stands at 17.

Johnson's Canadian wing achieved a mark of five enemy planes downed within 24 hours last week.

Johnson, a quiet-looking, pipe-smoking man, is regarded by many airmen who have flown with him as one of the most brilliant fliers now on operations.

Last year he was in command of a Canadian fighter wing of the R.C.A.F., and during this tour of duty he rated his personal total of aircraft downed to 26. Later he was transferred to planning operations. After the Allied invasion of France was launched, it was disclosed he was back in the air, again leading Canadian airmen with whom he had shared the bulk of his flying during the war.

ALL JAPS ELIMINATED Tw-TOKI

Kandy, Ceylon, June 29 — (CP) — Allied troops have now eliminated all Japanese forces west of the Kohima-Imphal road in Northern India and on the south side of the road are dealing with a few remaining stragglers north of Kanyal. Allied headquarters announced today.

In northern Burma, meanwhile, the bulletin said, Chinese forces advanced in the south of Lotiaw, which a communique yesterday declared had fallen to one of two columns fanning out from captured Mogaung.

Increasing demand for additional club facilities for merchant seamen visiting St. John, N.B., will be met by the new Navy League Allied Merchant Seamen's Club as soon as alterations to the recently-acquired property pictured here are completed. Work is now under way with a view to completion before the end of the year. This club will have dormitories for 50 seamen and will accommodate several hundred during the day.

PRINCE D'ANNUNZIO NOT ARRESTED

Rome, June 29 — (AP) — The Allied high command announced today that Prince Gabriele D'Annunzio has not been arrested as a Fascist, as reported previously by the commission on Armistice.

The commission said that the name of D'Annunzio should have been listed as Gabriele Grevina Crufillas, and added that five generals listed as arrested, including former Inspector General of Police Colelli, had not been taken into custody.

The statement said that "Owing to a misunderstanding which is much regretted" the names were included in error in a list given out by a press conference at which it was announced that 3,195 Fascists had been dismissed from office and 196 arrested.

Scots Prospered in Poland Three Centuries Ago

(From the Aberdeen Weekly Journal)

With the Russians back in Poland and their westward offensive moving rapidly, we may expect shortly to have in the news the names of many places that once were as familiar to thousands of Scots as their home towns.

There was a time when Scots swarmed—and occasionally we get the impression that they were not unlike locusts — in Poland. For a generation before and after the union of the crowns and fondness of Scotsmen, particularly traders and soldiers of fortune, for Poland was notorious.

The English then had a proverbial expression, "a Scotch peddlar's pack in Poland." The usual contents of that pack were termed "Scottish wares," and in one Polish dialect today the word "Szot" still means a trader.

A Danzig suburb—and it was in Danzig they swarmed most—is still called Alt Schottland, after a colony of Scottish weavers.

Estimates of the numbers of the Scottish colony in Poland vary from 15,000 to 40,000. The usual figure is 30,000. All contemporaries are agreed that the number was very large. Then as now, the Scot abroad was tremendously clannish. When a man found a paying proposition, word went home, and all his family and some of his friends would go out.

Poor Scots newly arrived were taken in by their compatriots, kept for months, fed, equipped with a pack and let loose on the natives. Patrick Gordon, of Auchleuchries was entertained for a whole winter by another Gordon, no relation, at Culm. He had an almost similar experience at Posen later. He had no money to repay the hospitality.

The practice of established Scots in Poland harboring Scots newly arrived became almost a scandal, and steps were taken by the authorities to put a stop to it. Scots were forbidden to extend hospitality to Scots.

Aberdeenshire names are constantly recurring in Poland. We read of Gordons, Forbeses, Keiths, Leslies, Burnetts, Barclays, Abercrombies, Farquhars, Cullens — in early days the Cullens were Aberdeen's great merchants. These men penetrated to and resided in Danzig, Warsaw, Cracow, in Lublin, Leszno, Jaroslav, Vilno, Krosno, Zamosc, Posen, and many other towns.

Many of them settled there, married, became naturalized, and their descendants—if they escaped the Germans—are still there, with names somewhat distorted from the original Scots. But as a rule Scot married Scot, and as few women went out of Poland, there was a press of suitors for the widow whenever a Scotsman died.

There were Scots traders in Poland before Flodden was fought. A century after they were a flourishing company. The first wandering Scot, William Lithgow, visited Poland at that time and enjoyed many deep drams and pious phrases with his exiled countrymen.

They found another outlet besides trade in the country. Poland was Roman Catholic, and when Scotland changed over to the Reformed faith those who had the courage to stick to their old beliefs had a thin time of it. Some of them were unable to endure the new atmosphere—so they sought new environment.

Poland being so closely connected by other ties with Scotland, those Scot Papists made their way thither, and some of them rose very high. But of them all none made such a name for himself as Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries, although he had no religion in him at all.

Gordon was the son of a tenant farmer who left his country—and judging by some of his characteristics and exploits, he left it for its good—in 1651 at the age of 16. He made for Danzig on board a merchant ship.

After many adventures and fluctuating fortunes, he became an officer in the Swedish Army then endeavouring to subjugate Poland. In this situation in 1658 he planned the murder of an Englishman named Bradshaw, whom he believed to have been the president of the court that condemned "our sovereign King Charles 1, of blessed memory," to death.

It was not the same Bradshaw, and fortunately for him, but to the chagrin of Gordon, who probably would not have minded though a life had been forfeited by the mistake, the plan miscarried. Gordon tells the whole story with unblushing candour.

During the invasion of Poland Gordon put into practice a system which he could hardly have learned in Buchan, although it was a commonplace amongst the Highlanders. Some Polish peasants with their cattle were within his district, and he engaged to keep both people and cattle safe in return for a recurrent payment.

This typical piece of Highland blackmail, however, apparently did not bring in enough money, so Gordon elaborated it. Many of the men he commanded were Germans who required no incentive to crime.

He arranged with some of these mercenaries to come from a distance and drive away all the cattle belonging to certain proprietors near him. The owners naturally asked him to rescue their property, which he did—at a fixed charge.

Casualties and Prisoners Share the Ride Back

The rains came to Italy with October, filling the river beds, sweeping away pontoons and turning everything into a sea of sticky mud which bogged vehicles and clung tenaciously to the soles of the boots, says an officer in the Mediterranean theatre, writing in The New Statesman of London, England. We were wearing tropical kit, and the sudden cold and wet following so soon after the Sirocco heat of Sousse and the heat-cum-volcanic-dust of central Sicily, were an unpleasant surprise. We got wet. We were wet for days without hope of being dry, just waiting our turn to do battle further up the road.

Then it happened. The pain in my chest became general and my head started to race. For me the autumn campaign was over. The main dressing station was twenty miles south, and when I arrived a consignment of wounded, British and Canadian, were being brought in. I took my place in the entrance hall (it was a converted school) and waited. The walking wounded shuffled past, faces set, eyes unseeing and sleepless. Then the stretcher cases. We watched in silence. Nobody spoke.

Ten hours later we were southbound, through the muddy plain which, save for the odd palm and the absence of Dykes, is so reminiscent of Lincolnshire.

Casualty Station Crowded

The casualty clearing station was in the town hall, a spacious building of gay sandstone, in neo-classical style. Another wait. "You'll be lucky if you get beds," they told us. "We're full to three times capacity already." I got a stretcher and three blankets. There were ten occupants in the room. Nobody spoke as I made my bed. They just lay there looking toward me.

The place filled up. There was one nursing sister in our corridor. She was small, dark, good looking and she worked like ten, from early morning to late at night. There was never a suspicion of fatigue, nor did she once lose a natural serenity which accompanied her wherever she went. I was privileged to be able to help. Lying cases were helped by those who could walk. We fed them, emptied bedpans, carried men with leg wounds to the lavatory.

Still they came, and the overflow filled the corridor. There was no unutilized space: British, Canadian, German, all together. The German beside me had a stomach wound, but his face was expressionless. A Belgian officer came in and sat down on a stretcher, his head in his hands. "I must get back," he kept repeating, "they must let me go." He had a piece of shrapnel in his chest and the sister didn't let him go. Presently he fell into a deep sleep, a blanket drawn up over his head. His hair was quite gray, and he looked old for the job.

Contrast with Natty Italians

The following day we were evacuated again, this time by train. The train was late. In various postures of discomfort we waited outside the station, a strange contrast in our ragged uniforms to the faultlessly dressed Italian officers who seemed to abound. A mixed crowd gathered to look at us. They stood round in a semicircle, fascinated by the untidy spectacle and held their ground despite bawdy advice to go away.

After the train, which was clean but full of flies, we went aboard ship. It too, was crowded. The forward saloon was partitioned: on the right beds, on the left seats. Opposite me was a Canadian lieutenant and a Jewish major with a M.C. ribbon. The latter's nerves were in a bad state. Then the Germans arrived. Three were the finest specimens of male physique I have ever seen, the fourth was slightly built and in great pain. He had a piece of metal near the spine but had refused a stretcher.

The slightly built one was senior. He sat next to the major. The others sat further along. They all looked at their boots and we looked at them. It was rather embarrassing. We were angry at the misdirected hospitality of the R.A.M.C. Would we have been in the saloon of a German boat? Was the hold full?

Cologne Damage is Told

The German said in English that he was sorry, and that broke the ice. Conversation followed more or less naturally. What did he think about the war? No answer to that one. Where was his home? Cologne (a marked increase of interest among the Allies.) Was Cologne badly hit? Yes, he had been home a fortnight before and it was a ruin (he didn't appear very concerned about this.) Then a revealing remark. "I hope," he said, "that the next war will be fought between professional armies."

There was no mistaking his sincerity. He was young. I guessed about twenty-eight. His next-door neighbor had a head shaped like a tilted egg and cruel eyes. A professional killer, he had been at it since 1936. Spain, France, Crete, Africa, Russia. No, he didn't like the Russians. He hadn't been happy in Russia.

By night we slept on deck under a myriad of stars. I tried to keep awake to watch Orion rise out of the sea, but the warm eddying winds and the rhythm of the engines were too strong. Even out here life had its moments.

Germans Become Bolder

The trip was uneventful, almost boring. Our German companions continued to provide the main source of interest. At first they had been cautious, not stirring even from their seats unless bidden. They became bolder. The ribbon of the Iron Cross, second class, appeared, and the owner was most gratified at the interest shown. Instead of bringing up the rear in the meal queue, they were more prominently placed, even returning for a second helping.

Conversation was hindered by the language difficulty and turned mostly on the merits of various weapons. I missed the highlight, which was when the Canadian asked the young German (who was a battalion commander) where he thought they would form their winter defence line in Russia. He considered it carefully and replied: the Dnieper. "Do you not think you've left it a bit late?" said the Canadian (the Russians had crossed it some time before). He didn't know that, and according to reliable report took the news very badly indeed.

Germans Must Give Up Their Last Rags

On the first day of war, textile goods of every kind, including clothing, were rationed in Germany. Since then, for four and a half years, no one has been able to buy enough to replace what wore out. Ten months ago, in August, 1943, all ration points for textile goods were cancelled, and their sale, except to victims of air raids, was stopped for the duration, Argus reports in The Nation.

While people's closets were being thinned out by the impossibility of replacing worn articles, the process was hastened by insistent new demands. In the winter of 1941 a murderous cold wave caught the army in Russia unprepared, and Dr. Goebbels, in desperation, cried out for help from private individuals. Every household was put under strong pressure to contribute all the warm bedding, blankets, overcoats, and suits that it could possibly spare. A year later a similar collection, scarcely less urgent, was organized by Dr. Ley for the benefit of the arms workers. After that, private stocks were considered exhausted. Even the traditional annual appeal for the "Winter Aid" was omitted in 1943.

Must Hunt in Bare Cupboards

But this May the situation was such that another attempt was made to gather a few leavings from a field already raked clean. The appeal was signed this time by an unknown Franz Heck who called himself "commissioner for the collection and utilization of salvage and Reich delegate of the Nazi party." After boasting of the government's achievements in providing clothing—"no soldier at the front and no arms worker had to go in rags"—the notice called on people to offer up their last possession.

The campaign is proceeding under the slogan "The Nation Needs Textiles." Money prizes are offered for good ideas. The radio instructs collectors on how to get results:

"Suppose Frau Mayer visits Frau Lehman to ask her to give something for the textile collection. Frau Lehman may refuse, not without some superficial justification, on the ground that she has nothing left to give. Generally it will be enough for Frau Mayer to ask Frau Lehman to look and see. Some discarded garment is sure to be found. Old socks and ties may be discovered in forgotten suitcases. Hunting for them will be fun."

Army Boys are Urged to Marry

The powerful Schwarze Korps, organ of the powerful Himmler, on April 20 sharply rebuked fathers who forbid their minor sons in uniform to marry because they are too young. On the contrary, said the S.S. paper, German boys should marry some time before they go to the front (as a rule they go when they are 18.) After the last war 1,500,000 girls remained unmarried and had no children. If they had had a chance to bear two children apiece, 3,000,000 German babies would have been brought into the world, half of whom would have been males. As a result, at the outbreak of the Second World War Germany would have had 1,500,000 more soldiers, 150 divisions. With these it would long ago have brought the war to a victorious close.

This time, the Schwarze Korps declared, there must be no such waste of possible resources. Young men today must discharge their duty before they go to the front, and girls must be made productive.

At this point the paper made an arresting statement: "Then, even if the present war is lost, tomorrow's war can be won by the children of today's soldiers." A great deal of nonsense has been published in this country about Germany's secret preparations for a third world war. The sentence quoted is, so far as this writer knows, the first authoritative utterance on the subject.

Defeat Admitted in Secret

A Swiss paper, the Arbeiter Zeitung of Schaffhausen, on May 6, printed a few anecdotes which, in the opinion of the contributor, revealed how people act and feel in the Reich today.

A German living in Switzerland returned to Munich, his former home and met some old friends in a restaurant. He asked them what they thought of Germany's chances of winning the war. They answered with one voice, "We shall win." Walking home some hours later with one of the company, a former schoolmate, the man asked the same question again. Now the answer was: "What do you mean? We lost the war long ago. Germany is doomed. Not one stone is being left on another in our cities. How can we dream of winning?"

A well-dressed woman stood next to an old workman during an air raid. After a while she said grimly, "You see, the British have no more planes. These are the last ones they have. We alone have great numbers of airplanes left." The workman, after a second's surprise, understood her and joined in the tune.

A foreign worker complained to a German colleague about the constant air attacks, which prevented him from sleeping. "Nobody can stand this long," he said. The German answered, "Man, be hard! Become harder! Eat concrete; then you'll become hard. Germany needs hard men, and concrete is wonderful to make things hard."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma sat down at her desk, saying to pop, My, how I dispize this first of the monthly ordeal of ballencing my checkbook to make it agree with the statement from the bank. Some people seem to be just as much at ease with a mass of unruly figures as they are with the fingers of their 2 hands, but I was never cut out to be a public accountant, or even a private accountant, she said.

Why dont you just relax and take the bank's word for it? pop said. They seem to be a nice lot of people over there, he said, and ma said, It's a matter of conscience with me. My own figres are practically invariably several dollers in the red against myself according to the bank but I dont seem able to rest till I've checked and double checked and found out just where my figures went wrong, because after all why should I sit meekly back and submerge my personality at the beck and call of an overbearing bank? Oh my goodness, she said.

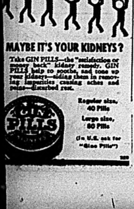
Something wrong? pop said, and ma said, Quite the contrary, I just happened to glance at the bank's statement before beginning operations and low and behold it shows $13.13 more to my credit than my own figures. Well, the worm turns at last, and I must say it's about time. An odd figure like 13 simply must be correct, wouldn't you think so, William? she said.

Start checking and double checking and you'll know for sure, pop said, and ma said, Now William it would be perfectly presumptuous on my part to brazenly set myself against that big institution with its hundreds of trained mathematicians and the last word in adding and subtracting machines. Why shold I fight against such overwhelming odds just to destroy a pleasant glow that only comes once in a blue moon? she said.

And she quick got away from her desk and started to do the bridge problem with a lucky expression.

Ki-Y Softball

The Sharks proved too good for the Mountaineers in a Juvenile Ki-Y Softball League game played at Queen Mary School grounds, the Sharks winning by an 11 to 9 score. At that the Sharks had to score nine runs in the first two frames to gain sufficient lead to beat the "Mountain Boys" under the wire.



The line-ups Mountaineers — Woods, Locke, Strachan, Reeves, Day, Semark, Shebbings, Bailey and Milligan. Sharks—Watson, J. Rollins, Spafford, Robinson, Holway, Garrow, Wonnacott, Cameron and Massey. Umpire—J. Stewart.

DEBT TO BE PAID OFF

Guatemala City, Guatemala, June 29 — (AP) — This country's entire foreign debt, totalling $8,050,000 will be paid off immediately, it was announced last night. Most of the debt — $6,150,000 — is owed to British bondholders.

CHAPTER 5

It was going to be an interesting trip, the Glamour Girl thought, as she unbuttoned her jacket. Across the aisle from her, Gertrude, the husband-eater, Casanova, the fallen Lothario. And her fellow-share-expenses-themselves, as they came to her mind, she became aware of their voices.

Desdemona Love and the retired lion-tamer seemed to have much in common. All afternoon they had exchanged reminiscences—the actress about the stage, Daniel Smock about his adventures training wild beasts during a long circus career. Like most professionals, neither had a kind word to say for the celebrities of their calling. To Desdemona, the stage had practically ceased to exist since the advent of the talkies; all the beautiful women and brave men, artistically speaking, were dead. The lion-tamer, on his part, had only scorn for the newcomers to the wild animal world; an old-timer, he loved the big "cats" for their own sake, to hear him tell it.

"Speaking of lions", Smock was saying. "I used to hunt them in Africa myself, before I joined up with the circus. I remember once I was on safari on the Serengetti Plains—or was it Western Tanganyika?—when I saw a man-eater, with my own eyes, mind you—slink off the head of a little black boy, in a Nandi Village—"

Desdemona gave a little shriek.

"The horrible beast! How could you be fond of such ferocious animals, Mr. Smock?" She shuddered delicately. "But I don't think you're awful brave, but—"

"That lion was no worse than your tropical fish", the lion-tamer pointed out, slightly nettled.

"He's her own husband!"

"That's different", said Miss Love. Speaking of animals and their psychology, I once played with Maude Adams on tour—remember, barnyard drama, Chantecler—only a child's part, of course!" she simpered. "I remember, at rehearsals—I played the part of a duckling—"

"A lovely duckling, I'm sure", said Mr. Smock gallantly.

"Oh, Mr. Smock!" said Miss Love. "You laugh men are such flatterers!"

Just then the bus slowed down perceptibly. Ginger, who had been dozing, straightened, and looked up.

A man was standing beside the driver's seat ahead, jerking his thumb forward in the approved hitch-hiker fashion. It was late in the afternoon, but light enough for her to see, with some surprise, that he was dressed in a complete yachting costume—peaked white cap, blue coat, and white flannels. In one hand he carried a bag. He must have aroused Tony's curiosity as much as hers, for he came to a stop, and opened the door.

"Want a lift, fella?" Tony asked. "Ahoy, the Admiral's barge!" said the marooned mariner. He swayed as he got aboard, but Ginger saw instantly that it was not from an unfamiliarity with land-legs but for purely alcoholic reasons. Almost the first thing he did, as he made his way into front seat across the aisle from Ginger, was to proffer his jug. "Have a libation?"

"No thanks", said Ginger, and Tony shook his head. The latter smiles in the rear sniffed disapprovingly. Mr. Briggs looked wistful.

"How far are you going?" asked Tony.

"Until I can catch up with my yacht", said the gentleman hitch-hiker, smiling blandly, as he took a swig from his jug, stowed it away under his seat, and carefully wiped his lips.

"Your yacht!" exclaimed Ginger, amazed.

"I'm Stanley Briggs, of New York", said yachtsman Briggs, held out his hand, and as no one took it, shook hands, with himself. "My boat's the little Casino. I was putting down to Miami in it, and ordered my captain to get up steam and sail at dawn this morning. I over slept, and they sailed without me". He grinned owlishly. "Stanley Briggs's word is law aboard the little Casino. He pulled himself up, apologetically. "Now I've got to catch up with it before it reaches Biscayne Bay, that's all".

"And you're hitchhiking all the way down to Florida?" Ginger was incredulous.

"Sure. Can't tell when the crew will run out of liquor and put into port for supplies", said Mr. Briggs. "I lost all my money in a poker game last night, so I'm hitchhiking. It's a nice way to see the country, anyway".

"A likely story, sniffed Miss Love, who had been listening. "The man's plastered—"

"Ah, pardon me, Madame", said Mr. Briggs, and rose unsteadily as he sought his jug. "May I offer you a libation?"

"Certainly not!" said Desdemona, icily.

Mr. Smock, who had brightened, sighed.

The bus lurched then, and Mr. Briggs fell back into his seat.

"Looks like a stormy evening, doesn't it?" he murmured, and closed his eyes.

Ginger and Tony looked at each other and laughed. Then Ginger turned to her.

"Come on and sit up here with me, like lonesomes".

She hesitated, then joined him again.

"Here I am then, but I refuse to fight with you any more".

"Flag of truce". He grinned and jerked his head toward the nautical drunk. "If that chap's really going as far as Florida, maybe he'll buy us, and cut down all our expenses".

"You're always wanting to share something, aren't you?" she murmured.

"Why not?" he wanted to know. "What's the fun of anything—a drink—a dollar — a sunset—unless you can share it with someone?"

She made no answer to that, digesting it, and thought that his smile, like his ears, weren't half bad.

Behind them, Desdemona Love began again.

"I shall never forget my season with Ishkabibble Adams. Ah, Mr. Smock —there was an elfish, diphanous, elusive creature! There was a true theatrical genius".

"That reminds me", put in the lion-tamer. "I had a cub lioness once when I was with Barnum and Bailey — chocolate-colored yearling with yellow eyes and magnificent—"

The two were off.

Casanova, the cat, sat on his mat, he's big eyes and gazed unblinkingly across the aisle at Gertrude, who circled her head with a magic object in her bowl with puzzled, suspicious eyes and occasionally thrashing silver plates.

The green double-decker officially still headed for "Washington Square" sped southward through Pennsylvania and Delaware. They crossed into Maryland, toward evening, and stopped for a roadside inn's hasty dinner, and a general freshening, leaving the man in the total hitchhiker still asleep in the bus. Over dinner, they discussed him, and Mr. Evergreen was agreed that Mr. Evergreen drive the next lap, starting then, who needed a rest. They hoped to spend the night on the Virginia side of the Potomac, at some tourist camp. It was a gay meal, on the whole, and Ginger's spirits rose. With the coming of dusk a new feeling of intimacy, of adventure had taken hold of her. New York and Ronny Rockaby seemed very far away,and these queer people suddenly like old friends she had known for years.

When they boarded the bus again, and Mr. Evergreen took the wheel, he discovered that he had two drinkers aboard, and They obligingly lent him his own, just in case they encountered a traffic officer. None of them could afford to pay fines now.

Mr. Briggs awakened, after they were on their way again. As he refreshed himself from his jug, he heard Mr. Smock, declaiming to an enraptured audience.

"Clyde Beatty?"—Bah—a showman, mere showman", declared the retired lion-tamer. "Handling the big cats—bah—psychology—that's all. You've got to show a lion that you're his master. Why, how do you think Frank Buck gets away with—"

Mr. Briggs intervened, brightening.

"Ah, my friend—you're a big game hunter?"

"I'm a lion-tamer by profession", said Mr. Smock modestly, "But I've hunted them in my time. In fact, he added, for Desdemona's benefit, "I own one of the greatest of African decorations for a sportsman—the honor of wearing a lion mane as my headdress.

Would you give me your picture in it, sometime, Mr. Smock?" Miss Love asked, prettily. "With your autograph?"

"I would give me yours," bargained Mr. Smock, tenderly. "In exchange for my picture".

Mr. Briggs interrupted, as Desdemona giggled.

"I used to hunt big game in Africa myself, before my doctor told me to go ashore." he told them. "I remember, once when I was huntin'—"

"Oh, them!" said the lion-tamer, disparagingly.

"I was walking through a clearing, carrying my gun", said Mr. Briggs, covering a slight hiccup delicately, "when suddenly I saw a tiger spring out at me from a tree. I took quick aim and fired." A pause. "What happened?" demanded Mrs. Evergreen?"

"I missed him," said Mr. Briggs, sadly.

"Why—I happened to you then? demanded Desdemona.

"Nothing," said the hitchhiker. "He missed me, too. We both missed each other." He sighed. "I was mortified. I felt like—mortified. So, next clearing I came to, I took my rifle, and started to practice up on my shooting. Suddenly I heard a noise in the adjoining clearing. I crashed into the bushes—and what do you think I saw?"

"What?"

That same tiger. And what do you think he was doing?"

"What?" asked Mr. Smock, suspiciously.

He was practicing up on his autograph!" said the yachtsman. "He was mortified, himself".

Mr. Smock snorted. Miss Love sniffed, and Ginger and Tony coughed to choke their laughter.

Mr. Briggs, yawning complacently, pulled his jug up again, drank deep, and went gently to sleep.

It was after midnight when the share-expenses, together with the slumbering hitchhiker, Desdemona and Casanova, crossed the Potomac into Virginia.

The first day's lap was done.

Mr. Briggs was the first to awaken, early the next morning, and found himself alone. The green bus was parked off the road for a tiny tourist cabin camp, and not a soul was in sight. The master of the little Casino was not yet entirely sober; in fact, he was in the early throes of a severe hangover, and whenever he experienced this phase Mr. Brigg's mind was even more befogged than when he was pleasantly drunk. Such a situation called for another drink", he knew, not to become dangerously sober; from force of habit, Mr. Briggs looked in the glove locker, and found a hearty gin, focusing with difficulty, for a fortable goldfish bowl.

After much soul-searching and discussion Miss Love had decided to leave her precious Gertrude and her bowl in the bus, instead of taking them into the cabin she was sharing with Ginger, because of the potential dangers of a possible change of quarters. Surprising was a tiny pinch of Epsom Salts into the water, she had left Gertrude quite with much misgiving. If she could only have guessed at the horrible experience that was to await her pet, she would never have given a wink that night. But she could not know.

Gertrude, swimming from a nightmare in which she had suffered a torn fin in a fight over a dandelion with a black Cam-bush from the West Indies, found herself in a strange, new world. Instead of the oddly-shaped foreign castle, with its heavy, fine-veined air bubbles of horror—for, Mr Briggs had tilted the edge of her bowl—and was drinking deeply of Gertrude's Epsom Salt-laden water—Gertrude suddenly observed a strange, shaggy, shadowed creature, with his head in the sky, and a tail like a plume. She was instantly in wild alarm, and began to swim.

Mr. Briggs suddenly staggered, lowering the bowl, was ejecting a stream of water like a whale blowing. Pale and horrified, Briggs shuddered then, and still holding the bowl by the leather handle, stepped outside and crossed the road, a pitiable figure, with his pants still in the act of getting southward. . . .

A milk truck approached, slowed to a stop, and Mr. Briggs, the pocket flatbowl still in his hand, hopped hopefully aboard.

Mr. Briggs, Gertrude, the Bowl-bearer disappeared around a bend of the road.

Tony and Daniel Smock, who had shared a lap-robe cabin, were the first to rise. The lion-tamer had had a bad night with him, since Desdemona had so insisted when she had left Gertrude in the cabin that she, Ginger, and Tony go share a cabin with Ginger Drake. The Evergreens had chosen the first to retire to their own cabin—smug in the mistaken thought that Gertrude and her valuable bowl were to spend the night within Miss Love's maternal reach.

While the Evergreens were finishing their morning toilette, and matutinal sounds were coming from the bachelor's cabin, Tony greeted the tourist camp proprietor; a lanky, taciturn personage who appeared yawning sleepily.

"Can we have any breakfasts?" "Nope," said the man. "But there's a lunch-wagon near the corners, just around the bend, open all night, with side-road". Ginger appeared and overheard. "I'm dying for a cup of coffee," said she.

"Let's walk over and get one, while the others get dressed,"suggested Tony.

"You don't you?"agreed the lion-tamer. Casanova and I will wait for Miss Love".

Ginger was agreeable, and she and Tony set off. It was a lovely Autumn morning, and their appetites were sharp. In a few minutes they had disappeared.

The lion-tamer, who had developed a "crush" on Desdemona, stood coyly near her cabin as she appeared, and made conversation through the window. Casanova kept traveling for a breakfast of field-mice.

The Evergreens appeared. The cabin door nearest the road and the parked bus—Desdemona's, the farthest from inside the cabin—Evergreen was carrying their bags.

Suddenly, as they approached the road, two open automobiles, one behind the other, swept around the down the road to a halt beside the bus. They were both crowded with men, some of them carrying guns.

Mortimer Evergreen, in full view, dropped his bags to the ground and went very white. His wife gave a little scream and clutched his arm.

A moment later the bus and the couple were entirely surrounded. A man with star on his vest snapped a question.

"What?" asked Mr. Smock, sus- ...piciously.

Mr. Smock snorted. Miss Love ...laffed, and Ginger and Tony ...coughed to choke their laughter. ...Mr. Briggs, waiting complacently, pulled his yachting cap over ...his eyes, then, and went gently to ...sleep.

It was after midnight when the ...share-expenses, together with the ...slumbering yachtsman, Gertrude ...and Carmen, crossed the Potomac ...into Virginia.

The first day's lap was done.

Mr. Briggs was the first to awaken, early the next morning, and found himself alone. The green ...bus was parked off the road be- ...fore a tiny tourist cabin camp, ...and not a soul was in sight. The ...master of the Little Casino was ...not yet entirely sober; in fact, he ...was the salty thirsty of a severe ...hangover, and whenever he ex- ...perienced this phase Mr. Brig's ...mind was even more befogged than ...when he was pleasantly half-seas ...over. A situation called for ...another drink, if one were not to ...become dangerously sober; from ...force of habit, Mr. Briggs looked ...around for his lawyer's jug, and his ...bleary eye, focussing with difficulty, fell on the portable goldfish ...bowl.

After much soul-searching and discussion Miss Love had decided to leave her precious Gertrude and her bowl in the Bus, instead of taking them into the cabin she was sharing with Ginger, because of the potential dangers of a possible change of temperature. Dropping a pinch of Epsom Salts into the water, she had left Gertrude alone, with much misgiving. If she could only have guessed of the terrible experience that was to await her pet, she would never have slept a wink that night. But how could she know?

Gertrude, awakening from a nightmare in which she had suffered a torn fin in a fight with a disgusted male with a black Guernsula from the West Indies, found, to her intense relief, that she had been spared the oddly-shaped foreign object in her bowl, and she en- tited air bubbles of horror—for Mr Briggs had tilted the edge of the bowl and was drinking deeply of Gertrude's Epsom salt-laden water. Gertrude, with a shudder of revulsion, gave the gaping chasm that was yawning above her head a wide berth. Briggs suddenly gasped, and, lowering the bowl, was ejecting a stream of water like a whale blowing. Pale and troubled, Briggs shuddered then, and still holding the bowl by the leather handle, stepped outside and crossed the road, a pitiable figure, with his shoulders in his silk, jerking forward.

A milk truck approached, slowed to a stop, and Mr. Briggs, the porcelain fishbowl still in his hand, stepped hopefully aboard.

Mr. Briggs, Gertrude, the Bonkbear diamond and the milk truck, disappeared around a bend of the road.

Tony and Daniel Smock, who had shared a tiny cabin, were the first to rise. The lion-tamer had his pet cat with him, since Desdemona had so insisted when she had left Gertrude in the bus the night before, and had failed to share a cabin with Ginger Drake. The Evergreens had been the first to retire to their own cabin—smug in the mistaken thought that Gertrude and her valuable bowl were to spend the night within Miss Love's maternal protection.

While the Evergreens were making their morning toilettes and matutinal sounds were coming from the bachelor ladies, cabin, Tony greeted the tourist camp proprietor; a lanky, unshaven personage who appeared yawning sleepily.

"Can we have any breakfast?"

"Nope," said the man. "But there's a lunch-wagon near the corners, just around the bend," he added, and down the side-road.

Ginger appeared and overheard. "I'm dying for a cup of coffee," said she.

"Let's walk over and get one, while the others are dressing," suggested Tony.

"Why don't you?"agreed the lion-tamer. Casanova and I will wait for Miss Love."

Ginger was agreeable, and she and Tony set off. It was a lovely lion morning, and their spirits were sharp. In a few minutes they reached the lunch-wagon.

The lion-tamer, who had developed a "crush" on Desdemona, stood coyly near her cabin as she dressed, and made conversation through the window. Casanova went prowling for a breakfast of field-mice.

The Evergreens appeared. Their cabin was ransacked and the car parked bus—Desdemona's, the fartliest from the cabin the Evergreens was carrying their bags.

Suddenly, as they approached the road, two open automobiles, one behind the other, swept southward from the road to a halt beside the bus. They were both crowded with men, some of them carrying guns.

Mortimer Evergreen, in full view of the men, began to the greatest extent very white. His wife gave a little scream and clutched his arm.

A moment later the bus and the couple were entirely surrounded. A man with star on his vest mapped a question.

Negotiate New Agreement With Vichy Govt.

London, June 30 — (CP Reuters) — Germany is negotiating a new agreement with the Vichy government, the German DNB agency asserted today.

The Wilhelmstrasse spokesman was quoted by DNB as saying: "From there (Vichy) the negotiations now current between Germany and France are for the increased French contribution to the German war effort.

Berlin reported previously an "important" meeting of the German French cabinet, including Vichy and Paris members, was held June 27 in Paris.

GOEBBELS WARNS HIS PEOPLE
London, June 30 — (AP) — Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels has urged the Germans to a "mastersneak effort" lest they become destroyed by bombs and bazookas. Goebbels said in an article in Das Reich that "we are fighting for life. We want to deal with a robust enemy, not a weakling. We want to conduct total war; totally—increase the war effort considerably. We are not exaggerating when we say we fight for a life and death. We are sure we will destroy us root and branch in order to solve the German problem once and for all."

Opposition Leaders Give House Views on the Recent Budget

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 30 — (CP)—Parliament today had passed another part on its long voyage home, with opposition leaders' views on the budget set down on the record.

In Ottawa, the House, just before adjourning last night, debated by a vote of 66 to 13, a C.C.F. amendment to the government motion to go into committee on the budget resolutions. Progressive Conservative amendment awaits decision.

Hon. W. Earl Rowe, K.C. (Dufferin-Simcoe), M.J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader and John Blackmore, Social Credit House leader, each had criticisms of the financial proposals set forth Monday by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Mr. Rowe, moving an amendment to the motion to have the House go into committee to consider the budget resolutions, said there should be an increase in the income tax exemption from $660 to $800 for single persons and from $1,200 to $1,600 for married persons. He suggested that there be exemption of overtime pay from taxation to encourage production.

The government also regretted that full mobilization had not been made of financial, industrial and material resources as well as manpower, but was maintaining a home defence army by a line when the need for men for army reinforcements, for farming and industry was urgent.

Mr. Coldwell suggested that the income tax exemptions be raised to $1,000 for single persons and $1,500 for married persons.

No Amendment Moved.

The C.C.F. amendment regretted the government had failed to provide relief for taxpayers in lower income brackets, and had failed also to provide for the expenditure of $4,000,000,000 in the first two post-war years to establish a comprehensive system of social security and maintain full employment, especially housing and similar programs.

Mr. Blackmore moved no amendment but was critical of the government financial policy which he said showed no change. He said the key to economic problems was the adequate use of national credit. Money could be created by the government and by a proper use could be used to provide the purchasing power required to provide a demand for goods and employment.

Private members took up the discussion of budget proposals when the leaders had finished their addresses.

Members said they hoped the budget discussions would be short. With the war appropriation bill approved, and many of the ordinary non-war estimates discussed, the budget resolutions represent an important part of the remaining sessional business.

Threat to Labor Claim.

T. Parquhar (L—Algoma East) said that the C.C.F. policy represented a threat to organized labor as government ownership of industry would end the freedom of labor to bargain and strike.

Frederic Dorion (Ind — Charlevoix-Saguenay) said doors should be made known.

LL-Col. Arthur Ross (PC—Souris) said there was "a great deal of dissatisfaction" under the present government. The Wartime Information Board spent $1,000,000 a year on propaganda, much of it political and some of it misleading.

Russia's State Committee for Defence Surprised Military Experts of World

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, June 30.—(AP)—Three years ago today the State Committee for Defence with Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin as chairman — the organization which has directed the Soviet Union's heroic struggle against the German invader—held its first meeting in the Kremlin.

It was a determined little group of men that gathered and sat around a big table in Stalin's office and heard Stalin and Marshal Georgy K. Zhukov, vice-commissar of defence and at that time chief of the Red Army general staff, discuss the weapons to be lined against the German army which had conquered Poland and France and over-run other countries of Europe.

In addition to Stalin the committee included Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov, vice-chairman; Klementi Y. Voroshilov, chairman of the Defence Committee; O. M. Malenkov, member of the Central Committee of the All Union Communist Party; L. P. Beria and N. A. Voznesensky, members of the Council of People's Commissars. Mikhail M. Kaganovich, former commissar of railways; Nikolai Shvernik, and Anastas I. Mikoyan, former commissar of trade.

This group of Soviet leaders, who had been giving all their energies to building up a young country into a big peaceful nation then turned almost in the beginning of what the world now knows as the Red Army's Great Patriotic War, the Russian Army, then mastered it.

It was this committee which has seen that there has been no fifth column and which has welded the people together so that the last war loan of 12,000,000,000 rubles was oversubscribed in a single day, then swelled within a few days to 20,000,000,000.

It has been this committee that directed the war effort which surprised the military experts of nearly every country in the world—especially Germany.

'Lid' Lifted From Inflation By Reversal of Policy Says Rowe in Criticism of Budget

Ottawa, June 30 — (CP) — Hon. W. E. Rowe (PC — Dufferin Simcoe) in the House of Commons opened opposition criticism of the Ilsley budget proposals today, first stating that government policy had been reversed and the "lid" lifted from inflation.

"The old policies of 'pay as you go' and safeguards from inflation and the control of ordinary expenditures seem to have scooted out the window — now are disbanded for election," said Mr. Rowe.

"The ruling government now lifts the lid from the inflation pot, lays the cards on the table in a last desperate bid for election at any cost."

He looked on the proposed payment of children's allowances with doubt. "They appeared to be a "reckless political bid for power," made by a political party as a "piece of callous cynicism."

The inconsistency of the budget could be seen by a child, "and the pre-election bids can be seen by a blind man."

Pre-Election Bids

Mr. Rowe said the Progressive Conservatives sought to assure a sound social security program, while there had been "glittering generalities" of security in speech from the Throne with "pre-election bids for cash hand-outs to families."

The chief Progressive Conservative budget debate spokesman said there should be a Dominion welfare fund from which grants would go to provinces in a halt to "government by order-in-council;" employment for those fit for work; a housing plan of 75,000 men; simplified taxation forms; revision of tariffs on industry and agriculture; protection of taxpayers' rights; explanation of increased ordinary costs of government; wider markets for farm products and encouragement of mineral development.

Mr. Rowe said the government should at once set up a Dominion-Provincial welfare and assistance fund.

A body of experts nominated by all parties in the House should examine the "half-cococted" social security proposals of the government and report on them. This inquiry group might be a reorganized social security committee of the House or a specially appointed commission of experts.

Says Provinces Should Be Consulted

Provincial representatives should be consulted on the social security program, with financial assistance in the form of 50 per cent health grants to provinces and from "the immediately workable insurance section of the proposed national health act" and made available immediately to the provinces.

Grants from the Dominion-Provincial welfare fund would go to each province in accordance with its needs as hospitals, nursing services and clinics might be established in urban, rural and hinterland areas. The Dominion should share with the provinces the burden of new capital expenditure for hospitals, convalescent homes and homes for the aged.

Mr. Rowe said the standard of nutrition should be raised by education and by assisting the marketing and distribution of essential foods to Canadian families in all means, especially where there are large families.

Dominion-Provincial conferences should be utilized for the drafting of housing plans for urban and rural communities, with a view to re-housing the slum areas, of decrepit and hygienic considerations demanded.

Residual problems of social assistance, such as problems of the aged, handicapped or dependent persons, should be dealt with in full by the federal, "but purpose could best be gained by developing provincial machinery through the Dominion welfare fund.

Contributory Social Insurance should be developed to give protection against the primary hazards. Alarmed at Delegation of Power.

Mr. Rowe said it was "alarming" to see so many of the functions of the Quebec agreement "in the secret chambers of the east block, where the tired and weary executive council adds new executive powers of control to other bodies and perpetuates the power of irresponsible to this parliament."

The right behind the responsibility of parliament must not continue to be transferred during War Measures Act, said Mr. Rowe. Parliament had given the executive certain rights, but unless the abuse of these rights was checked, the House would become the home of a new autocracy.

Sixth Nazi General Said Killed in France

London, June 30. (CP) — Col.-Gen. Dollman, commander of the German army fighting on the French invasion front, has been killed in action, the Berlin radio reported today. Five other German generals previously have been reported killed in France.

Latest Hint Nazis May Use Poison Gas

Madrid, June 30. (AP)—The latest German propaganda for declaration in neutral countries hints the Nazis may resort to the use of poison gas to combat the Allied invasion of France.

Such hints have been received here bearing the title "against invasion by New American bestles" and pointing out that beetles can be mechanically transported. Also, "If beetles attempt to ruin your fields, they can be destroyed easily by a war of arsenic and sulphate of copper. Let us remember, rather that millions and millions of North American beetles should die of asphyxiation from a single European potato be lost".

Maynooth Airman Has Share in Feat Of Downing Huns

A second Hastings county boy, Flying Officer Don Goodwin of Maynooth, contributed to the feat of Canadian fighter pilots on June 5th when they shot down 36 out of a total of 34 enemy aircraft destroyed over the bridgehead in the Rome area by Typhoon fighter pilots who added to their total in enemy planes shot down when they raid in a Canadian Press story. The other pilot from the county was Lt. H. Farquharson of Corbyville.

According to the same story FO. Goodwin was among the Canadian pilots who were credited with single kills during the day.

POLICE COURT

After being held in custody on remand for 15 days on a charge of vagrancy, 48-year-old Allan Jones of Penetang, walked out of the court door of the police court here today a free man. He was given a 15 day term, to date from his arrest, which terminated this morning at nine o'clock.

Robert Wilson, Belleville, paid $3.50, including tax, after being convicted today to purchase a 1944 dog licence tag for his dog. A charge of assault was dismissed against Mary Clendon, Belleville, who was charged with assaulting Lenora Hiray. The costs of the matter were assessed the complainant, who asked for the dismissal after preferring the charge.

A juvenile case heard in camera was adjourned the pre-holiday proceedings.

PLACING OF STREET SIGNS HAS STARTED

Strangers to the city will in the future discover it more convenient to find their way about when the 1,000 or more signs, now ordered through recommendation by city council are placed at street intersections.

Saturday morning employees of the public works department started erecting the signs on corner lamp standards and other buildings situated at intersections. First, however, they inquire of the owner if he is agreeable that the signs be placed on his property. When a tenant occupies the corner residence the name is referred to the city engineer who contacts the party for permission to erect the signs.

The city engineer's department is asking for the co-operation of residents in placing these signs. Indications are that within a few days a long felt want in the city will be filled.

Vast Allied Plans Mapped Ahead At Least 90 Days

An Advanced Allied Command Post, June 30—(AP)—Planning at least 90 days ahead in the administration of occupation of Europe, General Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief, has held an important series of conferences here this week with Prime Minister Churchill, it was disclosed yesterday.

His plans were said to deal with vast schemes for men and materials and even with post-war politics.

The Prime Minister normally visits Eisenhower once weekly, but for these conferences he drove to headquarters, and all the western front commanders and advisers who still are in England took part in the discussions.

Policies and machinery for military control of Germany also were said to have been discussed in this week's meetings.

At headquarters, Eisenhower outlined the grand strategy of the campaign and initiates the broad programs. Then he approves the details of the plans worked out by his staff.

Eisenhower's tactical problems never worry the supreme commander, who has confidence in his staff, work months ahead. His doesn't read many of the detailed reports of current operations, but prefers to get his information first hand from his subordinates and observers—who have been on the spot and with whom he has sifted on his trips across the channel or when they return to headquarters.

Justice C.P. Hope Named Chairman Royal Commission

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., June 30—(CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario today announced that Mr. Justice A. L. Hope of the Ontario Supreme Court has been appointed chairman of a Royal Commission which will investigate education problems in the province.

The premier's announcement was made in a statement in which he said that, in accordance with the Commission's investigation, has been appointed within the Department of Education for several months, Mr. Justice Hope will arrange for the procedure to be followed by the Commission after consultation with Dr. V. K. Greer, Chief Inspector of public and Separate schools, who will assist the Commission.

Names of the other members of the commission will be announced later, said the statement issued by the premier who is also Acting Minister of Education.

"Mr. Justice Hope brings to this important task wide judicial experience and a personal knowledge of the whole province of Ontario," said the statement. "He is the senior trial judge next to the chief justice and his experience gives him unusual qualifications for one of the most important undertakings in the history of the province.

"He was a gallant soldier in the last war, winning the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross for bravery on active service, then he has devoted his energy to public service in many fields and I am satisfied that his acceptance of this responsibility will assure wise direction of the work of the commission."

WEYGAND REPORTED FREE

Madrid, June 30 — (AP)—Reports that could not be confirmed circulated here today that Gen. Maxime Weygand, former commander-in-chief of the French armies, has escaped from German imprisonment and now is somewhere in France helping to organize the resistance movement into greater strength.

Weygand disappeared shortly after the Germans overran all of France subsequent to the Allied landings in North Africa in November, 1942, and there has been no definite word of him since.

A Reuter dispatch from Sydney (and June 13 said French officers imprisoned at Konigstein Castle told by the Germans that he had been "put out of the way while trying to escape."

He was made commander of the allied armies just before the fall of France, succeeding Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin after the German break-through in May, 1940. .

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London June 30—(CP)—Sir Samuel Hoare's return to Madrid as Britain's ace political people around London well off base.

They had guessed the British ambassador to Spain was home to stay and not just on leave, when he passed his unhappy way from the inner sanctum of the country's leadership where he operated so long.

But Sir Samuel was boosted by press and parliament for his part in the Anglo-Russian agreement on supplies to Germany, London's politic hoodoo which wisely guessed that was the bulldog to wipe out whatever aroma lingered over the Hoare-Laval agreement on Abissinia. There, they thought, would be a man who sat in the House of Commons preparatory to starting back along the cabinet road.

His return to Madrid, hastened by the plane crash of his deputy, Alexander Kenchken, charge d'Affaires at Madrid, has put a stop to the guessing. It probably is only a temporary stop for Hoare's future is a favorite subject of speculation.

Aneurin Bevan, centre of the Labor Party's latest storm, has been upheld by his constituency. Bevan went down to his mining district of Ebby Vale and put his case for opposing the government's anti-strike regulations before a crowded meeting.

At the end of his explanation, the delegates gave unanimous support to a resolution congratulating him on his stand and expressing full confidence in him as the member for Ebby Vale.

Bevan's chance to become a member of the party's national executive has been passed along with the National Conference where the elections were to have been held. He regretted the postponement in his constituency speech because "I think the time has come for the Labor Party to declare its intention of break with the tories immediately the end of the war in Europe is in sight."

There would have been strong pressure from many sides of the party for such a declaration from the conference.

WE PAUSE SATURDAY, the anniversary of Canada's seventy-seven years as a Dominion, to pay tribute to her valiant sons and daughters who now fight in this, her greatest and her grimmest strife . . . so far from the hills and the hamlets of home. May soon the day dawn when they return . . the conquering, the liberating, the victorious!
